PREFACE.

THE importance of placing in book form biographical history of representative citizens—both for its immediate worth and for its value to coming generations—is admitted by all thinking people; and within the past decade there has been a growing interest in this commendable means of perpetuating biography and family genealogy.

That the public is entitled to the privileges afforded by a work of this nature needs no assertion at our hands; for one of our greatest Americans has said that the history of any country resolves itself into the biographies of its stout, earnest and representative citizens. This medium, then, serves more than a single purpose: while it perpetuates biography and family genealogy, it records history, much of which would be preserved in no other way.

In presenting the COMMEMORATIVE BIOGRAPHICAL RECORD to its patrons, the publishers have to acknowledge, with gratitude, the encouragement and support their enterprise has received, and the willing assistance rendered in enabling them to surmount the many unforeseen obstacles to be met with in the production of a work of this character. In nearly every instance the material composing the sketches was gathered from those immediately interested, and then submitted in type-written form for correction and revision. The volume, which is one of generous amplitude, is placed in the hands of the public with the belief that it will be found a valuable addition to the library, as well as an invaluable contribution to the historical literature of the State of Wisconsin.

J. W. Eastman

BIOGRAPHICAL.

ASTMAN, GEORGE W.,

M. D., who passed away at his residence in Platteville, Grant county, Oct. 24, 1900, had been for sixteen years engaged in the banking business at Platteville. He was born in Strong, Franklin Co., Maine, March 29, 1824, and was a son of Hon. Samuel and Jane Eastman. The Eastman family came from a long line of New England ancestry which settled in Maine at an early date. Many of its members occupied honorable places in civic and business life. Hon. Samuel Eastman, the father of the subject of this sketch, served many years as a member of the Executive Council of the State of Maine. The eldest son, Hon. Ben. C. Eastman, came to Wisconsin in 1840, settling at Platteville, where he soon attained eminence as a lawyer; he served as secretary of the Territorial Council from 1843 to 1846, and was elected to Congress in 1850, serving two terms; he died at his home in Platteville in 1855. Another son, Col. H. E. Eastman, served through the Civil war as colonel of the 2d Regiment Wisconsin Cavalry, dying a few years ago at Benton Harbor, Mich., where he owned the celebrated Eastman Springs.

Dr. Eastman's elementary education was obtained in the common schools, and supplemented by an academical course, and after due preparation he entered Dartmouth College, from which institution he graduated with the medical class of 1844. In the spring of 1850 the Doctor came to Wisconsin, and located in Platteville, where he was actively and successfully engaged in the practice of his profession until the outbreak of the Civil war, at which time he was commissioned surgeon of the 16th Wis. V. I. After serving in that capacity one year he was appointed medical inspector of the 17th Army Corps, serving on the staff of Gen. J. B. McPherson; this office he held for the two succeeding years, when he returned to Platteville and resumed his extensive private practice.

In 1852 Dr. Eastman married Miss Anna S. Munroe, daughter of Edmund S. Munroe, a leading business man of Boston, Mass., and this union was blessed with three daughters and one son: Jessie, Mary E. (deceased), Julia, and George Edmund (who died in infancy), all natives of Platteville.

From 1850 until 1882, excepting the three years he was at the front during the war, the Doctor was in continuous practice in Platteville. From 1881 to 1884 he resided in Milwaukee. In 1884 he organized a private bank which later became the First National Bank, of which he was at once elected president, serving in that incumbency until his death. This bank has from the beginning done a profitable and extended business, and is still expanding, being recognized as one of the strongest and best managed monetary institutions in the county. At a regular meeting of the board of directors, held Oct. 30, 1900, the following testimonial of respect was read, and on motion duly seconded, and was by unanimous vote ordered to be spread upon the records, given to press for publication, and a copy of the same presented to the family of the deceased:

In the death of Dr. George W. Eastman, one of the charter stockholders of this bank and its president from its organization until the day of his death, we recognize the loss of a personal friend and valued counselor, one who was true to every interest of this bank, a man of unquestioned honor, integrity and fidelity, whose presence will be sadly missed in this board of directors. In his memory we offer this testimonial of our friendship for him, of our recognition of his sterling worth as a man, and our sense of personal bereavement in his death.

Dr. Eastman ever stood at the "head and front" of progressive movements in Platteville, and invariably exercised his influence and liberally applied his means to the promotion of its welfare. He was a gentleman of expanding views, as well as of profound learning, filled with generous impulses, and stood before his fellow-men as the embodiment of the highest type of manhood. In his death Platteville lost one of her most honored citizens, the medical profession a wise counselor, and the family a kind husband and indulgent father. Dr. Eastman was a great lover of animals, was decidedly poetical and musical, and possessed great humor and sentiment. He was very fond of his home and family, and the center of attraction therein. After his death his executors found many medical accounts for services rendered to his neighbors and friends, which he had marked "balanced," evidently at a recent date, thus showing his kindness of heart by contributing his services without charge to those whom he thought might need their money for other uses.

JAIRUS MAXSON STILLMAN, Mus. Doc., Professor of Music in Milton College, has an almost National reputation in his chosen vocation. As a composer he has made many valuable contributions, especially to sacred music, but, while his work in that direction has been most important, his labors have been more especially directed to the educational side of the art. For the past fifteen years, with brief interruptions, he has filled his present collegiate chair, and his work prior to the acceptance of this position was most active, varied and successful. Mr. Stillman was born February 20, 1834, in Alfred, Allegany Co., N. Y., the third in order of birth of the six children of Maxson and Lydia (Chapman) Stillman.

Maxson Stillman, a native of Westerly, R. I., was a descendant in the sixth generation, through two lines, from George Stillman, and also through two lines from Elder John Crandall, early New England emigrants from England. He was also related to the Burdick and Maxson families of Rhode Island, and on his mother's side to the Rogers family, of Connecticut. Lydia (Chapman) Stillman, the mother of our subject, was born September 23, 1803, in East Hampton, Mass., and her marriage to Maxson Stillman occurred Sept. 26, 1822, at Berlin, Rensselaer Co., N. Y., near which village she had taught school. In 1826 they moved from Petersburg, Rensselaer county, to Alfred, Allegany Co., N. Y., where Maxson Stillman continued to reside until his death, in 1896, at the age of ninety-seven years, his wife having preceded him to the grave by five and one-half years.

Jairus Maxson Stillman, our subject, received a good education in his youth, supplementing his district-school instruction with many terms in Alfred Academy, and attendance at Alfred University. He had also become, at the age of twelve years, the pupil of his father, a superior workman in the trades of millwright and carpenter, becoming so proficient that he occasionally assumed the entire charge of the construction or repair work of mills of various kinds, and the erection of dwellings and public buildings. But the young man, while thus having mastered his trade, had his heart set upon another kind of life work. The father, a tenor singer of talent, had not only for many years led the choir of the large church at Alfred of which he was a member, but had taught singing schools in many places surrounding his home. His son inherited great aptitude for music, and at the age of ten years could read plain music at sight. He accompanied his father to singing schools, and made rapid progress in the mastery of the principles of music. He attended the singing classes in Alfred Academy conducted by such instructors as Miss Susan E. Crandall (afterwards Mrs. Elhan P. Larkin), Orra Stillman and Darwin E. Maxson. At twenty he was elected leader of the church choir at Alfred, in which position he was very successful.

In 1855 our subject began teaching singing schools in Alfred and vicinity, continuing meanwhile his study of music. For many years succeeding, his life was devoted jointly to the study and teaching of this art. From 1854 to 1857 he gave close attention to the study of Singing and Pianoforte Music at Alfred University. In the summer of 1857 he was a student at the Normal Musical Institute, at North Reading, Mass., under the supervision of Lowell Mason, G. F. Root, and others, and at the same time studied Voice Culture under Auguste Kreissman, of Boston. During the summer months of 1859 and 1860 he attended the Normal Musical Institute at Geneseo, N. Y., taking Pianoforte lessons of T. J. Cook, and lessons in Voice Culture of Carlo Bassini, both of New York. In 1861-62 he studied Pianoforte Music at Milton (Wis.) College, reciting also in the German classes. In the summer of 1870 he attended the National Normal Musical Institute at South Bend, Ind., again taking private lessons of Bassini, completing "Bassini's Method of Singing." Between 1870 and 1874 he was a pupil of Dudley Buck at Chicago and Boston in Harmony and Counterpoint, taking his lessons partly by mail and partly in person. In the winters from 1858 to 1861 he taught singing schools and gave private lessons in Shelby and Logan counties, Ohio, and incidentally led the Lutheran Church choir at Bellefontaine, and the Seventh-day Baptist choir at Jackson Center. In the years 1862, 1864 and 1866 he was professor of vocal and instrumental music in Hopkinton Academy, Ashaway, R. I., and also in the winter months taught singing schools six evenings each week, and at the same time instructed as many as thirty private scholars. During the years 1863, 1865 and 1867 he had the direction of the musical department of Alfred University, his classes embracing Pianoforte Music, Voice Culture, and Elementary and Chorus Singing. The vigorous spirit and correct style of rendition which he imparted were retained for many years as the characteristics of that institution.

The work of Mr. Stillman now grew broader. From 1868 to 1885 he had charge of many larger singing bodies than he had previously undertaken. During the period named he was associate principal and teacher in six normal music schools, each for a term of six weeks, and also conducted a large number of conventions and institutes. In many towns his conventions were held from two to eight times, some were patronized by entire counties, and two—those at Clear Lake, Iowa, and Ripon, Wis.—were State enterprises. The normal music schools were held at Goshen and Michigan City, Ind., Wheaton, Ill., Whitewater and Milton, Wis., and Clarinda, Iowa. He taught Harmony and Voice Culture as well as Chorus Singing in these schools. His musical work to this time had extended to thirteen States, namely: Rhode Island, Connecticut, Vermont, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota and South Dakota. In the last half of the 'seventies he was a resident of Chicago, where he sang in the choir of Centenary Church.

It would be impossible to measure the beneficent results of this prolonged and intense devotion to art. Standards of music were raised in hundreds of communities, and the inspiration to a musical career that was thus enkindled in many a musical breast is indicated partly by the many choir soloists, teachers of music, and others who have attributed their proficiency largely to the instruction given by Mr. Stillman. He is the associate author of "Good-Will for Sabbath Schools," "The Cluster," and "Anthem Treasures," the latter two being well-known and popular anthem books. He has also composed a large number of pieces for other anthem and Gospel hymn books, and a number of songs published in sheet music form. At Chicago he acted as one of the judges, with Prof. T. Martin Towne and others, in selecting from 700 original pieces of music, and in critically editing those which should be published in the work called "International Lesson Hymnal No. 1," published by David C. Cook. In 1884 an excellent article on "Church Music and How to Sustain it," written by Dr. Stillman, appeared in the "Seventh-day Baptist Quarterly."

Since 1885 our subject has been engaged, except for three terms, as professor of vocal and instrumental music in Milton College. He has in that time organized and managed its school of music with regular courses of study, each covering from three to six years, in Pianoforte Playing, Voice Culture, Harmony, and Elementary and Chorus Singing. His work at this institution and outside, in the village and neighboring localities, has attracted wide attention, and brought many young people, desirous of obtaining a substantial musical education, to the school. Another very marked and special result of his labors here has been the preparation of young men for singing in Evangelical work, either as soloists or in quartets. The honorary degree of Doctor of Music was conferred upon Mr. Stillman by Alfred University in 1879.

When not quite eighteen years old Mr. Stillman united with the Seventh-day Baptist Church at Alfred, N. Y., and he has ever since retained his membership in that church. He possesses a deeply reverential religious spirit, which expresses itself chiefly in song. He has taught singing by schools and conventions in at least forty localities where there are Seventh-day Baptist Churches. He has had charge of the music in fourteen annual sessions of the General Conference of this people, and in a larger number of the annual sessions of four associations of their churches.

J. M. Stillman married Dec. 8, 1867, Miss Clara Langworthy, a charming singer and an accomplished pianist, of Potter Hill, R. I. She died March 1, 1869, leaving a child seven weeks old, now Mrs. Clara Stillman Burdick, wife of Dr. Justin H. Burdick, of Milton.

REV. OLE ANDREWSON, D. D., deceased. Among the Scandinavian immigrants who in the early 'forties peopled the forests of southern Wisconsin and northern Illinois with a thrifty and vigorous class of settlers, were a few ministers, who thus brought to the new land the revered religious services and observances of the old homes. The duties which fell to these spiritual guides were onerous and exacting. They were leaders in temporal as well as religious affairs, and too often the chief mainstay of the community during its years of struggle and long privation. One of the noble clergymen who thus consecrated in a new land his whole-souled energies to his countrymen was Rev. Ole Andrewson.

Our subject was born in Hjertdal's parish, Telemarken, Norway, March 2, 1818, son of Anders Tolleversen and Engebør. In his youth he was a shepherd boy, but he was subsequently educated for the ministry in Høide-seid's Seminary, from which he graduated. For three years he taught parochial school, then in 1841 he emigrated to America, and settled in Racine, Wis. There he remained until 1844, engaged in the arduous labors of the farm in connection with his ministerial duties.

He married June 8, 1843, Miss Ragnhild Paulsen, and in the following year removed to Jefferson Prairie, Rock Co., Wis., where he settled on a farm. In 1846 he accepted a call to a parish at Mission Point, La Salle Co., Ill., and moved there in 1847. He organized congregations at Leland, Fox River and Lisbon, and in 1851 he also organized congregations at Racine, Milwaukee and Muskego, Wis. In 1855 he took charge of the Fox River (Ill.) congregation, and the year following accepted a call from the Evangelical Lutheran Church at Clinton, Wis., where his pastorate extended through the long period of thirty years and until his death, on Feb. 23, 1885, at the age of sixty-six years. During these years he preached also at Muskego, Wis., and Queen Ann Prairie and Leland, Ill. In 1880 he was elected president of the Norwegian Augustana Synod, serving as such until his death. Dr. Andrewson was a minister of deep and earnest convictions, deeply devoted to his consecrated work. He was an eloquent speaker, ranking high in oratory in the councils of the Synod, but no less noted for the clearness and strength of his logic.

To Dr. and Mrs. Andrewson were born eleven children, one of whom, Oscar Norman, the youngest, born Sept. 22, 1867, died in 1870. At a family reunion which was held July 26, 1900, at the old homestead in Clinton, Wis., the entire Andrewson family were present, including the mother, who was born May 23, 1824, and who accordingly was in her seventy-seventh year, and the ten children, as follows: Isabella, Paul, Andrew, Annie T., Oliver, Caroline, Rebecca, Louisa (and her three children), Emma C., and Henry O.

Isabella Andrewson, now the wife of ex-Sheriff Matson, of Chicago, married for her first husband Daniel Richolsen, a commission merchant of Leland, Ill., who died in Calamus, Iowa, in 1872. They had one son, Frank, who died in 1891, aged twenty-three years. The widow married Dec. 13, 1888, Sheriff Canute R. Matson.

Paul Andrewson, the eldest son, was born Sept. 7, 1846, near Clinton, and married Oct. 26, 1882, Miss Emma Oleson. He is a farmer by occupation, owning forty acres of land in Clinton township, Rock county. He enlisted Nov. 15, 1864, in the United States navy, at Chicago, serving on the Mississippi river in the Commodore C. M. Davis squadron, engaged in patrol duty. After his honorable discharge at Mound City, Ill., in 1865, he resumed farming. He is a member of Alexis Tollman Post, No. 70, G. A. R. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, and in politics is a Republican.

Andrew Andrewson, the second son, was born near Ottawa, Ill., Nov. 24, 1848. He removed to Clinton with his parents, working on the farm, and later for several years was salesman in the Clinton stores. Removing to Chicago after the fire of 1871, he there learned the painter's trade, which he has since followed.

He now lives on a farm of forty acres, which he owns, located five miles southeast of Clinton. He married Nov. 4, 1875, Miss Nellie Hawkinsen, a daughter of Ole Hawkinsen, a farmer of Manchester, Ill., and of their ten children seven are now living. Ruth Amelia, Hannah Irene, Sarah Louisa, George Henry and Grace Henrietta (twins), Otto Paul and Emma Helena. The two eldest live in Sharon, Wisconsin.

Annie T. Andrewson, the second daughter, was born at Ottawa, Ill., Aug. 18, 1851, was educated in the public schools of Clinton, and in 1877 removed to Chicago, where until 1888 she was employed by Judson & Co. On December 1, 1888, she was appointed matron of the Cook county jail, a position which she still holds. Miss Andrewson inherits the devotion and deep religious convictions of her father, and her religious influence has been of inestimable benefit to many of the unfortunates who have come under her charge in the department over which she presides.

Oliver Andrewson, the third son, was born near Burlington, Wis., April 28, 185—, and lives at Racine.

Caroline Andrewson, the third daughter, was born March 10, 1856, and lives at home with her mother and her brother Henry.

Helen Rebecca Andrewson, the fourth daughter, was born April 25, 1857, and married April 19, 1884, Elling Arensen, a farmer. They have four children, Olive Agnes, Margaret Rachel, Andrew Norman and Harold Elling.

Louisa Andrewson, the fifth daughter, was born Oct. 14, 1860, and married April 19, 1884, O. W. Christensen, of Chicago. She and her sister Helen were married the same day, her father officiating at the double wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Christensen have three living children, Rhoda Irene, Oliver Winfred and Paul Luther. One son died in infancy.

Emma C. Andrewson, the sixth daughter, was born Feb. 13, 1863, and married May 8, 1889, Ole L. Lindren, of Chicago, an engineer on the Illinois Central railroad. They have had three children, Agnes Isabel, Anne Louisa and Sophia Caroline; the last named died in infancy.

HENRY O. ANDREWSON, the fourth son, was born July 20, 1864, and was educated in the public schools of Clinton and at Beloit (Wis.) College. For some time he worked as a fireman on the Northwestern road, but after his father's death, in 1885, he took charge of the home farm, which he has since managed. He is a thorough-going business man, polished and genial in address, and popular wherever known.

Canute R. Matson, son-in-law of the devoted pioneer clergyman mentioned above, was born in Norway April 9, 1843. He came to America in 1849 with his parents, who settled in Walworth county, Wis., and subsequently moved to Dane county, and there he attended the local district schools. His early education was supplemented by study at Albion (Wis.) Academy and Milton (Wis.) College, at which latter institution he was the classmate and bosom friend of Knute Nelson, afterward governor of Minnesota. Mr. Matson served through the Civil war as a member of the 13th Wis. V. I., enlisting Aug. 16, 1861, serving a full term of three years, and re-enlisting, and he was mustered out in Texas in December, 1865, with the rank of lieutenant. He served in the Army of the Cumberland. In 1866 he located in Chicago. There he was for a time clerk in the post office, and later he published the "Postal Record." He became influential in politics from the first, and served successively as clerk of the police court (to which office he was re-elected on the celebrated Fire-proof ticket after the fire), justice of the peace, coroner and deputy sheriff, and in 1886 was elected sheriff, serving four years. It was during his administration of this office that the anarchist riot and the Cronin murder occurred in the city, and he officiated at the execution of the convicted anarchists. The Chicago "boodlers" also were convicted during his term of office. At the expiration of this service Mr. Matson began the practice of law in Chicago, having been admitted to the Chicago Bar prior to his election as sheriff. He is a Mason of high standing, and one of the most prominent members of the A. O. U. W. in the United States.

Mr. Matson owns a well-improved farm of 160 acres and a handsome summer home near Clinton, Wis. His family consists of four children: Marie Isabelle, Frederick Rognald, Canute Royal and Gertrude Rachel.

HUGH B. PATERSON, one of the pioneers of Grant county, was born in the State of New York, at Whitehall, April 8, 1787, a son of George Paterson.

In 1811 our subject was united in marriage to Miss Charlotte Gilmore, a native of Vermont, where she was born Nov. 14, 1790, and after marriage the young couple settled down to domestic life in Chautauqua county, N. Y., where they lived until 1836, at which time they migrated to Jamestown, Grant Co., Wis. Here Mr. Paterson undertook the clearing of a large tract of wild land, and upon it he passed his life until within two years of his demise, when he retired from the farm and removed to the village of Jamestown, where he died in August, 1874.

The first wife of our subject died Nov. 1, 1847, and his second marriage was to Mrs. Catherine Davis, whose death occurred several years prior to that of her husband. By the first marriage he became the father of eight children, only two of whom are living: Jane, Mrs. Sheffield; and George, who is a resident of Albany, Oregon. The deceased were: David B., Mrs. Betsey Ann Bowmer, Mrs. Charlotte Benton, Mrs. Martha Jones, Mrs. Lucy Justis, and Norman, the youngest of the family.

During his long and worthy life our subject was a prominent citizen, for several years was chairman of the board of supervisors, and also for a long term of years was a justice of the peace. In early life he was a Whig, and later became a staunch Republican.

HARMON H. EARL, of Fennimore, is one of the few remaining pioneers of the northern part of Grant county. He was born in Windham, Portage Co., Ohio, March 8, 1816, son of Robert and Lydia (Hubbell) Earl. His father was a native of New Jersey, and the Earl family was formerly from England, whence three brothers came in Colonial times, one of them settling in New Jersey, a second one in Virginia, and the other in New England. They have numerous descendants throughout the Union, and from them Harmon H. Earl is descended.

Robert Earl was one of five brothers. Jacob, Joseph, Robert, James and Walter. The eldest of the family was Betsy, who married John Caldwell, and died in Ohio. Nancy married Thomas Lee, and died in Iowa. Robert Earl married in Huntington, Penn., Lydia Hubbell, and located in Trumbull county, Ohio. In 1816 they settled in Windham, Ohio, where they passed the balance of their lives.

Mrs. Earl died in the fall of 1849, and Robert married again, his second wife being named Bissell. He died in 1857. The record of Robert Earl is that of a man of upright character, and he was a faithful member of and a deacon in the Congregational Church. He was a farmer by occupation. Harmon H. Earl was the fourth in a family of nine children, four sons and five daughters. One of the sons, Adna, died in childhood, and the others all reached mature years. Harmon H. and one sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Cabaness, of Bloomington, Ill., are the only children of their parents now (1900) living. Eber, the eldest son, died in Kentucky. Susan and Jane were twins: Susan married Harvey Millard in Ohio, and died at her home near Spencer, Iowa; Jane married Frederick Palmer, and died in Missouri. Lydia married Daniel Richardson, and after his death married Rev. Mr. Wilson, a Congregational minister; she died in Kansas City, Mo. Sarah married Daniel Howard, and died in Illinois. Aner, the fourth son, married Sarah Knott; he died in Litchfield, Minn., some years ago.

Harmon H. Earl lived in his native place until he was twenty-two years of age, when he married Roxie Wheeler, who was born in the town of Solon, Cortland Co., N. Y., June 25, 1816, and was a daughter of Jesse and Nancy (Tucker) Wheeler, natives of Connecticut. Her father died when she was in her eighth year, and later her mother, with four children, moved into Cattaraugus county, N. Y., where one of the daughters, Clara, died. Soon afterward the mother and remaining children removed to Ashtabula county, Ohio, where she married Hiram Hough. In 1838 the family went to southern Illinois, and lived there seven years. In 1846 they came to Grant county, and settled on land in the town of Fennimore. Mr. and Mrs. Hough died at the home of a son, Mrs. Hough surviving her husband several years. Roxie, Mrs. Earl, was the eldest of her mother's children. Laura, the next in the family, married in Ohio A. L. McElwain, and died at Council Bluffs, Iowa. Their brother, Josiah Wheeler, died in Monona, Iowa. There were five children born to Mr. and Mrs. Hough, three of whom are living: Hiram and Aretus G. live at Oakland, Iowa; Sylvia is the wife of D. R. Walker, of Boscobel. William and Harlow, the eldest and youngest, respectively, are deceased.

Mr. and Mrs. Harmon H. Earl were married Feb. 25, 1838, and the following autumn moved to southern Illinois, where they remained seven years, and then went to Jo Daviess county, in the same State. Three years later they went back to the old home farm of Mr. Earl, in Ohio, and in 1850 came to Grant county. Mr. Earl's father was a soldier in the war of 1812, and our subject entered a land warrant received by him, that called for 160 acres. Later he bought an adjoining forty acres, making a fine farm of 200 acres. For twenty years they lived on this farm, and then made their home in Fennimore, selling the place a few years later. Since 1868 they have lived retired. They have had nine children, but only Olive and William are living. Olive married H. B. Lewis, of Fennimore. William, also a resident of Fennimore, is a carpenter and builder. He married Nellie Wilkinson, and they have four children, George, Bennie, Olive and Harold. The deceased children of Mr. and Mrs. Earl were: Lydia, who married C. W. Loney, died in February, 1876. George died at the age of twenty-three. Nancy married William Loney, and died a few years ago. Arthur died at the age of fifteen. Olive E. died in infancy. Sarah died in 1848, at the age of three years. Robert E. died in infancy. Mrs. Earl had a son by a previous marriage, Samuel Armstrong, a resident of Fennimore. In 1900 Mr. and Mrs. Earl had fourteen grandchildren, and eighteen great-grandchildren. Mr. and Mrs. Earl have been residents of Grant county for half a century, and their married life covers a period of sixty-three years. They still enjoy good health, and are passing their declining days in placid comfort. He was originally a Whig, and later a Republican, but has voted with the Prohibitionists for a number of years. He has held at different times many offices of trust and honor; was postmaster at Fennimore for fifteen years, justice of the peace nine years, and assessor of Fennimore for two years, 1851 and 1852. He and his wife have been members of the Methodist Church for more than sixty years, and he was a licensed local preacher for more than thirty years.

REV. FAYETTE ROYCE, D. D. (deceased), was an able and popular man, with a wide circle of friends in Beloit and the surrounding country, and these pages would hardly be complete without some mention of this scholarly and devoted minister and genial gentleman of the old school.

Dr. Royce was born in Moravia, Cayuga Co., N. Y., April 22, 1833, the youngest son of Lyman and Mary (Burgess) Royce. His mother was a daughter of Jonathan and Mary (Collins) Burgess, and was born in Saratoga county, N. Y., Jan. 28, 1800. His father, Lyman Royce, was one of five sons of Amos and Sarah Royce, and was born June 17, 1796, in Washington, Litchfield Co., Conn. Robert Royce, of Boston, 1631, was the earliest American ancestor of the Royce family in this country. He was a supporter of Hutchinson and Wheelwright in their religious teaching, and removed to Stratford before 1656.

Rev. Dr. Fayette Royce was brought up on a farm, but farm life was not to his taste. He attended district school summer and winter until twelve years of age, and the winter sessions of the school until he was sixteen. He then became a student at the Moravia Academy, and made such progress that at eighteen he was appointed teacher in the public school at Venice, Cayuga county, receiving the princely emolument of ten dollars a month, "boarding around" the district. He taught school the next winter at Montville, a little hamlet, near Moravia, at twenty dollars a month. In 1853 he entered the Freshman class at Hobart College, Geneva, N. Y., and, taking the classical course, was graduated in 1857. The ambitious and capable young student took the first prize for declamation in the Sophomore exhibition. For some six months before his graduation he was engaged in teaching the higher branches in Cary Collegiate Seminary, a celebrated institution of learning near Batavia, and after receiving his diploma continued in the same school until Oct. 15, 1858. At that time he resigned to accept the principalship of Olean Academy, in Cattaraugus county, holding that position for three years, and building up a large and flourishing institution. On Sept. 15, 1862, this earnest and capable young teacher entered the DeLancey Theological School, at Geneva, to make his preparation for the ministry, and in nine months he finished the course. He was ordained to the diaconate of the Episcopal Church by Bishop DeLancey, in St. Paul's Chapel, Geneva, May 3, 1863, and on the first day of the following June he took charge of Grace Church, at Nunda, Livingston county. At the same time he assumed charge of Trinity Church, Casaneraga, Allegany county, and ministered to the spiritual needs of these two churches with rare ability. The young deacon of the Episcopal Church was ordained to the priesthood in St. Peter's Chapel, Geneva, Aug. 14, 1864, by Bishop DeLancey, being the last priest ordained by that great and eminent bishop. Dr. Royce began his rectorship at Bay City, Mich., March 1, 1866. His stay in the Saginaw Valley was brief, and he came to Beloit to assume charge of St. Paul's Church, Nov. 18, 1868, and was rector of that church for twenty-nine years. He was appointed dean of the Janesville (afterward known as the Madison) Convocation, Aug. 1, 1871, by Bishop Armitage, and reappointed yearly for a succession of terms. Dr. Royce was elected a delegate to the General Convention three times in succession. He received the degree of S. T. D. Feb. 26, 1886, from his Alma Mater, Hobart College, Geneva, New York.

The domestic life of Dr. Royce began with his marriage to Miss Minnie Rosetta Van Antwerp, a niece of Rev. Dr. Van Antwerp, author of the popular "church history." The marriage was celebrated April 13, 1858, in Groveland, Livingston Co., N. Y., at the home of her father, James P. Van Antwerp. She lived five years and one month from that day, long enough to see her husband greatly advanced in the ministry, which had been all along her hope and prayer. James Lyman was born to them in Olean, N. Y. Dr. Royce and Miss Catherine Hunt were married Dec. 27, 1864; Mrs. Royce is a daughter of the late Dr. Hiram Hunt, of Mount Morris, N. Y., a physician of eminence and popularity. Her mother, Mrs. Mary (Wadhams) Hunt, is now living with her daughter, Mrs. Royce, at the venerable age of ninety-eight. Two daughters were born to Rev. and Mrs. Royce: Mary Hopkins, born in Bay City, Mich., and Anna Burgess, born in Beloit, Wis. Rev. Dr. Royce died at St. Luke's Hospital, Chicago, Oct. 19, 1897, and closed with saintly resignation a long and useful life.

JOHN M. EVANS, M. D., SR. This old and experienced physician of Evansville is one of the older settlers of Rock county, and has a history that is interesting, not only for its personal element, but because it has to deal with a period in Wisconsin that is closed to all but a few survivors. He is a good physician, and an honorable and upright man.

Dr. Evans was born in Addison, Addison Co., Vt., Feb. 12, 1820, a son of Calvin R. and Penelope (Goodrich) Evans, also natives of that State, who had five children, of whom Dr. John M. is the only one living. The father was a farmer. He came West with his second wife, and about 1850 located in Evansville, Rock Co., Wis., where they died, he in 1866, at the age of sixty-nine, she in 1870, at the age of seventy-one. The first wife, the mother of Dr. Evans, died in Vermont about 1833. They were Congregationalists in the East, but in Wisconsin Mr. Evans and family were associated with the Free-Will Baptists. Gilbert Evans, the father of Calvin R., was a native of New York, and of Welsh descent. He was a farmer, and died at a very advanced age. Allen Goodrich, the father of Mrs. Penelope Evans, was a native of Connecticut, and went to Vermont with a colony when it was a wilderness. Two of his brothers went with him, and all three settled in the town of Benson, Rutland county, and cleared three farms in the midst of the mighty forests. Allen Goodrich was the father of five daughters and three sons. He died at the age of eighty years. He was a deacon in the Congregational Church, and was an upright and honest man.

Dr. John M. Evans, Sr., is a leading physician in Evansville, and the proprietor of the "pioneer drug store" is a well-known old settler of Rock county. When he was a lad his mother died, and he was an inmate of his maternal grandfather's home until about nineteen years of age. Mr. Goodrich gave him every care, and treated him as a son. He attended the public school, and had a good preliminary training for life. In 1838 the young man went to LaPorte, Ind., where his father was living. There he learned the trade of a carpenter, and followed it for three years, but was obliged to abandon it on account of hip disease. In 1843 the invalid youth took up the study of medicine, with Dr. Meeker as preceptor. About this time a medical college was organized at LaPorte, and Mr. Evans was a member of its first class, and was in its first graduating class, receiving the degree of M. D. in 1846. The LaPorte College continued a few years, and was then merged into Rush Medical, at Chicago. The young doctor came to what was then known as "The Grove," a small frontier settlement, and flung out his sign to the world in 1846. The name of this community was soon afterward changed in honor of the young physician, and perpetuates the name of Evans to posterity. Several years later the parents of Dr. Evans came to Evansville, as above related.

Our subject has passed his entire professional life in his present home, covering a period of fifty-four years. Dr. Evans was postmaster in Evansville from 1852 to 1855, and was the first mayor of the city. He was elected to the Legislature in 1853, and again three years later, serving with honor and credit both times. In 1861 he was commissioned surgeon of the 13th Wis. V. I., entered the field with his regiment, and continued in active service until 1865, when, his health failing, he resigned and returned home. On June 1, 1854, in LaPorte, Ind., Dr. Evans was united in marriage with Miss Emma Clement, a native of New York. She was a daughter of Richard and Chloe Clement, and moved with them to Indiana when she was a child. The union of the Doctor and his wife was blessed with three children, two living: Elizabeth Emma and John M. Elizabeth E., born April 7, 1855, married D. C. Griswold, and has one son, Ray C. John M., Jr., was born Nov. 14, 1858, and married Miss May Johnson; they have three children, Adelaide Emma, John Clement, and Richard Donald. He is a physician and surgeon, having graduated from Rush Medical and had special instruction in Europe. He has an office in Evansville, and has won a wide patronage.

Dr. Evans, Sr., is one of the oldest and most zealous Masons in this part of the State. He joined the order in 1841, at LaPorte, and is a member of LaPorte Lodge, No. 41, A. F. & A. M. In 1851 he joined Janesville Chapter, No. 5, R. A. M., and six years later he united with the Janesville Commandery, No. 2, K. T. On Oct. 24, 1882, he became a member of the H. A. S. V., Orient of Wisconsin, Wisconsin Valley of Milwaukee, and on the 27th of the same month was advanced to the 32d degree in that body. He has also been inducted as an honorary member of the "Oriental Order of the Palm and Shell," an honor that has been conferred upon very few in the State. During these many years he has filled various official positions in the fraternity.

He was worshipful master of Union Lodge, No. 32, for twelve consecutive years, and was high priest of Evansville Chapter, No. 35, for the first six years of its existence. In 1882 and 1883 he was grand high priest of the State. Dr. Evans is also a member of Tripoli Temple, Milwaukee, Mystic Shrine.

Dr. Evans and his family are members of the Episcopal Church at Evansville, in which he has been senior warden since its organization. He was active in the formation of the parish. Mrs. Emma Evans died Feb. 6, 1899, at the age of seventy-eight. She was an active worker in the Episcopal Church, widely known and greatly beloved for her good works.

JUDGE JOHN R. BENNETT (deceased) was one of the most prominent men Rock county ever had within its confines, and was Judge of the Twelfth Judicial Circuit from 1882 until the day of his death, June 9, 1899.

Judge John R. Bennett was born in Rodman, Jefferson Co., N. Y., Nov. 1, 1820, and his parents were natives of Connecticut, descended in a direct line from Puritans who settled in New England in the very earliest days of the country. After completing his studies at the district schools, Judge Bennett entered the Black River Literary and Religious Institute, Watertown, N. Y., where he qualified himself for teaching, and engaged in that occupation for several years. In 1844 he entered upon the study of law, under W. W. Wager, an attorney of Brownville, N. Y., and later studied with D. N. Burnham, Esq., of Sackett's Harbor, N. Y., being admitted to practice in the courts of New York in May, 1848.

In October, 1848, Judge Bennett came to Wisconsin, and located at Janesville, engaging in the practice of his profession. Within a very short period he took a high position as a trial lawyer and advocate, and in 1862 was elected district attorney of Rock county, serving in that capacity for two consecutive terms with a high order of ability. In April, 1882, he was elected to the office of Judge of the Twelfth Judicial Circuit, to succeed Judge Harmon D. Congor, was re-elected in 1888, and again in 1894.

On November 28, 1844, at Houndsfield, N. Y., Judge Bennett married Elsie L. Holloway, and for nearly fifty years she was his faithful, devoted wife; she died May 28, 1893, at her home in Janesville. On June 9, 1899, while in full possession of his faculties, Judge Bennett passed away, leaving a wide circle of friends, as well as associates of the Bar, to mourn his loss.

Not only was Judge Bennett an able attorney, and an astute and just judge, but, socially and in his home, he was kind, gentle and greatly admired. Although his educational advantages were not what he had desired, he ever sought to improve his already well-stored mind, and at an advanced age enjoyed translating Greek.

On April 24, 1900, memorial services were held at the court house in Janesville, and a portrait of this honored judge was presented to the Rock County Bar Association by his daughters. All of the leading representatives of the Bar were present, and touching testimonials were read by Judge Bennett's associates, who thus assembled to honor his memory. B. B. Eldredge read the memorial, in which the highest praise was accorded Judge Bennett, and an eloquent eulogy paid his remarkable attainments. A certified copy of the same was delivered to his family.

JAMES A. LORD, M. D., deceased. For almost half a century the name of Lord was prominently identified with the medical history of Rock county. Our subject's father, Dr. Simon Lock Lord, was for many years an influential and successful practitioner of Edgerton, and after his retirement the large and lucrative practice was continued by Dr. James A. Lord.

The family is of Puritan extraction. The paternal great-grandfather of James A. Lord, Adam Lord, was a Revolutionary soldier. He married Olive Knight, a lady of English extraction, and was a lifelong farmer of Maine. Their son, James Lord, grandfather of our subject, also followed the vocation of farming in Maine, and lived to the ripe old age of eighty-five. He married Hannah Durell, daughter of David and Mary Durell, of French Huguenot extraction, and to them were born a large family.

Simon Lock Lord, the father of our subject, studied medicine, and in 1852 migrated from Maine to Iowa, locating first at Dubuque, and later at Dyersville. In 1857 he came to Edgerton, Rock Co., Wis., and there began a memorable practice which was broken by his distinguished service in the Civil war. He enlisted in September, 1861, in the 13th Wis. V. I., and was mustered in as assistant surgeon. Proceeding with the regiment from Janesville, Wis., to Fort Scott, Kans., he was there detached to organize a hospital for 400 sick and chronic and wounded cases. Once organized, the hospital was left in charge of Dr. Cookly, and Dr. Lord was transferred to Corinth, Miss., and detached as flag surgeon by Gen. Mitchell, then commandant of the fleet. In June, 1862, he was detailed as surgeon in charge of the 12th Wis. V. I., at Humboldt, Tenn., where he found Dr. J. M. Evans, surgeon of the 13th Wis. V. I., sick and relieved the latter, who returned home to Evansville. Meanwhile Dr. Lord had been appointed staff surgeon under Gen. Ransom. In October, 1862, he received orders from Gen. Grant's headquarters to report at Holly Springs, Miss., while Gen. Grant was moving on Vicksburg, and was there ordered to take charge of the sick and wounded as assistant medical director of the department in Kentucky, and inspector of camps and hospitals. In the performance of his duty as inspector he found 900 men unfit for duty behind the fortifications, and transferred them to Mound City (Ill.) Hospital. He was next instructed to proceed to Memphis, Tenn., and convert the Adams block into a hospital. Under his charge it became the finest hospital on the Mississippi river. Within ten days he had the care of 400 sick soldiers in bed. After the battle of Vicksburg the patients numbered 1,700, for whose care there were employed 160 nurses and eleven assistant surgeons. In April, 1863, Dr. Lord was appointed surgeon of the 32d Wis. V. I. under Gen. Bryant, of Madison, Wis., and was with him at Vicksburg, as staff surgeon; until after the capitulation. Relieved from this special service, he rejoined his regiment, and was later placed in the Medical Director's Department of the Tennessee, for the examination of surgeons and assistant surgeons of colored regiments. In November, 1863, he was ordered with his regiment to Grand Junction, Miss. The month following Gen. Howe was placed in command of the brigade, and Dr. Lord was commissioned brigade surgeon, still retaining his commission as surgeon of the 32d Wis. V. I. In 1864 this command was under Gen. Sherman, in the Meridian raid, and was afterward attached to Gen. Howard's brigade, and ordered to Kenesaw Mountain and thence to Decatur, Alabama.

Here the health of Dr. Lord finally gave way under the long and arduous duties which he had most creditably discharged, and at the advice of his friends he in September, 1864, resigned and returned home. For a year he practiced at Janesville, then at the solicitation of old friends he returned to Edgerton, his old home, where he practiced continually until within a few years of his death, which occurred Feb. 18, 1893, when he was aged sixty-seven years. His widow, Mary M. (Wright) Lord, who survived until May, 1896, was born in Iowa in 1839, the only daughter of Ansel Wright, a Methodist clergyman, who was a native of New York, and who in an early day moved to Iowa, where, until his death, comparatively early in life, he was a circuit rider. To Dr. Simon L. and Mary M. (Wright) Lord were born nine children, namely: Charles H., of Mexico; Dr. James A., our subject; William F., of St. Paul, Minn.; Edward S., of Manitowoc, Wis.; Belle, wife of George F. McGiffin, of Edgerton; Mary L., wife of Frank Ware, of Hitchcock, Texas; Emily M., of St. Paul; Blanche C., wife of Charles L. Teller, of New York City; and Nellie M., of Edgerton, Wis. Dr. Simon L. Lord, the father, was for some years quite prominent in politics at Edgerton. He was an active Republican. From 1880 to 1882 he served in the State Assembly, and during the succeeding four years, 1882 to 1886, he was a member of the State Senate. Among the fraternal orders he was a leading Mason at Edgerton. Early in life he was a member of the Methodist Church, with which religious society his wife also was actively identified, but at the time of his death he was not identified with any church.

Dr. James A. Lord was born in Edgerton July 22, 1858. He was reared in his native town, where he attended the public schools, completing his literary education at Epworth Seminary, Epworth, Iowa, where he attended one year. He began the study of medicine in his father's office, and completed the course of study and lectures at Rush Medical College, Chicago, graduating in 1879, with the degree of M. D., at the age of twenty-one. The young physician at once became associated with his father in practice at Edgerton, continuing in this manner until the father retired from active professional life, after which he practiced alone. He was a progressive, careful and enthusiastic physician, and enjoyed a large and lucrative practice until his decease, Dec. 1, 1900.

The Doctor married, April 6, 1881, Miss Ida G. Williams, of Madison, daughter of John P. and Mary (Mosely) Williams, and to them was born one son, Karl W. Mrs. Lord is a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Dr. Lord was a Republican in politics, and fraternally a Mason. He was devoted to his profession, and kept thoroughly abreast of the rapid strides of progress made these later days in medicine and surgery.

RUEL MORRELL (deceased), one of the pioneers of Grant county, was born April 19, 1809, in Otsego county, N. Y., and was a son of James and Harriet (Reed) Morrell, the former of whom was a soldier in the war of 1812. James and Harriet Morrell were the parents of four sons and two daughters. During the boyhood of our subject they became residents of the western part of the Empire State. The eldest of the sons, Alanson, came to Grant county, Wis., in a very early day and died in Lancaster in 1895, at the age of eighty-eight years; Ruel was the second son; Robert, the third, also came to Grant county quite early, but returned to his native State, where he died; and Warren, the youngest son, never left New York; Prudence, the eldest daughter, married and died in New York; Celinda died there after having attained mature years.

Early in 1832, Ruel Morrell started for Wisconsin from his home in western New York, via Pittsburg, Penn. From Pittsburg he descended the Ohio river to its mouth on a raft, and thence journeyed up the Mississippi river by steamboat to St. Louis, Mo., where he transhipped for Galena, Ill. On the passage from St. Louis up stream one of his fellow-passengers was Gen. Zachary Taylor, who was on his way to Prairie du Chien. From Galena Mr. Morrell came to Wisconsin, first putting his foot on the soil of the Territory May 7, 1832. He engaged at once in mining in the southern part of Grant county, but a few weeks later the Black Hawk war broke out, and Mr. Morrell, with a large body of other miners, went to Galena, and there erected a fort as a precautionary measure. When the war closed Mr. Morrell returned to Grant county, and for about four years worked in the mines for one James Gilmore. In the meantime, however, realizing the fact that his education was deficient, he returned to his father's home in New York, and attended school one winter, and the following spring rejoined his former employer, coming by way of the lakes to the present site of Chicago, then a mere landing place, and consisting of a small cluster of log huts or shanties.

In 1835, while still in the employ of Mr. Gilmore, Mr. Morrell entered from the government, at $1.25 per acre, the eastern half of Section 31, Lancaster township, while Randolph Marlow entered the western half. In 1836 he located on the tract, which was heavily timbered, and began clearing up, building a log house, in which he lived alone for a while. In 1837 he returned to his father's home in New York, and married Miss Eliza Cooley. While in New York he purchased a team of horses and a wagon, and by this means returned with his bride to his land in Wisconsin. They worked hard together to develop a good home, but Mrs. Morrell was called away March 6, 1852, leaving five daughters and two sons; the sons, named Byron and Wallace, died at the ages of thirteen and fourteen years, respectively. The daughters are all still living, as follows: Mrs. Mary J. Fifield, of Sutter county, Cal.; Mrs. Laura Knapp and Mrs. Maria A. Irish, of Lancaster; Mrs. Mina E. Coombs, of Madison, Wis.; and Mrs. Loraine B. Watts, of Phillips county, Kansas.

On Aug. 20, 1853, Mr. Morrell married Miss Polly Richardson, who was born in Erie county, N. Y., June 27, 1820, and died March 15, 1886, the mother of four children, one of whom died in early infancy; Robert Guy, born in 1856, died in what is now the State of Washington, in June, 1886; Josephine, now Mrs. Vernon Kinney, lives near the old homestead in Lancaster township; Lee is the youngest of the family.

Ruel Morrell lived on the farm which he entered from the government from 1837 until his death, May 11, 1889, a period of fifty-two years. He was one of the most highly esteemed residents of Grant county, as he was one of the most upright of men. He believed that uprightness was the best test of true religion, and cared but little for the tenets of the various churches in other respects. In his political affiliations he was in early life a Whig, but on the disintegration of that party became a Republican, and was always a patriotic and public-spirited citizen, and "a man among men." In his later years he was afflicted with a difficulty of hearing, increasing to almost total deafness, but he bore his infirmity with patient resignation.

During the early days of our subject's residence in Lancaster wild game abounded in that section—deer, wolves, wild cats, and occasionally bears and panthers. Several bears were killed in the neighborhood. One day Mr. Morrell was away with his team, and on the return trip, after reaching his own land, on a road cut through the brush, he saw a large panther sitting by the roadside. However, the animal ran away after looking at him a moment.

LEE MORRELL, the youngest child born to Ruel Morrell, is the only male representative of his father's family now living. He was born on the Lancaster township homestead Dec. 8, 1861, and lived with his parents until they passed away; he has since spent much time in traveling. He was awarded a portion of the homestead when twenty-one years old, in consideration of his promise to care for his father until the latter's death, a promise he most faithfully fulfilled, and then to partition the remainder of the estate with the other heirs, share and share alike. He is an omnivorous reader, possesses a most retentive memory, and stands very high in the esteem of the community.

PAUL M. GREEN. As cashier of the Bank of Milton, Mr. Green is one of the best-known business men of the little city which for the past thirty-two years has claimed his residence. He has lived in Rock county and Milton township for over sixty years, coming hither with his parents when a child of three years, was reared near Milton, and his entire life has been spent in this locality.

Mr. Green was born in Allegany county, N. Y., Aug. 15, 1837, son of Henry W. and Martha M. (Coon) Green, and grandson of Joseph Green, a cooper by trade and a native of New Jersey, who moved to New York State, there reared a large family, and died. His son, Henry W., father of our subject, was born at Brookfield, N. Y., and was a farmer by occupation. He married Martha M. Coon, who was born in Leonardsville, N. Y., one of the large family of Stephen Coon, a farmer of that place, who died well advanced in years. To Henry W. and Martha M. Green were born three children: Ira, who died in infancy; Mary E., born Sept. 27, 1832, widow of M. S. Burdick, now living at Milton; and Paul M. In 1840 Henry W. Green migrated to Wisconsin, entering government land in the northwestern part of Milton township, Rock county. There he lived as one of the pioneer settlers for twenty-eight years, and in 1868 moved to the village of Milton, where for a number of years he engaged in the boot and shoe business in partnership with his son, under the firm name of H. W. Green & Son. He died at Milton in 1879, aged seventy-two years, his widow surviving to the winter of 1894, and passing away at the ripe old age of eighty-four years. Both were devout members of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church. Mr. Green was a prominent citizen of the community, was supervisor for several terms, and in an early day was road commissioner. In politics he was a Whig, and later a Republican.

Paul M. Green was three years old when brought by his parents to Rock county. He grew to manhood on the farm in Milton township, receiving his education in the district schools and at Milton Academy. His education completed, Mr. Green engaged in farming. He and his brother-in-law, Mr. Burdick, purchased 200 acres of land which for eight years they tilled in partnership, in connection with Mr. Green's father's farm, 328 acres in all, located in Sections 4, 5, 8 and 9, Milton township. Then, in 1868, Mr. Green removed to Milton, where he has lived ever since, associated for four years with his father as a boot and shoe merchant. About 1884 he became a stockholder in and was one of the organizers of the Bank of Milton, of which in about 1892 he was made president, holding that position for two years, and since then he has served continuously as cashier.

Mr. Green married, May 19, 1859, Miss Abbie McHenry, a native of New York State, daughter of James and Abbie (Vincent) McHenry, the former one of the earliest settlers of Allegany county, N. Y., where the Valley of McHenry was named in his honor. One child was born to Mr. and Mrs. Paul M. Green, Eldon L., who died at the age of fourteen months. Mr. and Mrs. Green are members of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church. Politically he is a Republican. For five years he was chairman of the town board of supervisors; for fifteen or eighteen years he has been associated with the school board as director or treasurer; for thirteen years he served as postmaster at Milton; and in 1893-94 he was member of the State Legislature. Mr. Green is now president of the College board of trustees. Fraternally he is a member of Du Lac Lodge, No. 322, I. O. O. F. He is one of the prominent, successful business men of Milton, whose keen business judgment and conservative methods commend him as a wise counselor throughout the community. He is public-spirited, and in various ways has most materially contributed to the prosperity and growth of Milton.

CHARLES W. BEALS (deceased) was a well-known and highly respected citizen of the town of Beloit, Rock county, for many years, and built up a character and a standing in the community in which he lived so many years that are still remembered with words of warm appreciation by his old associates.

Mr. Beals was born at Floyd, N. Y., Sept. 1, 1816, and was taken by his parents when a child of two years of age to Burlington, Vt., where he was reared to manhood, and received a good education at the hands of the public-school teachers of the State. He early learned the millwright's trade, and worked much while a boy in the woolen mills of Massachusetts. When he attained manhood Mr. Beals came West to Michigan, and spent several years in the Saginaw Valley. He went from there to Hartland, Ohio, where he remained for twenty years, and only the California gold fever was strong enough to tear him away from pleasant ties. In 1850 he went to California by the overland route, and returned by way of the Isthmus. In 1864 Mr. Beals made an extended trip to Idaho, Oregon and Colorado. In 1870 he made his first appearance in Wisconsin, locating at Prairie du Sac, where he spent one year, and then removed to the vicinity of Beloit, where he established a beautiful fruit farm, which attracted universal admiration for its high cultivation and perfect management. He was familiarly known in Beloit as the "strawberry man."

On Oct. 12, 1869, Mr. Beals was married, in Ohio, to Miss Johanna Jones, who was born in Cuyahoga county, Ohio, Oct. 26, 1850. They had three children, Albert M., Elmer E., and Alice Gertrude. Mrs. Beals is the daughter of George and Eliza (Jordan) Jones, the former a native of New York, the latter of Rockport, Cuyahoga Co., Ohio. He died in Baraboo, Wis., when about fifty years old, and was the father of eight children, of whom Mrs. Beals was the eldest.

Charles W. Beals was a Republican. His religious views were those of the liberal school, and consisted of good deeds and manly conduct rather than profession. He paid one hundred cents on the dollar, and exercised charity as proper subjects for it came under his eye. He was an honest man, and was forcible in the expression of his views on all subjects. He was satisfied in his last days that honorable manhood was a good capital to live by, and would certainly be a recommendation in that "undiscovered country, from whose bourne no traveler returns."

JAMES MCEWAN. No name is more intimately associated with the pioneer history of Milton, Rock county, than that of our subject. His brother Peter left Scotland and in 1837 migrated from Canada to Wisconsin, purchased the claims of two eighty-acre tracts of land, and claimed several lots besides, including the site of the village. The following year our subject, then a lad of fifteen years, made the trip across the ocean from Scotland with his widowed mother and her family.

James McEwan was born at Comrie, Perthshire, Scotland, May 8, 1823, son of William and Elizabeth (Dow) McEwan. The grandfathers, John McEwan and John Dow, both died in Scotland. There too, about 1834, the father of our subject died, and the widow, several years later, came with her family to America. She was a relative of Neal Dow, a famous musician, was a woman of strong character and deep religious convictions. The family sailed from Greenock in the "Lady of the Lake," a sailing vessel, which was nearly two months in making the trip across the ocean; the entire passenger list comprised Scotch people and their families, except one Englishman. Landing at New York, the McEwans proceeded immediately to the Wisconsin wilderness. The trip, strange as it appears to-day, was typical of that time. The emigrants went by one of the new steamers to Albany, and thence by rail to Schenectady, N. Y., the cars being drawn up the hill at Albany by a stationary engine, the rails being simply strap-iron, and the speed very moderate. From Schenectady the party proceeded by the Erie canal to Buffalo, and then embarked on the passenger steamer "Gen. Wayne" for Milwaukee, where a small steamer met the vessel and brought the passengers up the river to the landing. There they lodged at the "Cottage Inn," and next day were met by Peter, the brother and son, and were conveyed by ox-team and wagon to Milton, the trip requiring three days; the country was swampy and the roads miserable until the Fox river was crossed. Then the scenery became more beautiful to the eye, and cheered and re-inspired the weary pilgrims.

At Milton the family located in a house south of the present residence of Mr. McEwan. There was then only the one small house on the site of Milton, and Peter McEwan sold the first lot to a Mr. Sprague, for a blacksmith shop. Mr. McEwan sold the south one of his eighty-acre tracts to a Mr. Goodrich, and soon after the sale of town lots became more frequent. Here the widow resided with her family, and lived to the age of eighty-one years. Of her eight children, four sons and four daughters, only two now survive: Catherine, widow of James Home, residing at Milton; and James, our subject.

James McEwan remained on the Milton farm for several years, assisting his brother, and about 1840 went to Milwaukee, where he learned the carpenter trade. Returning to Milton, he followed his trade for some years, also engaging in contract work, there and at other places. He then for some years engaged in mercantile business at Milton, finally selling out to Mr. Holmes, who is still engaged in business at Milton. Since then Mr. McEwan has lived retired, his home being on a lot in section 34, Janesville avenue. He has owned for many years a farm of 160 acres, located one and a half miles northeast of Milton, which he has greatly improved, and which he rents.

In 1861 Mr. McEwan married Miss Elizabeth McEwan, daughter of William and Mary (Marshall) McEwan, and to them was born one child, Mary, who is a graduate of Milton College, and is now the wife of William Alexander, of Lima township. Mrs. McEwan died Aug. 13, 1878, and in 1881 he married, for his second wife, Miss Margaret Young, daughter of William and Ellen (Shewan) Young.

natives of Scotland. Mr. and Mrs. McEwan are Presbyterians in faith. In politics he is independent. In his early years he was a Democrat and Free-Soiler, but in later years has been a Republican, though not in any sense a politician.

MAJOR GEORGE ROBINSON FRANK (deceased) was one of the distinguished war veterans of Muscoda, Grant county, and a gentleman who enjoyed to the full the respect and esteem of his fellow citizens. He was born at Gray, Cumberland Co., Maine, May 2, 1824, a son of Alpheus and Naomi (Stimpson) Frank.

James Frank, the paternal grandfather of our subject, was a soldier in the war of the Revolution, and a very worthy man. Alpheus Frank and his wife resided in Maine until their deaths. They were the parents of thirteen children, of whom our subject was the eldest son and second child. One of our subject's brothers, John W. Frank, served his country in a Maine regiment during the war of the Rebellion, and is still a resident of Maine. Another brother, Gen. Royal T. Frank, graduated from West Point in 1854, and during the Civil war served his country with distinction, being brevetted major, July 6, 1862, for gallant and meritorious conduct in the Peninsular campaign. In December of the same year he was further honored by being brevetted lieutenant-colonel for bravery at Fredericksburg. During December, 1870, Gen. Frank was transferred to the 1st Artillery, and Nov. 25, 1888, was made commandant of the Artillery School at Fortress Monroe. When Gen. Merritt was sent to the Philippines, during the war with Spain, Gen. Frank succeeded him as commander of the East, with headquarters at Governors Island. During his long and active career General Frank served his country with marked bravery, and his honors are but the just reward of his faithfulness and devotion. Another brother of Major Frank and Gen. Frank is Malvin P. Frank, one of the distinguished attorneys of Portland, Maine.

George R. Frank grew to manhood in his native State, receiving a good academic education, and teaching school himself for four winters, beginning when but seventeen. However, wishing to see something more of the world, the young man, in March, 1845, left home and went to Boston; thence to Buffalo; and in September of the same year to Chicago, which was then a small village. From Chicago he proceeded to Galena, and thence to Benton, Lafayette Co., Wis., where he taught school the following winter. In the spring of 1846 Major Frank removed to Grant county and engaged in farming and teaching, his last term of teaching being at Boscobel, in the winter of 1861-62. Fired with patriotism, when the war of the Rebellion broke out Major Frank applied for a recruiting commission, and while waiting for it sought to stir up his fellow citizens by speeches and enthusiastic talking. As a result of his efforts, when the commission arrived, he enrolled his full company in a single day, and it became Company B, of the 33d Wis. V. I., our subject being its captain, in which capacity he served until the spring of 1865, when he was promoted to the rank of major. Except for a furlough of sixty days, Major Frank was with his regiment continuously, and participated in the twenty-four battles in which it was engaged. The 33d Wisconsin Regiment has a most honorable record. Its first commander was Col. Jonathan B. Moore, formerly sheriff of Grant county, Wisconsin, a very able officer. The regiment took part in the siege of Vicksburg, Meridian expedition, Red River expedition, battle of Tupelo, and other engagements of equal importance. After the surrender at Mobile the regiment was ordered to Montgomery, Ala., and moved thence to Vicksburg, where it was mustered out.

In 1875 Major Frank purchased a large stock farm, just across the line in Grant county, and became one of the largest stock raisers in that locality. He held various county and town offices, having been town superintendent of schools, justice of the peace, member of the county board, deputy United States marshal, deputy United States collector, assistant assessor Internal Revenue, etc.

The first marriage of Major Frank occurred in 1848, to Miss Matilda Price, a native of Indiana, daughter of Zachariah and Elizabeth Price, who was brought to Grant county, Wisconsin, when but six years old, in 1836. The children born of this marriage were seven in number, and those now (1901) living are: Alpheus E., Charles E., Naomi E., William E., George E. and Fred J. The other child, Florence C., wife of Charles J. McKittrick, died July 10, 1897. On Aug. 4, 1891, Mrs.

Frank died while on a visit to her daughter Naomi, at Fremont, Ohio. On Dec. 2, 1897, Major Frank was again married, this time to Miss Mary L. Owens, daughter of Thomas and Mary M. Owens. Mrs. Frank was born in Jo Daviess county, Ill., May 25, 1863; her mother is still living. Mr. Owens died in Richland county, Wis., in 1899.

Major Frank enjoyed the respect and esteem of his fellow citizens, and was one of the leading factors in the social and political life of Muscoda. Genial, public-spirited, enterprising, he was a pleasant companion, as well as a good business man and faithful public official, and his sudden death, on May 20, 1900, at his home in Muscoda, was deeply and sincerely mourned. After the funeral services, which were conducted by the A. F. & A. M. and the G. A. R., six of his old company acting as pall-bearers, the remains were taken to Fremont, Ohio, and buried beside those of his first wife, in Oakwood cemetery. The Major is survived by a wife and six children.

HON. GEORGE CLEMENTSON, Judge of the Fifth Judicial Circuit of Wisconsin, with his residence at Lancaster, has been a resident of Grant county since early childhood. He was born in Yorkshire, England, in March, 1842, a son of Joseph and Elizabeth (Peacock) Clementson, the former of whom was born in Neasham, County of Durham, July 6, 1816, and by trade was a wheelwright. He removed from Darlington, where he had served his apprenticeship, to Richmond, Yorkshire, and there followed his calling until 1849, when he came to America with his wife and son and daughter, a third child having died in infancy; George is the elder of the two survivors. He made settlement at Hazel Green, Grant Co., Wis. He was one of the sufferers from the cyclone which partially destroyed the village in 1876. Mrs. Elizabeth (Peacock) Clementson was called away early in 1879, and the death of Joseph Clementson took place at Hazel Green April 16, 1880.

Judge Clementson began his business life by assisting his father in carpenter work, and later in wagon-making, principally at Hazel Green. For a short time the family lived in Hudson, St. Croix county, and then returned to Hazel Green, where young Clementson acquired his elementary education in the common school and local academy. But his course of reading and general study were far in advance of the curriculum, as he was innately a student and an apt one, and self-education raised him above the average of other young men. He early resolved to become a lawyer, and having well prepared himself, through self-discipline, he began the study of law unaided, and qualified himself for entering the law department of the University of Michigan, which he attended one year. Later he read law in the office of Hon. J. Allen Barber, and in March, 1868, was admitted to the Bar—having worked at his trade, meanwhile, to earn the wherewithal to pay his expenses at college and thereafter until admitted to practice.

In the fall of 1868 Mr. Clementson was elected to the office of district attorney, and in the fall of 1869 he formed a partnership with Joel Allen Barber, which was continued until the death of the latter, in 1881. While this firm still had its existence, and was enjoying quite an extensive and consequently lucrative practice, Mr. Barber was elected a member of Congress, in 1870, and re-elected in 1872, and during the four years of his incumbency the legal work of the firm was practically conducted by Mr. Clementson; that it was successfully carried on is self-evident.

In the spring of 1882 Mr. Clementson was elected on the Republican ticket Judge of the Fifth Judicial Circuit, and has been thrice re-elected, as a non-partisan candidate, without opposition, this fact showing the confidence reposed in him by his party and the public. His fourth term will expire at the close of 1906. During the period of his judgeship his ability and erudition have been fully recognized, and his integrity has never for a moment been questioned. Among many of the important criminal cases that were brought before him while on the Bench, his acumen was truly and effectively manifested in the trials of Rose Zoldoski for the murder of Ella Malley, of the Koetting case, in Milwaukee, and of the lynchers of Siebolt, who was hanged by the culprits to a tree opposite the court house at Darlington.

On May 11, 1869, Judge Clementson married Miss Mary Asenath Burr, a native of Vermont, a daughter of Addison Burr, and a distant relative of Vice-President Aaron Burr. Three children have been born to the Judge and his wife: George Burr, who was graduated from Cornell (N. Y.) University in 1892, and is now a member of the law firm of Lowry & Clementson, of Lancaster; Joseph Addison, who graduated from the high school of Lancaster, took a three-years course in Hahnemann Medical College, Chicago, Ill., later took a course in the Polyclinic College, Philadelphia, Penn., and is now a practicing physician at Mineral Point, Wis.; and Bessie Barber, still under the parental roof.

Mrs. George Clementson is a devout member of the Congregational Church, of which the Judge is a trustee, although not a member. There is perhaps no individual in Grant county more honored and respected than Judge George Clementson, and not one that more justly deserves the respect that is paid him, as it is through his own personal merits and inflexible integrity that he has risen from a comparatively obscure condition to the elevated position he at present holds.

JUSTIN HERBERT BURDICK, M. D. Both grandfathers of this eminent physician of Milton were pioneers of Rock county. The paternal grandfather, George Stillman Burdick, was a native of Rhode Island, and of English extraction. In his native State he was a member of the State militia. By occupation he was a lifelong farmer, and migrating about 1842 to Wisconsin, he located in Lima township, Rock county, where he followed farming for many years, removing to Milton a few years before his death, in 1890, at the ripe old age of eighty-nine years. His wife survived him several years, passing away at the age of ninety-two. Both were devout members of the Seventh-day Baptist Church. George S. Burdick was a man of quiet, retiring disposition, but of firm principles and strict integrity. He had four children, two sons and two daughters.

The maternal grandfather of our subject, Abel Babcock, also a native of Rhode Island, about 1842 cast his lot with the fortunes of the growing Western State of Wisconsin. In the East he had been a woolen manufacturer, and after his arrival in Wisconsin he opened at Milton the "Dulac House," one of the finest hotels of the village. A few years later he entered mercantile business, which he followed successfully until incapacitated by old age. He lived to about the age of eighty years. His family consisted of twelve children.

George Burdick, the father of our subject, was born in New York, and when a minor came with his parents to Lima township, Rock Co., Wis., where he was reared on his father's farm. He married Harriet Babcock, who was born in Pennsylvania, and to them were born two children: Clifford R., who died at the age of two years; and Justin Herbert, our subject. The father purchased land in Lima township, and adopted farming as his vocation. For the past fifteen years he and his wife have made Milton their home. They are prominent members of the Seventh-day Baptist Church, of which society he is a trustee.

Justin Herbert Burdick, our subject, was born in Milton Dec. 29, 1851. He was reared on the farm in Lima township, five miles northeast of Milton, attending the district schools, and later, from 1868 to 1874, Milton College, selecting the classical course. Choosing medicine as his profession, he began his studies in 1874 under Dr. O. Allen, and in 1875-76 attended the College of Physicians and Surgeons, at Cincinnati, Ohio. He graduated from the Medical Department of the Northwestern University, Chicago, in 1877. Until September, 1878, he was connected professionally with Mercy Hospital, Chicago, and then began private practice at Utica, Dane Co., Wis., continuing thus from 1878 to 1887. There had been inherited a taste for manufacture which now for a few years asserted itself. Relinquishing his practice, Dr. Burdick began at Milwaukee the manufacture of steel elastic nuts for bolts, a device that has been widely introduced among the leading railroads of the country, East and West, and especially in the Northwest, their advantages in the great saving of construction and maintenance of track commending general use. For six years he continued actively engaged in this manufacture, but professional life called him back. He retains his stock in the National Elastic Nut Co., of Milwaukee, but in 1893 he reentered the profession of medicine, locating at Milton, where he has ever since enjoyed a lucrative and growing practice.

Dr. Burdick married, Aug. 30, 1882, Miss Fannie E. Coon, daughter of Samuel H. and Lucy (Coon). Five children were born to them, Percy Willard, Paul Howard, Lucy Adene, Justin Hugh, and Clifford Leslie. Mrs. Burdick died Nov. 12, 1896, aged thirty-four years, and for his second wife Dr. Burdick married, Sept. 1, 1898, Miss Clara L.

Stillman, a native of Rhode Island, daughter of Jairus M. and Clara (Langworthy) Stillman. By this marriage Dr. Burdick has two children, William Stillman and Ruth Evelyn. Dr. and Mrs. Burdick are members of the Seventh-day Baptist church at Milton. Politically he has always been a Republican. For the past four years he has been executive officer of the Milton board of health. He is also a trustee of Milton College. His pleasant home in Milton he erected in 1893. He is public-spirited, and both as a physician and a citizen ranks high in the estimation of the people of Milton and the surrounding region, where he is widely known.

ELISHA CARRINGTON. To the citizens of Grant county the name of this distinguished and public-spirited resident of Montfort is well-nigh as familiar as household words. An old settler, he is known to all the men and women of later generations, and the mention of his name at once challenges attention and commands respect. His birthplace was Monroe county, N. Y., a section which forms a part of the Genesee Valley, far famed for its fertile valleys and its gently sloping, vine-covered hills. His eyes first opened Jan. 9, 1831, on the farm of his father, William Carrington, who was born near the city of Utica, N. Y., not far from the headwaters of the Black river, whose undulating banks and picturesque falls, as it descends through the gorge near Trenton, have made it famous among tourists from all parts of the country.

Elisha Carrington lost his father while he was a child, and his mother afterward returned to her father's home, in Ontario county, N. Y., taking with her her three children, one of whom was a daughter. From that place she removed to Medina county, Ohio, making her home at Westfield. There she married a second time, becoming the wife of Hiram Hatch, of the same bailiwick. The elder (and only) brother of Elisha Carrington was named Miles; he died at Detroit, Mich., in 1882. Betsey Jane, his only sister, was twice married, first to William Baker, and after his death to N. P. Hoag, who died Nov. 24, 1894; she died near Kent, Wash., Feb. 14, 1898.

In 1849 young Carrington returned to New York, but after remaining two years went back to Ohio, in 1851. From that State he removed to Wisconsin, in February, 1855, and has ever since been a resident of Grant county, with the exception of the years 1866-68, which he passed in Iowa county. For many years his homestead was in Clifton, but in 1877 he took his family to Montfort, which has since been his place of residence. Brought up as a farmer's boy, he has devoted nearly his entire life to agriculture. His home is one of happiness and comfort, and as he nears the age of threescore years and ten, and looks about upon his children and grandchildren, and reflects upon his long, well-spent and useful life, he is able to return thanks to the Power which has enabled him, through his own, unaided efforts, to accumulate a competence. His fellow citizens have not been slow to recognize his ready grasp of affairs and his moral worth. For two years he served as chairman of the town board of Clifton, and has also served as chairman and treasurer of the board of Wingville township. For many years his political affiliation was with the Republican party, but, having become convinced that intemperance and the liquor traffic are the two most serious dangers menacing the perpetuity of the Nation, he has felt it his duty to give his adherence to the Prohibition movement as a political as well as a moral force. Both he and his family are earnest members of the Methodist Church, to whose advancement he has been a liberal supporter.

On Jan. 8, 1857, Mr. Carrington was married to Caroline Althea, daughter of Adam Keith, who settled in Grant county in 1847. Mr. Keith was a man of intense energy and a somewhat restless temperament. He was born in Pennsylvania March 16, 1794, removed thence first to Ohio, afterward to Indiana, and later to Rockford, Ill. From the place last named he went to Wisconsin, and two years later (in 1849) crossed the Plains to California, where he remained for two years. He finally settled in southwestern Nebraska, and died there March 16, 1883. He married for his first wife Elizabeth Shirley, and after her death wedded Hannah Harris, who survived him until Jan. 7, 1900, when she too passed from earth. By his two marriages Mr. Keith was the father of a large family of children, nine of whom are yet living: Louis, Jasper, Ruhama (Mrs. Pridaux) and Henrietta (Mrs. Reynolds), all of Nebraska; Mrs. N. Banker, Mrs. M. Bartholomew, and Mrs. Carrington, of Wisconsin; Mrs. M. Bowker, of Minnesota; and R. H., of California.

To Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Carrington have been born ten children. One of these, William Grant, died at the age of twenty-four years. Those who survive are Gertrude Louisa, Ella J., Luella Jane, Henrietta Keith, Bertha Adelia, Mabel Susan, Adam M., Elisha Lewis and Miles Frantz.

JOHN O. BEAVER (deceased) is well remembered by the older residents of Clinton township, Rock county, as an exceedingly industrious and upright farmer, working hard for the accumulation of a competence for the good it would enable him to do for those he loved and cherished. He was a man of high character and real worth, and would scorn to tell an untruth or do a mean action.

Mr. Beaver was born in Norway Dec. 24, 1828, and came to this country when a stout and sturdy lad of sixteen years, coming straight to Wisconsin. Here he presently bought a farm, and created that magnificent rural estate that is still kept as the Beaver homestead. It consisted of 120 acres of highly improved land in Section 27, Clinton township, Rock county, to the cultivation of which he devoted his entire life. He died July 4, 1875, and his loss was deeply felt by many who had come to prize him, both as a man and as a friend.

John O. Beaver and Miss Christie Oleson, daughter of Ole Oleson, of Norway, were married in March, 1857. Mrs. Beaver came alone to this country when a young girl, seeking the opportunities the young Republic were said to offer the children of privation in the old world. Mr. and Mrs. Beaver became the parents of six children, Nellie, Betsy, Olinda, Ole J., Oliver, and Ann Maria, all born on the present Beaver homestead and educated in Rock county. Nellie married Andrew Johnson and died in March, 1886; she left one daughter, Alma Charlotte, who is now an inmate of the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Beaver. Betsy married Thomas Olson, who died leaving his widow with two children, Oscar Julius and Eva Clarene, who are also living with Mrs. Beaver. Olinda married Andrew Lewis, a farmer in the town of Clinton, and they have five children, Hattie Juliana, Elva Charlotte, Mattie Clarene, Lilly Amelia and John Bentley. Oliver, a farmer in Minnesota, has never married. Ann Maria was married to Ole Aarud, and they have three children, Clara Matilda, Oscar James, and Gertie Bertine.

OLE J. BEAVER, the youngest of the family, lives at home. He is unmarried, and devotes himself to the care of the farm. His mother and sister, Mrs. Olson, make a home for him, and he is making himself felt in the community as a rising and successful young farmer. He is a member of the church of his parents, the Lutheran, and is taking a leading position in the community. He is a Republican, and socially a most genial and hospitable gentleman.

WILLIAM KIRK JAMESON, M. D., one of the leading physicians of Grant county, and a highly respected and prominent citizen of Muscoda, is a member of the G. A. R., having honorably served his country during the Civil war.

Dr. Jameson was born at Glasgow, Scotland, March 4, 1836, the only child of Rev. James and Anna Jameson, and was brought to the United States by his parents in 1844. The family resided in Albany, N. Y., where they first settled, until 1848, when they removed to Milwaukee, and Rev. Mr. Jameson, who had been a clergyman in the Presbyterian Church, became identified with the Congregational Church in missionary work, preaching at various places in Wisconsin, including Albany, Magnolia, and Center, Rock county, establishing societies and erecting churches. During this time he became the owner of a fine farm in Rock county, which he obtained from the government, and greatly improved. In 1871 Mr. Jameson removed to Muscoda, built a comfortable residence, and officiated as pastor of the Congregational Church there, remaining until 1876, in which year he located at Albany, Green county. There he resided until his death, in 1896, at the advanced age of ninety-four. Not only was Mr. Jameson a man of more than average ability, but he had also enjoyed educational advantages not accorded to everyone, as he was a graduate of a theological school of Edinburgh, that great center of learning. United to his attainments and powers as an orator, he possessed that faculty of winning hearts and endearing himself to his people that made him invaluable as a worker and clergyman. Possessing a robust constitution he was untiring in his efforts, and continued in active work until after he had passed the fourscore milestone, upholding the principles for which he had lived and labored so long until the day of his death. Mrs. Jameson died before her husband, passing away in 1886, at the age of eighty, and both will be long remembered by those who knew and loved them for their many estimable qualities.

Dr. Jameson has proven himself a worthy son of these good people, to whose teachings and example he attributes his own success and integrity of purpose. While a boy he attended common school in the several places at which his father was located, and at eighteen he entered Beloit College. In 1858 he commenced study at Ann Arbor (Mich.) Medical College; was in Hudson, Wis., with Dr. Otis Hoyt, at the breaking out of the Civil war; returned to Ann Arbor after the close of the war, graduating in 1866; and settled at Muscoda. In 1862, at the call of his country, Dr. Jameson enlisted in Company A, 30th Wis. V. I. At Camp Randall, soon after his enlistment, he was made hospital steward; in 1863 was appointed assistant surgeon of his regiment, and continued to serve in that capacity until the close of the war. The greater portion of his time of service Dr. Jameson spent on the frontier, his regiment being one of those stationed in the Indian service, and he was with Brig.-Gen. Sully in the Northwest until the spring of 1865. From Sioux Falls, Iowa, the regiment was ordered to Madison, Wis., and there honorably mustered out. Dr. Jameson has continued to reside in Muscoda, where he has built up a large and lucrative practice.

On Dec. 3, 1855, Dr. Jameson was married to Miss Julia Parslow, who died Oct. 12, 1882. Two daughters were born of this union: Ella, wife of Frank A. David, a prominent merchant of Moscow, Idaho; and Alta, wife of H. R. Smith, one of the leading attorneys of the same place. Within recent years Dr. Jameson has made a visit to his daughters in their far Western homes, and is contemplating eventually locating in Moscow, in order to be near them.

In his political convictions Dr. Jameson is a Republican. He is a highly valued member of the G. A. R. post. Successful in his practice, honored by his associates, esteemed by his friends, and beloved in his family, Dr. Jameson is a living proof that a good man and woman live on in their offspring, and that the world is not only bettered for their own lives, but by those who come after them.

JOHN KEMLER (deceased), formerly one of the leading merchants of Platteville, was a man of high character and benevolent disposition, who numbered among his friends the best-known people of Grant county, and in his death the city sustained a great loss.

Mr. Kemler was born in 1818, in Hanover, Germany, where he grew to manhood, and was fairly well educated in the schools of his native land. In 1837 he came to America, and after spending one summer in New York went to Savannah, Ga. There he resided two years, serving as overseer of a large plantation, but in the spring of 1842 he removed to Galena, Ill., residing there until the fall of 1843, when he returned to Germany, and was married, in 1844, to Miss Maggie A. Meyer, of Hanover. The same year he and his estimable wife came to America, locating at Platteville, and Mr. Kemler engaged in the mercantile line, continuing thus until his death, in January, 1889. As a merchant he was exceptionally successful. His worthy Christian wife survived him until February, 1899. Both were consistent and active members of the Presbyterian Church, and endeared themselves to all who knew them. During his residence in Platteville Mr. Kemler served as trustee. To himself and wife were born a number of children, four of whom survive, all residing in Platteville: Minnie, Julia, A. W. and James C. The eldest, Minnie, was born in Platteville in 1844, was educated in the Platteville Academy, and in 1870 married H. P. Shroder, now one of the retired merchants of Platteville; they have had no family. Julia, also a native of Platteville, is now the wife of George Hendy, a prominent merchant, and a member of one of the old families of Platteville.

A. W. KEMLER, son of John Kemler, was born in Platteville in 1851, was educated in the old academy of the city, and later took a course at Bryant & Stratton's Business College, Chicago, after which he went upon the road as salesman for a Dubuque dry-goods house. In 1877 A. W. Kemler returned to Platteville, and embarked in business as proprietor of a general store. Later he enlarged his establishment, and now handles dry goods exclusively, having built up a large trade among the very best people of Platteville. His place of business is one of the largest in the city, and he also owns a one-half interest in a flourishing boot and shoe concern of Platteville; and is a large stockholder in the First National Bank of Platteville.

In November, 1878, A. W. Kemler married Miss Dora Campbell, of St. Louis, daughter of J. C. Campbell, M. D., one of the leading physicians of that city. Dr. Campbell was born in Tennessee in 1810, came West, and studied medicine in Illinois. In 1841 he was married to Miss Permelia Oliver, of Alabama, and located in Platteville, Wis., where he practiced his profession, erecting a sanitarium which he conducted until 1852, in which year he was induced by his friends to remove to St. Louis. There Dr. Campbell resided until retiring from the practice of his profession, when he came to Platteville, and resided here until his death, in November, 1881; his wife died in 1882. To Dr. and Mrs. Campbell were born seven children: Dr. James A. Campbell, an eye and ear specialist of St. Louis, a physician of note, is married and has three children; Belle, now the wife of T. D. Kimbell, living near St. Louis, has two sons, Clinton and Arthur; Jennie is the wife of Frank W. Person, an active business man of Sioux Falls, S. Dak., and has one son, Walter; Dora is the wife of A. W. Kemler; and three are deceased. Dr. Campbell served his country, during the Civil war, as captain, and later as surgeon, for two years.

Mrs. A. W. Kemler was educated in the schools of St. Louis, graduating from the normal and high schools, after which she taught four years in the public schools of that city; she is a very highly cultured lady. Mr. and Mrs. Kemler have had five children: Florence died in childhood; Clara, born in Platteville in 1880, graduated from the State Normal in the class of 1899, and is now a student in the University at Madison, being very highly accomplished; Truman, born in 1882, is a student of the State Normal; Virginia, born in 1887 in Platteville, is a student of the State Normal; as is also Olive, who was born in Platteville in 1890.

A. W. Kemler was brought up in the faith of the Presbyterian Church, but is not a member, although he has always contributed generously to the support of church work. Mrs.

Kemler and the children are all consistent members of the Congregational Church. In social matters Mr. Kemler is one of the leading Masons of Platteville, and takes an active part in the work of the fraternity. He is justly regarded as one of the leading business men of Platteville, is popular with the best element of people in the city, and has always taken a deep interest in local affairs. He is a member of the Republican party. Mrs. Kemler is very prominent socially and in the church, and both are highly esteemed by a large circle of friends.

James C. Kemler, the second son and youngest child of John Kemler, was born in Platteville Aug. 20, 1858, and was educated at the State Normal, and at Bryant & Stratton's Business College, Chicago. After completing his education he was salesman for Marshall Field & Co., of Chicago, for three years; later served in the same capacity in a large dry-goods store in Dubuque, Iowa; and in 1891 returned to Platteville, and embarked in a general dry-goods and merchandise business, with John H. Lutjens, continuing this partnership to the present time. In 1895 Mr. Kemler married Miss Beata C. Mackey, of Lancaster, Wis., daughter of Frederick Mackey, one of the old pioneers prominent in the history of Grant county, and formerly a resident of Platteville. Frederick Mackey was born and reared in Germany, and is now a resident of Lancaster, Wis. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. James C. Kemler settled in Platteville, and are regarded as among its most prominent people. To this union was born one son, Herbert J., born in June, 1897. Mr. Kemler is also a Republican in political faith, and has been very prominent in the work of this party in Platteville.

No record of Grant county would be complete without the history of the Kemler family, every member of which has contributed so materially to the commercial and material welfare of Platteville, and borne his part in its development and advancement.

ALONZO C. GRAY, vice-president of the Bank of Evansville, Rock county, occupies a conspicuous standing in the community, not merely on account of the financial relations which he sustains toward the business of the community, but also because of the personal probity, kindly disposition and unswerving integrity that have been his most marked characteristics.

Mr. Gray was born in Somerset county, Maine, March 20, 1841, a son of Robert D. and Lurana (Tinkham) Gray, natives of Maine and Massachusetts, respectively. Mrs. Gray was a daughter of Orin Tinkham, and a granddaughter of Hon. John Tinkham, of Massachusetts. Mr. and Mrs. Gray were the parents of four children: Orin T., a lawyer in Boston; Alonzo C., our subject; Clara L., of Norridgewock, Maine; and a daughter who died in infancy. The father was a lumberman in Maine until 1850. The mother died in 1845, and five years later Mr. Gray went to California and engaged in mining. He spent fifteen years in the golden West, and then went back to the Eastern shore of the country, and spent some years in the city of Boston and in the State of Maine. He spent the closing years of his life in Evansville, Wis., in the home of his son, Alonzo C., and died in 1884. His death was the result of a fall, whereby he broke his hip. He had reached the age of seventy-one, and had reasonable expectations of a longer lease of life. His wife was a Baptist, but he was without religious affiliations, though he was a thoroughly honorable and upright man. In early life he had filled several local offices in Maine, and was well thought of by his old associates. His father, Capt. Joshua Gray, was an officer in the war of 1812. He was a farmer, a man of marked ability, taking a prominent part in public affairs, and reached the age of ninety years. He reared a large family.

Alonzo C. Gray grew to manhood in his native county, enjoying all the privileges and opportunities that farmer boys were wont to command in those early days. He received an education that was both broad and deep, studying at the public schools, attended Anson (Maine) Academy, and had private instruction at Waterville, Maine. When he had reached the age of twenty years he felt that he should apply himself to the work of life, and securing a position in a shoe factory spent some years within its walls. He was careful and saving, wisely invested his earnings, and presently had enough to open a general store for himself at West Bridgewater, Mass., but President Lincoln's call at that time for 300,000 men caused him to lay aside personal aims and to enlist in his country's defense. He place his store in charge of his brother, and entered the Union army as a member of Company D, 58th Mass. Vol. Inf., and served until the close of the war. Mr. Gray was detailed to assist in the recruiting office at Faneuil Hall, Boston, Mass., where he remained until April 28, 1864, when he joined his regiment at the front, and six days later took his "baptism of fire" in the battles of the Wilderness. He was at Spottsylvania Court House and Cold Harbor, and was in front of Petersburg during the summer and fall of 1864. There he was taken sick and sent home on a furlough. Before he was able to return to duty the regiment was coming home on account of the close of the war and the dawn of peace over all the land.

Mr. Gray was married about this time, and came to Evansville, setting up in business here, and the city has been his home to the present time. He clerked in a general store from 1867 to 1869, and then bought a half interest in the business with M. V. Pratt, continuing until 1883, at which time he sold out his general stock, and confined himself for a few years exclusively to boots and shoes. Finally disposing of this he turned to real estate, making investments in Chicago and building some residences there. For a number of years he has been quite retired from active business cares. For some eight years he has been vice-president and director of the Bank of Evansville, and is one of three men in Rock county to whom is committed the distribution of funds to indigent old soldiers and their widows and orphans. He is officially connected with both the Badger State Long Distance Telephone Co. and the Evansville Telephone Exchange, being one of the original promoters of both enterprises.

Mr. Gray and Miss Isabel F. Peckham were married Nov. 28, 1866, at West Bridgewater, Mass., and the union, singularly happy while it lasted, was broken by the death of Mrs. Gray, on Sept. 23, 1878, at the early age of twenty-nine years. Mr. Gray's second marriage, on May 18, 1879, was to Miss Emma J. Rowley, daughter of Daniel and Calista (Wells) Rowley. Mrs. Gray is a lady of many gifts and excellencies of mind and heart, and has proved in every way a fit companion for her energetic and enterprising husband. Four children were born to this union, Orin C., Ellis Wells, Paul Rowley and Isabel Bernice. Orin C. is a student at Beloit College. Ellis Wells died when a child of one year and nine months. The two younger children are at home, and attend school. Mr. and Mrs. Gray are members of the Baptist Church, and he is a member of Union Lodge, No. 32, A. F. & A. M.; Evansville Chapter, No. 35, R. A. M.; and Janesville Commandery, No. 2, K. T. He is also an active worker in T. L. Sutphen Post, No. 41, G. A. R., and the Modern Woodmen of America. Mr. Gray is a Republican, and has received various honors at the hands of his fellow townsmen. He is alderman from the Second ward, and has filled that position several terms; was a member of the old village board of trustees; was city assessor one year; was president of the school board six years; and has always taken a deep interest in the local schools. His home is on Church street, west of First, where he has lived a number of years.

HILEN CANFIELD MORSE (deceased) was born in Geauga county, Ohio, Jan. 5, 1824, a son of Amos and Anna (Fisher) Morse, natives of Maine and New York, respectively. They were the parents of six sons and two daughters, all now deceased. Amos Morse died in Ohio in 1838, aged seventy-three years. His wife survived him many years, and married again. She died in 1863. Amos Morse is supposed to have been a soldier in the war of 1812.

Hilen C. Morse, whose name appears above, was reared on a farm in Geauga county, Ohio, and had his home in the town of Huntsburg. He received such schooling as fell to the lot of the farm lads of his time, and when he reached manhood learned the trade of carpenter and joiner. This was his occupation conjointly with farming for many years. He came to Wisconsin at an early day, and for some years made his home at Pewaukee Lake, near Milwaukee. About 1848 he moved to Johnstown, Rock county, and helped to build the first church in that community. He also aided in the construction of a church in what was known as Old Johnstown. He was a resident of Rock county many years. Attracted by the fact that he had a brother living in Jo Daviess county, Ill., near the settlement of Morseville, which was named after him, he sold out in Rock county, and moved into Illinois. He returned to Johnstown, and made his home there once more, then lived near Monroe, in Green county, and finally came back to Johnstown, where he died in 1888, aged sixty-four years.

Mr. Morse and Miss Angelett Newhall, a daughter of Elisha and Esther (Richardson) Newhall, were married June 27, 1852. They had five children: Amos Elbridge, Sarah Louisa, Martin Hilen, Willie, and Julia Esther. Amos E. married Clara Godfrey, who bore him one child, Ray Denver, and is deceased; he married a second time, Emma Smith becoming his wife, and she bore him two children, Mabel Louisa and Harry Eli; the husband and father died in 1886, at the early age of thirty-three years. Sarah Louisa died when only three months old. Martin Hilen married Mary Jane Hall, and lives in Janesville; they have three children, Ida, Pliny and Lenn. Willie died in infancy. Julia Esther married Walter S. Pember, of Johnstown Center. Hilen C. Morse and his wife were members of the United Brethren Church. At one time he was associated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Politically he was a Republican. Mr. Morse was a man of most excellent character, and the earlier settlers of the county remember him as an honorable and industrious man, who worked hard, paid his way, and was always a kind friend and good neighbor. Mrs. Morse has made her home in Janesville since 1892, and is much respected for her intelligence and her kindly heart. She is a good neighbor, and a woman of strong personal character.

The parents of Mrs. Morse were Eastern people, her father a native of Massachusetts, and her mother of Vermont. They had four children, two of whom are now living: Elbridge G. and Mrs. Morse. Mr. Newhall was a farmer, who came West to New York, where he married. About 1830 he moved to Indiana, and settled near the town of New Durham, La Porte county, where he lived until 1837. That year he moved into Rock county, Wis., and settled near Johnstown, where he took up a claim of 160 acres for himself, and an equal amount for each one of his sons. Here he spent the balance of his days, and died about the year 1857, aged seventy-four years. His wife survived him two years, and died when she was sixty-five years of age. They were Universalists, and liberal people. He was a man of ability and character, and held several town offices at different times; he was appointed notary public by Gov. Noble, of Indiana.

W. M. HETHERINGTON, cashier of The First National Bank of Platteville, Wis., is a native of Dubuque, Iowa, born April 24, 1863, and is a son of C. E. and Lucy (Mills) Hetherington, of whom brief mention here follows:

C. E. Hetherington was born in Bellefonte, Penn., in 1825, came to the West in 1847, located in Dubuque, and there married Miss Mills, daughter of William Mills, a lawyer of considerable celebrity. Mrs. Lucy Hetherington was born in Monongahela City, Penn., in 1834, received her education at Washington, Penn., and in 1855 accompanied her parents to Dubuque. For many years Mr. Hetherington was secretary and manager of the Dubuque Linseed Oil Works.

W. M. Hetherington received his education in the public and high schools of Dubuque, and when eighteen years of age entered The First National Bank of that city, as messenger, occupied all of the different positions in the bank up to that of cashier, and in November, 1891, came to Platteville. Here he organized The First National Bank, which purchased and succeeded the private bank of Dr. George W. Eastman, the latter becoming president of The First National Bank, and Mr. Hetherington cashier.

On July 6, 1898, Mr. Hetherington married Miss Jessie M. Kyle, a native of the city, where she was graduated from the State Normal School, and for three years thereafter taught in the city of Milwaukee. Mr. Hetherington is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics is a stanch Republican. He has, however, never taken an active part in politics, preferring to give his entire time and attention to the management and building up of the bank with which he is connected, and which is regarded as one of the most conservative and substantial financial institutions in this part of the State.

GEORGE COVERT, M. D. This well-known and popular physician of Clinton, Rock county, is not only one of the oldest practicing physicians of that thriving little village, but also one of its pioneer residents. He located at Clinton in December, 1855, and has lived there ever since, being with one exception the pioneer of longest residence in the village. His life of more than forty-five years in the community has been most active, influential and useful. The Nestor of his profession, he has won honor among his fellow practitioners, and the lasting confidence and high regard of a large clientele.

Dr. Covert is of Holland-Dutch extraction. His grandfather, Abraham A. Covert, a native of New Jersey, became one of the earliest settlers of Seneca county, N. Y., migrating with his father, and followed the vocation of farming through life, living to the age of ninety-nine years, and leaving a large family. His ancestors had earlier settled in New York, and a Mr. Covert erected the first church in the city of Brooklyn.

John A. Covert, the father of our subject, was reared a farmer on the Seneca county homestead. He married Miss Catherine B. Huff, a native of New Jersey, and a daughter of Isaac Huff, who was of Holland-Dutch descent, the family originally being of French-Huguenot extraction. Isaac Huff was a man of superior education, and followed farming. He married a Miss Van Nostrand. He moved to Ovid, N. Y., and later to Oakland, Mich., where he died at the age of seventy-five, having reared a large family. His widow later came to Clinton, Wis., where she died, having attained the remarkable age of one hundred and one years and seven months. In 1852 John A. Covert moved from New York State to Oakland county, Mich. Ten years later he settled at Clinton, where he remained until his death, at the age of eighty-four years. His wife survived him one year, dying at the age of eighty-three. They were reared in the Dutch Reformed Church, but later united with the Presbyterian, and then the Congregational Church. Mr. Covert was for a number of years a justice of the peace, and he was a man of unusual force of character. Of the six children of John A. and Catherine B. Covert, four sons and two daughters, four are now living: Dr. George, our subject; Augustus, of Cheney, Spokane county, Wash.; Ryneer, of Paw Paw, Mich.; and Elizabeth, wife of Norton Winslow, of West Bloomfield, Oakland Co., Michigan.

Dr. George Covert was born at Ovid, N. Y., Dec. 7, 1829. He was reared in Seneca county, and received his education in the common schools there and at Washington Collegiate Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y. Determined to prepare himself for professional life, he taught school for several years, then prepared himself for the practice of medicine, receiving his professional education at Starling Medical College, Columbus, Ohio, and the Cincinnati Eclectic Medical Institute. Dr. Covert began practice at Oakland, Mich., in 1854. In 1855 he settled at Elgin, Ill., and in December of the same year located at Clinton, Wis., where he has remained continuously in practice as a physician and surgeon ever since. He has always been a progressive physician, and during his long and successful practice he has kept thoroughly abreast with the rapid advance in the medical profession. He graduated from the Cincinnati Eclectic Medical Institute in 1863; in 1878 received a diploma from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Chicago, became a lecturer at that institution on chronic diseases, and later was professor of obstetrics. Dr. Covert is a member of the State Eclectic Medical Society, and has twice been honored by election to the presidency thereof. He is also a prominent member of the National Eclectic Medical Association, served as its president one term, and as vice-president for two terms. He is a member of the Illinois State Medical Society, and of the Pennsylvania and Oregon State Medical Societies. He is a noted contributor to medical journals, one of the most extensive writers in general practice in Wisconsin. Dr. Covert built the first drug store at Clinton, which he conducted for twenty-five years. His practice has been general in character, and lucrative. Dr. Covert married, in January, 1858, Miss Mary Janette Barker, daughter of Cyrus J. and Eliza (King) Barker. Three daughters were born to them. Effie Grace, Kittie May and Georgia K. Effie Grace is the widow of C. B. Shepard, and lives in Elkhorn, Wis., where she is employed in an abstract office. Kittie May married T. J. Creeth, of Hastings, Neb., and they have two children, Claire J. and George Alexander. Georgia K. married Calvin S. Thomas, a merchant of Clinton. Mrs. Mary Janette Covert died June 30, 1873, and for his second wife Dr. Covert married, June 13, 1887, Miss Jennie Muzzy, daughter of Lorenzo and Mary J. (Barker) Muzzy, who were natives of Massachusetts, and early settlers in Rock county, Wis., where Mrs. Covert was reared. She was educated at the State University at Madison, being graduated with the degree of Ph. B. in 1872. Two years later she received the degree of A. B., being the first lady to receive this degree from the University of Wisconsin, and then taught Latin and Greek for three years in the high school at Madison. She possesses the culture and accomplishments which make her a prominent factor in social functions. Dr. and Mrs. Covert have an adopted daughter, Julia Gertrude. They are prominent members of the Congregational Church. He was superintendent of the town schools many years ago, and has always been deeply interested in educational matters. The Doctor has been twice president—in 1887 and 1899—of the Covert Association, the largest family association in the country, which meets in June of each year in Seneca county, New York.

JOHN SHORTNEY (deceased) was for many years a familiar figure on the streets of Janesville. Though confined closely to the house during the last part of his life, he is remembered as an exceedingly honorable and upright man, and a choice spirit by those privileged to count him as an intimate friend.

Mr. Shortney was born in London, England, Sept. 14, 1822, only child of John and Ann Shortney. His father, who was a London merchant, died in 1824. The infant son was then taken by his aunt, Letitia Ainsley, and under her fostering care he grew to manhood. When about twenty-eight years old he came to this country, his two aunts, Miss Ainsley and Mrs. Jane Parris, supplying him with clothing and plenty of money with which to make a fair start in the New World. The voyage was disastrous. The craft was a sailing vessel, and took seven weeks to make the journey. On the way over a severe storm carried away one of the masts, and all but wrecked the vessel. Everything movable on the ship had to be thrown overboard, and Mr. Shortney lost his money, his clothes, and everything he possessed in the world except the suit he wore, and his letters of introduction and credit. He landed in New York without resources, and at a loss where to go. He let chance decide, set up his cane, and went in the direction it fell, which was west. He made his way to Rome, N. Y., secured work, and saved money that brought him, after a year's delay, to Janesville.

Mr. Shortney arrived in Janesville in 1850, and at once began clerking for Ensign Bennett, and worked for him about two years. Leaving him, he entered the general store of Charles Stevens, with whom he continued until he was offered a position as bookkeeper in the Badger State Bank, at Janesville. He was rapid and accurate, and remained with the proprietor, Edward L. Dimmock, until his failure, in 1858. After the closing of the bank Mr. Shortney was a partner in the book and stationery business for a year with James Sutherland. He worked for the American Express Co., and then became bookkeeper for M. C. Smith & Co., and was with them twenty-one years, until their sale to Bort, Bailey & Co. He kept on with the new firm for a year, and kept books for his former employer, Mr. Smith, at Richland Center, Wis., for two years. For three years he was manager of the estate of Peter Myers for the widow, Mrs. Myers, and while still an active and vigorous man, on March 4, 1891, he fell on a slippery stairway at home, and received injuries from which he never recovered. He died June 5, 1899, at the age of seventy-seven. Mr. Shortney was educated in a private school in London, possessed an unusual familiarity with literature and history, was a deep reader, and accumulated a fine library. He was of a somewhat reserved nature, but his friends became warmly and deeply attached to him. He was very orderly and precise, carried into his own matters the most exact order, and was a fine penman. He was very ambitious in all business matters.

Mr. Shortney was twice married. His first wife, Isabel Older, to whom he was united Oct. 26, 1855, died April 21, 1857. On Nov. 28, 1859, was celebrated his wedding with Miss Isobel Margaret McDonald, daughter of James and Jeannette (McNaughton) McDonald. To this second union were born six children: John, Isabel, Letitia, Letitia (2), Jeannette and James. John is not married, and is a clerk in a shoe store at LaCrosse, Wis. Isabel lives in Detroit, Mich. Letitia (1) died when a babe of three months. The second of that name is a trained nurse in the city. Jeannette and James are both living at home. Mr. Shortney was an Episcopalian in religious faith, while his wife, who survives him, is a Presbyterian. He was a Republican, but was never a candidate for any office. James McDonald, Mrs. Shortney's father, was born in Scotland, Aug. 16, 1810, and was educated in his native land. Coming to this country, he made Port Jervis, N. Y., his first stopping place, remained there three years, and then went to Caledonia, in the same State, where he was married, and from Caledonia he moved to Sturgis, Mich. In 1855 he moved to Chilton, Wis., and remained there until 1874, when he came to Janesville. He lived only a short time after his arrival in the city, dying April 4, 1877, at the age of sixty-six years and eight months. His wife died in 1855. They were the parents of five daughters and one son. Mrs. McDonald was born in Johnstown, N. Y., in 1810, and was one of a large family. Her father, Robert McNaughton, was a soldier in the war of 1812, and lived to be ninety-six years old.

CHARLES M. SMITH, SR., M. D., of Evansville, is one of the older physicians of Rock county, and has been identified with its interests for forty-one years. He entered the State as a teacher, and taught school for a time following his arrival here. It is as a physician, however, that he has made himself felt in the community, and it is not too much to say that he has lived up to the best ethics of his profession.

Dr. Smith was born in Cattaraugus county, N. Y., June 25, 1834, and is a son of Jacob and Delana (Rich) Smith, natives of that State. Three sons and six daughters, seven of whom are now living, were born to this worthy couple. Catherine is the wife of George Paine, and lives in Cattaraugus, N. Y. Dr. Charles M. is at Evansville. Elvira died in infancy. James R. is in New York. Arvilla is the wife of C. M. Rumsey, and lives in New York. Judson lives in the same State. Mary R. is the wife of Rev. C. M. Pullen, an Episcopal clergyman, now of Buffalo, N. Y. Matilda, who died in February, 1901, was the wife of Orrin Rich, of New York. Jacob Smith was a farmer and breeder of fine stock in Cattaraugus county, and died there at the age of seventy years. His wife, the mother of our subject, died at the age of fifty years. They were members of the Methodist Church. His father, John Smith, was a native of New York, of German descent, and was a farmer by occupation. He reared a family of ten children. He reached the age of eighty. The maternal grandfather of Dr. C. M. Smith was a native of Onondaga county, N. Y., of English descent, and was a farmer. He participated in the war of 1812. He died in old age, and his wife reached the age of ninety. They had a large family, and Delana was the youngest of their thirteen children.

Dr. Smith lived in Cattaraugus county, N. Y., until he was twenty years old, was a student in the district school, and for a time was clerk in a drug and commission store in Forestville, N. Y. In 1854 he came to Wisconsin, taught the first school in Dayton, and later was a teacher for two terms in Evansville. He then entered the academy at Albion, Wis., where he attended three terms, and was graduated in 1856. That year he took up the study of medicine with Dr. Evans as his preceptor, and was graduated from Rush Medical College in 1860. He began the practice of medicine at Footville, Rock county, Wis., and was there two years when he obtained the appointment of assistant surgeon to the 13th Wis. V. I., in which position he served throughout the war. Returning to Evansville at the conclusion of hostilities, he formed a medical partnership with Dr. Evans that continued for eighteen years. In 1873 he took a special course in Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York. In 1882 he was made an honorary member of the Wisconsin Pharmaceutical Association; he is also a member of the American Medical Association, the State Medical Association, and the Central Wisconsin Association.

Dr. Smith and Miss Julia Sawin were married May 16, 1861. Mrs. Smith is the youngest daughter of Rev. John Sawin, a clergyman of the Baptist Church, and one of the earliest settlers of Wisconsin. To Dr. Smith and his wife have been born two children, Flora D. and Charles M., Jr. Flora D. married George O. Gordon, of Lodi, Wis., and is the mother of one child, Doris. Charles M., Jr., is mentioned elsewhere in this volume. Dr. Smith, Sr., and his wife are members of the Episcopal Church. He is a Mason, and holds membership in Union Lodge, No. 32, A. F. & A. M.; Evansville Chapter, No. 35, R. A. M.; and Janesville Commandery, No. 2, K. T. He also belongs to Leota Lodge, I. O. O. F., and Evansville Post, No. 46, G. A. K., of which latter he has been surgeon ever since its organization. He lives at the corner of Church and Madison streets, and his office is at No. 204 Main street. Politically he is a Republican, was president of the village board in 1876, and was clerk of the high school fourteen years from its organization.

HON. JOHN MEEK WHITEHEAD, senior member of the law firm of Whitehead & Matheson, Janesville, Rock county, stands by general confession among the very first lawyers of the State. He has a good knowledge of legal principles, and is able to apply that knowledge to cases under discussion in a manner both accurate and convincing.

Mr. Whitehead was born on a farm near Hillsboro, Ill., July 29, 1852, a son of Jacob and Elizabeth Ann (Paisley) Whitehead, natives of New Jersey and Montgomery county, Ill., respectively. They were the parents of six sons and four daughters, and six of their children are now living: Hon. John M.; Rev. Jacob P.; Elizabeth, matron of the State Hospital at Mendota, Wis.; Joel B.; Mary, wife of Arthur W. Cole, of Hyde Park, Ill.; and Miss Mathe Whitehead, of Hillsboro, Ill. The father was a blacksmith and farmer. He was of English descent, and exhibited many of the best traits of his ancestry. He was born in 1815, and left New Jersey when nine years old, living at Hamilton, Dayton, Piqua, and other points in Ohio until the month of December, 1837, when he came West, and located at Alton, Ill., where he lived one year. Then he moved to Montgomery county, and lived in and about Hillsboro, Ill., up to the time of his death, April 24, 1900. His wife survives. Jacob Whitehead was a member of the Presbyterian Church. He was a colonel in the State militia about the time of the Mexican war. At one time he was a Democrat, but voted for Lincoln in 1860, and was a Republican ever after.

Daniel Whitehead, paternal grandfather of our subject, was a native of England, was a shoemaker, and came to the United States about 1812. He settled in Ohio with his family, and died there in middle life. He had two sons and one daughter. Joseph Paisley, the father of Elizabeth Ann Paisley, was born at Greensboro, N. C., and moved to Illinois about 1820, locating in Montgomery county, where he engaged in farming. He spent the last years of his life there, and died in 1858, when about sixty years old. He was a prominent farmer, and had a familiar acquaintance with many of the leading men of the times. He left a widow, and five of his children also survived him.

Hon. John M. Whitehead was reared at Hillsboro, Ill., and received a solid and substantial education. He attended a local select school and an academy, in 1872 spent a year at Wabash College, and attended Williston Seminary, at Easthampton, Mass., completing his preparation for Yale, from which institution he was graduated in 1877. While at Yale he made the exceptional and creditable record of not missing a recitation or a chapel meeting for five years. After leaving school he taught a year at Ravenswood, Ill., and then became a student at Chicago, in the law office of Leaming & Thompson, prominent lawyers, under their direction mastering the elementary principles of the law in a manner both thorough and brilliant, being admitted to the Bar in 1880. He spent five years with them as a clerk and general assistant, and in August, 1883, came to Janesville to open an office and engage in the practice of his profession. He won friends, and has acquired a good patronage, being now regarded as one of the most capable and successful attorneys of the city. He remains in the same building where he began, and old friends know where to find him, always ready for their business and for them.

Mr. Whitehead and Miss Lavina Fletcher Barrows, daughter of James L. and Hannah (Cottle) Barrows, were united in marriage July 12, 1881. To this union were born two children, Philip Barrows, on January 29, 1884, and a daughter, on May 11, 1887. Mrs. Whitehead died March 15, 1888, leaving behind her lasting memories of a sweet and noble womanhood. She was a member of the First Congregational Church of Janesville, as is also Mr. Whitehead. He is president of the board of trustees of the society, and has been clerk of the church sixteen years. Politically he is a Republican, and has been honored with many evidences of trust and respect. He is now State senator and was a member of the county board of supervisors for one year. Mr. Whitehead has been associated with Alexander E. Matheson as a law partner, and they are engaged in a general law practice.

PETER ALLER (deceased), at one time superintendent of the Rock County Insane Asylum and Poor Farm, and one of the most widely known and influential citizens of Janesville, Rock county, was largely instrumental in the development and improvement of the material resources of that locality.

Mr. Aller was born in Hunterdon county,

N. J., March 18, 1817, a son of William and Mary (Dalrymple) Aller, also natives of New Jersey. William Aller was a son of Peter Aller, also a native of New Jersey, of German descent, who was a lieutenant in the war of the Revolution, and migrated to Pennsylvania, where he died at the age of eighty-six. He was married twice, and had seventeen children. The maternal grandfather of our subject, Jesse Dalrymple, was also in the Revolutionary war, and a native of New Jersey. The founder of this family in America was born in Wales and immigrated to this country. He had eight children, and died at the age of eighty-five or eighty-six.

William Aller, who was a carpenter, moved to Pennsylvania, and settled in Bedford county, where he resided a number of years. In 1840 he came to the Territory of Wisconsin, and settled in Union township, Rock county, where he took up eighty acres of government land and greatly improved same. He died at the age of eighty-six. Mrs. William Aller died several years before her husband, aged eighty. Both of these good people were Baptists in religious faith, and were highly esteemed for their many admirable qualities. To them were born five sons and three daughters, of whom but one is now living, William, of Utah.

Peter Aller was only one year old when his parents removed to Bedford county, Penn., and he grew to manhood on the farm there, attending the district school, and learning the trade of stone and brick mason, which he followed many years. In 1840 he came to Rock county, Wis., and took up 160 acres of government land, in Union township, which he improved. There he lived until 1870, when he removed to Evansville, and was in the drug business for a few years. For nearly fourteen years Mr. Aller was superintendent of the Rock County Insane Asylum and Poor Farm, which was first located in Johnstown township, but in 1894, the buildings being old, the county erected new ones in Janesville township, about three miles north of the city of Janesville, where the poor farm of 383 acres is also situated. The county buildings are very substantial and well built, and the asylum is a quarter of a mile in circumference. It now has about 145 inmates, with a capacity of 160; while the poor house inmates range in number from fifty to sixty.

On March 28, 1841, Peter Aller was married to Miss Eleanor Temple, daughter of Ebenezer and Hannah (Stabard) Temple, and of the five children born to them, two sons and three daughters, only one survives, Hannah, wife of William Roberts, who lives in Mitchell county, Iowa; they have five children, two sons and three daughters, Claude (a lawyer in Holdrege, Neb.), Claire (a farmer), Nellie, Essie and Maude. The deceased were named Ebenezer, Jennie M., Hale and Olive. On Oct. 20, 1860, Mrs. Aller died, mourned by all who knew her. On Dec. 2, 1863, Mr. Aller was married to Maria Smith, who was born in Montpelier, Vt., daughter of Stephen and Sarah (Bean) Smith, and one child was born of this marriage, a son, Arthur P., who married Miss Ella C. Barker; he is steward at the Northern Hospital, near Oshkosh, Wisconsin.

Mr. Aller was a consistent member of the Congregational Church, to which his widow also belongs, and enjoyed the highest esteem of all who knew him. Politically, Mr. Aller was a Republican, served as chairman of the town board of supervisors for twenty years, and was a member of the county board for the same length of time; was also township assessor three years, and justice of the peace about eight or ten years; and in all these various offices, gave unbounded satisfaction on account of his integrity and strictness in the faithful discharge of his duties. At the time of his death Mr. Aller was quietly enjoying the fruits of his long years of earnest effort, surrounded by the comforts of life, and esteemed by a wide circle of friends. He passed away March 14, 1901, at the home of his son, in Winnebago, Wis., and was buried in Evansville.

CHARLES M. SMITH, JR., M. D., of Evansville, Rock county. The country physician with a large practice and an extended "ride" has selected a most laborious vocation, and subjects himself to a constant strain. His patients are remote, and much depends on the fidelity and good sense of those attending them. He is far more helpless than his city congener. But the profession in the country has its vast advantages, and the young man is wise who prefers the peace and quiet of the country, with its simpler diseases and more certain and rapid recovery, to the glare and excitement of the city. Such a man is the physician whose name introduces this article. He wants to be close to his community, wants to know the people as only a country doctor can know his patients. He is beginning well, and a bright future is augured for him by his friends.

Dr. Smith was born in Evansville, Rock Co., Wis., March 23, 1866, son of Dr. Charles M. and Julia (Sawin) Smith, a family history of whom appears elsewhere. The young man had his education well advanced while at home under the parental care, attending the local school and academy. He obtained his medical education at Rush Medical College, Chicago, from which institution he was graduated in 1890. He had an office at Milton Junction for a year following, and then returned to Evansville, where he has been engaged in a general medical practice to the present time. He has won many friends, and has a large and growing patronage. On June 30, 1895, Dr. Smith married Miss Ida Monshau, daughter of Henry and Mary Monshau. They have one son, Dudley W. E. Mrs. Smith is a member of the Episcopal Church, and the Doctor is a member of several fraternal orders, holding membership in Union Lodge, No. 32, A. F. & A. M.; Evansville Chapter, No. 35, R. A. M., of which he has been high priest three years; Janesville Commandery, No. 2, K. T.; and the Knights of Pythias, of which he has been chancellor commander three years; he is highly prized in these various associations. Professionally he belongs to the Wisconsin State Medical Society, and to the Wisconsin Central Medical Society, is examiner for the New York Life, Connecticut Mutual and Pennsylvania Mutual Insurance Cos., and the Knights of the Macabees. He has a handsome home at the corner of Madison and Church streets. Dr. Smith has practically spent his entire life in Evansville, and is a most popular young man in that thriving city. He is a Republican politically.

JAMES GRAY (deceased), late a resident of Beloit, Rock county, was born March 20, 1824, in Ireland, of Scotch-Irish parents, and came with them to this country when he was a lad of five years. The father, also named James Gray, was a farmer, and died near Galena, Ill., at the age of fifty-five. His father, also named James Gray, was a well-to-do man, and died in Ireland. The mother of our subject, who bore the maiden name of Mary Johnson, died in Kansas, at the home of a daughter, when eighty-two years old. Our subject was one of a family of eight. The family located in Baltimore, and our subject remained under the parental roof until he reached the age of twenty-eight years, when he came West, and spent some time at Galena, Ill. But the country did not entirely satisfy him, and he retraced his steps to Maryland. He was married in Baltimore in 1851, and the young couple sought a home and business in the West. They spent three and a half years at Galena, and about eleven years at Warren, Ill., where Mr. Gray was engaged in the plow-making industry. In 1866 he moved to Beloit, and thereafter that city was his home as long as he lived. Here he formed a partnership with J. R. Booth, and bought the sash and blind factory of Burpee & Hammond, conducting it for five years under the firm name of Gray & Booth. Mr. Booth then disposed of his interest in the factory to Mr. Gray, who held and managed the business alone for many years.

Mr. Gray was married Oct. 8, 1851, to Miss Catharine Rust, a daughter of Paul and Patience (Stinchcomb) Rust, and to this union came seven children, James Pierce, Alda, George S., Nellie, Tina Pauline, Frank Elmer and Labertice. James Pierce married Miss Anna Clark, now deceased, and he died in 1894; they were the parents of five children, Frank, Mabel, Paul, Robert, and one child deceased. Alda married W. A. Root, and lives in Elgin. They have one child, Kate Pauline. George S. is a traveling man; he is unmarried, and makes his home with his mother. Nellie died when two and a half years old. Tina Pauline married Ernest Fluekiger, a groceryman of Beloit; they have three children, Alda, Ruth and Ernest Rust. Frank Elmer married Miss Anna Wells; they live in Chariton, Iowa, and are the parents of three children, Catherine, Helen and Rosie. Labertice is single, and is in business at Atlanta, Ga. Mr. and Mrs. Gray were always believers in the Christian faith, but never united with any church. They attended the Second Congregational Church in Beloit. He was a Democrat, and was alderman from the Third ward three years. Mr. Gray united with the Odd Fellows while still living in Baltimore, and beautifully exemplified the tenets of that order in his own life. He was a man of marked domestic tastes, and greatly loved his home. He seldom spent the evenings abroad, but enjoyed his friends at his home, owning a beautiful residence at No. 756 Bluff street. He remodeled the house thoroughly, and it is still the home of his widow.

Mrs. Gray's parents were natives of Maryland. They had five children, three of whom are now living. Achsah is the wife of Austin Hemphill, of Burlington, Iowa; Catharine is the widow of James Gray, of Beloit; and Mahalah is the widow of John Greenwood, of Kalamazoo, Mich. Mrs. Gray's father, Paul Rust, was a blacksmith by trade, though he was more largely interested in real estate than in anything else. He served in the war of 1812, and died in Baltimore when he was eighty-nine years old. His wife died in 1850, when sixty years old. They were both Methodists. His father, Charles Rust, was a native of Pennsylvania; his father was a German, and his mother English. Charles Rust served in the American Revolution, and died when somewhat past middle life. Thomas Stinchcomb, the father of Mrs. Paul Rust, was a native of Maryland, of Welsh descent, and also a soldier of the Revolution. He was the father of eleven children, and died in middle life.

BARNABAS BALLOU ELDREDGE, senior member of the firm of Eldredge & Fisher, and one of the foremost members of the Rock County Bar, was born at Sharon Springs, Schoharie Co., N. Y., Feb. 2, 1824.

David Eldredge, his father, married Sally Swift, some mention of whose ancestry may be found in a succeeding paragraph. The father of David Eldredge, and grandfather of the subject of this narrative, also bore the baptismal name of Barnabas. He was of Welsh stock, his father having emigrated from Wales to America and settled on Cape Cod, Mass., in 1736; he married Adna Hammond, a descendant of the Penn family, through Elisabeth Hammond, a sister of Sir William Penn, the father of William Penn, of American distinction. Barnabas Eldredge was born at New Bedford, Mass., and married Docia, one of a large family of children born to Josiah Wadsworth, of Hartford, Conn., who finally with his family located at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Mr. Wadsworth was one of the pioneers of Dutchess county, N. Y., and one of the earliest merchants and traders of that section.

David Eldredge began life as a farmer, and was the founder of Sharon Springs, which is today one of New York's most beautiful and most fashionable watering places. In 1836 he disposed of the same to Stephen Crocker, of New York City, and thereupon retired to his farm, where he died Oct. 8, 1865, after an illness of six days, in his sixty-ninth year. He was a man of excellent business sagacity, and of an industry not easily wearied; a good citizen, and a man thoroughly respected in every relation of life. His wife, Sally (Swift), was a daughter of Thomas, who was of English descent, and was a native of Rhode Island. He removed from that State to Otsego county, N. Y., where for many years he owned and occupied a farm, and was proprietor of an inn situated near Sharon Springs—a popular hostelry in its day. In 1837 or '38 he migrated from New York to Illinois, settling between Plano and Aurora. There he purchased a farm, to which he soon afterward brought his family, and on which he died, at an advanced age. He was regarded as a man of more than ordinary native ability, and of unusually good business sense.

David Eldredge and his wife were the parents of five children, four daughters and one son. Those yet living are Julia, Barnabas B., and Louisa. Julia is Mrs. William Becker, of Easton, Penn.; and Louisa is the widow of Evan Worthing. The two daughters deceased were named Irene and Nancy: the elder married William Dale, of Phillipsburg, N. J., who was superintendent of construction on the Belvidere & Delaware railroad, and other important engineering enterprises; Nancy became the wife of Philip Henry Platner, and both died near Cherry Valley, N. Y. Mrs. Eldredge passed away six days before her husband, at the age of sixty-seven. Both were Universalists in faith.

Barnabas B. Eldredge received his early education in the common schools of Schoharie county, and at the Clinton Liberal Institute, at Clinton, Oneida Co., N. Y. In 1841 he entered Hamilton College, and in July, 1845, received the degree of A. B. Immediately after graduation he became a student in the Law Department of Harvard University, at Cambridge, Mass., continuing there until December, 1846, the eminent Simon Greenleaf being then at the head of that department. Thereafter he continued his professional studies in the office of Samuel Stevens, of Albany, N. Y., then one of the foremost practitioners in that State. In May, 1848, he was admitted to practice in the courts of New York, the judges sitting in banc who passed upon his qualifications being Willard, Cady and Hand.

Being thus equipped for his chosen work, he married and came West. His objective point was Janesville, but very shortly after reaching that inchoate city he received advice of the serious illness of his father, and at once returned home. In 1850 he returned to Wisconsin, and opened an office at Janesville on Dec. 2, of that year, in partnership with Isaac Woodle and John J. R. Pease. The co-partnership continued until June, 1851, under the style of Woodle, Eldredge & Pease, when Mr. Woodle withdrew. Eldredge & Pease remained together until 1866. On March 20, of that year, Mr. Eldredge revisited Sharon Springs, to attend to some needed repairs upon a farm which he owned. This property he finally sold, and returned to Janesville July 1, 1868. He did not resume practice, however, until 1877, his wife's health calling for his constant attention. On Jan. 1, 1878, he entered into partnership with Ogden H. Fathers, the firm of Eldredge & Fathers continuing in business for five years, when Mr. Fathers withdrew. Mr. Eldredge continued in business alone until 1898, when he associated with himself Arthur M. Fisher, a gentleman of distinguished native talent.

Reference has been made to our subject's marriage, which occurred Feb. 2, 1848. His bride was Louisa M. Hutchins, a daughter of William and Louise (Angel) Hutchins, who were born and married in Connecticut. Mr. and Mrs. Eldredge became the parents of two sons, William M. and Charles C. The elder, whose biography may be found upon another page, is engaged in handling real estate. Charles C. died in infancy. Mrs. Eldredge was a Universalist, but attended the Episcopal Church in Janesville until her death, which occurred March 28, 1877. On June 17, 1878, Mr. Eldredge married a second time, leading to the altar Miss Mary A. Hunter, the daughter of a distinguished Presbyterian clergyman of Quebec, Canada, who died there after reaching the extraordinary age of ninety-two years. Both Mr. and Mrs. Eldredge are communicants of the Episcopal Church. He is a man of genial, wholesouled temperament, kindly disposition, and social instincts. He belongs to Janesville Lodge, No. 55, A. F. & A. M.; to Janesville Chapter, No. 5, R. A. M.; and is also a member of Janesville Commandery, No. 2, K. T., in which he at one time held the office of captain-general. In early life he was a Democrat, but supported the Free Soil wing of that party in 1848, and shortly before the outbreak of the Rebellion espoused the political tenets of the Republican party. He was the original promoter and organizer of the branch of the Union League established at Janesville in the early days of the Civil war, and for two years was its chief executive officer.

In the early days of Janesville's history as a municipality Mr. Eldredge consented to serve as alderman. The position was distasteful to him, yet he devoted to its duties his best efforts. He also occupied a seat on the board of supervisors for several years, and was long a director of the Rock County Agricultural Society. No wisely-conceived, well-directed public enterprise has ever appealed in vain either to his sympathy or to his purse. He was the promoter and supervised the sinking of the first artesian well in Rock county, and was one of the prime movers in the establishment of the city water works, furnishing an abundant supply of water taken from artesian wells.

EDWARD DWIGHT EATON, D. D., LL. D., the distinguished president of Beloit College, is justly regarded as a leading citizen of Beloit, Rock county. Under his administration and that of his predecessor the name of the college and of the city has become familiar to every part of the United States, and many who are scarcely able to locate the great cities of the land know well the whereabouts of Beloit, Wis. Dr. Eaton is a scholarly and broadly-educated gentleman, with rare administrative gifts, and the College has greatly prospered in his hands.

President Eaton was born at Lancaster, Wis., January 12, 1851, and is a son of Rev. Dr. Samuel and Catharine (Demarest) Eaton, his father a native of Massachusetts, his mother of New York. They were the parents of four children: Rev. James D., D. D., of Chihuahua, Mexico; Dr. Edward D., of Beloit; Samuel L., M. D., of Newton Highlands, Mass.; and Charles W., M. D., of Des Moines, Iowa. The father, a clergyman, now preaches in the Congregational Church at Roscoe, Ill. He was chaplain in the Iron Brigade three years during the war of the Rebellion. For forty years he was pastor of the Congregational Church at Lancaster, Wis., his pastorate extending from 1846 to 1886. He was a trustee of Beloit College for many years.

Eben Eaton, the father of Dr. Samuel Eaton, lived at Framingham, Mass., where he was a farmer. He served for over fifty years as a deacon in the Congregational Church in that city. Eben Eaton's father, Ebenezer Eaton, was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and helped to carry Gen. Warren off the field of battle at Bunker Hill. The Eaton family has been established in that vicinity for a century and a half. Jonas Eaton, of Reading, Mass., was the founder of this branch of the family in this country, coming hither in the early part of the seventeenth century. Rev. James Demarest, the maternal grandfather of President Eaton, was a clergyman of the Reformed Dutch Church, and lived to be ninety years old. He was the father of three children: Rev. James Demarest, D. D.; Catharine, the mother of Dr. Eaton; and Sarah, wife of Richard B. Ferris, vice-president of the Bank of New York.

President Eaton was reared in Lancaster, Wis., and attended Lancaster Institute, where he prepared for Beloit College. He was a student here, and was graduated in the full classical course in 1872. He studied theology at Andover and at Yale, graduating from Yale Divinity School in 1875. On August 23, 1875, he was married to Miss Martha E., daughter of Hon. J. Allen Barber, of Lancaster; her mother bore the maiden name of Elizabeth Banfill. Dr. and Mrs. Eaton are the parents of one son and five daughters, Ethelwyn, Allen Barber, Elizabeth, Mildred, Martha, and Aldyth. The two elder daughters are in Beloit College, and the three younger are in the city schools. The son is a graduate of Beloit College, in the class of 1899, was instructor in sciences in the Academy at Elgin, Ill., in 1899-00, and is now traveling in Egypt and Palestine. During his course in college he held the State championship in tennis. He was also on the college base-ball team.

After their marriage Dr. and Mrs. Eaton went to Europe, where he spent a year in study, principally in the Universities at Leipzig and Heidelberg. Returning home, he was ordained and installed pastor of the Congregational Church at Newton, Iowa, in 1876. In December, 1879, he was called to the First

Edward Dwight Eaton

Congregational Church at Oak Park, Ill., and in June, 1886, was called to the presidency of Beloit College. He succeeded Dr. Chapin, a most scholarly and accomplished educator, and has been president of the College to the present time. During these years the resources of the College have been trebled in value, five large buildings have been erected, and the courses of study greatly enlarged. The number of students in the classes has increased nearly four-fold, and the latest enrollment is about 500. The Faculty numbers twenty-three members. President Eaton received the degree of LL. D. from the University of Wisconsin in 1887, and that of D. D. from Northwestern University the same year, and from Yale in 1900.

In January, 1898, Dr. Eaton went to China as a member of a deputation sent by the American Board of Foreign Missions to inspect and report upon its missionary operations in that country, returning in June of the same year. The Doctor will preach the sermon before the American Board at the annual meeting in Hartford, Conn., in October, 1901.

HOWARD F. BLISS, superintendent and steward of the Wisconsin School for the Blind, who has his home in Janesville, Rock county, is a man of irreproachable personal character and business standing.

Our subject was born in Carroll county, Ill., Feb. 15, 1844, a son of Lewis and Eliza (Jenkins) Bliss, both native to the soil of Connecticut. They had three children, two of whom are now living: George J., of Chicago; and Howard F., whose name introduces this article. The father, who was a farmer, moved from Connecticut to Illinois at an early day, and located on eighty acres of government land in Carroll county. He made this his home, added more real estate thereto and farmed until old age compelled him to retire from active work, spending the last five or six years of his life with his son in Janesville. He died in that city in July, 1899, at the venerable age of ninety-three years; he was a Methodist. His first wife, who died when she was about forty-five years old, was a Presbyterian. He married for his second wife Mrs. Flavilla Snow, who still survives, and is living with her daughter at Oak Park, Ill. The paternal grandfather of Howard F. Bliss was also a native of Connecticut, of French descent, and died in his native State. He reared a large family. The father of Eliza Jenkins also died in the East. He had a small family.

Howard F. Bliss grew to manhood on the Illinois farm, attended the district school, and at the age of twenty began clerking in a drug store. About 1863 he came to Janesville, to take a clerkship in a wholesale harness and saddlery house, which he held for some three years. Then he and his father-in-law, Adam Hayner, bought out the business, and conducted it under the firm name of Hayner, Bliss & Co. for a number of years. Then the firm became Bassett, Bliss & Echlin, and in 1883 Mr. Bliss retired. The business is still continued by Bassett & Echlin. Very shortly after his retirement from the harness firm Mr. Bliss associated himself with the Gazette Printing Company, and became its president; at the present time he is treasurer of the concern. He was actively identified with the Gazette office from 1883 to the fall of 1895, in which year he was appointed by the State board of control to the office of Superintendent and Steward of the Wisconsin School for the Blind, the appointment being made under the administration of Gov. Upham. The school now has 109 pupils, with fifteen teachers in the various departments. It has a reputation among the various schools of the kind as extremely high-grade in all its work.

Mr. Bliss and Miss Carrie Hayner, a daughter of Adam and Alsora (Smith) Hayner, were married Oct. 25, 1865, and they have had four children: George, Harry, Emma and Charles. George lives in Chicago, and is acting secretary of the Chicago office of the National Fidelity & Guarantee Co. Harry lives in Janesville, and is the present manager of the Daily and Weekly Gazette; he married Miss Clara Smith, and has one child, Josephine. Emma died at the age of twenty-one. Charles is now studying in the College of Osteopathy in Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Bliss are members of the Court Street Methodist Episcopal Church. He has been a member of the board of stewards many years, and is at present superintendent of the Sunday-school. Socially he belongs to Janesville Lodge, No. 55, A. F. & A. M., and politically, he is a staunch Republican.

ALVIN B. CARPENTER, a prominent capitalist and retired business man of Beloit, Rock county, has led a long and active life full of lofty motives and noble ambitions, and is now passing the sunset hours of his days on earth amid the scenes of former activities, for he has always been an exceedingly busy man. He has worked diligently in a multitude of enterprises, and, whether they have hit or missed the mark, he was never discouraged, but kept on working with all the dynamic forces of a mighty nature, and at last the day dawned, as soon or late it surely does to all great souls.

Mr. Carpenter was born in Strafford, Orange Co., Vt., July 17, 1812, a son of Willard and Polly (Bacon) Carpenter. His parents were natives of Connecticut, and had twelve children, of whom our subject is the only one now living. Willard Carpenter, who was a farmer, moved from Connecticut into Vermont very soon after his marriage, and the journey was made so far back in the history of New England that the way was indicated by blazed trees. In Vermont he hewed out a farm, and the family for a long time lived in a log cabin. All the children were born in the same house in Vermont, and all grew to maturity before a death occurred in the family. In later times more prosperous conditions permitted the erection of a frame house. Here Willard Carpenter lived and reared his large family, and here he died when eighty-seven years of age. His wife lived to be ninety-one; with her husband she was a member of the Congregational Church. Ephraim Carpenter, the father of Willard, is supposed to have been a native of England, settled near Woodstock, Conn., and served in the Revolutionary war. He died in the East. Alvin Bacon, the father of Mrs. Polly Carpenter, was born in Connecticut, of English descent, and lived to old age. He was the father of several sons and daughters.

Alvin B. Carpenter was only seven years old when he left home to earn his own living, his father giving him his time, and saving for him all he could earn. His first money was a dollar, as a compensation for a week's work. This he changed into one hundred pennies, with Senator Morrell, and felt richer than he ever has since. Three or four years later his father gave him a hen, and promised him all he could make out of it. The hen raised thirteen chickens, from which he made ten dollars. While still a mere child he was taken sick with St. Vitus' dance, and for three years had to lie in a cradle. When about fifteen he had recovered so that he was able to shift for himself. Accordingly he went to Troy, N. Y., and entered the employment of his brothers John and Willard, as chore boy in their store. He earned a little extra money selling boiled chestnuts and clothes-pins, and finally accumulated five hundred dollars. He put this in the bank, and after a time bought a horse and wagon, and peddled tinware and notions through Washington, Saratoga and Rensselaer counties, N. Y., and then sold dry goods in the same way from house to house, his brothers furnishing him goods to sell for a certain profit. Before he was twenty-three years of age Mr. Carpenter had earned ten thousand dollars as a peddler from house to house. In 1835 he came West, and established a prosperous general store at Evansville, Ind., in partnership with his brothers. He purchased an extensive stock of goods in New York, and shipped it to Evansville by water, that being before the day of railroads. The three brothers about 1838 saw large opportunities in Indiana real estate, and made extensive investments in farm properties throughout the State, which yielded rapid and enormous profits, and all became very wealthy. His brother Willard gave a half million dollars in money and land to the city of Evansville, personally superintending the building and furnishing of the library.

Alvin B. Carpenter lived in Evansville ten years, and then moved to Galena. There he remained only a year, and then went to Chicago, where he started a man in business, which cost him ten thousand dollars in a very little time. In 1846 he came to Beloit, and engaged in business as the proprietor of a general store, which he conducted for some years. He had a branch store at Cambridge, Dane Co., Wis., which he founded and named in honor of Cambridge, Mass., and another store at Delavan, and laid off the town of Avon, Wis., in partnership with a man whose interest he afterward acquired, having a small store there also. He closed up all these mercantile establishments at the time of the gold excitement in California, intending to go West, but his wife prevailed upon him to abandon the idea, and his home has continued to be in Beloit to the present time. He has never wholly lost interest in Evansville, and for a period of two years did a wholesale merchandising business there since his settlement in Beloit; and from time to time he has also taken part in several important business enterprises in that city. Mr. Carpenter still looks after his property interests, though he is eighty-eight years of age. He comes of a sturdy stock, and feels that he is good for a long stay yet on earth.

Mr. Carpenter and Miss Almira L. Dutcher, daughter of Simeon Dutcher, were married July 6, 1839. They became the parents of one son and five daughters. James M., Mary, Hattie, Anna B., Adeline and Cornelia. (1) James M. first married Hattie Root, of Mohawk, N. Y., who died shortly after, and he then married Miss Louisa Ingle; they had two sons and three daughters, and three of these are now living. Alvin B., Ingle and Isabel. (2) Mary married Alonzo Green, and is the mother of two daughters, Lulu, wife of Walter Bowen, of St. Paul, Minn., and Florence Elizabeth, wife of J. W. Campbell, of Peoria, Ill.; the latter has two daughters, Gladys and Marie. (3) Hattie married William M. Searing, of Saratoga, N. Y., and they had one son, Alvin, who died when seven years old. Mr. Searing died in Philadelphia in 1884, and his son's death occurred ten months previously. (4) Anna B. is the widow of Jeremiah Lawrence, of Chicago; she has two children, Jessie C. and Willard C. (5) Adeline married C. B. Salmon, of Beloit, and is the mother of five children, three of whom are now living. Edward, Cornelia and Loretta; Edward is a miller in Beloit, and a capable business man. (6) Cornelia married F. D. Caldwell, of Evansville, Ind., and is the mother of one child, Mary S. James M. Carpenter was a partner with his father in the Evansville business, a merchant in Beloit, and had numerous interests in that city. He died in April, 1899. His son Alvin B. lives in the City of Mexico, and is in charge of valuable gold mines in that country. His son Ingle is a prominent lawyer in New York City. Both graduated from Beloit College in the same class, in 1893. Both are unmarried.

Mrs. Almira L. Carpenter was a native of Castleton, N. Y., where she passed her girlhood days, and died in Beloit Feb. 9, 1890, when seventy-five years old. Their Golden Wedding was celebrated the summer before, a thousand invitations being issued. Among the presents received on that occasion were a gold-headed ebony walking cane, presented by fifty ladies, and a fine gold-headed parasol presented by fifty gentlemen. Mrs. Carpenter was a Congregationalist, as is also her husband. In early life he was a Democrat, but for forty years he has been a Republican. He lives at No. 416 College avenue, where he built a fine home about 1885. It is said of him that he has put up more houses than any other man in Beloit, and that on every occasion he has paid one hundred cents on the dollar. All his life he has been inflexibly honest, and met every agreement to the letter.

HON. PLINY NORCROSS is one of Janesville's influential citizens. A lawyer by profession, he served four years as district attorney of Rock county, from 1871 to 1875, and two terms as city attorney of Janesville, 1875 and 1876. He sat in the mayor's chair for two terms, 1877 and 1878, and has twice represented the Janesville District in the State Legislature, first in 1867, and again in 1885. His intellectual capability and his moral worth have commanded respect and his kindly impulses, generous nature, genial disposition and charitable instincts have made him universally popular.

Mr. Norcross was born in the town of Templeton, Worcester Co., Mass., Nov. 16, 1838. His father, Franklin Norcross, married Lydia Powers, who bore him three sons and two daughters, Lanson Powers Norcross, Pliny Norcross, Frederick Franklin Norcross, Ellen Sophia Norcross, and Louisa Azubah Norcross.

Franklin Norcross was a farmer and lumberman in his native State, and removed from Massachusetts to Wisconsin in 1852, settling at La Grange, Walworth county. For a time he cultivated a farm there, but being allured by tales of brighter prospects in the West he went to Tama, Iowa. Within a few years he returned to Wisconsin, taking up his residence in Janesville. He died there in 1875, in his sixty-third year, his wife surviving him until August, 1892, when she died at Denver, Colo., at the age of seventy-seven.

Daniel Norcross, the father of Franklin Norcross, and grandfather of Pliny, was descended from English ancestors who settled in Massachusetts in early Colonial days. He died after reaching the age of seventy-six years, the father of five children. Lydia Powers, wife of Franklin, and mother of Pliny Norcross, was one of the twelve children of Oliver Powers, a Massachusetts farmer who traced his lineage back to the early Puritan settlers of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. He died on the ancestral farm at the age of seventy-seven.

Pliny Norcross came to Walworth county, Wis., with his parents, in the fall of 1852. He attended Milton Academy for two years, and was for a short time at the State University. On April 16, 1861, while a Freshman, he enlisted in Company K, 1st Wisconsin Infantry, under Capt. Lucius Fairchild, being the first student to enlist in the war for the Union. At the expiration of this term of service he again enlisted, in Company K, 13th Wisconsin Infantry, and was captain of that company during three years. His brothers Lanson and Fred were members of the same company. Fred died during his term of service at Nashville, Tenn., May 16, 1865.

Mr. Norcross was married Jan. 4, 1865, to Phoebe A. Poole, only daughter of John H. and Elizabeth (Winne) Poole. The children of this marriage were Frederick F., John Vanderpoole, Elizabeth Leavitt and Edward Powers. Frederick married Alice Wrenn. John married Marian Ruger. Elizabeth married George A. Mason. Both sons and the son-in-law practice law in the city of Chicago. The third son, Edward, is studying medicine at the Medical School of the Northwestern University of Chicago.

In the spring of 1865 Mr. and Mrs. Pliny Norcross settled in the city of Janesville, Wis. Mr. Norcross was a partner of the late Judge John R. Bennett from 1866 until 1873, then a year with Hon. A. A. Jackson, and from 1876 to 1883 was in partnership with Hon. B. F. Dunwiddie, present judge of the Twelfth circuit. Upon the dissolution of the firm of Norcross and Dunwiddie Mr. Norcross gave up the practice of law and went to Brooklyn, N. Y., and in company with two Englishmen, Messrs. Ivery and Bulver, organized the International Tile Co., of which he was president. After the factory was erected he sold out his interest and returned to Janesville, and in the fall of 1883 he erected the Norcross block, on River street, and in the summer of 1884 moved the Farmer's Mill from its location on Milwaukee street to its present site, on Rock river, at the foot of Dodge street, and leased it to the firm of Doty & McKey; later he bought out McKey and remained as a partner in the milling business with E. P. Doty until 1900, when he sold his interest in the milling business to Mr. Doty. In the same year, 1884, he erected the Phoebus block, on Milwaukee street. In 1885, he built the first permanent electric light plant in the city of Janesville, Wis., on a part of the site formerly occupied by the Farmer's Mill, using the same water-wheels and flume for generating electric current that had been used for turning the Buhr mill stone.

In 1892 Mr. Norcross purchased the Fulton milling property on the Catfish river, tore down the old mill, and put in its place an electric light plant, from which he furnished current for Edgerton and for the Janesville street lamps. The Janesville circuit was about thirty-three miles in length, and was a part of the first long-distance plant in Wisconsin. In 1891 and 1893 he purchased both of the old and abandoned flouring mills at Indian Ford, and a few years thereafter united the power of both mills into an electric light plant and grist mill on the site of the McChesney Mill, on the west side of the river. In 1899 he sold the Janesville Electric Plant, Library and Mill, together with the Fulton Electric Plant, to the Janesville Electric Company, of which he was the first president, and still serves in that incumbency. From 1889 to 1897 he was in partnership with Alexander Richardson, in the manufacture of ladies' fine shoes, in the Norcross block.

HON. ALLEN P. LOVEJOY. The family of Lovejoy has played no unimportant part in making and molding American history, and the eminent citizen of Janesville above named is not one of its least distinguished members. It is of English Puritan origin, and its members have been for generations noted for that courage, love of liberty and loyalty to conviction which made their pilgrim ancestors bid adieu to their native shores, to found a new country on the rock-bound coast and among the cloud-scraped hills of New England. Elijah P. and Owen Lovejoy, whose names are "familiar as household words" in every home where human slavery is held in detestation and abhorrence, were of the same stock as is Allen P., and were educated in the same schools in the Pine Tree State.

The earliest American progenitor of that branch of the Lovejoys to which the Janesville family belongs was one John Lovejoy, who came from England to the New World about 1630, and was one of the earliest freeholders in the Massachusetts Colony. His descendant. Hezekiah Lovejoy, removed to New Hampshire, and it was in that State that both the father and grandfather of Allen P. Lovejoy were born. The grandfather, John Lovejoy, was a farmer, was born in Amherst, N. H., and reached the age of fourscore years. He was the father of nine children, and his family were noted no less for longevity than for industry and integrity, all the sons and daughters attaining a ripe old age. John Lovejoy married Martha Odell, daughter of William Odell; she died in 1850, aged ninety-five years.

Allen Wing, our subject's maternal grandfather, born in Sandwich, Mass., migrated to Maine in 1781, and died when eighty-three years of age. His English progenitors emigrated from the mother country about 1636, and settled near the site of the present city of Lynn, Mass. Mr. Wing was a man of considerable wealth, and a large land holder, owning several farms and two sawmills. He was a man of public spirit, a liberal friend of the church, and built a church which he donated to the town.

Nathan Lovejoy, father of Allen P., was born in New Hampshire, but removed to Maine while yet a young man, and it was there that he met and married Temperance Wing, daughter of Allen Wing. He was a Restorationist in religious faith, and she a Universalist, yet their differences in creed did not disturb the harmony of their married life. He passed away in 1867, at the age of eighty-one, four years after she had entered into rest, in her seventy-sixth year. He led the life of a farmer. His many virtues caused him to be held in high esteem. His disposition was naturally retiring, almost shrinking, yet at the solicitation of his fellow townsmen he consented to fill various local offices, bringing to the discharge of these distasteful duties a quick intelligence, ready perception and unswerving fidelity. Of his ten children—six sons and four daughters—four are yet living: Nancy W., wife of John Hunt, of Auburn, Maine; Nathan E., a resident of Columbus, Ohio; Allen P., of Janesville; and Alden W., whose home is at Roxbury, Mass., a suburb of Boston.

Allen P. Lovejoy grew up on the paternal farm in Wayne, Maine, where he was born March 20, 1825. His attendance at the district school was supplemented by a brief course in the Wesleyan Seminary at Readfield. Being naturally inclined to study, he proved himself an apt pupil, easily outstripping his schoolmates in mathematics, for the mastery of which he manifested a rare intuitive ability. For eight terms he wielded the birch in country schools, his native ability, sound mental equipment and inborn executive ability commanding respect from parents and pupils alike. He learned the trade of a carpenter, but found little opportunity in his native State for the exercise of his craft. Accordingly, before he had reached the age of twenty-five, he resolved to seek a wider field, in what was then rather indefinitely described as the "far West." In 1850 he reached Wisconsin, arriving at Janesville on foot, after a long walk from Milwaukee. He found work at his trade, and it was not long before his mechanical skill, joined to those qualities of thrift and perseverance which have characterized him through life, enabled him to start in business for himself as a contractor and builder. In 1859 he undertook a new venture, opening in that year his first lumberyard. The issue of the undertaking proved his business prescience, others being established in 1863, 1865, 1870 and 1874, and branches operated at Oregon, Brooklyn and other points. In 1868, in company with Daniel W. Bradley, Mr. Lovejoy purchased several thousand acres of pine lands in Michigan, in 1871 several thousand more, and later an addition of many thousand acres, for the proper handling of the yields of which our subject has been largely interested in three sawmills, while he also owns a number of lumberyards. He is also interested in other commercial enterprises, some of which are of considerable magnitude. Among these is the Janesville Machine Co. (formerly known as the Harris Works), of which he has been president for a quarter of a century. The concern has a working capital of half a million dollars, employs 240 men, and conducts, in addition to a foundry and general machine shop, a large, well-equipped plant for the manufacture of agricultural implements. Mr. Lovejoy is also a stockholder in the Janesville Cotton Mill Co., and has extensive holdings of real property in that city, as well as in other localities in his adopted State, being one of the heaviest tax-payers in Rock county.

Mr. Lovejoy's intellect is keen and farsighted, and his business judgment rarely at fault. His habits are methodical and systematic, and his conclusions are usually reached through a course of logical reasoning for which his native aptitude for mathematics, perhaps, well qualifies him. Facts and figures appeal to him quickly, while for theoretical inferences he has little regard. Yet, practical man of affairs as he is, his nature is gentle, genial and generous. Liberal in his benefactions, he is charitable also to the frailties of his fellows; and, while he has been wholly the architect of his own fortune, he is entirely devoid of that imperative, self-assertive spirit which too often mars the character of the self-made man. His physique is well proportioned, and is indicative of great strength, even at the age of seventy-five years. His frame is tall and muscular, yet possesses that suppleness and alert activity of motion which come to men of his years only after a life of abstemiousness. He is a Knight Templar Mason, and a member of the Knights of Pythias. In his old home, in Maine, he was prominent and influential in the councils of the Sons of Temperance. His political creed is that of the Republican party, of which he has been an active member since the date of its organization. He has been repeatedly elected to offices of high trust and responsibility, but in no position of either public or private life has he ever been tried and found wanting. In 1869 he was a member of the lower house of the Legislature, and served as State senator in 1887-89. In 1881 he was mayor of Janesville.

On May 29, 1880, Mr. Lovejoy was married to Miss Julia A. Stow, a daughter of Henry and Susan (Folliett) Stow. Four children have blessed their marriage: Allen P., Henry S., Julia S., and Webster Ellis, of whom the last named died in infancy. Mrs. Lovejoy is a member of the Baptist Church.

C. A. LIBBY, editor and proprietor of the Enterprise and the Tribune, at Evansville, Rock county, is a native of New Hampshire, born at Great Falls Nov. 6, 1846. He lived in his native State until he was nine years of age, and came West with his parents to Evansville, Wis., in 1855. His primary education, received in the common schools, was supplemented by a course in Evansville Seminary. When the Civil war broke out it stirred the patriotic feeling slumbering in his breast, and being then too young to enlist he waited until 1864, when he became a member of Company D, 40th Wis. V. I. He remained in the service until honorably discharged by reason of the expiration of his term of enlistment. During that time he had a sunstroke, and contracted a chronic disease which has permanently affected his health.

On Nov. 6, 1869, Mr. Libby was united in marriage with Miss Lucila Crandall, who was born July 13, 1850. During the spring following their marriage the young couple moved to Kansas, where they lived for three years. At the expiration of that time Mr. Libby came back to Evansville, bringing his family with him, and here he has since continued to reside, with the exception of one year—1895-96—spent in Chicago, in the grocery and meat business. Since 1881 he has been editor and manager of the local papers, the Enterprise and the Tribune, and has achieved a success in that line of work. Socially he is a charter member of T. L. Sutphen Post, No. 41, G. A. R., of Evansville, and he is a respected and worthy citizen. Five children have come to Mr. and Mrs. Libby, four sons and one daughter, as follows: Fred Nelson was born Dec. 30, 1871, in Lacynge, Kans.; Mary Alice and Almond Melvin (twins) were born Jan. 19, 1874; Bur Ansel was born Aug. 18, 1881. The youngest child, Roy, who was born Oct. 3, 1884, died Aug. 3, 1886. Almond Melvin, who is engaged with Montgomery, Ward & Co., Chicago married Miss Henrietta L. Herbster, of that city, and they have two daughters, Irene Caroline Alice, born Sept. 16, 1898; and Hazel Grace Eveline, born July 16, 1900. Fred N. entered the United States Pension Office at Washington, D. C., in 1893, and has since been employed there; on Jan. 1, 1901, he was married in Washington, D. C., to Miss Helen E. Smith, of that city.

Mrs. Libby is a daughter of Daniel Crandall, a pioneer settler of Rock county, who came to the State in 1844, migrating from Chenango county, N. Y., and settling in the town of Union, where his death occurred Aug. 31, 1862, when he was aged forty-five. His widow is now living in Montana, with her sons.

REV. WILLIAM HARVEY (deceased) was a merchant during the major portion of his active career, and for some years lived retired, in the enjoyment of a competence which bespoke character, intelligence, industry and integrity to a very high degree.

Mr. Harvey was born in Cornwall, England, in April, 1818, son of Christopher and Jane Harvey, both English born and bred. They died in the old country, leaving a large family, and five of their sons, John, William, James, Richard and Joseph, came to the United States, where they led honest and industrious lives.

William Harvey received his education in England, and coming to this country in 1848 located at Hazel Green, Wis., where he worked in the lead mines some two years. In 1850 he established himself as a general merchant at Council Hill, Ill., and followed mercantile business for more than forty years. In 1889 he sold out, and moved to Hazel Green, Grant county, where he lived retired until his death, in February, 1897. Mr. Harvey had a fine education, and had studied theology, with a view to entering the ministry, in his native land, but gave it up after coming to this country, with the exception of the work of a local minister of the Methodist Church, which he continued to do as long as his health and strength permitted, preaching in the school houses and in the country churches of that denomination with fine effect. An eminently Christian man, he lived under an obligation of right and brotherly neighborliness, and his name is remembered as that of an honorable and God-fearing man.

In 1850 Mr. Harvey married Miss Caroline Nacollins, daughter of John and Mary Nacollins, who were born in England. The father died in his native land, and the mother, with her six children, came to this country, settling at Council Hill, where all died with the exception of Caroline, who is now the widow of Mr. Harvey. Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Harvey: (1) Christopher, born in 1852, went to Colorado while still a young man, and there followed the occupation of a butcher; he was killed by a snow-slide in 1885. He died unmarried. (2) Joseph, born in 1854, married Miss Laura Thomas, daughter of Josiah Thomas, of Hazel Green, and they now reside in Colorado. (3) James, born in 1856, married in Colorado a Miss Mills, of Georgetown, of that State, and for a number of years has been keeping books for a large packing company in Colorado. He received a good education, and is a man of more than ordinary ability. Two children have been born to him and his wife. (4) William, born in 1863, married Miss Sarah Reed, of Hazel Green, and is a leading business man of Colorado. They have two children, Clarence and Earl. (5) Mary J., (6) Elizabeth E. and (7) Jane all died in infancy.

Mr. Harvey was a Republican, but his strong convictions and deep interest were in church and school. From time to time, however, he held local offices in his district in Jo Daviess county, Ill., and for years was superintendent of the Sunday-school. For over forty-eight years he exercised his gifts of heart and faith as a minister of the Gospel, and, as a man, a citizen and a Christian, his standing was beyond reproach.

Mrs. Harvey was born in September, 1822, in Cornwall, England, where she was educated. While still a girl she learned the dress-making trade, in which she was engaged at the time of her marriage. A lady of many Christian virtues and high character, as a wife and a mother, as well as a kind neighbor, she is spoken of most highly.

REV. E. O. GIESEL, pastor of the German Lutheran Church at Plattville, Grant county, was born in Silesia, Germany, in 1849, a son of Adolph and Nora (Koerner) Giesel, who spent their entire lives in that country; the father died in 1890, the mother some time previously.

Reared in his native land, Mr. Giesel obtained his literary education in his home city, Sagan, and then entered the theological seminary at Hesse. For one year he was house teacher at Berlin, Prussia, with the family of a millionaire. In 1873 he left Germany and came to the United States. He was graduated from the seminary at Mendota, Ill., in 1874, and was ordained a minister of the Lutheran Church Jan. 28, 1875. That year he began his pastoral work at Glencoe, Wis., where he erected a church, and preached to the congregations at that place, Montana and Whitehall. He next went to Fairmount, now Welcome, Minn., where he built a parsonage, and from there went to Baraboo, Wis. He built a church at that place and also at Caledonia, the same year, while the Baraboo congregation under his pastorate was increased from twelve to thirty-eight families. He also had charge of the churches at Greenfield and Kilbourn City, Wis. For three years Mr. Giesel was pastor of the Lutheran Church at Meredosia, Ill., and for a year and a half was connected with St. John's Church, of Galena, Ill., from which city he came to Platteville, Wis., May 22, 1884, to accept the pastorate of the Evangelical Church of Peace.

This church was organized in 1856, with fifteen or twenty families, and services were first held in the school house and private homes of Platteville. The first pastor was Dr. S. Fritschel, now a professor at Dubuque, Iowa, who came from that city to establish a church here in 1856. Two years later the congregation built 50 feet of the present church. Dr. Fritschel was succeeded by Rev. Mr. Burk, who in turn was succeeded by Rev. C. Starck, who remained here four years. The next pastor was Rev. Mr. Meumann, who died later in Germany, and was followed by Rev. Mr. Bartels, and Rev. Mr. Thiele, who later became a professor in Milwaukee. The church was divided until the pastorate of the next minister, Rev. Mr. Reichenbecher, who became a professor in the Milwaukee Theological Seminary. He was followed by Rev. Mr. Salinger, who in 1878 made an addition to the church building, which is now a fine structure, 80 feet long, and a pipe organ was put in at the same time. Later Rev. C. Starck was again pastor here, and was succeeded by Rev. Mr. Giesel, who has been in charge continuously since May 22, 1884. In 1895 a new steeple was built, and a bell put in, at a cost of over $2,000, and the following year the church was thoroughly renovated, being papered and re-seated, while a furnace, altar, pulpit furnishings and a new baptismal font were put in. The first parsonage built near the St. Paul depot, was later sold, and the present parsonage erected in 1883. A parochial school was established during the pastorate of Rev. Mr. Starck, an old church building being purchased and converted into school property. The congregation now numbers over two hundred families, there being about six hundred communicants.

In 1876 Mr. Giesel was married, in Glencoe, Wis., to Miss Anna Herbert, who died in Baraboo the following year, leaving one son, Ernest, now pastor at Fall Creek, Wis. Our subject was again married, at Glencoe, in 1878, his second union being with Miss Elizabeth Herbert, by whom he has the following children: George, Anna, Clara, Nora, Amanda, Herbert, Adolph, Mary and Frieda.

Mr. Giesel has served the church at Platteville longer than any other pastor, having ministered faithfully to the spiritual needs of the people for seventeen years. He has also given powerful and effective aid to all influences which work for the advancement of the community, and he is not only revered and loved by his own congregation, but is esteemed by all others who have seen his devotion to his noble calling. For the past eleven years he has served as president of the Augsburg Synod.

EVANS. The Evans ancestors came from Montgomeryshire, Wales, part of the family in 1694, and others in 1722, settling at Uwchland, Chester Co., Penn., about twenty miles west of Philadelphia; the old farm first tilled by Evan Evans, the pioneer, is still owned by some of his descendants. John Evans, the Colonial governor of Pennsylvania, 1704-09, was a relative of Evan Evans, the pioneer. Other members of the family became prominent in the business and official affairs of the Colony. John Evans, of the third generation, was one of the judges of the Supreme Court at the close of the Revolutionary war. Dr. George Evans, a brother of the Judge, was surgeon of Col. Bailor's regiment, in Gen. Anthony Wayne's division; he was severely wounded in a bayonet charge, in a fight with the British near Tappan, N. Y. After the war Dr. George and Richard Evans moved to Virginia, and from them are descended many of the Virginia Evanses, some of whom subsequently settled in South Carolina and became prominent in that State. John Evans was governor of the State in 1895-96.

Jesse Bateman Evans, of the fifth generation, the father of the subject of this sketch, was born in Westchester, Penn., March 14, 1808. He learned the blacksmith's and machinist's trades. In 1829 he married Miss Anna Shingle. In 1834 he established car and machine shops a few miles west of Philadelphia, on the line of a railroad then building, which afterward became a part of the Pennsylvania Central; here he began the manufacture of freight cars, and was one of the pioneer car builders of America, continuing this business until 1838, when car building was undertaken by corporations with large capital, which compelled small factories to quit the business. In 1843 Gov. David R. Porter appointed J. B. Evans lieutenant-colonel of the "Brady regiment," of Pennsylvania militia, and in this capacity he served until April, 1846, when he resigned, and moved with his family to Wisconsin, entered government land, and began the life of a farmer in Lafayette county. He continued thus, with the aid of his four boys, Jonathan H., Thomas E., George T., and H. Clay, until March, 1849, when his restless spirit induced him to undertake an overland trip to the gold fields of California, with ox-teams; this required five months. Some parts of the journey were through trackless country, the only guide being the sun or a pocket compass. Excepting for occasional trips to his Wisconsin home, he spent the remainder of his life in the gold fields of California, Nevada and Montana, dying at Helena, Mont., on his birthday, March 14, 1869. Of his sons, Thomas E. and George T. are retired farmers, and in their old age passing a life of ease.

H. Clay Evans, the youngest brother, left the farm in 1858, when fifteen years old, and became a clerk for his brother, J. H., in the register's office of Grant county, Wis., remaining there two years. He was a clerk in a mercantile house from 1861 to 1864, when he enlisted in the 41st Wis. V. I., and served as quartermaster sergeant. In the fall of the same year he was transferred to the quartermaster's department at Chattanooga, where he served to the end of the war, being at the base of supplies during Sherman's Atlanta campaign and the march to the sea. At the close of the war Gen. Meigs retained him in the service until 1869, to act as agent of the department in disposing of the war material which had accumulated at different points along the route of Sherman's campaign. While his headquarters were at Chattanooga the business of the department called him to distant points—Andersonville, Atlanta, New Orleans and Brownsville, Texas. At the latter place he resigned in 1869, and returned to Chattanooga, where he immediately began an active career in different manufacturing enterprises, largely in iron, car building, etc. An active, energetic man like H. Clay Evans would naturally drift into politics. Successively he served as alderman, mayor and president of the board of education of his adopted city. In 1888 he was elected to the 11st Congress from the Third District of Tennessee. President Harrison appointed him First Assistant Postmaster-General. In 1894 he was elected governor of Tennessee, by the Republicans, but, through the peculiar methods well known in some parts of the country, he was counted out by the action of an adverse legislature. In 1897 Mr. Evans was appointed, by President McKinley, commissioner of pensions.

JONATHAN H. EVANS, the eldest of the sons, was born near Philadelphia Oct. 29, 1830. In 1841 he was apprenticed as a printer, and served three years in the office of the Cumberland Valley Whig, published at Shippensburg, Penn. By an accident at that place he was crippled, causing a lameness which has followed him through life. In 1846 he came with his parents to Wisconsin, and remained on his father's farm until 1851, when he entered the Platteville Academy as a student. In the winter of 1851-52 he taught a country school, and became a salesman and bookkeeper in a retail store the following August. In 1856 he was elected register of deeds for Grant county, Wis., serving two terms. In 1861 he was made assignee of a bankrupt merchant, this occupying his time for most of that year. In 1862 he was appointed sutler of the 33d Wis. V. I., and was with the Army of the Tennessee for two years, witnessing the siege and fall of Vicksburg, and other important events of those stirring times. Returning to Wisconsin in 1864, he immediately began a mercantile career which continued until 1884. In 1872 he was appointed, by Gov. Washburn, a member of the State Board of Normal School Regents, which position he held, by successive appointments, for twenty years; from 1878 to 1890 he served as president of the board. During his long service as regent he had much to do with shaping the plans and educational policy of the Normal School system of Wisconsin, than which there is none better in the country. In February, 1884, Mr. Evans was appointed assignee of a bank, and was required to give a bond for $245,000 for the discharge of the trust. This work occupied his time and attention for nearly five years. In 1890 he opened a real-estate office; within the past ten years he has surveyed, platted, and subdivided fifteen additions to the city, giving names to over thirty new streets required in these subdivisions. He is one of the owners of the electric light plant, and has been for several years its secretary and general manager. He is a stockholder, director and vice-president of the First National Bank. It has been largely through his progressive spirit that the charming little city of Platteville has become one of the best developed interior towns in the State.

As a member of the Masonic fraternity Mr. Evans is a zealous worker. He was made a Master Mason and member of Melody Lodge, No. 2, at Platteville, Feb. 22, 1854; received the Royal Arch degrees the following June, in Washington Chapter, No. 2; the degrees of Knighthood, at Madison, in 1872; Council degrees in 1880; and the degrees of the Eastern Star in 1890. The fraternity has honored him with many marks of confidence, he having served in nearly all the offices of the local branches, and he has often been a delegate to the Grand Lodge, Grand Chapter and Grand Commandery of the State. He represented the Royal Arch Masons of Wisconsin in the General Grand Chapters held at Baltimore, Md., in 1871, and at Nashville, Tenn., in 1874. He has for twenty-five years been the accredited representative of the Grand Chapters of New Jersey, South Carolina and Kentucky to the Grand Chapter of Wisconsin, and for the past thirty years has been an officer of the Grand Chapter of Wisconsin, honored in 1874-75 with the highest office in the gift of the order, that of Grand High Priest. In 1895 he was elected Grand Patron of the Order of the Eastern Star. In 1898, and again in 1900, he was elected treasurer of the Grand Lodge of the State.

Mr. Evans was married, Nov. 7, 1855, to Miss Sarah Kilbourne, of Columbus, Ohio, a daughter of Prof. John Kilbourne, president of Worthington College. She is a cousin of the late Byron Kilbourne, one of the pioneer founders of Milwaukee. The Kilbourne family came from England in 1632, and settled in Connecticut. To Mr. and Mrs. Evans have been born four children: (1) Charles R., an alumnus of Wisconsin University, is now a lawyer at Chattanooga. Upon the breaking out of the Spanish-American war he tendered his services to the government, and was commissioned by President McKinley major of the 6th U. S. Volunteers; he served in Porto Rico, where for several months he was judge advocate of the general court-martial. When his regiment was mustered out he returned to Chattanooga, and resumed the practice of law. In August, 1900, he was chosen one of the electors at large on the Republican ticket, and during the campaign made speeches in nearly every county of the State of Tennessee. He is one of the professors of law in Chattanooga University. (2) Harry K., the second son, has been for the past eighteen years cashier and financial manager of the Roane Iron Co., at Rockwood, Tenn. (3) Mary, also an alumnus of the University of Wisconsin, the only daughter, is the wife of William S. Mason, a banker, of Evanston, Ill. (4) Thomas C., the youngest, is with his parents in Platteville.

Mr. Evans' life has been a very busy one, and, notwithstanding his seventy years, he finds no leisure time to idle away. He told the writer that he could hardly recall a vacation from work, of some kind, since he entered the printing office sixty years ago as an apprentice boy.

HON. LUTHER BASFORD, of Lancaster, dates his coming to Grant county from July 1, 1836, and is one of its oldest surviving pioneers. He was born in Chester, Rockingham Co., N. H., in November, 1814, and was a mere child when he lost his father, Richard Basford, who was also a native of the Granite State. His mother, whose maiden name was Betsey Gibins, lived to the age of eighty years. The Basford family originally came from the northern part of England, and the Gibins family from Londonderry, Ireland, but the descendants of both have for several generations been born in America. Luther Basford is the youngest of three children born to his parents, and is the only survivor. His brother, Jason, was for many years a prominent citizen and real-estate dealer in Kankakee, Ill., and his sister, Caroline, passed all her life in her native New Hampshire. Both died leaving families.

At the age of sixteen years Luther Basford left his home in the Granite State and went to Albany, N. Y., where he learned the carpenter's trade, working at same five or six years in Albany and New York City. About this time a company of speculators, comprising Albany and New York men, had entered the land in Wisconsin on which the village of Cassville, Grant county, now stands, with the expectation and intention of founding an important city. Mr. Basford was engaged by this company to accompany them and assist in erecting in the contemplated metropolis a first-class hotel structure, to be known as the "Denison House"—and this event happened nearly sixty-five years ago. Owing to unpropitious circumstances the project of the company failed of success for the time being, and in the fall of the same year Mr. Basford returned East, visiting New York, Boston, and his old New Hampshire home. The following winter he spent in traveling, when he was again solicited by the old company to return to Wisconsin.

Transportation in those early days was quite a different thing from what it is now, and on first entering the employ of the company, in 1836, Mr. Basford came West via the Erie canal from Albany to Buffalo, N. Y., and thence through the lakes to Green Bay, Wis., where twenty-five Indians and half-breeds were employed to escort the party and carry its effects to Fort Winnebago, now Portage. There the Indians were dismissed, and a yoke of oxen hired to convey the luggage to the Wisconsin river, about a mile and a half distant. On the banks of this river the party of six whites encamped in the midst of an assemblage of Indians numbering at least 1,500. The means of transportation down the Wisconsin now became a serious question, as they had no boat, but they were equal to the emergency. With a whip-saw, borrowed at the Fort, lumber was cut and a flat-boat built, on which the party floated down the river, and in safety reached Cassville, July 1, 1836.

Mr. Basford, with others, when the company decided to cease operations for the time being, started homeward on the same flat-boat that had landed them at Cassville, intending to float down the Mississippi river to St. Louis, Mo., but at Rock Island they found the river so jammed with ice that they were fain to abandon their boat and to proceed by team to the city they had fixed upon as their temporary destination for transfer purposes. At St. Louis they took steamer for Pittsburg, Penn., but when near Lawrenceburg, Ind., well up on the Ohio river, the steamer was so nearly demolished by a cyclone that she could proceed no further; happily, after the subsidence of the storm, the steamer "General Pike" came alongside and took the party on board, conveyed them as far as Cincinnati, whence our subject journeyed by stage to Pittsburg, Penn., via Wheeling, W. Va., etc. From Pittsburg the party proceeded eastward, and when near Philadelphia struck a railroad, and so continued onward, by rail and steamer, until New York was reached, Jan. 2, 1837. How Mr. Basford was occupied that winter has been alluded to above.

Soon after his return to Cassville, in the following spring, Mr. Basford purchased several lots in the new town, and built upon them. For a considerable length of time he followed his trade of carpentering in Cassville, and then embarked in farming. In 1862 he engaged in merchandising at Glen Haven, Grant county, in which he continued until 1887, when he sold out, and, accompanied by his wife, he went to San Diego, Cal., where he spent one winter. On his return to Wisconsin Mr. Basford settled in Lancaster, and resumed mercantile trade under the firm name of C. H. Basford & Co., and this has continued to occupy his time and attention up to the present hour.

Mr. Basford was joined in matrimony, at Cassville, in 1839, with Miss Elizabeth Jane Blessing, a native of what is now West Virginia, who in 1837 came to Grant county, Wis., with her father, her mother having died in her native Virginia. Soon after the discovery of gold in California Mr. Blessing joined the throng that wended its way toward that Territory, but did not live to return to Wisconsin. To Mr. and Mrs. Basford were born several children, two of whom still survive, viz.: Martha J., Mrs. Scott; and Charles H., who is associated with his father in business under the firm style given above. Another daughter, Mrs. Addie E. Brown, of Bloomington, Grant county, died six weeks after her marriage, and Caroline passed away after attaining to womanhood; Alice and Harry died in early childhood. The mother of this family was called to rest in 1890, at the age of sixty-eight years.

Mr. Basford has ever been one of the representative men of Grant county, has been remarkably successful as a business man, and as a citizen has always been held in the highest esteem. As a Republican he has been most popular in his party, was elected a member of the lower house of the State Legislature in 1859, served as sergeant-at-arms of the Senate in 1864, and in 1871 was again elected a member of the House of Representatives.

Notwithstanding his cares and close attention to his business affairs, Mr. Basford has found time to travel considerably, and has seen much of the world. He has four times crossed the Rocky Mountains, and there is one episode in his life of travel to which he can refer with pride—and it is probable that no other living man has had the same experience—and that is the fact that, in 1832, he rode from Albany to Schenectady, N. Y., on the first trip on the first passenger railroad built in the United States. The locomotive that drew the train was on exhibition at the Columbian Exposition in Chicago in 1893.

The people of Grant county owe an everlasting debt to Mr. Basford, as it is to the energy, foresight and indomitable perseverance of such as he that the county has been raised from its primeval condition in pioneer days to its present proud position in the sisterhood of Wisconsin counties, he having located here in the year 1837.

HAMILTON RICHARDSON has passed his eightieth birthday, and is spending life's closing years in the retirement and rest which his long and useful life has richly earned. In the paternal line he is of Scottish descent, and his grandfather, William Richardson, who was born in Massachusetts, was a soldier in the patriot army of 1776, serving as an aide-de-camp on the staff of Gen. Putnam. He removed from Massachusetts to Johnstown, N. Y., where he died "full of years and honors." He had only two children, one of whom, William, born in New York State, was the father of Hamilton Richardson. He married Mary Pierson, who was also born in the State of New York, and was one of a family of five children born to William Pierson, who was of English descent. William Richardson was a farmer by occupation. He was an earnest member of the Scotch Presbyterian Church, as was also his wife. He passed away at LeRoy, N. Y., in 1874, at the age of eighty-seven, and Mrs. Richardson died at the age of eighty-five years. They were the parents of thirteen children, seven of whom are yet living: Mary, unmarried, residing at LeRoy, N. Y.; Martha, widow of Elisha Conklin, of Moravia, N. Y.; Hamilton; Richard J., a resident of Janesville; Catherine, wife of Jerome Richardson, of Sui-un, Cal.; Eliza P., widow of Thomas Buckingham, of Vacaville, in that State; and Ellen, who married a Mr. Lent, of LeRoy, N. Y., and is now a widow.

Hamilton Richardson was born in Genesee county, N. Y., Oct. 17, 1820. He received the training of a farmer's boy, and attended the district schools as opportunity afforded. In the spring of 1836—before he had reached the age of sixteen years—he came West, his first location being in Genesee county, Mich., where he acquired his first business experience as clerk in a country store and bank. In 1842 he removed to Wisconsin, locating first in Milwaukee, whence he went to Racine, and in 1846 to Janesville, which has been his home for more than half a century, his residence being at No. 107 Prospect avenue. He has always taken a deep and active interest in public affairs, being clear-sighted and of sound judgment, at once progressive and conservative. On coming to Janesville he opened a general store, in which, by ready judgment, good sense and practical experience, he made a success. In 1850 he fell a victim to the California "gold fever," and from 1851 to 1856 conducted a mercantile business in that State. Since his return to Janesville, in the year last named, he has resided there continuously, extensively interested in real-estate and various manufacturing enterprises, though he has not engaged in commercial pursuits. He has long been a stockholder and director in the First National Bank. Before the attempted secession of the Southern States Mr. Richardson was a Democrat, but in view of the momentous issue which then confronted the country he rose above partisanship, being one of three men who raised and equipped the 13th Wis. V. I. for the Union service. He has always taken a lively interest in public questions, and has been an active political worker, his affiliations since 1862 being with the Republican party. He has served one term as postmaster of Janesville, and has represented his district in the State Senate for three terms; while a member of that body he was the author and one of those who carried into execution the plan for the county care of the insane, and was one of the recognized leaders of his party.

On Aug. 9, 1858, Mr. Richardson married Caroline A. Pease, a native of Connecticut, and daughter of Lorrain and Sarah (Marshall) Pease, the former a descendant of John Pease, who came from England to the American Colonies in 1630, the latter a lineal descendant of Capt. Samuel Marshall, who was killed by the Indians in the battle of Ticonda near Fort Narragansett, in 1675. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Richardson: Victor Pease, mayor of Janesville; Sarah M.; Hamilton P., a lawyer of Milwaukee; John P.; Marshall P., a lawyer in Janesville; and Lorrain T., a captain in the Twentieth Infantry, U. S. A., now doing gallant service in the Philippine archipelago.

Our subject is a Republican in politics. He is a member of the Western Star Lodge, No. 14, A. F. & A. M.; of Janesville Chapter, No. 6, R. A. M.; and of Janesville Commandery, K. T. Mrs. Richardson is a member of the Episcopal Church.

LEROY GRANT ARMSTRONG, M. D., of Boscobel, has practiced medicine for forty-two years, and is the oldest practitioner in the northern part of Grant county. He is of Irish descent, and the family name, Armstrong, has been traced to its origin in the tenth century, when a king of Scotland was thrown from his horse, and assisted to mount by his armor-bearer, Fairbeorn. He took the king by the thigh and set him on his saddle. "The royal master gave him the appellation of Armstrong, and assigned him a crest, an armed hand and arm, in the left hand a leg and foot in armor, proper," and this is the coat of arms of the family.

Our subject is a lineal descendant of Francis Armstrong, who emigrated from the North of Ireland to this country in 1727. He settled in New York, in what is now Orange county, where he leased a tract of land. His son, Robert, the great-grandfather of Dr. Armstrong, of Boscobel, was the father of Moses Armstrong, who became the father of Robert Armstrong. The latter was born at Genoa, Cayuga Co., N. Y., in 1804. His brother, Amza, who was head stone cutter and mason, supervised the building of the locks on the Erie canal at Lockport, and while working there Robert learned the trade of stone mason. In 1839 he was married to Miss Huldah Grant. He was living on rented land, and with difficulty could make head against adverse circumstances. To better his condition he came to Whitewater, Wis., where Delilah, his sister, who had married Giles Kenney, had settled in 1840. He worked at his trade, and when the railroad from Milwaukee to Prairie du Chien was built he had the contracts for the construction of the mason work between Whitewater and Rock River. In 1864 he removed to Brodhead, where he died in 1875. His wife died at the home of her son, Leroy G., at the age of eighty-five years. They were Presbyterians, and he was a staunch Democrat. He held the office of city marshal at Brodhead.

Dr. Armstrong and Miss Sarah D. Bond, daughter of Jonathan and Mary (French) Bond, were married Jan. 22, 1861. She was born in Pennsylvania Oct. 29, 1834, and died at Boscobel Aug. 23, 1894, the mother of four children, two of whom, twins, died in infancy. Charles A. is a physician in Boscobel, and is the partner of his father in medical practice; his sketch appears elsewhere. George C. is an attorney, and at the present time represents Bradstreet's Commercial Agency at Salt Lake City. Dr. Armstrong contracted a second marriage Jan. 1, 1895, Miss Rosa Baumeister, a daughter of David Baumeister, becoming his wife; she was born in Garnavillo, Clayton Co., Iowa. They have one son, Archie Ames, born May 25, 1897. Mrs. Armstrong is a member of the Lutheran Church. The Doctor owns a residence and other property in Boscobel. He is a charter member and past master of Grant Lodge, No. 169, A. F. & A. M.; past high priest of Boscobel Chapter, No. 52, R. A. M.; and past eminent commander of De Molai Commandery, No. 15, K. T. He is a member of John McDermott Post, No. 101, G. A. R., of which he served as first commander.

Dr. Armstrong spent his early years at Whitewater, and entered the academy at Fort Atkinson in his seventeenth year. He secured a certificate for country school teaching, and in this occupation secured money for a course at the State University, where he was under the preceptorship of Dr. S. P. Lathrop. In October, 1856, he matriculated at Rush Medical College, Chicago, where he was graduated in 1859, in a class of thirty-one pupils. He received the first prize in surgery from Prof. Brainard, and second honorable mention before the entire Faculty. During his course at this institution he acted for a time as nurse in Mercy Hospital. He took a course at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, in the city of New York, in 1873-74. Dr. Armstrong has been a close student of his profession, and has taken special courses in gynecology and surgery at Bellevue Hospital, the Woman's Hospital, and the Presbyterian Hospital, in New York.

Dr. Armstrong began the practice of his profession in 1859, in partnership with Dr. Riddell, at Palmyra, Wis., and continued with him for a year and a half. He practiced at Fennimore, Wis., for two years. In 1862 he was appointed assistant surgeon of the 8th Wis. V. I., which regiment he accompanied to Corinth, Miss., where he was transferred to the Army of the Potomac, and assigned to the 6th Wis. V. I. He was promoted and commissioned surgeon of the 48th Wis. V. I. in 1865, accompanied this regiment to Kansas, and was there made post surgeon in charge of the hospital at Fort Scott, and at a later time was transferred to Fort Larned, Kans., where he remained until the expiration of his term of service, in February, 1866. Returning to Wisconsin, he opened an office in Boscobel, where he has since remained in continuous practice. Dr. Armstrong belongs to the State Medical Society, of which he was vice-president in 1875, and president in 1888; is a member of the American Medical Association, of the Grant County Medical Society, and of the Southwestern Medical Society. He was United States examining surgeon in the pension service at Boscobel from 1867 to 1883. He is health officer of Boscobel, and was alderman in 1867, and again in 1899, and was a member of the school board from 1868 to 1901, as such helping to organize and establish the high school upon a basis that should secure its admission to the accredited list of high schools at the State University. Dr. Armstrong is a general practitioner, and has performed such capital operations as resection and laparotomy as fall within a general practice. Among his most valued essays and papers at the various society meetings are several upon puerperal convulsions and their treatment.

GUY WHEELER. One of the old and prominent citizens of La Prairie township, Rock county, whose name stands for solidity of character, who has witnessed and contributed materially to the growth of Rock county, his place of residence for almost threescore years, and who is to-day honored for his most honorable career, is Guy Wheeler, the subject of this sketch.

Mr. Wheeler was born in Chili, Monroe Co., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1820, son of Justus P. and Lucy (Culver) Wheeler, natives of Massachusetts. Our subject's grandfather, who also was named Justus Wheeler, was a native of Massachusetts, of Welsh descent, and lived to the age of ninety-nine years. He had six children. The maternal grandfather, Porter Culver, was a carpenter. The father of our subject was well educated, read law, and was admitted to the Bar. Believing that Western lands would be a fortunate investment, he in 1840 took a trip to Wisconsin, and purchased 640 acres of land in what are now La Prairie and Harmony townships, Rock county. Two years later he brought his family to this property, upon which he continued to reside until his death, which occurred in October, 1872, when he was aged eighty-nine years. His wife survived him several years, passing away at the age of ninety-two. Both were members of the M. E. Church. Justus P. Wheeler was a man of prominence; and held various elective offices. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. He was the first highway commissioner in the township, and was also chairman of the board of supervisors. To Justus P. and Lucy Wheeler were born ten children, six sons and four daughters, of whom five are now living: Guy, our subject; Samuel, of Portland, Oregon; Charles, of Janesville; Cornelia, widow of Archibald G. Benedict, of Ionia, Mich.; and Sarah, wife of Isaac Howland, of Crown Point, Indiana.

Guy Wheeler, our subject, was educated for the most part in New York State. He attended the common schools, then took a course at Lima Seminary, in that State, and completed his education at Mount Morris (Ill.) Seminary, under Prof. Pinckney. He was nearly twenty-two years of age when he came to Wisconsin with his father, in 1842. He entered 160 acres of government land in Section 5, La Prairie township, his present home, where since 1842 he has continued to live. He has added eighty acres to his property, and now has a fertile and well-tilled farm of 240 acres, except a right of way through a part of the farm, which he recently sold to the Janesville & Southeastern Railway Co. Mr. Wheeler has also followed stock raising in addition to farming, raising a fine breed of horses, many of which have been shipped to Europe.

Mr. Wheeler married, Oct. 9, 1844, Miss Ann L. Snell, daughter of Asa F. and Louisa (Eaton) Snell, and to this marriage four children have been born, Marion W., Cordelia A., William G. and Ralph H. Marion W. married Augustus C. Dow, and now lives in Chicago. Cordelia A. died at the age of thirteen years. William G. is a prominent lawyer of Janesville; he married Miss Jessie Jackman. Ralph H., a very successful practicing physician of Chicago, married Joan McDonald, and has two children, Marie and Ralph.

In politics Mr. Wheeler is a Republican. He was the first town clerk of La Prairie township, and for two terms has been school inspector. In 1864 he was a member of the Wisconsin Legislature. He is popular, a man of great force of character, and one of the representative citizens of Rock county.

WILLIAM RALPH, a retired miner and farmer of Cuba City, Grant county, is one of the substantial men of his community, and is now enjoying the well-earned fruit of his early labors. Although born in Cornwall, England, Nov. 9, 1819, Mr. Ralph has been thoroughly identified with the best interests of his adopted country, and is a man of whom Cuba City may well be proud.

William Ralph grew to manhood in his native land, where he attended the public schools until he was seven years and six months old. He then went to work in the mines, and never had any more schooling, but taught himself to write while crossing the ocean from England to Quebec. On April 7, 1842, he left England, crossing to Quebec, where he remained three weeks. He then went to Essex county, N. Y., working in the iron mines until the fall, and in September came to Mineral Point, Wis., where he found employment in the lead mines. Leaving there in the fall of 1844, he went to British Hollow, Grant county. He spent the winter of 1845-46 in Beedown the Mississippi to New Orleans, where he took passage for England, arriving at his old home Aug. 26. A few days afterward he was married, and soon came back to America, bringing his wife and two of his brothers. On his arrival in New York he went to a mining office, and made arrangements for all three to go to work in the Rocky Hill Copper Mine in New Jersey, where he remained two years. At the expiration of this time a company was formed in Philadelphia for working the copper mines of Lake Superior, and Mr. Ralph, on account of his long experience, was one of the men selected for the work. After remaining with this company six years he purchased an interest in a mine at Sinsinawa Mound, Grant Co., Wis., and worked it for seven years. Having saved considerable money during this time, he invested it in some four hundred acres of farm land near Hazel Green, erected a good house in 1868, and moved his family to it, renting the land out on shares. Meanwhile he continued mining, with success, the ore averaging $30 per one thousand pounds, until 1861, when he took up farming. In 1882 he gave up farming and his children have worked his land since that time. In 1884 Mr. Ralph, with his wife, paid a pleasant journey to England, visiting their relatives, and returning to Wisconsin after a year in their native land, making the home trip via New York. One year later Mr. Ralph purchased real estate in Cuba City, erected a beautiful home in the same year, and has since lived there, retired from active business life.

On Sept. 2, 1846, Mr. Ralph was married to Miss Philepie Richards, of England, and nine children were born to them: (1) Elizabeth, born at Lake Superior, in August, 1853, was educated in the Platteville Normal, and in 1876 married Edwin Trenery, of Platteville, a native of that city, born in 1851; they settled on a farm, and later moved to Iowa, where Mr. Trenery conducts a furniture and undertaking establishment. Mr. and Mrs. Trenery have three daughters, Eva, Edith and Gertrude, all born in Grant county, Wis., and educated in the schools of Iowa. (2) John H., born in 1856, grew to manhood on the home farm, receiving his education in the common and high schools of his district, and at Galena, Ill. He married Miss Hannah Williams, of Grant county, and they reside on the old homestead in Hazel Green township. Their family consists of six children, Wilber, Mary, Eunice, Leroy, Homer and Lucile. (3) George C., born in Grant county in 1859, studied in the Galena high school, and now resides on a portion of the old homestead in Hazel Green township. He married Miss Annie Pascoe, of Grant county, and they have five children, Willie, Velda, Clarence, Lloyd, and an infant, as yet unnamed. The remainder of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph died in infancy.

On Sept. 2, 1896. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph celebrated their Golden Wedding, and at that time welcomed to their beautiful parlors many old and honored friends. On Nov. 19, 1899, the faithful wife and loving mother passed to her eternal rest.

Politically Mr. Ralph is a staunch Republican; although not an office-seeker, while residing in Hazel Green he served most acceptably as roadmaster. Mr. Ralph is an active member of the M. E. Church, as was his good wife, and he has always given liberally of his substance toward the support of the Church and its works. He was a trustee of the Providence M. E. Church for a long time before his removal to Cuba City, and also held the same office there for some years, resigning when he found himself unable to attend to the duties of the office with his customary zeal and fidelity.

EZRA GOODRICH was the only son of Joseph Goodrich, the founder of Milton and Milton College, the first landlord, first merchant, first treasurer, and the first postmaster, of Milton. He was born Feb. 24, 1826, at Alfred, Allegany Co., N. Y. He had an only sister, Mrs. Jane (Goodrich) Davis, of Rockford, Ill., born Feb. 6, 1828, at Alfred, New York.

Joseph Goodrich was the son of Uriah and Mary (Carpenter) Goodrich, and was born May 12, 1800, at Hancock, Massachusetts.

Uriah Goodrich was the son of Elijah and Margaret (Gillett) Goodrich, was born Aug. 24, 1767, at Hancock, Mass., and died Sept. 2, 1845, at Alfred, New York.

Elijah Goodrich was the son of Jacob and Benedict (Goodwin) Goodrich, was born July 3, 1724, at Windsor, Conn., and died Oct. 3, 1791, at Hancock, Massachusetts.

Jacob Goodrich was the son of John and Rebecca (Allen) Goodrich, was born Nov. 27, 1694, at Wethersfield, Conn., and died May 11, 1746, at Windsor, Connecticut.

John Goodrich was the son of William and Sarah (Marvin) Goodrich, was born May 20, 1653, at Wethersfield, Conn., and died Sept. 5, 1730, at Wethersfield, Connecticut.

William Goodrich was one of the "Pilgrims" on the "Mayflower" from England, and was a descendant of the founder of "Goodrich Court" and "Goodrich Castle," built during the feudal ages, in Herefordshire, four miles southwest of Ross, about one thousand years ago.

Joseph Goodrich at the age of nineteen years started out in the world for himself, with an ax and a pack of clothes on his back. He went from Hancock, Mass., to the wilderness in Alfred, Allegany Co., N. Y., on foot and alone. He got there with his clothes, his ax, and fifty cents in money left. He went to work with a will to win. In 1821, at twenty-one years of age, he took a contract for a tract of wild, heavily timbered land on the Vandemark creek. He cleared off a small patch, and put up a log shanty there. He then returned East, to Petersburg, N. Y., and married Nancy Maxson Dec. 22, 1821. In the spring of 1822 they came to Alfred and began to keep house in the little log cabin—without a window or a door, and with the ground for a floor.

In 1823 his father came out, and united with him in erecting the first sawmill on the Vandemark creek, which they got to running the last day of that year. In this he sawed logs on shares, and obtained lumber to put up a good-sized two-story house, which he had enclosed in 1824. In it he had a large fireplace, with andirons, and a crane to swing over and off of the fire, with hooks to hang pots and kettles on. Adjoining there was a large brick oven, for baking bread and pork and beans. On the hearth in front of the oven was the blue-dye tub for coloring stocking-yarn, on which the children sat to warm their toes and their shins. Mr. Goodrich did not get the house plastered and painted until 1827. In it he kept travelers, and religious meetings and town meetings were held there. It is still standing, and is a good dwelling yet. He built and kept a small country store and an ashery there, buying ashes and making potash. The ashes were sometimes brought in sacks, from the hillsides, by women on horseback, and sold by them for pin-money.

Mr. Goodrich was a leader in the military trainings, was made a "major," and was known as "Major" Goodrich throughout his life.

Saml. H. Goodrich.

GOODRICH CASTLE, HEREFORDSHIRE, ENGLAND.

Allegany was a hilly, hard-pan country, and, hearing of the rich, level prairies of the West, Mr. Goodrich got the fever to go there; and he induced his neighbor, H. B. Crandall, and hired a young man, James Pierce, to go with him. He boxed up a load of goods from his little store, and on June 26, 1838, they left Alfred with them, journeying to Buffalo with a team, and then by steamboat up around the Great Lakes. They landed in Milwaukee, and from there came on foot. Mr. Goodrich again brought a pack on his back, but instead of an ax to fell trees he brought a spade to test the soil. Coming out onto a wild little prairie, covered with flowers, and surrounded with small silvery lakes and green trees, they tested the soil and were pleased, and Goodrich got a claim where "Milton" now stands, and Crandall a claim where "Milton Junction" now is. No highways were laid out, but Goodrich drew an air line from Chicago to Madison on the Territorial map, and one also from Janesville to Fort Atkinson, and finding they crossed on his claim he there located the site for his house. These roads were laid out the next year, and they crossed each other, as he expected, by his house. He built this dwelling 16 by 20 feet in dimensions, and one and a half stories high: it had one small 7 by 9 glass window above, and one below. The frame he made of hewed oak, and it was covered and shingled with oak, had a three-ply battened Indian-proof oak door, and an oak floor. It still stands, and is now all antique oak. In one gable end upstairs he had oak shelves for his goods, which was Milton's first store; Janesville and Fort Atkinson had none. He bought the claim to the land where Milton now stands with $60 worth of goods, and the claim to Hon. S. C. Carr's "Pioneer Farm" with $125 worth of goods. Mr. Goodrich left his house and little store in charge of Mr. Pierce, and returned East for his family, and while he was gone Pierce sold $400 worth of goods.

Mr. Goodrich moved his family and goods from Alfred, N. Y., with four teams and covered wagons, by the overland route. The first half of the way the wagons were mounted on sleighs, as they started in snow four feet deep, Jan. 30, 1839. There were twelve in the party, including passengers and hired help. One sleigh tipped over during the first day's drive, and Mrs. Goodrich's collar bone was broken.

The surgeons could not set it and keep it in place, and she rode all the long way with it loose, in a sling. In Ohio they crossed the "Great Maumee Swamp," where there were thirty-one emigrant taverns in the thirty miles. In crossing the Calumet, near Chicago, one team and wagon broke through the ice into the water, twelve feet deep, one horse being drowned, and the best load of goods wet. The streets of Chicago (then a small city) were entirely submerged in a sea of black mud. They had to ford the Desplaines river and Turtle creek, each being deep, flood-swollen streams. Not a house was to be seen on Rock Prairie, and only Mr. Newhall's log cabin was in sight, as they struck into the wild oak openings; nor was there another shanty until they came out onto Prairie Du Lac, where, standing out alone on the cold bleak prairie, the little, red, oak, pioneer cabin stood, where it still stands to-day. Here they arrived March 4, 1839, after an overland winter's journey of thirty-four days. In this little 16 by 20 building they lived, with Pierce, a family of thirteen, and kept the store, and travelers besides. And in it religious meetings were held.

Here Joseph Goodrich decided to found a village, for which he platted and gave to the public a large and beautiful "Public Square." He gave lots to mechanics who would settle there, gave grounds for a church, a district school, the college, and a cemetery. He built an academy, and maintained it for ten years. He secured the line for the first railroad via Milton, gave them the right of way and depot grounds, and took $10,000 worth of its stock. He was a man of unbounded hospitality, and a friend of the poor, the oppressed and the enslaved. He was elected to the legislature by the unanimous vote of his district. In religion he was a Seventh-day Baptist, and in politics a Whig and a Republican. His devoted wife died in 1857, and he was married to Mrs. Susan H. Rogers in 1859. They lived happily together. He died in 1867, and was buried by his beloved wife at Milton, where his son has erected a monument to their memory.

Ezra Goodrich came with his parents to Wisconsin in 1839, when he was thirteen years old. He was a pupil in the first school in Milton, and in the first academy; but the constant need of his help in his father's business, in making a new Wisconsin home, deprived him largely of schooling. His education was mainly the rough and ready lessons of practical pioneer life. When he came to Milton the Black Hawk and Gen. Atkinson army trails were fresh and plainly to be seen. He was here when Rock county was organized; when the first highway in Milton was laid; when the first mail route and stage line in the county was established; when the first church and school house was built; and the first grave in a cemetery was made. He was in Janesville when it had but one log house, H. F. Janes'; in Fort Atkinson when it had but one log house, Dwight Foster's; in Watertown when it had but one log house and one frame one, and Goodhue had a sawmill there; at Waupun when it had but one log house, Mr. Wilcox's; and at Fond du Lac when Dr. Darling had the only house there. He was here when the first railroad in Wisconsin was built, and the first wire for a telegraph or a telephone was strung. It is marvelous to see the changes that have been made in one lifetime. In 1849 Ezra Goodrich engaged in the mercantile business in Milton, dealing in dry goods, groceries, crockery, clothing, iron and hardware, in which he continued until the dark days of the Rebellion, in 1861.

On Oct. 14, 1852, Mr. Goodrich was married to Elizabeth L. Ensign, near Binghamton, N. Y., and they had four children: Joseph C. Goodrich, born June 24, 1854, now of Milton; William H. Goodrich, born Feb. 15, 1856, now of Colorado Springs, Colo.; Mary E. Goodrich, born March 23, 1859, now Mrs. Dr. Post, of Chicago; and Anna S. Goodrich, born June 18, 1861, now Mrs. Will Davis, of Colorado Springs. In religious belief Mr. Goodrich is a Seventh-day Baptist. In politics he was a Republican; he is now independently independent, and votes for the best man. He is a man of strong convictions, and that which he believes to be right he dares to defend; and that which he deems to be wrong he dares to denounce. This gives him bitter enemies, as well as warm friends. He has been an active factor in Milton events for the past sixty years and more than an ordinary lifetime. He raised the controlling stock in "Milton Academy" when it was incorporated—over which there was a red-hot denominational strife. He raised the money to fill Milton's quota in the army of the great Rebellion, when the hearts and hopes of all others had failed, and they were ready to throw up the sponge. He raised the money to set Milton College again on its feet, when it was hopelessly bankrupt, and the efforts of all others had utterly failed, they having succeeded in raising only $20. For this he raised a subscription of over $13,000, of which he gave $2,300 himself. He secured the location of Milton high school building, on the Public Square, in which he was opposed by Milton College, and many others, who wanted it located in an uncouth lot, still vacant, south of the railroad, and south of Lane's mill. He drew the plan, and superintended the erection of the building. He platted the grounds and set out the trees, and to-day Milton's high school grounds are conceded to surpass any public-school grounds in the Northwest. Mr. Goodrich secured the subscription and set out the trees in the beautiful park north of the railroad at Milton. He re-organized Milton cemetery after it had lost its organization, and its grounds were grown up to brush and weeds, and he organized a uniform system of grading and sodding the lots, and adorning them with trees. In these innovations he was also opposed, but Milton now has one of the most beautiful cemeteries in Rock county.

Some twenty years ago Mr. Goodrich inaugurated a system of raising a special tax in the town for graveling the roads, in which at first he was bitterly opposed. By persistence he succeeded; and to-day Milton has more miles of road, that is good at all seasons of the year, than any rural town in the State; and if she continues but a few years longer she will have a good hard highway to every farm in the town.

Many years ago, when they began to gather milk for the factories, Mr. Goodrich began to advocate gathering the children of the towns into centralized schools. In this he was opposed to the point of almost hissing him down; but, of late, a marked change is seen, and many are now advocating the coming change. He now claims that the school children of Milton will ere long all be riding in covered spring wagons, over good roads, to and from school, and that, when the good time comes, every child alike will have the opportunity of a good education free.

On April 23, 1892, Mr. Goodrich lost his most estimable wife. He was again married.

Ezra Goodrich

Oct. 16, 1893, to Mrs. Charlotte M. Little, daughter of I. P. Morgan, one of the founders of Milton Junction, and widow of L. V. Little, who died Feb. 18, 1886. The marriage of Mr. Goodrich, a son of the founder of Milton, to Mrs. Little, a daughter of a founder of Milton Junction, is to some extent a union of these two rival villages, which, it is hoped, may soon be blending together, and eventually become a prosperous, happy and harmonious one.

ALEXANDER GRANT BONHAM. The family of Bonham is of English lineage, the earliest American progenitors having crossed the water when the Colonies yet recognized their allegiance to the King. Several of the early Bonhams fought with gallantry and distinction in the cause of American independence, and in the war of 1812. Of these it would be interesting to speak, but the necessarily narrow limits within which this narrative must be confined forbid the tracing of the genealogical line beyond the third generation. Nehemiah Bonham, the paternal grandfather of Alexander G. Bonham, was a native of Virginia, and migrated thence to Missouri. His wife, whose maiden name was Isabel Scott, was born in Ireland. Of their union seven children were born, five sons and two daughters, James, Joseph, Harvey, Frank, Martin, Rebecca and Isabel. All have long since passed away, the last survivor of that generation having been Frank Bonham, who died in February, 1892. The daughters married in Missouri, and remained there; but the sons, one and all, migrated to Grant county, Wis., where they became substantial and respected citizens. Nehemiah Bonham also went to Wisconsin, and ended his long life at the home of his son Martin, whose filial care sustained him for many years, and rendered less hard his last days. His widow survived him for many years, but she, too, has entered into rest.

Joseph Bonham, the second son, was the father of Alexander Grant. He was born in Wythe county, Va., and had attained manhood when his parents undertook their toilsome, tedious journey to Missouri. Before leaving that State to seek a new home in the Northwest, he was married to Leah Ford, of Tennessee, who was born Feb. 22, 1804, and was one of the family of eight children of

Alexander Ford, a soldier in the patriot army of 1776. The others were Benjamin, George, Alexander, Joseph, Jane, Sarah and Elizabeth. Joseph Bonham was the first of the family to come to Wisconsin. He visited the lead mining region in 1827, alone, and returned to Missouri. He was, however, deeply impressed by the resources and possibilities of the region, and made a second prospecting tour about the time of the Black Hawk war, going as far north as Galena, Ill. In 1834 he came as a permanent settler, bringing with him his wife and seven sons. Several children were born to them after they were established in their new home. They first settled in what is now the township of Lancaster, and the land which Mr. Bonham pre-empted is called the "Thomas Shanley farm." For two years the family remained there, and at the expiration of that time removed to a tract which now constitutes a part of the farm of Alexander G. Bonham, in Lancaster township. Here was located what his descendants love to call "the old homestead." A brick house—the first in the neighborhood—was built, the bricks being made and burned by Alexander. The building, rude and primitive as it was, is still standing, and in a fair state of preservation—a sort of monument, to remind the present of the achievement of the past. Joseph Bonham was for many years employed in the lead mines, at the same time cultivating his quarter section of land. It was he who first discovered mineral on Pigeon creek, the locality being afterward known as "Pigeon Diggings," and there he was very successful. He was a man of rugged strength, incorruptible integrity and outspoken conviction. A stanch Jacksonian Democrat himself, he reared his sons in the same political faith. Of the large family of children born to Joseph Bonham and his wife only six are yet living, three sons and three daughters. Alexander Grant is our subject; Nehemiah Scott, deceased, is mentioned below; John James died at Bloomington July 16, 1897; Joseph Loyd is deceased; Abijah Abernatha was a miner, and died in Idaho; Carlyle, twin of Abijah, died when a child of three years; Sarah Ann and Melvina are living; George Calvin went to California to seek gold, and was killed by the caving in of a mine; William Henry Harrison, Harvey Holmes, and Rhoda Jane survive. Harvey was a gallant soldier in the war of the Union, a private in a Wisconsin regiment. The manner of Scott's death is pathetic. He went to Idaho to seek a fortune, and was found by his comrades lying unconscious upon the ice, presumably the victim of a paralytic stroke. Near him sat his faithful dog, who would suffer no one to touch his master, and whom the party had to lasso before the inanimate form could be approached.

Alexander G. Bonham was born in Pike county, Mo., Oct. 27, 1823, and was in his eleventh year when his parents removed to Wisconsin. To-day he is approaching his eightieth year, yet he can recall the incidents of that long journey (a considerable part of it by water) and the appearance of the new country in which his future life was to be spent. Indeed, those were perilous times for the frontiersman and his family, the Indians having not yet been reduced to subserviency, and the tomahawk and scalping knife being still among the possible dangers confronting the settler. During the third winter of the family's residence here a band of fifty aborigines, with their ponies, appeared near their home, but made no hostile demonstration, although indefatigable beggars. The few roads that the settlers had were little more than Indian trails, and game of all kinds, and especially deer, was abundant.

As a boy Mr. Bonham aided his brothers in clearing the land, his father's time being chiefly occupied at the mines. After reaching early manhood he divided his time between working as a hired farm hand and laboring as a miner. The life was a hard one, but he had youth, and health, and strength, and toil only served to develop and harden his naturally robust constitution. To-day he owns a fine, highly cultivated and well improved farm, and in his handsome home is quietly passing his declining years, enjoying the fruits of his early labor and privations. He is the oldest of the original settlers of Lancaster township yet living, if not the oldest in Grant county. He has been prominently identified with the development, social and economic, as well as material, of the region, and as he calmly awaits the call to go to his reward he may well take pleasure in the thought that he will leave to his children a treasure more precious than lands or gold—the stainless record of an honest life.

Mr. Bonham was married, March 16, 1851, to Elizabeth Ann Kilby, a daughter of Abraham E. Kilby and Rhoda Parsons. Mr. Kilby was a North Carolinian and his wife a Virginian. Between the family of Bonham and Kilby there are several parallels. Both are of Southern origin; both of Revolutionary stock; both first migrated to Missouri, and afterward removed to Grant county, Wis., settling on adjacent farms. The Kilbys came in 1836, two years after their neighbors, and between the two families there always existed a warm friendship. Mr. Kilby died in 1874, and his widow in 1893. He was a successful farmer, and a man held in high esteem for his kindness of heart, his keenness of mind, and his inviolable integrity. Mrs. Bonham is one of a family of four, three daughters and one son, two of whom—Jane and John—are deceased. The younger of the two surviving sisters is Mrs. Sarah Margaret Borah, whose home is in Kansas.

To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander G. Bonham have been born three sons and five daughters: Charles Scott, Lemuel Eddens, Viola Jane (deceased), Lenora Margaret, Lura Ann, Laura Eldora, Lester Grant (deceased) and Mabel Claire.

Charles S. Bonham, the eldest son, was born in 1852, was reared upon the homestead farm, and enjoyed excellent educational advantages at the public schools and the Institute at Lancaster, as well as at Blodgett College, Rockford, Ill., and at the Normal School at Platteville. For several years he was employed in teaching, but abandoned the chair of the pedagogue to become a salesman of school supplies for the well-known firm of Ivison, Blakeman & Taylor. In this line of work he was so successful that he was made general agent of the house for a territory covering Kansas, southern Nebraska, and Wisconsin. He remained with this concern for ten years, and then directed his attention to stock farming, his specialty being the breeding and raising of Short-horn cattle. In this pursuit, also, he succeeded in a surprising degree, but in 1900 he sold his valuable property, famous as the "Oakwood Farm," and is now leading a retired life. He married Flora E. Hannum, a daughter of Rufus Hannum, a sketch of whose life may be found elsewhere, and their union has been blessed with one son, Charles Lloyd, who was born May 5, 1892. Mr. Bonham is a gentleman of culture and refinement, and is reckoned among Grant county's most successful and prosperous business men.

Lemuel E. Bonham, the youngest son of Alexander G., has been for many years a resident of the far West, and has recently gone to Alaska.

RICHMOND B. PIERCE. Grant county has no more highly esteemed citizen than Richmond B. Pierce, of Cassville township, who fought for the preservation of the Union during the dark days of the Rebellion, and who is descended from good old Revolutionary stock. He was born in Ipswich, N. H., in 1828, a son of Joseph and Eleanor (Mitchell) Pierce, both members of old New England families. His maternal grandfather fought with Putnam, Prescott and Warren at Bunker Hill on that memorable day in June, 1775. Regarding his paternal great-grandfather, who was killed by the Indians in the early days of the New England Colonies, some interesting facts have been handed down to the present generation. He lived in the days of almost constant Indian warfare, and was a typical pioneer of those stirring and dangerous times. He was often heard to say that no Indian should ever have the satisfaction of taking his scalp, and to prevent the accomplishment of this barbarous practice, should he be so unlucky as to fall into the hands of the savages, he is said to have kept his head shaved, thus preventing the growth of the scalp lock so much prized by the savage warrior. He was finally surprised by a band of Indians, while at work in his field, and slain, but his scalp never adorned the belt of his slayer. It is an interesting fact that the farm on which the great-grandfather was killed in Colonial times was the one on which Richmond B. Pierce was born, it having descended by inheritance through several generations of the family. The parents of our subject never came West, but made their home in New England throughout life. They had twelve children, three sons and nine daughters, of whom Richmond and his sister Maria, widow of William B. Frissel, are the only survivors. Her husband was a soldier in the Civil war, being a member of a Massachusetts regiment.

In his native State Richmond B. Pierce grew to manhood. He was married at Winchester, Mass., March 28, 1854, to Miss Mary Jane Morse, who was born in Maine, but was reared in Massachusetts. Her parents, Moses and Louisa (Cooper) Morse, were also representatives of old New England families. On her father's side she belongs to the same line of ancestry as did Samuel F. Morse, the famous inventor of the electric telegraph. She is also descended from Revolutionary ancestry, her paternal grandfather having fought at Bunker Hill. Her maternal grandfather, however, was an English sea captain, and in the war of the Revolution took sides with the British. It is stated of him that, after the war had closed, he approached the New England coast for the purpose of getting his family, who had remained in the Colonies while he was fighting against them, but, failing to secure them, he sailed away, and was never again seen by them. Mrs. Pierce's father came to Grant county, Wis., in 1851, and purchased a tract of land. He passed the last days of his life in Minnesota, but his wife spent the last fourteen years of her life at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pierce, in Grant county, where she died Sept. 22, 1896. In their family were six children, three of whom died in infancy. Those living are R. S., of Beetown, Grant county; Edwin R., of Bloomington, Ill.; and Mrs. Pierce. To Mr. and Mrs. Pierce have been born twelve children, six sons and six daughters, of whom six are living, namely: Wallace R.; Charles E.; Mary C., wife of William Woodhouse; Fred L.; Nella A., wife of Leo Grattan; and Margarette, a teacher by occupation. Eleanor L. died at the age of twenty-six years, while the others died in infancy.

In the spring of 1855 Mr. and Mrs. Pierce moved from Massachusetts to Wisconsin, and took up their residence in Grant county. In August, 1861, he was enrolled as a member of Company F, 7th Wis. V. I., which formed a part of the famous Iron Brigade, and followed the fortunes of his regiment, taking part in all the battles and marches in which it participated, up to the time of the battle of South Mountain, in September, 1862. In this hard-fought battle he was severely injured by a gunshot just above the right knee, and was in the hospital about eight months. This wound not only renders the limb stiff at the knee, but has never permanently healed, and still requires dressing every day. Notwithstanding the trouble it has always caused him,

Mr. Pierce has done much work as a farmer, and has a pleasant home and unencumbered farm of eighty acres in Cassville township. His wife is a lady of culture and intelligence, as becomes her New England descent and parentage, and is an active member of the Methodist Episcopal church. Both Mr. and Mrs. Pierce are widely and favorably known throughout Grant county, and well deserve the high regard in which they are held.

WARREN HANNUM, son of Warren and Laura (Hamilton) Hannum, of whom full mention is made in the biography of Rufus Hannum, elsewhere, was born in Genesee county, N. Y., Oct. 4, 1824, and in 1837 came to Grant county, Wis. He is therefore classed among the county's pioneers.

Mr. Hannum lived on the old homestead until his father disposed of it, in 1856, and in 1858 he purchased a tract of land in Hazel Green township, paying for it with the interest derived from the investment of his early savings. He cleared up this tract of 120 acres, and resided thereon until 1863, when he returned to that part of the old homestead now owned and occupied by his brother Rufus, and bought in addition eighty acres of timber land. In 1868 he sold all his property and purchased his present valuable home in Lancaster.

Warren Hannum was united in marriage, at Rochester, N. Y., for the first time, on March 4, 1863, with Miss Emily E. Cook, who died at their home in Lancaster, Wis., in the autumn of 1868. In August, 1869, Mr. Hannum, for his second wife, married Miss Eugenia Paterson, daughter of David B. Paterson, who was a son of Hugh B. Paterson, a pioneer of Grant county, as will be perceived by reference to his biography, on another page. To the first marriage of Mr. Hannum were born two children: Emma M., now the wife of Harry Brooker, of Lancaster; and Mae, still at her father's home. The second marriage of Mr. Hannum has been blessed with five children, as follows: Etta, wife of Charles Elliott, of Eagle Grove, Iowa; Mercie, wife of Charles Roberts, of Lancaster, Wis.; and Chester, Jessie and Warren, at home.

David B. Paterson, father of Mrs. Warren Hannum, was born in Chautauqua county, N. Y., July 21, 1812, and came to Grant county, Wis., in 1836. In 1837 he went to Ohio, and married, for his first wife, Miss Cornelia M. Sheffield, who was born May 11, 1815, and was a daughter of Alpheus and Dorothy Sheffield. She died Feb. 8, 1862, the mother of nine children, of whom seven are still living: Frances M., of Hawarden, Iowa; Ida, wife of Dr. O. W. Phelps, of Kanawka, in the same State; Mrs. Eugenia Hannum, who was born April 4, 1847; Edward S., a resident of Stockton, Ill.; Helen, wife of Henry Judd, of Bloomington, Grant Co., Wis.; William D., now in Iowa; and Anna, married to Richard Eddy, of Lancaster township, Grant county, Wis. Of the two deceased children, Alvin A., the eldest of the family of nine, was born Sept. 22, 1838, was a soldier of the 25th Wis. V. I., in the Civil war, and died March 8, 1868, from the effects of exposure and fatigue sustained in his army life; Ira, born Jan. 14, 1845, served in the 7th Iowa Cavalry, and died in the service at Omaha, Neb., Oct. 15, 1863.

In 1869 David B. Paterson selected for his second wife Mary Fusch, a native of Cornwall, England, and to this marriage two children were born, George and Frederick. David B. Paterson was a prominent and well-known citizen, and was long identified with the growth of Grant county, even from his pioneer days of 1836, until his death, which occurred in Georgetown, Feb. 9, 1889, his loss being deeply deplored by a large number of sorrowing friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Hannum have a very pleasant home, are blessed with every comfort of life, and are surrounded with sincere friends, both old and new, who honor Mr. Hannum for the active part he has taken in developing Grant county from a wilderness of the frontier into a fruitful and prosperous abode of civilization.

ALBERT WHITFORD, M. A., Professor of Mathematics in Milton College, is one of the oldest and best-known educators of southern Wisconsin. He has engaged in teaching for considerably more than a half century, giving the profession the devotion of his early years.

Prof. Whitford was born at Plainfield, near Leonardsville, N. Y., May 28, 1832, son of Samuel and Sophia (Clarke) Whitford. The father, a farmer by occupation, was born in Brookfield, N. Y., in 1797, and was a son of David Whitford, a native of Stonington, Conn., of English ancestry, and a farmer.

Samuel married Sophia, daughter of Joseph Clarke, who was born in Rhode Island. The father of our subject died in Plainfield, N. Y., in 1848, aged fifty-one years; his wife surviving him forty years, passed away in Plainfield, N. Y., at the age of eighty-six. Both were devout members of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church. They had four sons: Rev. William Clarke, president of Milton College; Hamilton Joseph, deceased; Albert, our subject; and Herbert David, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

The early life of our subject was spent on his father's farm. In 1847, at the age of fifteen years, he entered Brookfield Academy, but after a few terms was obliged by the death of his father to abandon temporarily his education. He taught district schools for several years and in 1849 entered De Ruyter Institute as a student, teaching and attending school until 1852, when he entered Alfred Academy, by which he was graduated in the classical course in 1853.

Mr. Whitford came to Milton, Wis., in 1854, and became instructor in the Latin Language in Milton Academy. Returning East two years later, he entered Union College, at Schenectady, N. Y., in 1856; and by doing extra work completed the classical course and was graduated, in 1857, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Four years later Union College conferred upon him the degree of Master of Arts.

Returning to Milton in 1857, Prof. Whitford again became a teacher of Latin at the Academy, remaining in that position until 1863, when he was elected county superintendent of schools of Rock county, Wis. Two years later he was elected to the principalship of De Ruyter Institute, N. Y., filling the position two years. Again returning to Milton, in 1867, he taught for a year in the newly incorporated Milton College, then accepted the chair of mathematics in Alfred University, New York, where he taught four years. Since 1872 he has been professor of mathematics continuously, for two years of this time, from 1878 to 1880, also serving as acting president of the College, while President W. C. Whitford was State Superintendent of Public Instruction in Wisconsin.

Prof. Whitford married, May 31, 1857, Miss Chloe E. Curtis. Of their five children, one died in infancy. Anna Sophia married

C. Eugene Crandall, a professor in the Chicago University. She has recently been engaged as teacher of German Language and Literature in Milton College. Albert Curtis, a railroad conductor, residing at Las Vegas, N. M., married Louie Harvey; all their children have died, Alfred, the youngest, recently. William Henry, a real-estate dealer at Independence, Kans., married Allie Foster, and has two daughters, Kathleen and Dorothy. Alfred Edward, a student in the Chicago University, has been elected the professor of general physics in Milton College. Mrs. Whitford died Nov. 4, 1888, and on Feb. 14, 1892, our subject was united in marriage to Miss Emily L. Burdick, of West Edmeston, New York.

Prof. Whitford throughout his long and successful career as a teacher has been devoted to the cause of education in the highest sense. While insisting upon a high standard of scholarship among his students, his unassuming manners and kindness of heart have greatly endeared him to his classes. He is liberal in spirit, and has contributed generously in a financial, as well as educational, way to the success of Milton College.

THOMAS H. SHELDON, of the town of Willow Springs, Lafayette county, is a son of John P. Sheldon, who was very prominently identified with the affairs of Southwestern Wisconsin for many years.

John P. Sheldon was born at Rehoboth, Mass., in April, 1792, and in his early youth went to Providence, R. I., as a journeyman printer. When twenty years old he entered the American army in the war of 1812, and was present at the battle of Sackett's Harbor and other military operations during the closing scenes of that struggle. After the war he published a paper at Utica, N. Y., in company with a printer, and was publisher of the first newspaper in Rochester. In 1817, while engaged in business at Rochester, he was married, and the same year removed to Detroit, Mich., where he established the Detroit Gazette. Ascertaining that there was corruption among the Revenue officers, and positive dishonesty in their dealings with the general government, he boldly denounced their corrupt practices. He took stenographic reports of the court proceedings, for which the judge inflicted a fine of $200 upon him, and refusing to pay he was sent to jail, in charge of his own brother, who was sheriff of the county. The citizens, who were much in sympathy with him, raised the amount, and he was released. This was about 1825. Shortly after this Mr. Sheldon sold his paper, and for a time was engaged in farming in Oakland county, Mich., but farming did not prove congenial, and he returned to Detroit, resuming editorial management of the Gazette.

In September, 1833, Mr. Sheldon went to Dubuque, Iowa, having been appointed lead agent by Gen. Jackson, his duty being to collect rentals on lead lands. In 1834 he was appointed register of the land office at Mineral Point. This was an arduous position, and carried with it peculiar difficulties. The mineral lands at that time belonged to the government, and efforts were being continually made by speculators and fortune hunters to cheat the authorities, and secure for themselves the benefits of the rich ores underlying all this region. As land commissioner Mr. Sheldon was approached by dishonest men, and urged to favor their schemes. His stern sense of duty and his unswerving honesty forbade his listening for a moment to their solicitations. There fell upon him consequently the bitter condemnation of a number of men, prominent in the early affairs of the county, whose greed for riches outran their sense of honesty and fair dealing. It is worthy of remark that Mr. Sheldon was fully sustained in the stand which he took, after careful study, by Gen. Dodge and other distinguished citizens, who gave special attention to the prolonged controversy. In 1840 Major Sheldon, as he was commonly known, left the land office, and engaged with George Hyer in the publication of the Madison Democrat. In 1845 he went to Washington, D. C., to take a position in the Treasury Department, which he held for fifteen years. On the election of Abraham Lincoln, in 1860, he resigned his position in the Treasury Department and returned to Lafayette county, to his home in the town of Willow Springs. There he and his family had had their home since 1835, and it was Mr. Sheldon's residence as long as he lived, though he died at the home of his son-in-law, Judge Drummond, Jan. 19, 1872.

Major Sheldon possessed a strong character, and his integrity, like his ability, was beyond question. A strong believer in Old-school Democracy, when the war for the Union was about to begin he believed it unnecessary. For the purpose of informing himself fully as to the real spirit and intention of the Southern leaders, he obtained a pass through the lines, and called on Jefferson Davis, who had been elected President of the Southern Confederacy. He was informed by that gentleman that the negro was not the cause of the war, rather that the two sections were profoundly uncongenial, and that their interests were utterly at variance; the South desired to be entirely separated from the North, and no compromise was possible. Major Sheldon returned to his Northern home a strong Union man, and throughout the war lent cordial and unreserved support to the government. When the war was ended his Democracy again resumed sway. He was just as urgent in his opposition to all kinds of oppression.

Major Sheldon and his wife, whose maiden name was Eliza Whiting, a native of Bridgeport, Conn., became the parents of twelve children, two of whom died in infancy, and one at the age of twelve years. The others lived to reach maturity. Of this once numerous family only two members are now living, the elder of these being Mrs. H. H. Hawley, of Chicago.

Thomas H. Sheldon was born in 1825, in Detroit, as were all the children but the youngest, and has resided where he is now found, or in the immediate vicinity, since 1835. Here the father bought claims and entered 160 acres, owning at one time about a section of land. Here Mr. Sheldon was reared to manhood, and here he married Miss Mary H. Pilling, a daughter of Elias Pilling. To their union have been born five children: John, who is on the homestead; Henry, who is at Tucson, Ariz.; Edgar, who is in Chicago; Edith, a teacher in Tucson; and Thomas D.

ALFRED A. JACKSON. For over forty-five years Mr. Jackson has been a resident of Janesville, Rock county, and for more than forty years a member of the Wisconsin Bar. He comes of Scotch-Irish stock, some of his ancestors having come to New England before the middle of the seventeenth century.

Daniel Jackson, his grandfather, was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and was commissioned an officer in the Seventh Company of the Thirteenth Regiment of the Connecticut Militia on May 16, 1794. He removed late in life to central New York, and died at Rome, Oneida county, that State, at an advanced age. His son Truman, father of Alfred A., was born in Bethlehem, Conn., in 1800. At the age of twenty-three he, too, removed to Oneida county, N. Y., where he purchased a farm on which he resided until his death, in 1871. He married Polly, daughter of Joseph and Mary (Dennison) Lawton. Mr. Lawton was also a Connecticut farmer who had moved to central New York, and who toward the close of his life removed to Dane county, Wis., to pass his last years with his sons living there. He died in his eighty-fifth year. To Mr. and Mrs. Truman Jackson were born six children, four of whom are yet living. Of these, Alfred A. is the eldest, the others being Nancy A., wife of Absalom Nelson, of Lebanon, Mo.; Homer T., a physician in Verona, N. Y.; and Jane E., of Buffalo, New York.

A. Jackson

Alfred A. Jackson was born Aug. 8, 1831, in the town of Verona, Oneida Co., N. Y. After passing through the public schools he entered the academy at Rome, N. Y., but failing eyesight compelled him to forego the completion of his course. For some time he remained at home upon the farm, until he found himself able to take a position in a store. In April, 1855, his eyesight having been restored, he started for the West, and has since made Janesville his home. There he began the study of law in the office of Sloan and Patton on the 21st of April, 1855, and completed his course in the office of Sleeper and Norton. In April, 1856, he was admitted to the Bar, and since that time he has been continuously engaged in the practice of his profession. In politics he has been an ardent Republican since the organization of that party. He has not aspired to leadership, although he served for a year as supervisor, which position he resigned; represented the First ward in the city council for two years; and during 1868 held the office of mayor. For eight years he was one of the trustees of the State School for the Blind, and for four years was president of the Board. He has also been honored in his profession. Since the formation of the State Bar Association he has served on its executive committee, and is at present chairman of its committee on publication. He was also the first president of the Rock County Bar Association, and filled that office several years. In February, 1868, he was admitted to practice in the United States Supreme Court. He takes a deep interest in all matters pertaining to the domain of American history, and is a member of the Historical Society of Wisconsin, and of the American Historical Society. In 1872 Beloit College conferred upon him the degree of M. A. While kindly and genial in temperament, and heartily enjoying the companionship of his friends, his busy life has left him little leisure to devote to the many calls which membership in numerous societies would have made upon his time. He is, however, a member of Wisconsin Lodge, No. 14, I. O. O. F., and of the Royal Arcanum. He is also an elder in the Presbyterian Church.

In August, 1859, Mr. Jackson was married to Miss Anna E. Dyer, a daughter of Burton H. and Rebecca Johnson Dyer. Mrs. Jackson died in 1867. Three children were born to this marriage, Frank D., Bertha A. and William A. (1) Frank D. was graduated from Beloit College and from the Law School of Yale University. For two years he was his father's partner in Janesville, but, having a desire to enter the ministry, he left the office to study at Chicago Theological Seminary; he is now pastor of the Congregational Church at Wabunsee, Kans. In October, 1895, he married Miss Martha P. Little. Two children have been born to them, Bertha L. and Howard L. (2) Bertha A. was graduated from Rockford College, and after spending one winter at Washington and one in the South returned to Rockford to accept a position as teacher in the History Department. Failing health obliged her to resign, and she died at her home Feb. 14, 1893. (3) William A. Jackson, the younger son, is an alumnus of the State University at Madison, having studied in both the Academic and Law Departments. Since his graduation, in 1891, he has been in partnership with his father, and is now (1901) serving his fourth term as District Attorney. In November, 1897, he was married to Miss Mary Emeline Stevens.

On Sept. 7, 1870, Mr. Jackson married Rebecca W., daughter of Luther H. and Celine Johnson. Their daughter, Fanny Rebecca, is also a graduate of Rockford College.

REV. NATHANIEL C. BRADLEY. The subject of this short review, who is now the beloved pastor of the M. E. Church at Fayette, Lafayette county, was not always exclusively engaged in converting man from the error of his ways, in a religious sense, there being a period of his life when he also fought the enemies of the old flag, and as valiantly as he has since contended with the powers that oppose the moral and spiritual welfare of man.

Mr. Bradley was born in Amboy, Oswego Co., N. Y., Nov. 15, 1844, a son of Josiah and Rebecca Bradley. When he was about eight years old his parents migrated to Wisconsin, becoming residents of Dane county, and later of Monroe county. There the mother died about 1872, the father surviving for a number of years. The family of these worthy people consisted of Nathaniel C., our subject; and Carrie, who married J. Goyer, M. D., a veteran soldier, and a resident of Readstown, Vernon Co., Wisconsin.

The subject of this biography attended the public schools at Tomah, this state, and entered the ministry of the Methodist Church in 1869, his first charge being at Mt. Sterling, Crawford Co., Wis., and his second at Bell Center, in the same county, where he remained three years. Thence he went to Bloom City for two years, later filling for three years the charge at Viola, and the following three years serving at Lewisville. His next charges were at Ellsworth, Pierce county, and Clear Lake, whence he went to Arkansaw, Wis., later to Durand, Pepin county, and thence to Greenwood, in Clark county.

At this time our subject practically retired from the severe strain of his ministerial work, as his health became somewhat broken, removing to Ottertail county, Minn., where he engaged in merchandising and farming. On regaining, to a certain extent, his health, he returned to his old labors in the ministry, accepting a charge at Kendall; later he was at Wonewoc, continued three years at Excelsior, and is now in his second year at Fayette.

On March 8, 1864, Mr. Bradley was enrolled as a member of Company D, 38th Wis. V. I., and received his honorable discharge from the army on May 24, 1865, having taken part in some of the severest engagements of the Civil war. Under Gen. Grant he fought in the Wilderness, and was in all the battles under his command until the investment of Petersburg. He was one of the soldiers who worked on the construction of the mine under the enemy's works at the latter place, and took part in the famous charge made after the explosion. This was the last engagement in which he took part, the heavy work endured then having produced an injury that resulted in hernia and incapacitated him for active work in the field. Soon after he was transferred to the hospital at Beverly, N. J., and, when sufficiently recovered, was placed in charge of a ward in that institution until his discharge.

The marriage of Mr. Bradley took place in 1867, to Frances A. Ayard, a native of Iowa, and five children were born of this union: Mrs. Carrie Gummer, William F., Etta Elizabeth, Arthur B., and Avis M. A faithful soldier, an upright and conscientious citizen, Mr. Bradley possesses the esteem of everyone, and during the long years of his ministry has been comforted by the good he has been able to do. In his present home he is beloved by his whole congregation.

WILLIAM THOMAS, SR., a retired merchant of the village of Hazel Green, Grant county, was born in Cornwall, England, Dec. 13, 1828, son of Hannibal and Elizabeth (Richards) Thomas, both born in Cornwall, where they were married.

In 1840 Hannibal Thomas came to Wisconsin alone, intending to go into the butchering business. In 1848 he sent for his family, who came to Yorkville, where he owned a farm. There they lived for some years, and then moved to Beetown, where father and mother died, he in 1877, and she in 1883. They were good honest people, and had many friends. Six children were born to them: (1) Jane A., born in England in 1819, married William Hodge, also a native of England, lived on his farm in Grant county a number of years, and then moved to Cuba City, where he is living retired. They have two children, William H. and Elizabeth J. (now the widow of Bernard Porter, late of Grant county). (2) James, born in England in 1821, married Miss Susan Richmond, of Ohio, settled at Beetown, and became one of the most successful farmers and miners of that region. He died at his home in 1883, leaving a wife, but no children. (3) William is our subject. (4) Henry, born in 1830 in England, married Miss Grace Ennor, of Potosi, living for some years at Beetown, and then moved to Lancaster, where he still resides. They have five children—Emma, now Mrs. Robert Perkins, of Crawford county, Wis.; James, in South Dakota; Naomi, now Mrs. French, of Cassville; Phoebe, now Mrs. Frank Sanders, of Beetown; and Mamie. Mrs. Mayne, of Cassville. (5) Hannibal, born in England in 1832, crossed the Plains in 1852, and worked there in the gold mines until 1853, when he emigrated to Australia, where he died in 1857, leaving no family. (6) Margaret, born in 1835, is the wife of Metcalf Hilery, of Beetown, and has nine children, George, Hannibal, Metcalf, James, John, Elizabeth, Sarah A., Susan and Margaret.

William Thomas, Sr., obtained his education in his native country, and worked in the Grant county lead and zinc mines eight years after coming to this country. In 1856 he set up as a general merchant at Fair View, Wis., where he continued for twenty-one years. During these years he also dealt largely in real estate, and now owns three large farms (670 acres) in Grant county, and one (550 acres) in Lester, Iowa. In 1877 Mr. Thomas sold out his mercantile interests, and moved into the village of Hazel Green, where he bought the Mills homestead, one of the most attractive homes in the town, a large brick house with handsome lawn surrounding.

Mr. Thomas and Miss Mary E. Harvey were married in 1863. Mrs. Thomas was born in England in January, 1839, and her parents, William and Ann Harvey, were among the early settlers of Grant county. They were born in England, came early to New Jersey, and in 1852 moved to Grant county, where they died many years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas are the parents of two sons: (1) William H., born in Hazel Green, in August, 1864, received his education in his native village and at the Platteville Normal. Some years ago he had typhoid fever, and his health became so impaired that he has never since been able to take an active part in business. (2) Clinton W., born in Grant county, in January, 1869, was drowned when eighteen years old, with two companions, while bathing in the Mississippi river. A bright and promising young man, he had a brilliant future before him, and possessed many friends.

Mrs. Thomas is a member of the Methodist Church, to which our subject gives a liberal support. Mr. Thomas has been a Republican all his life, and has been school director and member of the town board several terms. With his son he is a member of the Masonic fraternity at Hazel Green. Mr. Thomas began for himself in this country without a dollar, and by industry and integrity won a very enviable standing. He has many friends who declare him honest and candid, straightforward and upright, and a genial and generous spirit. He is president of the First National Bank of Cuba City.

JOHN LEWIS. This prominent farmer and leading citizen of Patch Grove township is a worthy representative of a numerous and highly respected family of Grant county. His father, William Lewis, Sr., was born in Scotland April 21, 1795, a son of John and Ann (Wilson) Lewis, in whose family were four children, three sons and one daughter. John Lewis was three times married, and by the third union had two sons, Thomas and John. With their mother he came to America in 1840, and settled in Bovina, N. Y., where he lived to be ninety-one years old. William was the only child of the first marriage to come to America. His youngest brother, James Lewis, served several years in the British army, and was in the battle of Waterloo under the Duke of Wellington. Thomas Lewis was in the British service six years.

In 1815, at the age of twenty years, William Lewis crossed the broad Atlantic in company with an old neighbor, and on landing in this country proceeded at once to Bovina, Delaware Co., N. Y., where he opened up a new farm, to the improvement and cultivation of which he devoted his energies for many years. He married Nancy Burns, a native of Bovina, and on his New York farm eleven children were born to them. He first came West on a visit, and was so much pleased with the country that soon after his return to the Empire State he sold his property there and brought his family to Wisconsin, making a permanent settlement in Grant county in May, 1858. He purchased land in Section 10, Town 5, Range 5 west, which is included in the civil township of Patch Grove, and became well-known as one of the representative farmers of that locality. He passed away Feb. 20, 1868, and his wife followed him to the better world in February, 1870.

The family of this worthy couple originally consisted of eleven children, ten sons and one daughter, all of whom grew to mature years with the exception of one who died in early childhood. The only daughter is Mrs. John Ryan, of Andover, Grant county. Those still living (1901) are John, whose name introduces this review; Thomas E., a resident of Howard county, Iowa; William; Walter, a resident of Kansas; Katherine; and Wilson F. Andrew was a member of the 43d Wis. V. I. in the war of the Rebellion, and died in the service at Johnsonville, Tenn., in November, 1864. James served in the 7th Wis. V. I., and died March 15, 1867. Moses and Walter were also numbered among the defenders of the Union during that struggle; the former is deceased.

John Lewis was born in New York State in 1823, and first came to Wisconsin in 1848, but two years later returned East, and did not locate permanently here until 1851. In June, 1848, he and his brother Thomas E. entered the land on which our subject now resides, and later he and his brother William bought Thomas' interest, while still later John became sole proprietor, having purchased William's interest in the property. He now has a fine farm, under a high state of cultivation, and well improved with good and substantial buildings which stand as monuments to his thrift and enterprise.

Mr. Lewis married Miss Frances Loughran, a native of the same place as her husband, and a most worthy wife, who proved to him a true helpmeet. She departed this life July 25, 1882. Of the nine children born to them, seven are still living, namely: Margaret, James, Nancy, Frances, John, Moses and William. One son, Charles, died at his home in Little Rock, Iowa, in April, 1899, and another child died in infancy.

In his early voting days Mr. Lewis affiliated with the Whig party, but has been a staunch Republican since the organization of that party. He is numbered with the successful and progressive citizens of his township and county, and is a worthy representative of that class of men who lead quiet, industrious, honest and useful lives, and constitute the best portion of a community. Wherever known he is held in high regard, and as an honored pioneer and highly respected citizen he is certainly deserving of honorable mention in the history of his adopted county.

WILBUR FISK GOODRICH, now living retired in the village of Emerald Grove, Bradford township, is one of the oldest settlers of Rock county, and has proved himself a thoroughly honest and reliable man, both as a farmer and a tradesman. He is now passing his last days in the enjoyment of leisure and comfort that have been richly earned.

Ephraim Goodrich, the grandfather of Wilbur F., and the founder of the family on American soil, settled first at Hartford, Conn., and went from there into Vermont with two hundred silver dollars and an axe as his entire capital. He settled in the town of Middlebury, and engaged in farming and lumbering, two occupations easily combined in that timbered country. He was also a house carpenter, and was a man of many resources. After he was located, and had secured a start in the world, he went back to Connecticut for his wife, Prudence, and brought her to his Vermont home, she riding their only horse, and he walking by her side. In 1857 they came to Wisconsin, and made their home with their son, Lemuel Miller Goodrich. Ephraim Goodrich died in 1859, at the age of seventy-eight years, and she in 1862, when seventy-two years old. They were both buried in the cemetery at Emerald Grove. They were the parents of five children, of whom Lemuel M., the father of Wilbur Fisk, was the eldest.

Lemuel M. Goodrich was born in 1808, near Middlebury, Vt., and in due time learned the carpenter's trade. In 1827 he married Miss Fanny Hutchinson, of Middlebury. They left Vermont about 1855, and came directly to Wisconsin, locating on an eighty-acre farm in the town of Bradford, Rock county. Eleven years later he sold this farm and moved to Fort Atkinson, where he made his home for several years, finally returning to the village of Emerald Grove, where he died in 1872. He was a member of the Methodist Church, as was his wife, who survived him eight years. Both were buried in the cemetery at Emerald Grove. They had five children, of whom Wilbur Fisk was the eldest.

Wilbur Fisk Goodrich was born in Middlebury, Vt., Sept. 28, 1830, and lived with his parents until he attained his majority. He received his education in the public schools, and his school training was unusually broad and deep. On reaching manhood he learned the trade of carpenter, which he followed in early life. In 1861 he bought a farm of 135 acres in the settlement known as La Prairie township, Rock county, and devoted himself to its cultivation a number of years. In 1873 he let his farm to a tenant, and moved into the village of Emerald Grove, where for twenty years he followed the business of a carriage builder. Since that time Mr. Goodrich has lived retired from business activities.

On Oct. 8, 1861, Mr. Goodrich married Miss Sarah Van Allen, a daughter of Lucas and Lydia (Luddington) Van Allen, farming people; her mother died when she was seven years old; her father died in the town of Bradford, and his ashes rest in the cemetery at Emerald Grove. Mrs. Goodrich is related through her mother to Gov. Luddington, of Wisconsin. No children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Goodrich. They are members of the local Congregational Church, and are highly esteemed in the community. He has served as road commissioner, and as constable for many years, and is counted one of the representative men of Rock county.

CHARLES J. F. NUTI, one of the prominent early settlers and now a retired farmer of Cassville, Grant county, was born in Italy in 1818, a son of Jacinto and Camelia Nuti, also natives of that country. He was reared in Florence, and when a young man went to France as steward for a gentleman, later going with him to England, and remaining in his employ for twenty years.

In 1850 Mr. Nuti crossed the Atlantic, and proceeded at once to Grant county, Wis. The following year he located in Potosi, where he made his home for two years, while in the service of a man who was agent for a large tract of land. He then moved to Cassville, and rented a farm belonging to a Mr. Price. While residing there Mr. Nuti purchased 160 acres of wild land, one-half of which was covered with timber, and, taking up his residence thereon in 1853, he turned his attention to its improvement, and soon converted it into one of the finest, best improved and most highly cultivated farms of that section of the county. For many years he was successfully engaged in general farming, and stock raising, and still owns his farm, though he now lives a retired life in Cassville.

Before leaving England Mr. Nuti was married, in 1850, to Miss Matilda Louisa Andrews, a native of Bridgeport, that country, who died at Cassville in 1899, after a happy married life of nearly fifty years. By that union four children were born, namely: Mrs. Evangeline Matilda Spiller, a resident of Cassville; Mrs. Anna Babbitt Hurst, of Chippewa Falls, Wis.; Orlando Charles, who is married, and lives on the home farm; and Dorretta Calder, who died in Chippewa Falls in 1887.

Since the organization of the Republican party Mr. Nuti has been a staunch supporter of its principles. He is a faithful and consistent member of the Presbyterian Church, and a man highly respected and esteemed by all who know him.

JAMES OSBORN, a retired farmer at Evansville, Rock county, is one of the most venerable characters to be found in that city. His great age commands the respect of the public, and his personal habits and kindly disposition have won him a warm place in the hearts of his community.

Mr. Osborn was born in Prince Edward County, Canada, Oct. 23, 1815, a son of James and Catherine (Trumpe) Osborn, both natives of New York. They were the parents of four sons and seven daughters, and three of their sons are now living: James, of Evansville; John, of Picton, Canada; and Paul Austin, of Prince Edward county, Canada. The father, who was a farmer, emigrated to Canada with his parents when he was twelve years old, grew to manhood in that country, and was a lifelong agriculturist. He died when almost eighty-five years old. His wife died in 1848, when she was fifty-two. They were Methodists. He was drafted in the war of 1812, but being lame did not serve long. His father bore the name of James Osborn, and was born in the Mohawk River Valley, of Welsh stock. After the Revolution he moved into Canada, and settled on Prince Edward Island, where he died at the age of eighty-five. He had five sons and four daughters. John Trumpe, the father of Catherine, mentioned above, was born in New York, of Dutch descent, and followed farming.

James Osborn was reared in Canada, on the farm, "at the butt end of an ox-handle." When he was two years old his father moved into the dense woods, two miles from the nearest neighbor, and when James was older grown he helped to clear the farm. After attaining maturity he worked on shares for many years. In 1864 Mr. Osborn made his way to Wisconsin, and made a settlement in Porter township, Rock county, where he bought forty acres, which is still in his possession.

Mr. Osborn and Miss Louisa Ballard were married Sept. 25, 1838, and this union has proved a singularly fortunate and happy one. They are the parents of seven children, two sons and five daughters. Catherine died in infancy. Jane is the wife of E. D. Barnard, of Evansville. Martha became the wife of Thomas Hutson, and both she and her husband are now dead. William died in infancy. James is now living in Minneapolis, and travels for the A. S. Baker Co.; he married Miss Clara West, and is the father of three children, Iva, May and Byrle. Elizabeth is the wife of Oscar Mabie, of Janesville. Louisa died when sixteen years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Osborn are members of the Methodist Church, of which he was steward and class-leader for many years. He is a Republican, but never aspired to office.

JAMES JEFFERY, one of the prominent business men of Georgetown, Grant county, who is also the popular and accommodating postmaster at that place, was born in Cornwall, England, Jan. 29, 1842. His parents, Francis and Emma (Wills) Jeffery, were born in England, the former in 1810, and the latter in 1816. In 1848 the Jeffery family came to Wisconsin, and settled at Hazel Green, where Mr. Jeffery engaged in lead mining. In 1849 he migrated to California, where he worked in the gold mines for two years, and, being fairly successful, on his return bought a farm in Lafayette county, near Benton, where his son Thomas now resides. Until within a few years prior to his death Mr. Jeffery followed an agricultural life. He then moved to Jefferson, where he lived retired, dying in 1880, his wife surviving until 1899. Both were consistent members of the M. E. Church, in the work of which Mr. Jeffery took a leading part. Politically he was a staunch Republican all his life, and held a number of local offices in the town of Benton; where he was a popular and leading man, although the town was strongly Democratic. Mr. and Mrs. Francis Jeffery reared a family of seven sons and one daughter, our subject being the eldest. William, born in Cornwall, England, in 1844, grew up on the farm, married Emma Morley, of Lafayette county, and has one daughter; he resides in Hazel Green, where he is engaged in dealing in agricultural implements; he was a soldier in the Civil war. Francis, born in Cornwall in 1845, grew up in Lafayette county, married in Colorado, where he now resides, a successful miner, and has one daughter, Stella. T. J., born in Lafayette county in 1847, married Elizabeth Kittoe, and resides on the old homestead, which he owns; he has three children, Edwin, John and May. George, born in Lafayette county in 1849, married Charlotte Lukey, of Hazel Green, where he died in 1898, leaving three children, Frank, Charlotte and Maud. Emily, born in Lafayette county in 1850, is the wife of John R. James, of Hazel Green, and has two children, Lottie A. and Henry. Edwin, born in 1851, was educated in a business college of Dubuque, and when still a young man entered the employ of the Marquette & Mackinac Railway Co., of Michigan; in a short time he was promoted to the position of auditor of the road, but his health failing, he removed to Colorado, where he died Jan. 6, 1888, regretted by his employers and all who knew him. Joseph P., born in Lafayette county in 1853, went to Michigan, and engaged in hotel-keeping in the Iron Mountains there until one year ago, when he moved to Green Bay, Wisconsin.

The early education of James Jeffery, our subject, was obtained in the district schools in Benton, Wis., where he remained on his father's farm until the age of twenty-one. About this time he was engaged as a clerk in the store of William Thomas, at the "12-Mile House" in Grant county, remaining four years, and finally becoming a partner with Mr. Thomas. Coming to Georgetown, our subject entered into a partnership with Joseph Brandon, in the mercantile business, the latter retiring in 1883. Mr. Jeffery has continued the business up to the present time.

In December, 1869, our subject was married to Miss Alice Oatey, the estimable daughter of William and Jane (Thomas) Oatey, old and prominent residents of Jo Daviess Co., Ill., where they remained until their death. Mrs. Jeffery was born in England Nov. 20, 1847, and was educated in Illinois. She and her brother Samuel, who lives in Franklin county, Iowa, are the only survivors of a family of eight children. John R., the oldest brother of Mrs. Jeffery, was a corporal in Company F, 96th I. V. I., and was killed at the battle of Chickamauga, on Sept. 20, 1863. To Mr. and Mrs. Jeffery have been born two sons: William T., born in October, 1870, was educated at the Platteville Normal School, and was graduated at a Dubuque business college. He married Miss Addie Stevens, of Cuba City, and now resides in Hampton, Iowa, where he is engaged in a store. G. L., born in Georgetown Oct. 22, 1872, was a student of the home schools until seventeen years of age, when he entered Mr. Rindlaub's printing office in Platteville, learned the printer's trade, and is now a compositor in the government office at Washington, D. C., where he holds a responsible position.

Politically Mr. Jeffery has always been identified with the Republican party, and he has held a number of local offices in the town: he is at the time of this writing a member of the town board, and has been a member of the school board. In 1875 he was elected to represent his district in the Legislature, where he served with satisfaction to his constituents. Mr. Jeffery's services have been recognized by his appointment as postmaster, which position he now holds. Mr. Jeffery stands high among the people of Grant county, where he has been well known for many years, and commands the respect of all the citizens, irrespective of party. Socially he is a charter member of Masonic Lodge No. 185, Georgetown, of which he has been secretary some ten years. His wife is a member of the M. E. Church, of which they are cheerful supporters.

CLAREMONT S. JACKMAN. This gentleman, one of Janesville's prominent and most capable financiers, is of English ancestry and Revolutionary stock. The earliest American progenitor of his family emigrated from "Old" to "New" England in early Colonial days, and our subject's great-grandfather served in the patriot army led by Washington, and later in the State militia of Massachusetts. The paternal grandfather of Mr. Jackman, Stillman Jackman, was born in the "Bay State," but removed thence to New Hampshire, where he died at the age of sixty-five years, the father of four children.

Timothy Jackman, the father of Claremont S., was born in the State of New York. He married Marcia M. Smith, whose father, Jesse Smith, was born in Massachusetts, but came west in 1848, locating in the town of Union, Rock Co., Wis., where he cultivated a farm and conducted a general country store until his death, which did not occur until he had reached the extraordinary age of ninety years. Timothy Jackman was a man of fertile brain, endowed with quick perceptive power, and a business capacity which may be said to have been remarkable for his time. He was not only a successful farmer, but also managed a hotel to the satisfaction of his patrons, and engaged in milling and mercantile business. He took up his home in Janesville in 1842, and prospered greatly in all his various ventures. He was one of the organizers of the Rock County (later the Rock County National) Bank, and was president thereof from its formation until the day of his death. He was a Republican, and a member of Janesville's first city council. He died in 1868, in his sixty-ninth year. His widow survived twenty years, passing away in 1888.

Claremont S. Jackman is one of four children born to his parents. He and his brother Clarence N. (a carriage manufacturer of Janesville) survive. Our subject was born in Janesville, Nov. 20, 1846. He attended school, as did other boys of his age and condition, but the breaking out of the war of the Rebellion quickened the course of the blood which he had received from his Revolutionary grandsire, and in 1862, when a mere lad of sixteen years, he enlisted in the 12th Wisconsin Artillery. He fought at Missionary Ridge, and followed Sherman to the sea, participating in the battle of Altoona, and the siege and capture of Savannah. Subsequently he was assigned to duty at the headquarters of Gen. John A. Logan. After being mustered out he returned home, and for a year engaged in the milling business in Janesville. His thirst for change and adventure, however, was not yet slaked, and he spent the next eighteen months in the mines of Montana. Wearying of this life, he once more retraced his steps to Janesville, where he entered the service of the Rock County National Bank, of which he is now president, in the humble, inferior position of a messenger. This was on July 1, 1867. Quick comprehension, close attention to duty and unwavering integrity brought their reward. Step by step he climbed the ladder of promotion, until, after long and faithful service as cashier, he was elevated to the presidency of that important and solid institution; this responsible post he has filled for twelve years. His financial interests in the city are large and important. Besides being a heavy stockholder in various manufacturing and commercial corporations (among them the Janesville Water Works Co.) he has extensive and valuable holdings of real property. Mr. Jackman's handsome home was erected about a dozen years ago, at the intersection of Park Place and St. Lawrence street. He is a member of Oriental Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and socially popular. His politics are Republican, and for two years he represented the Third ward in the city council.

On March 10, 1869, Mr. Jackman married Clara Hanchett, her parents being John M. and Julia (Titus) Hanchett. The issue of the marriage has been one son, Frank, who holds the position of assistant cashier in the bank of which his father is president. He married Miss Etta B. Hanchett, and is the father of two children, Frances and Claremont.

EMMETT D. MCGOWAN has been for many years one of Janesville's most successful lawyers. His legal ability and the painstaking and scholarly attention which he devotes to each interest that is confided to his care have gained for him an increasingly large clientage, while his broad, intelligent comprehension of public affairs, and his genial and generous disposition, have made for him many friends.

As the name suggests, the family is of Irish descent on the father's side, its native heath being Newtown Butler, County Fermanagh, in the Emerald Isle. His mother's family is of military stock, her grandfather, a hero of the Revolution, having been one of the guards over Major Andre and present at his execution, while her father, Daniel Bennett, was a volunteer in the war of 1812. Mr. McGowan's grandfather, John McGowan, and father, James S. McGowan, emigrated to America in 1843, and settled in Rochester, N. Y. Several years after James S. removed to Walworth county, Wisconsin, making his home at Allen's Grove. From that point he removed to Beloit, where he was employed in the construction of the paper mills, and about 1858-59 he took up his residence in Janesville, where he is still living. Mrs. James S. McGowan (whose maiden name was Louisa M.

Bennett), the mother of Emmett D., was born in Jefferson county, N. Y. Her brother, John R. Bennett, was a distinguished and honored Wisconsin jurist, having been for many years judge of the Twelfth Judicial Circuit of Wisconsin.

Emmett D. McGowan's life has been passed in Janesville, where he was born July 15, 1859. He has one sister, Mary L. (Mrs. Charles F. Niles), of Menomonee, Wis. In his education, as in his professional success, Mr. McGowan is an example of that type of determined man of which America is so justly proud, to which she owes so much, who, lacking the early advantages which fall to some, have hewed out a place for themselves. Not being able to go to college, he supplemented attendance at the public school with a course of reading at home, embracing substantially one of the classical courses of study laid down by the Faculty of the Wisconsin State University. His legal education was also obtained by his own efforts. He read law in the office of Bennett & Sale, and in December, 1883, was admitted to the Bar. In July of the following year he formed a partnership with Edwin F. Carpenter. In 1886 Mr. McGowan was the successful candidate, on the Republican ticket, for the office of clerk of the circuit court of Rock county. This dissolved the partnership, and the aptitude and fidelity exhibited by Mr. McGowan resulted in four elections to the same responsible position, whose duties he continued to ably and honorably discharge until 1895. At the expiration of his official term he resumed the practice of law, in which his natural talent, his ability for hard work, and his professional skill, have brought him increasing reputation and success. He is a Republican in politics. His love of social association has made of his handsome home, at No. 154 Milton avenue, a place which his friends delight to visit. He is a member of Western Star Lodge, No. 14, A. F. & A. M.; of Janesville Chapter, No. 5, R. A. M.; and of Janesville Commandery, No. 2, K. T. He is also past chancellor in the order of the Knights of Pythias.

Mr. McGowan has been twice married, on June 30, 1887, to Abbie L., a daughter of Joseph H. and Mary Hill, of Beloit, Wis., by which union there were two children, Louise H. and Joseph B. Mrs. McGowan was an invalid for several years from the illness that caused her death. She was a member of Christ Episcopal Church. On Jan. 11, 1899, Mr. McGowan married Katherine, a daughter of Ellis and Martha A. (Parker) Shoppell. She is a member of the First Congregational Church of Janesville.

REV. WALLACE L. SELLECK, a machinist and inventor, for some years a resident of Platteville, Grant county, possesses more than an ordinary reputation for his ingenious ideas and skillful application of accepted theories to mechanical appliances.

Mr. Selleck was born in Canada Feb. 22, 1837, a son of George J. and Zoä (Bositte) Selleck. His father was born in the United States, and was the son of Charles Selleck, an Englishman by birth, who was engaged as a builder of ships of war during the war of 1812. He received his pay from the English government in land at Kingston, Canada, and the grant is still in dispute between the heirs of Charles Selleck and the English government. Charles Selleck disposed of it to the citizens of Kingston on a ninety-years lease. George J. Selleck was a millwright by trade, and put up a number of sawmills and gristmills in Wisconsin during the latter part of his life, living at Millville. He died in 1894. He had large tracts of land near Prairie du Chien, Wis., and in Nebraska, and was known as one of the successful business men of the day. His wife passed away March 3, 1895. They left a family of six sons and four daughters: Charles, born in Canada in 1831, studied medicine, and settled in Blue Hill, Nebraska, where he died in 1886, leaving one son, William, who lives in that State. Maria was born in Canada in February, 1833, and married Erastus Blodget, of Vermont, a manager for mines on Lake Superior; they settled in Dane county, Wis., where the wife died, leaving four children. Albina, born in Canada in 1835, is the wife of Louis Keith, of Bladen, Neb. Wallace L., our subject, is next in the family. Wellington W., born in Milwaukee in September, 1839, is now a farmer near St. Paul, Minn.; he has a family of three daughters, Zoä, Grace and Othe. Washington was born in Wisconsin in 1841, and served with his brother Wellington in the 4th Wisconsin Cavalry during the Civil war, under Gen. Sigel, taking part in some stirring scenes and experiences: Washington returned from the war, and pre-empted land in Nebraska, where he lived for nine years, but not being pleased with that country he came back to Wisconsin and bought a farm near Millville, where he still resides; he married Miss Jane Huston, and has a family of five children, of whom are named Charles, Henry, Lydia, and Effie. George, born Sept. 27, 1843, was a soldier during the Civil war, enlisting from Iowa; after the war he married Miss Elizabeth Raymond, and now lives on a farm at Beetown, Grant county. Albert, born in October, 1846, at Milwaukee, was for a number of years an engineer on a steamboat plying on the Mississippi river, and is now manager of a creamery near Elk Grove; he is married, and has five children, George, John, Joseph, Nellie, and one whose name is not given. Sophia, born in Milwaukee in 1851, married Lewis Harvey, who moved to the Nebraska frontier, where he was killed by the Indians, leaving his wife with one son, George, whom she educated in Lincoln, Neb.; when a young man he went to the gold fields of Alaska, and returned with a rich reward for the perils he had undergone, bringing home on his first trip over thirty thousand dollars in gold; in 1896 the young miner and his mother returned to Alaska, where they are at the present writing. Alice E., born in Grant county in 1856, married Henry Martin, of Blue Hill, Neb.; they now reside in Iowa.

Wallace L. Selleck obtained his education in the public schools of Wisconsin, and for one year was a student in the public schools at Platteville. When a young man he served an apprenticeship as a machinist in the shops at Dubuque. His first work after finishing his time was in a steam sawmill. He was a lumber man on the Wisconsin river for ten years. On Jan. 30, 1858, the young lumberman and Miss Sarah A. Miles, daughter of Jesse and Mahala Miles, were married. The young couple went to the lumber mills on the Wisconsin river, and spent some years in that romantic country. In 1869 he sold out his lumber interests and moved to Milwaukee, where he erected a shop for the manufacture of the turbine water-wheel. He sold this after two years at a very decided profit, and moved to Millville, Wis., where he was engaged in a sawmill some twenty years, being largely occupied with the manufacture and sale of walnut lumber during this time. He has given several years to invention, and has perfected among other things a door hinge which is in general use; he also has inventions in the line of compressed air and steam saving power.

Mrs. Selleck died in Millville, Feb. 10, 1881, leaving him six children: (1) Zoa, born at Millville, in 1861, married Lucien McDowie, and they are now living at Peoria, Ill., where he is one of the prosperous blacksmiths of that city. They have four children, R. L., James, Nina B., and Ralph. (2) Clara, born in Grant county in 1863, married Charles Caloms, and they reside on his farm in Grant county. They have three children, of whom we have record of two, Myrtie and Charles. (3) George H., born in Millville in 1866, married Miss Annie Brown, and they have one son, Ray. He was a merchant at Millville for some time. Some years later he opened a store at Dodgeville, and then moved to Galena, where he sold out his business. He settled on his farm near Millville, and is now a successful farmer. (4) Lillian, born in New Lisbon, Wis., in 1870, married Samuel Tracy, of the town of Harrison, where they live on a farm; they have one son, Raymond. (5) Miss Josephine, born in Grant county in 1874, was educated in the public school and is still in the home of her father, where she has had charge since the death of her mother. (6) May, born in Grant county in 1879, is now the wife of Orville Barrett, and has one child. They reside at Arthur, Wis., where they own and manage a farm.

Mr. Selleck is a Republican, and was justice of the peace several years at Millville. He is a member of the Christian Universal Church, a believer in divine healing, and has always been a Bible student. He is a strong believer in the power of God to answer prayer.

HENRY C. LANE, a retired hardware merchant, and a very prominent citizen of Platteville, Grant county, is a native of Trumbull county, Ohio, born in September, 1819, a son of David and Nancy (Lester) Lane.

David Lane was born in Connecticut, and descended from an old Pilgrim family; his wife was a native of Leicestershire, England, and a great-granddaughter of Lord Lester. From Connecticut, in which State they were married, Mr. and Mrs. Lane removed to Ohio, where Mr. Lane followed his trade of hatter for some years. Subsequently he purchased land on the old turnpike running from Pittsburgh, Penn., to Cleveland, Ohio, where he built a hotel, conducting same until his death, many years ago. To this worthy and venerated couple were born the following family of children: Maria, who died in 1808; Julia, who was married to Isaac Reves; Louisa, wife of Dr. Asil Jones, he and she being now deceased; Mary A., deceased wife of Jacob Devendorf; Emily, who married Milton Graham, both now deceased; Lester, who died on the old homestead; Dr. Levit Lane, deceased, who was a practitioner at Monroe; Albert, who died in Milwaukee, Wis., leaving two daughters, Ada and Louella, residents of Platteville, the latter being the widow of Mr. Graham, and making her home with Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Lane; and Henry C., the gentleman whose name opens this sketch.

Henry C. Lane was educated in the common schools of Trumbull, Ohio, and when a young man learned blacksmithing. In 1840 he came to Platteville, Wis., when it was but a small village, and here worked at his trade three and a half years; then returned to Ohio, and the same year married Miss Lucy A. Hocomb, of Hartford, that State. She was a daughter of Horace and Julia (Gillette) Hocomb, who were born in Connecticut, and after their marriage removed to Broome county, N. Y., where Mrs. Lucy A. Lane was born in January, 1821. In 1833 the Hocomb family removed from the Empire State to Ohio, locating in Trumbull county, and shortly afterward the father died, leaving his widow with three children: Judson, now residing near Madison, Wis.; Hannah, widow of William Beebe, and living in Lancaster, this State; and Mrs. Henry C. Lane. After the death of her husband Mrs. Hocomb made her home with Mr. and Mrs. Lane until her demise, in 1880.

Immediately after marriage Mr. Lane brought his bride to Platteville, and a few years later relinquished blacksmithing and engaged in the hardware trade, in which he continued over thirty years, realizing a competency, and now owning a large number of city lots, which he has improved; he owns, besides, other valuable real estate. The union of Mr. and Mrs. Lane has been blessed with four daughters, viz.: Maria, born in 1844, is the wife of Lester Devendorf, and has two children—Cora, wife of William H. Ellis, a lawyer of Platteville; and Charles Devendorf, a traveling salesman, of Iowa. Julania, a graduate of the Academy, is the wife of A. C. Van Elston, a banker and merchant of Muscoda, Wis., and a former representative in the State Legislature; they have had two children, one son and one daughter, Henry L. and Florence, of whom the latter died in 1899. Maretta, now Mrs. William Jones, is the mother of five children, Lottie, William, Vandy, Florence and Louella. Jessie is the wife of John Lawton and the mother of two children, Elvira and John, both students in the city college.

Religiously all the Lane family are members of the Congregational Church, to which they freely contribute, and to the building of all the churches in the city Mr. Lane has ever lent willing aid financially. Politically he is a staunch Republican, has served as member of the council, and filled several other offices of minor importance, but has never aspired to public positions simply for the sake of the honor attached thereto, serving from a sense of public duty. Fraternally he is a charter member of the Masonic lodge of Platteville, and socially he and family enjoy the esteem of the entire population of the city.

BARTIMEUS WHITE. The days of this venerable pioneer are well-nigh spent. Born in 1811, he is approaching life's ninetieth milestone, and the narratives of the lives of such men as he are replete at once with interest and instruction. Grant county can boast few citizens of so advanced an age or a life more void of offense. For a period of sixty-five years he has been identified with the development of this portion of the State, having first settled in the southwestern part in 1835, when Wisconsin was a Territory, in part of Michigan, its forests not felled, and its soil unbroken. Mr. White comes of sturdy, stalwart New England stock, his ancestry in America being traced back to 1635-36, when some of his progenitors settled in Braintree and Weymouth, Mass. Our subject's parents, Samuel and Mary (Hayhood) White, were residents of Braintree, Mass., in which town he was born and passed his early years. He was one of a family of seven children born to his father's first marriage. After the death of his mother, his father married a second time, the issue of that union being a family of five or six children. Samuel White died at Braintree, in his eightieth year. Of the seven children born to Samuel and Mary White Bartimeus alone survives, while of the second marriage, only one daughter is yet living, Mrs. Phoebe Cheesman, a widow, born in 1822; she has a son and a daughter living, both of whom have married, and the son has two grandchildren.

Bartimeus White when a boy of ten years was apprenticed to learn the trade of a shoemaker, and worked as a journeyman for several years. His health failing, he had recourse to an ocean voyage, with the most beneficial results; but on his return, fearing that the confinement incident to working at his trade might induce a return of his trouble, he resolved to join the long procession of emigrants who were even then wending their way westward, in search of homes. It was on Oct. 8, 1834, that he departed from Braintree, and just six months later, in the spring of 1835, he reached the lead mines of southwestern Wisconsin, in which he worked for six years. He then began farming, a pursuit which he has followed during the greater part of his subsequent life. His first farm was in Jamestown, Grant county, but in 1862, desirous of affording his children better educational opportunities, he removed with his family to his present home, which is situated directly south of the city of Lancaster. Here he is passing his declining years, in the company of the wife who has been his companion and helpmeet for fifty-five years, happy in his memories of the past, and looking forward to the future with serene hope. It has been his lot to witness great changes and stupendous advances. Twenty-two National administrations have passed into history since his eyes first saw the light of day, and the country has passed, victoriously, through four wars. Slavery has been abolished, and State after State been admitted to the Union. Steam and electricity have become the trained and docile servants of man, and the entire systems of manufacture, industry and commerce have been revolutionized. All these strange sights have his eyes witnessed, and yet, despite his ninety years, he is still vigorous in body and clear in mind. His memory is remarkably good, taking him back to events of his early childhood, and he has some recollection of his paternal grandfather, who lived in the "new large square house," his parents occupying the older dwelling. At the time of his grandfather's funeral he remembers climbing on a chair to look out of a window when the remains were brought out and placed on a table for the last look. Honored by his fellowmen, loved and revered by his family and friends. Mr. White calmly awaits the summons that shall whisper in the ear of the soul, "Friend, go up higher."

In 1845 Mr. White returned to Massachusetts, to claim the hand of his promised bride, Miss Nancy Leach, of East Bridgewater, that State, who was born Feb. 28, 1822. Of the children which have been born to their union two died in infancy. Those yet living are Abby F., Franklin, Hattie E., Mrs. Mary Marks, Mrs. Ida King, Mrs. Marcia A. Hall, and John. The last named is now living in Kansas not far from Kansas City; he returned eastward as far as Kansas after eight years' experience in southern California, which he found too dry to afford a good living to a man in moderate circumstances, with a young family; he has a wife and three children.

SAMUEL GRAY, a retired farmer, is among the well known and highly esteemed citizens of Platteville, Grant county, having borne an important part in the development and advancement of this State. Descending from sturdy English stock, Mr. Gray has steadily climbed from the lowest rung in the ladder of success to his present comfortable position, by his own unaided efforts.

Samuel Gray was born in Cornwall, England, June 26, 1830, a son of John and Ann (Bosanco) Gray. In 1841, John Gray, with one son, came to America, and settling in Wisconsin, at Benton, Lafayette county, he there engaged in mining for two years. At that time he sent for his wife and the remainder of the family, and later purchased a farm near Benton, where he resided until his death, in 1862, his worthy helpmate surviving until 1874. Both of these good people were consistent members of the M. E. Church, and lived most Christian lives. They left a family of five children: John married and located on a farm in Lafayette county, later moving to Hazel Green where he died in 1892; his wife passed away some two years later, leaving one daughter, Elizabeth A., wife of Edward Rodgers, of Grant county. Henry married Miss Elizabeth L. Williams, and settled in Hazel Green, where he resided until his death, leaving one daughter, Martha, wife of John Jewell, of Hazel Green. William, after going to California, married in Hazel Green Miss Ann Pierce, went to Boston, and now resides near that city, in a pleasant home, surrounded by an interesting family. Our subject is next in the family. James, educated in Lafayette county, married Mary E. Clemens, and settled at Cuba City, where he still resides; he has no family.

Samuel Gray was but thirteen years old when brought to Wisconsin, and secured a fair amount of education in England and the schools of Lafayette county. After mining in the local mines until 1851 he migrated to California, via New Orleans, over the Isthmus by land, thence by water to his destination. After mining for some time at Placerville, and attaining fair success, Mr. Gray returned to Wisconsin, via New York, and continued lead mining in this State for a few years, but after his marriage he settled on the old homestead, where he greatly improved the property, residing there until 1889. At that date he purchased a fine building site in the Homestead Addition in Platteville, and erected his present pleasant home, where he and his family now are surrounded by all the comforts of life.

On May 31, 1855, Samuel Gray married Miss Mary Symons, daughter of Richard and Sarah Symons, prominent people of England, who came to America, and settled in Benton, Wis., when Mrs. Gray was a child, she having been born in Cornwall, England, in January, 1837; she was educated in the schools of Wisconsin. Mr. Symons died Sept. 19, 1900. Of the family born to Mr. and Mrs. Gray, seven grew to maturity: George H., born April 29, 1856, was educated in Benton and the Platteville Normal, married Lydia Stephens, and settled on a farm in Iowa; he has a family of five children, William A., Myrtle, Samuel, Pearl and Edgar. Mary E., born March 31, 1858, was educated at Lafayette and Galena, Ill., married Cyrus Paterson, of Hazel Green, Wis., and settled on a farm at Hazel Green; she died leaving one son, Cyril. Alfred, born Nov. 24, 1860, married Agnes Burkett, and now resides on his father's farm; he has three children, Aruba, Jennie and Harold. John S., born June 2, 1863, married Eliza Burkett, of Lafayette county, and resides on his father's farm, near Benton; he has three children, Henry, Sylvia and Clarence. Alice J., born Oct. 12, 1866, graduated at Hazel Green high school and later at the State Normal; she married O. E. Gibson, one of the leading dentists of Platteville, and has two children, Irvin, born in July, 1893, and Heien, born July 1, 1896. Oliver, born in August, 1870, was educated at Hazel Green, graduating from the high school there, also attended the State Normal, and the State University, at Madison, and is now the superintendent of schools for Platteville; on Dec. 26, 1900, he married Gertrude P. Chase. Edith, born Aug. 25, 1877, died Dec. 9, 1900; although an invalid for many years, and at times a great sufferer, she was seldom heard to complain; she was one of the most beautiful Christian characters, and many a helpful lesson was learned at her side.

In his political opinions Mr. Gray adheres to the principles of the Republican party, was a member of the town board of Benton for some six years, and held a number of other local offices, discharging the duties pertaining to each efficiently and satisfactorily. Mr. and Mrs. Gray, as well as their family, are very prominent in the M. E. Church, of which they are faithful members, and take an active part in all the work pertaining thereto. Few people more richly deserve the prosperity which has come to them than do Mr. and Mrs. Gray, and they have endeared themselves, by their many excellent traits of character, not only to their immediate family, but to a large circle of acquaintances and friends.

DANIEL N. SMALLEY, the genial postmaster at Cuba City, Grant county, and a man well known throughout the surrounding district, is well worth mention in the annals of his neighborhood.

Mr. Smalley's birth occurred Feb. 1, 1833, at Union, N. Y., and he is a son of Nehemiah and Sarah (Cataline) Smalley, natives of Vermont and Connecticut, respectively. The parents grew to maturity in New York State, married there, and in 1837 migrated to Illinois. The father died in Chicago in 1837, two weeks after reaching that place. Mrs. Smalley subsequently married Moses Spencer, and they removed to Pleasant Grove, Ill., where they remained until the death of Mr. Spencer. Mrs. Spencer then removed to Chicago, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Sarah Kimbell, of that city. Of the children born to the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Nehemiah Smalley, George O., born in New York State, settled near Madison, Wis., and later removed to Illinois, settling at Eureka; he has two daughters living near Eureka, Ill. Sarah A. married Martin N. Kimbell, resides in Chicago, and has seven children, some of whom reside in Chicago. Caroline, born in New York State, married David White, of Illinois, and had three children; upon his death she married Adrian Cook, by whom she had five children. Dudley C., born in New York State, moved to Illinois, and later to Grant county, and purchased a farm on which he resided until 1891, when he moved to Morris county, Kans., where he followed farming; he married Miss Amanda Haines, of Grant county, and now resides in Kansas City; they have six children. Alonzo, born in New York State, is now a retired farmer of Manhattan, Ill.; he has six children living. Martha, born in New York State, married Joseph Strock, of Chicago, and settled on a farm near Waukegan, Ill. Electa married Nelson Willard, resides near Chicago, and has two children. Our subject is the youngest of the family.

Daniel N. Smalley, after coming West, lived some five years with his sister, Mrs. Kimbell, in Chicago. He then returned to his old home, and worked for a Mr. Ricards until twenty-one, when he entered Oberlin College, remaining for two years; he next studied under J. L. Pickard, principal of the Platteville Academy. In 1854 Mr. Smalley taught his first school, and so successful was he that he practically adopted this calling as his life work, and since then has taught forty terms, in Grant, Lafayette and other counties. Among his assignments were seven consecutive years at Dick-eyville. In 1881 he settled at Jamestown, remaining there until 1889, when he located at Cuba City, and became identified with the public schools in that city, becoming one of the best-known educators in the county. In July, 1897, Mr. Smalley was honored by appointment as postmaster, and has since that time filled the office with credit to himself and satisfaction to the patrons of the service.

The war record of Mr. Smalley is a very interesting one, he having become a member, in 1862, of the 25th Wis. V. L., as first lieutenant, Capt. Robert Nash commanding. The regiment served in the Western Army some time, then was sent to Vicksburg, participating in that world-famous siege. After the capture of that city the regiment was sent into Arkansas, thence into Kentucky, participating in various engagements. While in Arkansas Mr. Smalley was appointed captain of his company, and led the command back, burning the Rebel strongholds, and encountering much danger. This regiment took part in the famous march to the sea, and through the entire war Mr. Smalley was a brave soldier and a gallant and capable officer. After his long and arduous service he was honorably mustered out, in 1865, and retired to private life.

In 1860 Mr. Smalley was married to Miss Mary E. Cooper, of Jamestown, Wis., who was a daughter of James T. and Cynthia A. Cooper, coming from one of the old aristocratic families of Kentucky. In 1844 Mrs. Smalley's parents came to Lafayette county, where they remained seven or eight years, then went to Dubuque, Iowa, and stayed until the death of Mr. Cooper, in 1853. Mrs. Cooper died at the home of her daughter in Grant county in 1868. Mrs. Smalley was born in Missouri in 1841, attended the district schools of the neighborhood of her home, and the high school at Dubuque, Iowa. She was one of five children: Mary E., Mrs. Smalley; Margaret, now wife of N. Eastman, one of the wealthy lumbermen of Platteville; George S., who is married, and a resident of Salem, Ore.; James I., who died when young; and N. S., now a resident of Boyden, Iowa.

Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Smalley: Lorinda A., born in Jamestown in 1861, was educated in the public schools, and in 1880 married John Fush, of Georgetown, where they now reside, on a farm; they have four children, Wallace S., Laura B., Lee S. and Raymond B. Sherman E., born in Illinois in 1866, was educated in the public schools of his State, and for a time was connected with the Houskins Lumber Co., of Galena, Ill., as bookkeeper and manager, but later studied law, passing the examination at Madison in 1895, and now carries on a law practice in Cuba City; in November, 1892, he married Miss Polly Mitchell, of Cuba City, and they have two children, Luverne and Gynett. Edna M., born in Grant county in 1869, was well educated in the district schools, and was one of the successful school teachers of Grant county until her marriage, to George G. Gaskill, of Lafayette county, who is postmaster at Argyle and editor of the Argi Atlas, a publication having a large circulation. Maggie B., born at Jamestown in 1875, was a student at the State Normal, and followed teaching until her marriage, in 1895, to John N. Williams, of Hazel Green; they now reside at Carroll, Iowa, on a farm, and have two children, Myrtle E. and Margery B. Mary E., born in March, 1878, was educated in the home schools, graduating from the Cuba City high school, and assisted her father until her marriage, March 27, 1900, to J. A. Clemens, of Cuba City; they now reside on a farm at Hazel Green.

Politically Mr. Smalley has always been a staunch Republican. He has filled a number of local offices, including those of assessor, town clerk, justice of the peace, etc., for a number of years, and in every instance has given unbounded satisfaction. Taking an active interest in matters pertaining to the veterans. Mr. Smalley is an earnest member of Sherman Post, G. A. R., of Platteville, and fraternally is a member of the A. F. & A. M. in Illinois, having founded a chapter in that organization when still a young man. Mrs. Smalley is a member of the M. E. Church, and Mr. Smalley attends with his wife and family, and always gives liberally toward the support of the church and its works. Being a cultured man, possessed of a vast store of erudition, Mr. Smalley is fitted to shine in a much more exalted sphere in the literary world, and it is to be hoped that, although he is honored in his present office, he will not "hide his light under a bushel," but allow his ability full scope, that it may result to the good of coming generations.

JOHN T. WILKINSON, a resident of Platteville, Grant county, who was one of the bravest soldiers who fought to preserve his native land from ruin in the war of the Rebellion, was born in Indiana July 15, 1835.

Mr. Wilkinson is of Scottish descent. His great-grandfather, Angus Wilkinson, a man of property in England as well as in Scotland, joined the Scots and became a soldier of renown in the defense of his country. He had married a lady named MacGregor, a sister of the famous Highland chief dubbed "Rob Roy," and at the termination of the struggle he and his wife disguised themselves as peasants and came to America. Two of his brothers, William and Joseph, came also, and they settled in Ohio, where Angus Wilkinson passed the remainder of his life. One of his brothers was a soldier in the American army in the war of 1812, and the other went to South America.

J. I. Wilkinson

Their estates were all confiscated for a term of years to the Crown of England. A register of the family as far back as the sixteenth century, which our subject's great-grandparents brought to America with them, was destroyed by fire when their home in Ohio was burned, and the family have gone to considerable trouble and expense to re-establish the chain of descent thus broken. John Wilkinson, our subject's grandfather, was born on shipboard, during his parents' voyage to this country; he was their eldest child.

James Wilkinson, father of John T., was born in 1810 in Butler county, Ohio, and removed with the family from Ohio to Ripley county, Ind., where the parents died. They had born to them five children, of whom James was the only son, and all are now deceased. In 1833 James married Rachel P. Murphy, a lady of Irish parentage, and about 1838 went back to Ohio with his wife and young children. In 1842 he returned to Indiana, and located in Indianapolis; five years later he went to Illinois, and in 1850 came to Grant county, Wis., settling in the town of Liberty, where he entered a tract of government land at $1.25 per acre. About four years later he exchanged his land for the "Lancaster Hotel," in Lancaster, which he very successfully conducted several years, when he sold out and purchased a farm in the town of Ellenboro. There he lost his wife, and for his second spouse he chose Phebe Bitz. To Mr. Wilkinson and his first wife were born nine children, six of whom lived to reach mature years, and five are still living, namely: John T., the eldest; Daniel S., who resides at Gilman, Ill.; Elizabeth J., wife of Andrew Meeker, of Cherokee, Iowa; William H., of Grangeville, Cal.; and Phebe M., wife of Levi G. Reamer, of Grant county, Wis. Mr. Wilkinson was a powerful man physically, and enjoyed robust health up to within a few days of his death, which occurred on his Ellenboro farm July 14, 1885. He was mild, kind and jovial by nature, was hospitable to a marked degree, and was universally respected. In politics he was a Democrat, but as an outcome of the war of the Rebellion he voted for Abraham Lincoln on his second candidacy for the Presidency.

John T. Wilkinson was about fifteen years of age when he came to Wisconsin with his parents, and is the only son still living in Grant county. When nineteen years old he entered the office of the Grant County Herald to learn the printer's trade, but two years later withdrew, on account of ill health. He then went West, and for nine months was assistant surveyor on a military road between the Big Platte river and the Yellowstone. On his return he attended an academy for a year, under a Mr. Page, and then himself began teaching; was also employed in mining for a while; and then commenced farming. In 1861 he married Miss Adelia A. Bradley, a native of Trumbull county, Ohio, but a year later parted with his bride to answer the call to arms, enlisting Aug. 9, 1862, in Company C, 25th Wis. V. I. He was at first assigned to the Minnesota frontier. In February, 1863, he was stationed for a time at Columbus, Ky., whence he was sent to take part in the siege of Vicksburg. The following winter he spent at Helena, Ark., and was on the Meridian raid in February, 1864; was again at Vicksburg; then at Chattanooga, Tennessee, and took part in all the engagements from Chattanooga to Atlanta, Ga. At the siege of Atlanta he was severely wounded by a gunshot through his left shoulder, from the effects of which he has never fully recovered. After the war, when he had become strong enough, Mr. Wilkinson re-engaged in farming. From 1884 to 1886 he conducted a mercantile business in Ellenboro.

Mrs. Wilkinson having become invalided, in the hope of improving her health Mr. Wilkinson traveled with her for a considerable length of time in the South and West. The winter of 1894-95 they spent in California, and another winter in Alabama. Mrs. Wilkinson however, on returning North, died Feb. 16, 1899, leaving an only child, Eva E., wife of George E. Downing, of Thornton, Iowa. Mr. Wilkinson is recognized as a gentleman of great intelligence, improved and refined by travel and contact with the world, and expanded by a somewhat cosmopolitan life. He has derived much knowledge also from closely studious habits, is well posted in history and general literature, and is an edifying and entertaining conversationalist. Fraternally he is a member of the F. & A. M., and politically was originally a Republican, but of late has seen fit, owing to the mutations in political policy, to change his views, and he now affiliates with the Democratic party. Retired from active business life, he passes his summers in his pleasant home in Platteville, in the enjoyment of the society of his numerous warm-hearted friends, while his winters, as a rule, are spent in the mild region of the South.

JOSEPH BELLAMY WHITING, M. D., Janesville. The subject of this sketch is descended from a long line of New England ancestors, of English origin in this country, the first having established himself at Hingham, Mass., in 1634. The family residence of his great-grandfather, William Whiting, at the head of Broad street, in Milford, Conn., is still a landmark.

William Whiting was born in Connecticut, a son of a merchant sea captain, who visited Bordeaux, France, where the son (William) was educated. This experience introduced some French blood in the family, for he married a French lady and brought her to his New England home. His son, John Whiting, was a farmer at Barkhamsted, Conn., and was widely known as a successful breeder of fine cattle. He was distinguished for his stern love of justice and outspoken character. He was a thorough gentleman under all circumstances, and when he found himself in the wrong—as must occasionally be the experience of all men—he could not rest until amends had been made, where within his power. On account of the death of his only child, John Whiting, Jr., when the subject of this biography was only two and one-half years old, the care of the latter was undertaken by the grandfather, who was well qualified for training the willing youth. Much of his manly character and worth is, perhaps, due to the kind admonitions and maxims of his courtly grandsire.

John Whiting, Jr., was a man of high intellectual power, and became noted as a school teacher, though he also engaged in farming with his father at Barkhamsted. He used an arithmetic of his own compilation, which he kept in manuscript, while teaching. He was killed by an accident, while engaged with others in harvesting the crop of a sick neighbor. Mr. Whiting was born at Milford, Conn., in 1786, and his death occurred in 1825, at the early age of thirty-nine years. He married Mary Warner, who was born in Hamden, Conn., in 1796, and survived to the age of seventy-one years, dying in 1867. She was a noble Christian woman, of strong intellect, and her watchful care and beautiful life laid the foundations of the useful life of her son. The latter, in writing of her, says: "it is not too much to say that whatever of good I have attained to has been largely due to her daily prayers and admonitions, which followed me wherever I went, this labor of love and duty ceasing only when her life itself was done."

Joseph B. Whiting was born at Barkhamsted, Litchfield Co., Conn., Dec. 16, 1822, and was named for a noted divine of that time. He is the youngest of five children born to John and Mary Whiting, the eldest being a son, and the others daughters. Dr. Whiting has often expressed regret that he did not receive a college education, a lack which the observer would hardly discover in meeting the scholarly man and able physician, whose conversation is so entertaining and instructive. Under home instruction and the common-school training he was ready for an academic course at the age of thirteen years. At seventeen he began teaching, and continued in that work for five years, because it was a ready means of self-help. After another year of academic study, he decided to make the practice of medicine his life work, and accordingly, in 1845, became a student in the office of Dr. Vincent Holcombe, a distinguished physician and surgeon, at Granville, Hampden Co., Mass. This step was taken largely through his admiration for the character and appearance of Dr. Holcombe, and he gave two years to earnest and thorough reading of the authorities. He attended his first course of lectures at Berkshire Medical College, Pittsfield, Mass., in 1847. His second course was at Vermont Medical College, Woodstock, Vt., at the close of which he took up further study with Drs. H. H. and T. Childs, both of whom were professors in Berkshire College, from which institution our subject graduated in 1848. He began the practice of his profession at Wolcottville, a manufacturing village of Litchfield county, Conn., where in the autumn of 1850 he married Miss Frances A. Hungerford, a daughter of John and Charlotte A. Hungerford, descended from one of the historic families of Connecticut. In 1852 he removed to Brooklyn, N. Y., but was obliged to relinquish a growing and lucrative practice there by the failing health of his wife, who died in 1854, after a year of travel in the hope of recovery. Broken in health, Dr. Whiting went to Berkshire county, Mass., located at Lee, and soon assumed a leading position. The Berkshire District Medical Society, noted for the character and high standing of its members, made him its secretary, which honorable position he filled for a period of six years—until his removal from the State. The atmosphere of Berkshire is tinged with a high literary flavor, and here was a field in which Dr. Whiting was fitted to shine. But for the interference of a hard, practical life he would, no doubt, have excelled as a literary man.

In 1860 Dr. Whiting contracted an alliance which changed the field of his labors and the current of his life. On his wedding the widow of Chief Justice Edward V. Whiton, of Wisconsin, he removed to Janesville, which has ever since been his home, and where he is respected and admired by all who are privileged to know him. He is not one given to making miscellaneous acquaintances, and, being somewhat reserved in manner, he is sometimes supposed to be proud and supercilious, qualities, however, which could not be farther removed from his nature. To know him is to recognize the kind heart which yearns toward all mankind, with a desire for its uplifting and emancipation from every ill that threatens its physical or moral welfare. Without considering popularity—except in so far as every man desires the good-will or approbation of his fellows—he seeks only the right, to which he always adheres on principle. His motto is, "If you find you are wrong, get right just as soon as possible." While not free from foibles which characterize most people, all of which he freely admits, his thoughts occupy a high plane, and he rises above the petty annoyances and interests that fill the minds of many persons. This condition has not been attained without severe self-repression and culture, for he was born with a high temper and an extremely sensitive nature, which was always quick to resent any imposition.

Immediately after the removal to the West the Civil war came upon the land, and after the battle of Fort Donelson Dr. Whiting offered his services gratuitously to Gov. Harvey, who accepted, and sent him to the front to care for wounded soldiers. For six months he was on duty among the sick and wounded at Mound City Hospital. On the formation of the 33d Wis. V. I. Dr. Whiting was commissioned surgeon thereof, and spent six weeks in examination of the men while the regiment was being gathered in camp at Racine. The experience gained in previous hospital work was here used to the advantage of the service, and such men as were accepted proved equal to the hardships of active military life. The regiment was ordered to Memphis, Tenn., to take part in the expedition against Vicksburg, via Grenada and Jackson, Miss., and Surgeon Whiting was detailed for special service near army headquarters. When the change of program was made, and the army moved by way of the Mississippi river, a large hospital was established at Milliken's Bend, nearly opposite Vicksburg, in which Dr. Whiting was made chief executive officer, under Surgeon Franklin. At the end of three weeks Dr. Whiting succeeded Dr. Franklin as Surgeon-in-Chief, and the latter returned to his division. The importance of this position may be understood in view of the fact that it was the largest general hospital in the Mississippi valley below Cairo. It contained about three thousand persons, and was a model for good order, discipline and thorough attention to and care for the wants of its inmates. The executive ability there displayed was noticeable in many ways other than maintaining good order and thorough discipline, which are the foundation of success. Its supplies for daily use were obtained from every available point, a work in itself of no mean magnitude. Not only the quantity but the quality was scrupulously regarded, and an abundance was provided for all; yet, when the hospital was closed, in September, 1863, after an existence of seven months, there stood to its credit in the commissary department, as an unexpended balance, the handsome sum of $10,000, which had been saved to the government by economy in the hospital administration, and which afforded proof, also, of the liberality of the government in providing for its hospital department. When the books were closed, and returns made to Washington, the accounts were found clear and correct.

In November, 1863, Dr. Whiting was made Surgeon-in-Chief of the military district of Natchez Miss., with headquarters at that city. The hospitals were found to be in a demoralized condition, but in a short time order was restored. The district became infected with smallpox, which spread with great rapidity among the citizens and colored troops, but special hospital accommodations were at once provided, and further progress of the disease was averted. The necessities of the case required our subject's appointment by the military authorities as mayor of the city, which office he ably filled for some months, when his health gave way, and a return home became inevitable, and he was honorably discharged from the service in July, 1864. He was brought home on a cot, attended by a trusty servant, and was a long time an invalid.

In 1865, after a quiet rest at home, Dr. Whiting resumed, so far as his strength would allow, an active professional life, in which he has been engrossed ever since, with few interruptions. He is still affected in some degree by the hardships of his army life. He is honored by his professional brethren as an able and successful practitioner, and in 1875 was unanimously chosen president of the Wisconsin State Medical Society. He enjoys the confidence and respect of his fellow citizens, but has never sought any but social honors. In private life he is a Christian gentleman, whose career is without blemish. He is the true friend of the unfortunate inebriate, and has given much time and thought to the temperance question, strongly advocating total abstinence as the only wise and safe rule for the general public. In various ways he has proven that the duties of an able physician, a true philanthropist, and a good citizen, are not at all incompatible. The public schools of Janesville and State institutions have in various ways shared his interest and efforts. For five years he filled the office of secretary of the Wisconsin Institution for the Blind, of which he was a trustee many years. For ten years he was health officer of the city of Janesville. His papers read before the State Medical Society have always received attention, and he has always advocated a high culture in literary attainments for young men who propose to enter the medical profession. He is clear and strong in expression, with no redundant ornamentation, on every occasion, and his utterances are worthy of preservation. His addresses to the Chippewa Indians are models of clear and wholesome admonition.

In 1893 Dr. Whiting was elected medical director of the Department of Wisconsin, and re-elected in 1894. In 1895 he was elected surgeon-general of the Grand Army of the Republic without a dissenting vote. In presenting his name to the Encampment Gov. Hoard of Wisconsin said: "In presenting this name I desire to say simply, that Dr. Whiting is one of the most prominent members of the Grand Army in our State; that he bears a medical record second to no man in the army; that his services during the war were of the most arduous character, and were discharged with most excellent ability; and, if he is elected, he will prove an honor to this body, and of great usefulness in the discharge of its work."

In personal appearance Dr. Whiting is tall, erect and commanding, and his presence is calculated to place every one on his good behavior. Without any pendency or affectation, he enforces upon all the conviction that they are in the presence of a gentleman. For many years he has been a warden of Christ Episcopal Church, in Janesville, and, as an evidence of the estimation in which he is held in the diocese, it may be mentioned that Bishop Kemper appointed him a member of a committee of three on "Church Literature" for the Diocese of Wisconsin. In political affairs he has always adhered to the Democratic party. Early in 1889 he was appointed, by President Cleveland, as a member of the commission to treat with the Chippewa Indians for the sale of their reservations at White Earth, Red Lake, Leech Lake, Fond du Lac and Vermilion Lake, in Minnesota, to the government. This was an undertaking attended with no small difficulties, on account of the suspicions of the Indians, who had been frequently defrauded by dishonest traders and agents of the government. The great heart of Dr. Whiting went out to those oppressed people, in whom he found human souls, and he soon won their confidence, materially aiding in securing their assent to the government's plans.

Dr. Whiting is now assisted in his practice by his son, Joseph B. Whiting, Jr., who is a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Chicago (1887). His other children are Frances Hungerford, now wife of Edward Eugene Spalding; and Mary Louise, wife of John Kelly.

MORGAN J. AKIN, a well-to-do retired farmer of Rock county, Wis., has a home at No. 53 Ruger avenue, Janesville, which he has fitted up with all the appliances that conduce to the comfort and peace of modern life. He has led a long and honorable career, has worked and saved, played a man's part in the great struggle for success, and now that the shadows are lengthening down the vale he has a right to a few restful years.

Mr. Akin was born in Cayuga county, N. Y., Nov. 10, 1836, a son of Edward and Adeline (Morgan) Akin, both natives of that State. They had three sons and six daughters, and the following children are now living: Lucy Ann, wife of O. L. West, of Johnstown, Wis.; Morgan J.; Levanjah, wife of A. E. Wilcox, of Harmony township, Rock county; William F., of Whitewater, Wis.; and Emily W., widow of John Hicks, of Janesville. Edward Akin, who was a farmer, came to Wisconsin in October, 1843. He spent two years in Janesville, to give his children the privilege of the schools, and then bought 120 acres of government land, which he converted into a productive farm, and made his home there until his death, which occurred in 1877. He was seventy-four years and eleven months old, and his wife survived him one year, also reaching the age of seventy-four. They were both Universalists in their religious faith, and were people of fine character and habits. Ira Akin, his father, was born in New York, of Scotch-Irish descent. His father owned slaves, and he was his father's overseer; the slaves were freed by the State when New York blotted that shame from her statutes. Ira Akin grew to manhood, married in New York, and reared a family of six children. When his wife died he broke up his home and journeyed West to Sandusky, Ohio, where he made a new beginning, married again, and died in middle life. Jacob Morgan, the maternal grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was a native of Connecticut, and moved to Cayuga county, N. Y., where his younger children were born, and where he died, at the age of eighty-seven. He was a farmer, and was eighteen years old when the war of the Revolution closed. In that war his father was a soldier, and his maternal grandfather a colonel of militia.

Morgan J. Akin was not quite seven years old when his parents came to Wisconsin and here he grew to manhood, and has lived to the present time, always following the occupation of a farmer. When he became of age, in company with J. E. Gleason, he bought eighty acres of land in LaPrairie township, Rock county, each buying forty acres. Some years later he sold his land to Mr. Gleason, but the original forty had grown to 120 acres. Having closed up this deal very successfully, Mr. Akin bought a tract of land comprising 240 acres in Harmony township, which under his careful tillage became a model farm, and continued to be his home until 1896. That year he sold one-half of it, putting the other half into the charge of his son Frank (who has proved himself a very capable farmer), and moved into Janesville to spend his last years quietly and peacefully. He owns a fine residence property, and is very nicely "fixed."

Mr. Akin and Miss Martha White, a daughter of Aaron and Bracey White, were married May 4, 1859. They had three sons and five daughters: Sybil Ann, Reno C., Elsie E., Lettie W., Clifford M., Ida H., Lois M., and George N. Sybil Ann married Walter Wilber, and lives in Harmony township; two children have been born to them, Ethel and Eleanor. Reno C. married Christina Corbin, and lives in Helena, Mont. Elsie E. is first matron in the Illinois Training School for Nurses at Chicago. Lettie W. is unmarried, and lives in Dane county. Clifford married Miss Ida Edden, and lives in Rock township. Ida, Lois and George are still single. Ida is at home, Lois is a stenographer in Chicago. George was a soldier, serving in the Philippines, and now makes his home in southern California. Mrs. Martha Akin, the first wife of our subject, died Feb. 6, 1872, at the age of thirty-six years. Mr. Akin married Miss Eliza Gallup, a daughter of Gideon and Maria (Wagner) Gallup, March 30, 1876, and they have two children, Frank W. and Lucy M. Frank married Elizabeth Driscoll, and is in charge of the home farm; they have one child, Morgan J. Lucy M. is a teacher, and lives at home. Mr. Akin belongs to the A. O. U. W. Politically he is a Republican, cast his first vote for John C. Fremont, and has never missed voting since. He was supervisor of the town of Harmony six years, chairman of the town board two years, town treasurer one year, clerk of the school district fifteen years, and has always been an active and public-spirited man.

The parents of Mrs. Eliza Akin were natives of New York, where they were married. They had a family of four sons and two daughters.

ters, and three of their children are now living: Andrew, of Sharon, Wis.; Henry, of Janesville; and Mrs. Akin. The father was a capable carpenter. He came to Wisconsin in the early 'fifties, and located at Johnstown, where he followed his trade for some time, later moving to Mauston, where the family lived seventeen years. At the expiration of that period they came back to the southern part of the State, and settled at Richmond, Walworth county. There Mrs. Gallup died in the fall of 1875, at the age of seventy-two. Her husband then broke up his home, and went to live with his daughter, Mrs. Akin. He died under her roof in 1894, at the age of eighty-eight. He was a man of much intelligence, a great reader, and a fine historian. His father, Gideon Gallup, was born in Connecticut, and came from Scotch-Irish ancestry. His emigrant ancestor, John Gallup, came to America in 1630, with two of his brothers, in company with their cousin Humphrey, from Plymouth, England, in the ship "Mary and John." They left England March 20, and arrived at Hull, Mass., May 30. Mrs. Akin's maternal grandfather, Henry Wagner, came to this country and settled at Rome, N. Y., where he died while still a young man, leaving two daughters and one son.

JACOB OSCAR VAN GALDER, now retired from active business life, and living at No. 105 Sharon street, Janesville, Rock county, was born in Genesee county, N. Y., Feb. 6, 1834, a son of Jacob and Rhoda (Wilson) Van Galder, natives of Vermont and New York, respectively. They had eleven children, of whom our subject is the only one now living.

Jacob Van Galder began his business career working by the month in New York, and later became a manufacturer of potash. In 1839 he moved to Montville, Medina Co., Ohio, where he continued the potash business, and did coopering and other things as opportunity came to him. Some twelve years later he moved into Michigan, and lived first at Coldwater and afterward at Hillsdale. About 1850 he came to Wisconsin, and located in La Prairie township, Rock county, where he bought 400 acres of land, converted it into a farm, and died there some eight years later, at the age of sixty. He served for a time in the war of 1812. He was always industrious and thrifty, and became quite wealthy. His father, Jacob

Van Galder, was a descendant of one of four brothers who came to America in the days of the Puritans. He was in the French and Revolutionary wars, and was a great hunter. He was a pioneer in western New York, and lived to be nearly one hundred years of age, spending his last days at Montville, Ohio. The maternal grandfather of the gentleman whose name begins this sketch was a native of New York, and died in middle life. He was a farmer, a prominent man, and was known in his neighborhood as "Judge" Wilson.

Jacob O. Van Galder spent his boyhood and youth in Ohio and Michigan. He helped his father clear several hundred acres of land, learned the cooper's trade from him, and followed that trade a number of years. He came to Rock county with his parents in about 1849 or 1850, and continued working with his father until the latter's death. Our subject's education, begun in Ohio, was continued in Michigan, and was finished in Rock county. He farmed in that county two years after the death of his father, and then went to Iowa, locating at Charles City, where he engaged in teaming and threshing for three years. He came back to Rock county to let his brother Foster go to the war. He farmed in La Prairie township for a time, and then moved to Magnolia, living there four years. Then he came into Janesville, bought his present home property, and has lived here ever since. He has been a hard-working and upright man, and is much respected by all who know him.

Mr. Van Galder and Miss Arlina Cronk, a daughter of Blanner H. and Nancy (Robinson) Cronk, were married Sept. 15, 1868. They have had four children, Edith May, Fannie, Aurilla and Oscar Burr. Edith May is unmarried. Fannie married Thomas Chrisman, and lives on a farm in the town of La Prairie; they have one daughter, Helen Aurilla. Aurilla married William James, and they have one son; they live in Elgin, Illinois. Oscar Burr is unmarried, and lives at home. Mr. Van Galder is a Republican.

Mrs. Van Galder's people came from New York and settled in the town of Magnolia, Rock county, about 1852. Her father died in 1893, when eighty-three years old, and her mother in 1873, at the age of sixty-eight. Their family consisted of twelve children. They were farming people all their lives. Abraham Cronk, the paternal grandfather of Mrs. Van Galder, was a native of New York, and a soldier in the war of 1812. He died in Rock county, at the age of eighty-four. Samuel Robinson, her maternal grandfather, was a native of Maine, and lived to old age.

LUTHER WILLIAM KENDALL, a retired business man of Beloit, Rock county, now passing his last years in well-earned repose. has a handsome and commodious residence at No. 540 Bluff street, in the college city, where he entertains his friends and takes the comfort that belongs to him after an earnest and active life.

Mr. Kendall was born in the town of Leon, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., March 29, 1835, son of William and Dorathy (Van Auker) Kendall, both natives of the State of New York. The Kendall family is of English origin, and its history in this country begins with the arrival of three brothers of that name from England, about 1710. They located near Boston, married, and after a time separated, and their descendants are to be found scattered throughout New England. John Kendall, a son of one of the three brothers, was born in 1725, in Connecticut. His son, David Kendall, grandfather of our subject, was born Nov. 17, 1754, in Connecticut, and died about 1838, in the town of Leon, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y. He served in the war of 1812, and had sons who served the Union during the war of the Rebellion. By occupation he was a farmer, and he was an upright and hard-working man. He married Sally Eustace, and their family consisted of ten sons, the three eldest born before their removal to New York—Samuel, Feb. 10, 1786; James, Aug. 9, 1788; David, Jan. 22, 1791. On June 1, 1793, the family started for what was then the West, and John was born June 30, 1793, in New York. On Nov. 1, 1793, they set out for Milford, Otsego Co., N. Y., where they arrived Nov. 6, and settled, and where were born: Seth, Nov. 22, 1794; William, Oct. 8, 1796; Amos, April 23, 1799; Stephen, Feb. 23, 1801; Lemuel, Feb. 28, 1803; Luther, Sept. 14, 1805. Samuel engaged in farming and preaching in western New York; he died Feb. 24, 1859, in Avoca, Wis. James, a cooper by trade, died May 4, 1845, in Michigan. David, who was a soldier in the war of 1812, died March 26, 1865, at Avoca, Wis. John, a physician in New York and Ohio, died in the latter State June 2, 1873. Seth died March 11, 1833. Amos, a farmer and wagon-maker, died about 1890, in Minnesota. Stephen, a blacksmith and gunsmith, died May 5, 1858, in Ellicottville, N. Y., unmarried. Lemuel died March 19, 1843, in Pennsylvania. Luther died in Springville, Wis., about 1892.

William Kendall was a farmer and dairyman, removed to Pulaski, Iowa Co., Wis., in 1854, and carried on his farming and dairy operations in this State very successfully. After a number of years he gave up active labor, and went to Michigan to live, and in 1873 came to Beloit to make his home. Here he lived until his death, in 1885, at the age of eighty-nine years. His wife's death occurred five days prior to his, when she was eighty-one years old. They were members of that branch of the Christian Church which is known as the Christian Connection, and were highly spoken of by all who knew them. William Kendall enlisted in the war of 1812, but saw no actual service. While in New York he was postmaster for fifteen years, and held the office of justice of the peace twenty years; was one of five road commissioners, and assisted in laying out some of the most important roads in Cattaraugus county. A daughter, by his first marriage, Mary A., Mrs. Boyle, died Jan. 3, 1894, at Beloit. To Mr. Kendall's marriage with Dorathy Van Auker were born five children, four sons and one daughter, Luther William being the only one of the family now living. The Van Aukers were natives of New York, of Holland ancestry. Grandfather Van Auker was a farmer, and died in middle life. He married a German woman, who could not understand his Dutch, nor could he understand her German; so, perforce, they had to converse with each other in English. They had at least four children.

Luther William Kendall grew to manhood in Cattaraugus county, and the greater part of his boyhood and early manhood was spent on the paternal farm. He attended the district school and the academy, and prepared for an active business life. His father owned three farms at one time, and had three sawmills in operation, and the young man lived mostly at home until he married, and the time came for him to set up another roof tree. When he was nineteen years old Luther William accompanied his parents on their migration into Wisconsin, and this State has been his home ever since, with the exception of about a year and a half spent in Minnesota, and about the same period in Michigan.

Mr. Kendall and Miss Nancy Preston, a daughter of William and Margaret (Becker) Preston, were married March 22, 1855, and they have had four children, William H., Alelia, Albert and Flora. William H. (now deceased) married Miss Mabel Walker, and had two children, Edith F. and George; the latter died when small. Alelia died in Michigan, when two or three years old, and Albert died in Beloit, when about seven years of age. Flora is the widow of Wesley Love, and lives in Beloit; she has one living child, Mildred. Mr. Kendall belongs to Morning Star Lodge, No. 10, A. F. & A. M., and to Myrtle Lodge, No. 10, I. O. O. F. He is a Republican, and takes pride in the fact that he cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln, and has voted a straight ticket ever since.

After his marriage Mr. Kendall came to Beloit and acted as State agent for a fire insurance company. He was instrumental in organizing the Home Insurance Co. of St. Paul, and spent a year and a half in Minnesota engaged in working up a business for that concern. After a year and a half he sold out his interest in the company, and moved to Calhoun county, Mich., opening a general store at Ceresco. He did not feel entirely satisfied in that business, and, having a good offer, sold out after eighteen months and returned to Beloit, and has lived here ever since. For some years Mr. Kendall and Thomas Purves were associated in the cigar business, employing between twenty-five and thirty hands. About 1878 the partnership was dissolved by mutual consent. Mr. Kendall and his son William continuing the business together until the death of the son moved our subject to give it up entirely. Mr. Kendall was then insurance adjuster for nearly three years, but, feeling the touch of advancing age, concluded to give up active business and take his ease for such farther period of life as should be his. Mr. Kendall has filled many important local offices, and has been generally recognized as one of the leading citizens of the place. He has been a member of the city council nine years, for five years has been on the county board, and for the past five years has been county supervisor from the Fourth ward of Beloit. His home on Bluff street is thoroughly modern, and a handsome residence. He owns a number of dwelling houses in the city which he rents, and two summer cottages on First Lake, near Stoughton, in Dane county, where he and his friends are accustomed to spend delightful days in midsummer.

ADAM THORBURN, a retired farmer and scientist of Janesville, Rock county, is one of the wealthy and prominent residents of that city, who, having spent their earlier years in hard work, are now enjoying their declining days, removed from the wear and tear of active business life.

Adam Thorburn was born in Bovina, Delaware Co., N. Y., Dec. 11, 1837, a son of George and Margaret (Glendenning) Thorburn, natives of Scotland. The paternal grandfather of our subject, also named Adam, was a native of Scotland, born in 1765, and came to America in 1818 with his wife, Jennette Patterson, of Scotland, and four sons and four daughters, settling in Delaware county, N. Y., where he died, aged about seventy-two. While a resident of Scotland Mr. Thorburn was a mail carrier, carrying both mail and government bank notes, but after coming to this country he became a farmer. The maternal grandfather, James Glendenning, also a native of Scotland, came to America in 1827, locating in Delaware county, N. Y. Later, in 1850, he migrated to Wisconsin, settling in Center, Rock county, where he followed farming for a year, when he died, aged about seventy. James Glendenning married Jennett Hysleph, and six daughters and one son were born to this union. Mr. Glendenning's father married a sister of Patrick Henry.

George Thorburn, the father of our subject, who was a farmer by occupation, came to America in 1818, settling in Delaware county, N. Y., and in 1854 migrating to Janesville, Rock county, where he bought a farm of 280 acres. Here he resided until his death, which occurred in 1882, when he was aged seventy-seven, his wife having passed away in the spring of 1851, aged thirty-seven. Both of these worthy people were Presbyterians in religious faith. While in New York State George Thorburn was a member of the State militia. Thirteen children were born of their marriage, four sons and nine daughters, two of the latter now living: Jeanette, widow of James Brown, of Janesville; and Belle, wife of Alexander Atchinson, of Spring Brook, Oregon.

Adam Thorburn lived in Delaware county, N. Y., until he was ten years old, when his father removed to Red Hook, Dutchess county, N. Y., where they remained until 1854, when the family removed to Wisconsin. All of his education was obtained in the district schools, he working during the summer upon his father's farm, and remaining thereon until he was twenty-three, though he also worked for others. At that time he and his brother James purchased the homestead; later Adam bought out his brother, and cultivated the farm himself until 1897, when he removed to his present pleasant home at No. 207 Pearl street, Janesville, and rented the farm. This property now contains 240 acres, although at one time it consisted of 280, but Mr. Thorburn sold forty acres of timber, reducing it to its present proportions. In addition he possesses considerable property in Janesville, including his residence.

On September 21, 1881, Adam Thorburn married Mrs. Hannah Ellis, widow of Arthur Ellis, and daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Ragg) Grundy, and there were two children born to them, Mary E. and Hannah K. On March 24, 1897, Mrs. Thorburn died, aged fifty years, and her untimely demise was deeply lamented.

Politically Mr. Thorburn is a Republican, and is very highly esteemed by all who know him. Having always taken an interest in science, of late years Mr. Thorburn has devoted himself to taxidermy, and has a number of very fine specimens of his skill at his home.

JOHN E. GLEASON. The pioneers of Wisconsin were a sturdy race of men, descendants of early settlers in the Eastern States. Some came West in their youth, their only capital consisting of active brain, strong muscle and a cheery willingness to attain independence through the avenue of hard labor. The subject of this review is a fine specimen of the self-made and prosperous farmer of Rock county, in which he has resided since 1856. He was born in Chautauqua county, N. Y., Jan. 19, 1836, son of William and Polly (Smith) Gleason.

Jacob Gleason, the paternal grandfather of our subject, was a native of Massachusetts, of English ancestry, migrated to Chautauqua county, N. Y., and there died at about the age of eighty years. He was a trader by occupation. He married Mehitabel Hudson, and had a family of seven daughters and one son.

Daniel Smith, the maternal grandfather of our subject, was also a native of Massachusetts, but of Dutch descent. He was likewise a trader, and lived to the age of ninety-seven years. He had two sons, John and Daniel, and three daughters, all of whom lived in Massachusetts.

William Gleason, our subject's father, was born March 11, 1799, in Massachusetts, and was a stone-mason by trade. He migrated to Chautauqua county, N. Y., and there died at the age of seventy-three years. His wife, who was born July 20, 1799, died at the age of sixty-eight years. She was a Methodist in religious faith, while her husband was a Universalist. To their union were born eleven children, six sons and five daughters, of whom six are now living, namely: Betsey, widow of Philo Green, of Erie, Penn.; Matilda, wife of O. C. Moon, of Sharon, Wis.; Charles S., of near Jackson, Mich.; John E., our subject; George H., of Cassadaga, Chautauqua Co., N. Y.; and Daniel L., of Grand Rapids, Michigan.

John E. Gleason, our subject, was reared in Chautauqua county, where he attended the common schools. At the age of twenty years he came West to seek his fortune in the new country, and reached Janesville, Rock Co., Wis., March 24, 1856. He began his career as a farm laborer in Harmony township, and worked by the month for three years. Then, in 1859, he bought forty acres of land in the town of La Prairie. With this beginning he has acquired a splendid property of 200 acres, located in Sections 15 and 16, La Prairie township, his home being in Section 16. Mr. Gleason has brought all this property to a high state of cultivation. He has erected a fine residence, good barns, and other buildings, and ranks as one of the most successful and progressive farmers of the township.

On Feb. 29, 1860, Mr. Gleason married Miss Achsah A. Goodson, daughter of William and Esther (Cook) Goodson, English farming people who migrated with their large family to America, locating first in Madison county, N. Y., and in 1856 coming to Wisconsin, where they arrived March 24. For a year he lived in Jefferson county, then moved to Rock county, where he died in 1875, aged eighty-eight years, surviving his wife a number of years. To Mr. and Mrs. Gleason were born five children: (1) Livona C., a teacher, lives with her father. (2) Urban E., who married Elizabeth Benedict, is a farmer, and lives in Section 15, La Prairie township. They have two sons, Ray and Jay. (3) Ruby L., a teacher, is now teaching at Shopiere. (4) Nellie, who married Edward H. Paul, of Janesville, has five children, Ora, Stanley, Clayton, Norman and Kennith. (5) William E. lives at home with his father. Mrs. Achsah A. Gleason died June 30, 1898, aged fifty-six years.

Politically Mr. Gleason is a Republican. He is chairman of the town board of supervisors, in which office he is now serving his sixth year; for many years he has served as school director and also as school treasurer and clerk; and has been eight years president of the Rock County Agricultural Society. Fraternally Mr. Gleason is a member of Janesville Lodge, No. 55, F. & A. M. He is not only one of the old settlers of La Prairie township, but one of its most prominent and influential citizens, intimately associated with its official history, and zealous in the promotion and preservation of all good measures for the public welfare.

JOSEPH B. WHITING, M. D., JR., is one of the younger physicians and surgeons of the city of Janesville, Rock county, whose youth is far more than atoned for by his profound medical acquirements, and his conceded scientific spirit. He is devoted to the "healing art," and the cure of the sick is the noblest mission that can absorb the enthusiasm of a high soul. Dr. Whiting has come to the practice of his great profession prepared by a thorough training in those centers where medical study has become a passion, and those who come under his ministrations feel that they are getting the best that the medical skill of the present day affords.

Dr. Whiting, Jr., was born in Janesville Oct. 23, 1865, and is a son of Dr. Joseph B. Whiting, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this work. He grew to manhood under his father's roof, and inherited a love of medicine from his father, who has been a tower of strength in a host of homes in this community. Young Joseph attended the public schools and Milton College, Wisconsin, and from an early age expected to become a physician. He studied for his profession at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, the Medical Department of the State University, Chicago, and was graduated from that institution in 1887. His abilities were such that he was selected by Dr. Nicholas Senn as an interne in his private hospital, and spent one year under the eye of that eminent surgeon. At the expiration of that time he returned to Janesville, and entered upon the practice of his profession in the place of his nativity. Many friends watched his career with interest, and were glad to welcome him home. Dr. Whiting, Jr., makes his home with his parents. He is independent in political relations. He has been a member of the National Guard, and for seventeen years has served the State as an efficient member of this valuable organization, being at the present time major and surgeon of the 1st Regiment. When the Spanish-American war broke out he accompanied the 1st to Cuba, and spent fourteen months in the United States service, half a year in Cuba. Much of his time was spent in Jacksonville, Fla., and when peace returned he came back to Janesville and resumed the practice of his profession. For twelve years he has held the position of local surgeon for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co., and is reputed one of the most efficient members of the surgical staff of that great corporation.

TRUMAN T. LEE, a retired farmer of Evansville, Rock county, has had a long and useful life. He has kept close to the soil, and by its tillage has made a living for his active years, and has accumulated a handsome competence for his old age. He is much respected for his upright character and his generous disposition.

Mr. Lee was born in Oswego county, N. Y., Oct. 12, 1827, and is a son of Thomas and Lucinda (Wagh) Lee, both native to the soil of New York. They had six sons and one daughter, and five of their children are now living: Truman T., of Evansville; John P., of White Fox, Ohio; George F., of Magnolia, Wis.; Squire Norman, of Lorain county, Ohio; and Andrew P., of the same county. The father was a canal contractor in his early life, and in later years became a farmer. In 1833 he moved to Lorain county, Ohio, where he bought a farm of ninety acres, increasing same by subsequent purchases until he owned a farm of 140 acres. There he reared his family, and there he died in 1877, at the age of seventy-eight years. His widow survived many years, and died Feb. 5, 1894, at the age of eighty-two; she was born in 1811. Both were members of the Regular Baptist Church. He was a man of prominence, and was called upon to fill various town offices in his active years. Thomas Lee, his father, was a native of Herkimer county, N. Y., of English descent, and lived to be old. He reared a large family. The maternal grandfather of Truman T. Lee, a native of New York, died in middle life. He had a family of two sons and one daughter.

J. B. Whitig Jr.

Truman T. Lee was reared in Ohio, five miles west of Oberlin, spent his boyhood and youth under the parental roof until grown, and attended the district school. When he assumed the burden of his own support he worked out for wages, and carefully saved his earnings until he was able to buy a fifty-five-acre farm in Lorain county. This place he almost cleared of the native growth of timber, and then rented it, that he might make a protracted visit to Illinois and Wisconsin. He returned to his farm, and was engaged in its tillage for six years. In 1864 he came to Rock county, Wis., and here purchased a farm of 127½ acres in Porter township. Later he bought land to make this an even quarter-section, and here he lived until 1878, when he rented his farm and moved into Evansville, that he might spend the rest of his days in the enjoyment of the comforts which in a hard and industrious life he had richly earned. He has sold his farm, and owns a fine home in the city. For some two years he was engaged in the grocery business. He opened a bakery, but on account of failing health was compelled to dispose of it, and live a retired life. He owns a number of town lots, and takes a commendable interest in public affairs.

On Aug. 25, 1850, Truman T. Lee and Miss Julia A. Low, daughter of Henry Smith and Rachel (Baldwin) Low, were united in marriage. They became the parents of one son and two daughters, Smith T., Corris Lilly and Mary Lucinda. Smith died when he was two years old. Corris Lilly married Shasta E. Barnard, and is the mother of two children, Fred (deceased) and Orland K. Mary Lucinda married Guy Barnard, a cousin of her brother-in-law, and they have three living children, Lee Wayne, Mabel and Lloyd; one is deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Lee hold to the Baptist faith. He is a Republican, has served as supervisor, and was school director while living in the country. He has lived in Rock county over thirty-six years, and has a host of friends.

Mrs. Lee's father was born in Massachusetts, and her mother in New Jersey. They were farming people, and were the parents of seven children, of whom only two are now living, Lyman W., of Albion, Ill., where he has practiced medicine over forty years; and Mrs. Julia A. Lee. The father died in 1852, at the age of seventy-two, the mother died in 1848, at the age of sixty-seven. They were both Baptists. Mrs. Lee's paternal grandfather, Samuel Low, died at Plattsburg, N. Y., during the war of 1812. Her maternal grandfather was Levi Baldwin.

T. L. EDWARDS, M. D., one of the rising young physicians of Cuba City, Grant county, who has built up a promising practice, and is destined to be numbered among the leading representatives of the medical profession in Wisconsin, was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, in March, 1865, a son of T. J. and Margaret (Thomas) Edwards, natives of South Wales.

These worthy people came when young to America, where they were married, and settled in Ohio. The father worked as a mate on an Ohio river steamer for a number of years, and then purchased a farm in Van Wert county, that State, where he lived until his death, in 1872. The good mother survived until 1892; both were consistent members of the Presbyterian Church, leading Christian lives. From the time he cast his first vote Mr. Edwards adhered to the principles of the Republican party. To himself and wife were born: John, well educated in several schools and colleges in Ohio, is now principal of the Venedocia (Ohio) schools; he married Miss Mary A. Jones, of Ohio, but has no family. David H., now a resident of Venedocia, where he is the leading political factor, serving as county commissioner, notary public, etc., is in the real-estate business; he married Mary D. Jones, and has five children. Sarah, now wife of D. J. Evans, resides in Venedocia, where Mr. Evans conducts a harness establishment, and is postmaster; they have two children. Margaret died when fifteen. R. F. first studied theology, and later entered the ministry, being ordained in 1897, and sent to Canton, China, by the Presbyterian Church, from his native State, Ohio; he married Miss Eunice Edwards, of Cincinnati, a college graduate, who accompanied her husband to China; they have no family.

Our subject received his preliminary education in the schools of Ada, Ohio, and the Indiana Normal School, in 1890 entering Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, from which he graduated in 1894. In June, of the same year, he came West, locating at Cuba City, where he has built up a large practice, and been very successful with his cases.

In January, 1900, Dr. Edwards married Miss Anna R. Hogan, of Cuba City, a daughter of Denis and Annie Hogan, old pioneers of this locality, where Mrs. Edwards was born and reared. Politically Dr. Edwards has inherited his views, being as ardent a Republican as his father before him. Dr. Edwards is an active member of the Masonic fraternity at Georgetown, where he is very popular. From earliest childhood he has been brought up in the Presbyterian faith, and shows in his upright life the effects of early teachings.

THOMAS LAPPIN, deceased. This name will be readily recognized by any one familiar with the history of the city of Janesville, Rock county, as that of a gentleman long known as one of the ablest business men and most upright citizens of that place. Thomas Lappin was born in County Meath, Ireland, May 12, 1812, son of William and Ann (Walsh) Lappin; his father was an only son, and his mother an only daughter. They had a family of three sons and one daughter. Our subject's father was a farmer, and emigrated to the United States many years ago, settling first in New York, and afterward in Michigan, near Detroit. He lived some years in that city, and died in Chicago, when on his way to visit his son, Thomas, then living in Wisconsin, when over eighty years of age.

Thomas Lappin was but a small boy when his parents brought him to this country. At Detroit he grew to manhood and learned the printer's trade, which he followed some years in the metropolis of Michigan. He came West to Janesville, Wis., some time in the early thirties, and engaged in general merchandising, being the first merchant of Janesville. He was in business for many years in that city. Retiring for a time from the store, he spent a few years on the farm; his health returning he came back to the city, and built what has been known for some years as the Apollo block. Having sold his farm, he put up the Lappin block, on the southwest corner of Main and Milwaukee streets, which building is now owned by the Hayes Brothers, and is regarded as one of the finest office buildings of the city. For some years our subject derived a very handsome rental from these buildings.

When Mr. Lappin came to Janesville he boarded at the old "Stevens Hotel," now known as the "Myers House," where he made the acquaintance of the lady who afterward became his wife, Miss Mary Jane Jackman, daughter of Timothy and Esther (Cooper) Jackman. They were married Nov. 2, 1847. Mrs. Lappin's parents were among the very early settlers of Janesville, and her father was one of the most prominent men of the city. Four daughters were born to Mr. and Mrs. Lappin, Emma Amelia, Ella Josephine, Mary Esther and Harriet Maria. Emma Amelia married Edwin F. Carpenter, who is an attorney in Janesville; they have two sons, Edward Lappin and Henry. Ella Josephine married Henry Doty, a manufacturer in Janesville, and became the mother of one child, that lived one year, she dying at its birth, in 1873; Mr. Doty afterward married his sister-in-law, Mary Esther, and to them were born two children, Lawrence Lappin and Harriet Mildred. He died in 1894. Harriet Maria married E. M. Hyzer, a lawyer in Milwaukee.

Thomas Lappin died March 29, 1891, aged seventy-nine years, leaving behind him the record of a noble and useful life. In religious faith he was a Roman Catholic; his widow is an Episcopalian. He would not take public office, though he was a Republican, and took a strong interest in the welfare of his city and State. His manners were quiet and perhaps reserved, but he was cordial towards his friends, and popular with all. At his death a friend wrote as follows concerning him:

"Among those foremost in contributing to the prosperity of Janesville was the venerable gentleman whose death all Janesville mourns to-day. He was born of Irish parents in County Meath, Ireland, May 12, 1812. Mr.

Lappin early emigrated to this country, and while yet a lad we find him in the office of a newspaper in Detroit. After gaining a fair knowledge of the 'art preservative,' his inclinations drew him westward, and about the month of Dec., 1838, he landed in Janesville, which at that period of time was an almost unbroken wilderness. In June, 1839, he and Mr. Lind-sley Ward, who died in Milwaukee a number of years ago, opened a store in a frame building fourteen feet square and a story and a half high, on the present site of Bennett's block, on Main street. The stock was invoiced at three hundred and fifty dollars, and comprised such articles as are to be found in the country store of the present day. The partnership was dissolved after a few months' duration, and in 1840 Mr. Lappin rented of Volney Atwood a small frame building and opened a regular store. He was the pioneer merchant of the town. It was said in print years ago that 'another formidable enterprise for these early times was the erection of a frame building by him on the corner where his large blocks now stand—a monument of his industry and enterprise. By personal labor and industry he so far completed a portion of his building as to call it a store, and then we find him returning from Chicago with a stock of dry goods, groceries and hardware, all paid for and costing him one hundred and twenty-five dollars.'

"Mr. Lappin bought some sugar and molasses in Galena, Ill., at an expense of fifty dollars for transportation, and then walked to Chicago to buy his dry goods. When he had made his purchases, and the goods were invoiced, it was found that he had exceeded his money by fifteen dollars, and the house refused to trust him for that amount.

"These were the days when John P. Dixon, Henry F. Janes, Judge William Holmes, Charles Stevens, Luke Stoughton, Dr. Guy Stoughton, John Langdon Kimball and Gen. Sheldon were the principal citizens of this burgh. The frame building occupied by Ward & Lappin, the frame dwelling owned by John P. Plummer, and Janes' log tavern were the only buildings on the west side of Main street. On the east side there were the stage house, a little frame house occupied by Janes, a frame on the site of Fredendall's block, and another frame on the courthouse square. The residence of Judge Holmes was the only frame building on the west side of the river. In 1841 D. A. Richardson opened a store a few feet north of Mr. Lappin's establishment, and early in 1842 Mr. Lappin built a two-story frame store on the present site of Lappin's block, and took in as partner Mr. W. H. H. Bailey, and remained in business several years. In July of that year Janesville contained two stores, ten dwellings, two taverns, and between seventy and eighty inhabitants. Later on Mr. Lappin erected a large and slightly block, which is one of the most substantial and stately business blocks in the city, and forms one of the four corners which are the pride of our citizens and the admiration of the stranger within our gates.

"Mr. Lappin was a man honest as the day is long. He always had a pleasant word and a kindly greeting for everybody. He would scorn to do an unkind act, and was often spoken of by young and old, rich and poor, as one of God's noblemen."

Mrs. Thomas Lappin still lives in the beautiful home at No. 252 Park Place, which she graces and beautifies by a sunny disposition, a cordial welcome to a mighty host of friends, and an exemplary and cheery life that knows not how to grow old; for although now in her seventy-second year she seems many years younger, and her faculties are unimpaired.

ERNEST C. HELM, M. D., of the firm of A. C. & E. C. Helm, physicians and surgeons, of Beloit, Rock county, has won a high standing in his chosen profession, and is regarded as one of the leading representatives of his calling in the southern part of the State.

Dr. Helm was born in Beloit May 1, 1855, and is a son of Woodhull and Mary A. (Clark) Helm, whose family history is quite fully narrated in the sketch of Dr. Arthur C. Helm elsewhere in this volume. Woodhull Helm moved to Illinois with his parents when a boy, and settled with them at Pine Creek, where he lived a number of years. When a young man he learned the trade of plough-making, and followed that business for several years at Byron, Ill. He had intended to enter college at Beloit, when his father's death changed all his plans and drove him into business. In 1849 Mr. Helm and Miss Mary A. Clark, daughter of Elijah and Sybil (Green) Clark, were married in Beloit. Rev. Alfred Eddy being the officiating minister. He was an old friend of the family, and the wedding was the first to be celebrated in the First Presbyterian church of Beloit. Mrs. Helm had come West some two or three years before with her brother, Dr. Elijah N. Clark, intending to make her home in this city. A few days after her arrival, however, she was visited by Mrs. Dr. Bradley, of Byron, formerly her favorite teacher in the East, who asked her assistance in a select school at Byron, both as a teacher and an inmate of her home. This offer she gladly accepted on account of the strong friendship that had existed between them. There she became acquainted with Mr. Helm, and in due time the acquaintance ripened into love, and they were married. A little later Mr. and Mrs. Helm moved to Beloit, where he continued plough-making. About 1852 he went to California and operated a sawmill for two years at Nevada City. By that time he had enough of the "golden West," and returned to Beloit. In 1855 Mr. Helm moved himself and family to Indiantown, Iowa, where he was engaged in running a sawmill, and combined with it a gristmill. It was a cold, wet year, and Mr. Helm contracted diseases by which his health was seriously undermined. To recover it he journeyed to California a second time, and while there wrote valuable articles for mining and other journals. He was sick while doing this work, but he had a sunny spirit, and his presence cheered all with whom he came in contact. From California Mr. Helm was sent to New York by a mining company to look after their interests. When he had accomplished their work he went to Cabarrus county, N. C., to engage in gold mining, taking his family with him. He was there two years, when illness drove him north to Rockford, Ill., where he died in the home of Dr. Lucius Clark ten days after his arrival, at the age of forty-five. He was a man of character and conviction. He served as an elder in the Presbyterian Church at Carson City, Nevada, and was county superintendent of schools in Tama county, Iowa.

Dr. Ernest C. Helm graduated from the Beaver Dam (Wis.) high school in 1874, took a special course in chemistry in the college at Beloit, and graduated from the Chicago Medical College in 1879. After he had received his diploma he won the position of house physician and surgeon of Mercy Hospital in competitive examination against a number of the brainiest young men of the city, who aspired to this position for its rare opportunities. He practiced a year at Byron, Ill., and seven years in Chicago, and while in that city was one of the attending staff of the medical department of the South Side Dispensary. With his hard work and fine scholarship at the college, his year at Mercy Hospital and his seven years' service in connection with the Dispensary, Dr. Helm has had rare opportunities to acquire a thoroughly practical knowledge of his profession. In 1888 he came to Beloit to enter into a medical partnership with his brother, Dr. Arthur C., and the associations thus formed have proved in every way profitable and satisfactory.

Dr. Ernest C. Helm and Miss Elizabeth Hunnicutt, a daughter of John and Martha (Bundy) Hunnicutt, were married at Carthage, Ind., March 23, 1887, and they have three children, Olive, Berwyn and Ernestine. The Doctor and his wife are members of the First Presbyterian Church of Beloit and he is one of the elders of that body. He belongs to the Wisconsin State Medical Society and the Central Wisconsin Medical Society, and is deeply interested in everything that relates to the progress of the art to which he has given his life. He is a member of the Beloit school board, and politically is a Republican. Dr. Helm has a pleasant home at No. 740 Broad street, and both he and his brother are great lovers of out-of-door sports, and handy with the rifle, shot gun, fishing tackle, sailboats, etc., enjoying their kindred recreations. They have summer cottages at Lake Kegonska and the family are all good swimmers, even to the little girls.

ARTHUR C. HELM, M. D., of the medical firm of A. C. & E. C. Helm, physicians and surgeons, is one of the best known and most highly regarded practitioners of the healing art in the city of Beloit, Rock county. He is in the prime of life, commands a large and remunerative practice, and has a host of friends throughout the city and county.

Dr. Helm was born in Indiantown, Iowa, Oct. 23, 1857, and is a son of Woodhull and Mary A. (Clark) Helm, natives of New York and Amherst, Mass., respectively. They were the parents of five children, all sons—Dr. Ernest C., Dr. Arthur C., Dr. Walter B. and two who died in infancy. The father was a miller. He was gifted with a profound enthusiasm for scientific studies, and became an expert upon all subjects relating to mining. He was a correspondent for mining publications in the West and Southeast, and traveled extensively in California, Nevada and North Carolina. While he was in the last-named State he was seized with a very severe illness. He came North, but he could not arrest the progress of the disease, and he died in Rockford, Ill., in 1870, at the age of forty-five years, two weeks after leaving North Carolina. His widow still survives, and makes her home with her son, Dr. E. C. Helm, in Beloit. She and her husband were Presbyterians. They were the first couple married in the First Presbyterian Church of Beloit. Mr. Helm was county superintendent of schools in Tama county, Iowa. He was always a Republican.

Woodhull Helm, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of New York. He was a man of unusually artistic temperament, fond of music, and had a reputation as a composer. He was twice married, was the father of a large family, and died when about sixty-seven years old. Elijah Clark, the father of Mary A., noted above, was a native of Massachusetts, and of English descent. He was a farmer, and in the early days moved to the western part of New York, where he died of fever when over fifty years old. He had seven sons and one daughter who grew to maturity.

Dr. Arthur C. Helm spent the first seven years of his life in his birthplace, and was then taken by his parents to Marshalltown, Iowa, where he lived two years. Two years he spent in Cabarrus county, N. C., and five years at Beaver Dam, Wis., where he entered the service of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway Co. as telegraph operator, and spent six years of his life with that company. His longest service as an operator was made in Beloit, and there he formed associations and interests that largely determined his location there as a physician in after years. He attended the public schools of Beaver Dam and the Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill., and was graduated from the medical department of that institution with high honors in 1884, taking first prize for scholarship throughout the entire course. The same year he began practicing in Beloit, in partnership with Dr. H. B. Johnson. In 1887 the firm was dissolved, and Dr. Helm practiced alone until 1889, in which year he formed a partnership with his brother, Ernest C., who is a capable physician, and they have continued together until the present time.

The wedding ceremonies of Dr. Arthur C. Helm and Miss Mary McMurdo, daughter of James and Ann (Reed) McMurdo, were celebrated Aug. 10, 1886, and four children have come to bless this union—Harold, Alice, Clara and Mary. The Doctor and his wife are members of the First Congregational Church, and he is associated with the Knights of Pythias. He is a student and an enthusiast in his profession. He belongs to the American Medical Association and to the Central Wisconsin Medical Association. Politically he is a Republican, and at present represents the First ward in the city council. He lives at No. 734 Broad street, and his home is the center of many social and friendly interests.

JOSEPH WILLIAM BATES, of Beloit, Rock county, is a prominent member of the legal profession, and has a reputation throughout the State of Wisconsin for conspicuous ability as a general practitioner of the law. He is thoroughly versed in the fundamental principles of his profession, and his judgment of the right and equity is unusually strong.

Mr. Bates was born in Janesville, Wis., July 14, 1852, a son of Allen C. and Sarah H. (Banks) Bates, natives of New York and Maine respectively. They were the parents of seven children, five of whom are now living: Joseph William; Edwin Ellsworth, of Edgerton, Wis.; Ina L., of Des Moines, Iowa; George H., of Chicago; and Louise Helen, wife of Rev. E. L. Eaton, of Des Moines. The father, an attorney at law, came to Wisconsin in 1843, settled at Janesville, and engaged in the practice of law in that city until his death, in 1891, at the age of sixty-nine; he was born at Sacket's Harbor, N. Y., Nov. 12, 1822. His wife died Nov. 9, 1894, aged sixty-two years. Both were Methodists. Allen Cole Bates was about twenty-two years old when he came to Janesville, and from the first was a recognized leader in the community. Four years after his arrival he married Miss Sarah H. Banks, who proved a faithful and devoted wife. Mr. Bates was alderman of the Second ward for the first twenty-one years of the city's existence. He filled the office of justice of the peace many terms, and served on the county board before the incorporation of the city. He was a member of the State Legislature in 1862, 1863 and 1867. In 1859 he was admitted to the Rock County Bar, and proved himself a man of sound judgment in his long and brilliant career. He had a kindly greeting for his friends, and lent a helping hand to the poor. His funeral sermon was preached by his son-in-law, Rev. Dr. E. L. Eaton; the pall-bearers were Judge John R. Bennett, J. J. R. Pease, A. A. Jackson, E. F. Carpenter, Pliny Norcross, and L. F. Patten. Mr. Bates was a leading lawyer, and owned at one time the finest residence in the city. He built thirteen business blocks in Janesville, in whose progress he was extensively interested. His father, Orin Bates, a farmer, was a native of New York, and son of Caleb Bates, and died in his native State. He had a family of nine children. The history of the family runs back many generations in America, to the arrival of an ancestor from Holland, who settled in Dutchess county, N. Y. The maternal grandfather of our subject, Joseph Banks, was a native of Maine, and of English descent, being in the eighth generation from William Banks, who was a physician in Lincolnshire, England, and at one time a sheriff of the county. He had a son to whom he gave the name of Joseph, and this name was repeated in each of the eight following generations. Joseph Banks came to Wisconsin in 1847, and lived in Janesville, where he practiced medicine several years, also engaging in the same vocation in Winnebago county. He was the father of six children. His death occurred at Omro, Wis., when he was quite old. He was a Democrat.

Joseph William Bates spent his boyhood and youth in Janesville, and attended Lawrence University, at Appleton, Wis., three years, and the Northwestern University, at Evanston, Ill., two years. He was admitted to the Bar Feb. 5, 1875, and practiced law at Janesville until 1890. On Jan. 6, 1890, he removed to Beloit, where he opened a law office and has followed the practice of his profession to the present time. He is a Republican, and exercises a wide influence in local affairs. Mr. Bates was elected judge advocate of the Janesville Guards at the organization of the company, and was commissioned judge advocate of the 1st Regiment at the time of its formation. He drafted the bill, and secured its passage, that changed the name of the Wisconsin State militia to the Wisconsin National Guard. This was done in the Legislature of 1878, when he was a clerk in the State Senate. Mr. Bates has held many important clerkships in the Senate and General Assembly of the State. He was assistant chief clerk of the Senate in 1883.

L. HOLDEN PARKER, now retired from business life, and living at No. 747 Parker avenue, Beloit, Rock county, has for years been one of the most influential and valuable citizens of that important Wisconsin town. He has always been active and aggressive in every enterprise that sought the public welfare, and some of the most important improvements of the past twenty-five years, that marked the passage of Beloit from a village condition to an urban life, have very largely been accomplished through his unceasing determination that the city should go on and fulfill its natural destiny.

Mr. Parker was born in Belvidere, Ill., Nov. 30, 1848, and is a son of Charles H. and Eleanor (Stone) Parker, natives of Massachusetts. He is their only child now living. Charles H. Parker was a manufacturer of cutlery in Concord, N. H., in his early manhood. He moved to Belvidere, Ill., in the spring of 1848, and took up a farmer's life for a time, taking charge of Dr. Stone's farm, near the city. In the spring of 1849 he footed it to Beloit, and secured work with Barker, Love & Co., in their reaper factory, receiving the munificent wages of a dollar a day. Every Saturday night he was accustomed to walk back to Belvidere, and return on the following Monday morning. In 1850 he moved his family to Beloit, where he resided until his death, in 1890. Charles H. Parker is remembered as one of the most important factors in the business development of Beloit that it has ever known. In 1852 he started in business with Gustavus Stone, in the manufacture of hoes, and they were together until 1878, under the firm name of Parker & Stone until 1874. That year they incorporated under the name of the Parker & Stone Reaper Co. They manufactured mowers, reapers, harvesters and binders until the fall of 1878, when they went out of business, and in 1879 the business passed into the hands of Mr. Parker's son, L. Holden Parker, and Fred A. Dennett, who formed the firm of Parker & Dennett. They moved the plant to Milwaukee in the summer of 1881, and were the first to manufacture harvesters and binders in that city, employing a large force of workingmen—at times almost two hundred. The following year Mr. Parker disposed of his interest and returned to Beloit. That was the beginning in Milwaukee of the Milwaukee Harvester Co., an institution that is now known all over the United States.

In 1882 Charles H. Parker and his son L. Holden founded the Second National Bank of Beloit, and the father was its president until he died, at the age of seventy-five, March 14, 1890. Mrs. Eleanor Parker, his wife, died March 24, 1900, aged eighty-one years. Mr. Parker was deeply interested in the growth of Beloit, and did much to aid in the establishment of hopeful business enterprises in the city, by both moral and financial assistance, making liberal contributions to various industrial and educational institutions. He was a Universalist in his belief, and his widow held to the same broad faith. His father was a sea captain, and died a very young man, when his son Charles was a small boy. Mrs. Charles H. Parker's father, Jonathan Stone, is mentioned elsewhere.

L. Holden Parker was but little more than a year old when his parents came to Beloit, and his life since that time has been passed in the city, with brief exceptions. He passed through the public schools, graduated from the academy, and in due time entered Beloit College, with the intention of taking the full course. Ill health, however, interfered, and he was compelled to abandon his course at college after making a fine beginning. He was a clerk in the office of the Merchants' Express Co. for a few months, and then went into a shoe store as clerk, with the object of buying the business after he had mastered its details. He gave that up, and for four years was bookkeeper in the office of Parker & Stone. By that time his health had resumed its normal tone, and he felt he could prepare himself for a professional life. He went to Ann Arbor, Mich., and, entering the Law Department of the University of Michigan, was graduated as a capable student of the law, and in 1875 was admitted to the Bar. Mr. Parker opened an office for the practice of law in Beloit, and followed his profession for four years. In 1879, as noted above, he was associated with Mr. Dennett in the removal of the reaper factory to Milwaukee, and its safe establishment on a larger scale, and in 1882 he assisted his father in the organization of the Second National Bank. L. Holden Parker was its first assistant cashier, at its opening. He became cashier, and succeeded his father as president of the institution, serving as such for a number of years, and in January, 1900, disposing of his entire interests to Mr. Strong; he is not now actively interested in any business.

On Oct. 15, 1885, L. Holden Parker was united in marriage with Miss Elinor Dudley, a daughter of William L. and Mary (Doak) Dudley, and they have had two daughters, Elinor and Carolyn. They are members of the Episcopal Church. Mr. Parker is a Republican, is at present a member of the Lower House of the State Legislature, and is serving his fifth term as a member of the Beloit school board, with which he has been connected for a period of fifteen years. He has served on the library board since its organization, and was its president for one year. His father, Charles H. Parker, was mayor of Beloit, and it was through his casting vote that the present water works system was secured. Both father and son have always been identified with every forward movement.

MARY LLOYD EWING, M. D., of Evansville, Rock county, is a distinguished member of the homeopathic school of medicine, and has built up a large and lucrative practice in the city and vicinity. She was born at Zilwaukee, Mich., near Saginaw, a daughter of Charles H. and Lucy (Green) Ewing, natives of Vermont and New York, respectively. They had four daughters and two sons, and three of their children are now living: Dr. Mary L.; Ella, wife of Herman Langemak, of Evansville; and Robert, of Gladstone, Mich., a conductor on the Northern Pacific road. The father was a merchant in Zilwaukee for a number of years. His father came to Genesee county, Mich., when Charles H. was a child, and the latter spent the greater part of his youth at Flint, Mich., where he grew to manhood, obtaining his education in Detroit and Flint, and he was a school teacher before his marriage. His wedding was celebrated at Flushing, Mich., and he subsequently went to Zilwaukee and established himself in a general mercantile business. He was postmaster at that place three or four terms, receiving his commission from President Lincoln. He spent his last years on his father's farm near Flint, and died there in 1870, when only thirty-seven years old. In religious connection he was an Episcopalian, and his wife a Congregationalist.

Ezekiel Ewing, our subject's grandfather, was a native of Vermont. He was one of the first settlers in Michigan, surveyed and laid out all the roads and towns in Genesee county and some in neighboring counties. He also engaged in farming. He was the father of two sons, and died when young. Robert Green, the father of Mrs. Lucy Ewing, was a native of New York, of English descent, and lived to be sixty. He was a lumberman by occupation, and in his home in Michigan became quite noted. He married Rachel Taggart, and they had four daughters. Mrs. Green was of Puritan stock, and was born in Massachusetts, of which state her father, a Congregational minister, was also a native; he was at one time a member of Congress. The Taggart family has a long and honorable history in Massachusetts.

Dr. Ewing lived in Flint until she was about eight years of age, when her father died. Soon afterward the family moved to Appleton, Wis., where our subject grew to womanhood, attending the public schools and later Ripon College. At the age of eighteen she secured entrance into the Cook County (Chicago) Hospital, and had two years' training as a nurse. She was also in a private hospital at Memphis, Tenn., for six months, and the next six months had charge of the male department of the insane asylum at Dunning, Ill., after her retirement from that position engaging in private nursing for a time. By this time she had gained such an insight into the practice of medicine that she thought it wise to go farther, and learn the science and art itself. She matriculated at Hahnemann College, Chicago, was graduated in 1892, and at once began to practice in that city, where she was engaged two years. She then came to Evansville, liked the place, and opening an office for the practice of her profession, has remained there to the present time, and has a wide circle of friends and patrons. She has a general practice, and stands high in her profession; belongs to the Wisconsin State Medical Association and attends the meetings of the Northern Illinois Medical Society and the Chicago Medical Society, before both of which bodies she has read papers, and has been highly complimented for her grasp of the subject and her power of expression. Dr. Ewing has a finely appointed office on Madison street, where she and her mother reside. She belongs to the Congregational Church, is active in Christian Endeavor work, and has charge of the banner Junior Endeavor Society of the State.

ELLIOTT D. BARNARD, Evansville, Rock county, has been in the leaf tobacco business many years in Evansville, and his name is widely known as that of a thoroughly honorable and trustworthy business man. Owing to his age and health he is now retired from an active commercial life, and is living in the enjoyment of the ample fortune that he accumulated through industrious habits and wise management in bygone years.

Mr. Barnard was born in Chautauqua county, N. Y., seven miles from the city of Dunkirk, Aug. 27, 1827, a son of Thaddeus and Hannah (Goldsborough) Barnard, both natives of the Empire State. Four sons and four daughters were born to them, three of whom are now living: Jane, widow of Judge William Woodbury, and now living at Gowanda, N. Y.; Thaddeus, of Smith's Mills, N. Y.; and Elliott D., of Evansville. The father, who was a farmer, moved from Whites-town to Chautauqua county, in the same State, where he died Feb. 6, 1829, at the age of forty-four. His widow survived many years, and died in that county May 2, 1862, at the age of seventy-three. She was a devout member of the Baptist Church. Both our subject's grandfathers were natives of New York, and reared large families.

Elliott D. Barnard grew to manhood under the parental roof in Chautauqua county, was reared on the farm, and attended district school. In 1847 Mr. Barnard came West and made a location in Rock county, Wis., four miles east of Evansville, where he bought a small farm of forty acres. This was afterward sold, and after his return from California, in 1853, Mr. Barnard invested in 160 acres in the town of Porter. He was a capable and pushing young man, and was not afraid of hard work. He found employment among the various farmers around him, putting in every moment he could spare at good wages, and presently became forehanded, buying 160 acres in the town of Center. He made his home in Porter, and there continued to reside until he moved into Evansville, in the year 1880. He is an extensive land owner at the present time, and holds the title to 320 acres of choice Rock county farm land.

Mr. Barnard, following the fashion of the adventurous and fortune-seeking men of the time, made the journey to California in 1850. He crossed the Plains, and spent three years in the land of gold, engaged in both farming and mining. In the spring of 1853 he returned to Rock county, and here he has since remained.

In the month of March, 1850, Mr. Barnard was married to Miss Susan Webb, the accomplished daughter of Joshua and Ann Webb, and five children were born to that union, Emma, Shasta E., Flora, Maude, and Charley D. Emma married Daniel Rogers, and they live on the old homestead in the town of Porter; they have four children, Claude, Zoe, Montfort and Florence. Shasta E. was married to Miss Lilla C. Lee, and has one child, Orland K.; he is a wholesale dealer in leaf tobacco in Evansville, and has achieved a large success in that line. Flora is Mrs. John Sperry, of the town of Porter, and the mother of two children, Olive and Fay. Maude married Frank Palmer, and is now living in Janesville; they have one child, Orian. Charley married Catharine Boylan, and lives in Evansville. Mrs. Susan Barnard died in 1863, and on April 19, 1873, Miss Jane Osborn became the wife of our subject. She is the daughter of James and Louisa (Ballard) Osborn, and is a lady of much character and intelligence. They have two children, Blanche and Bertha, both of whom are living at home. Mrs. Barnard is a member of the Methodist church. Mr. Barnard is a Democrat, was supervisor in the town of Porter some three terms, and was also assessor for one term.

Mr. Barnard and Thomas Hudson put up a large warehouse for the handling of leaf tobacco in Evansville in the fall of 1879. Two years later Mr. Hudson disposed of his interest in the enterprise to Shasta E. Barnard, and the firm then became Barnard & Son. They built a large brick warehouse, and entered upon an extensive business. In 1893 E. D. Barnard retired from active business, and the tobacco firm became Barnard & Wilder. They ship tobacco into almost every region of the world, and are growing wealthy.

Mr. Barnard is now living retired and enjoys the esteem of his many friends in Rock county, which has been his home since 1847. His wife's parents were natives of Canada, but have been residents of Rock county since 1864, and are still living in Evansville. They have had seven children, three of whom are now living, Mrs. Barnard; James W.; and Eliza, wife of Oscar Mabie.

LUDWIG KUMLIEN, M. S., Professor of Physics and Biology at Milton College, Milton, Rock county, inherited his taste for science. He was born in Jefferson county, Wis., March 15, 1854, one of the five children of Thure Theodore Ludwig and Marguerita (Wallberg) Kumlien, natives of Sweden, near Upsala. Of this family, three sons and two daughters, only two now survive, Prof. Kumlien and his brother Theodore, the latter occupying the old homestead in Jefferson county. The father, Thure Theodore Ludwig Kumlien, was a naturalist and teacher in Sweden, his native land, and in 1842 emigrated to America, settling on a farm in Jefferson county, Wis., near Sumner, where he reared his family. He was for a number of years conservator in the public museum in Milwaukee, making his home all the time in Jefferson county, where he died in 1888, aged sixty-nine years. His wife died in 1874. Both were Lutherans in religious faith.

Ludwig Kumlien, the grandfather of our subject, was army quartermaster in Sweden, and died there at an advanced age. He was the owner of several large estates, and was widely known. His family comprised sixteen children. The maternal grandfather of our subject, Mr. Wallberg, was a trainer of government cavalry horses in Sweden, in that capacity controlling a number of men. His family consisted of eleven children. He lived to exceed the age of eighty years.

The boyhood of our subject was spent on the farm in Jefferson county. Entering Albion Academy as a student, he graduated at the age of nineteen, in 1873. He was then for three years a special student in the scientific course at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, completing his studies in 1877. Immediately after he left school Mr. Kumlien joined the polar expedition under Capt. Howgate, as naturalist, and in the Northern seas rendered valuable service to the cause of science. His career since then has been one of active devotion to scientific pursuits. He was assistant to the United States Fish Commission and Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C., making for the former investigations on artificial propagation of food fishes, and for the latter extensive scientific collections in various Western and Northwestern localities of North America, and also in the Northern seas, 1877-78. He has been a member of the American Ornithological Union since 1875. He was instructor at Albion Academy from 1889 to 1891, and in the latter year became professor of physics, natural history and physiology at Milton College, with the Faculty of which institute he has since been prominently identified. He has made various contributions to science. He was a contributor to "North American Birds," by Baird, Brewer and Ridgway, in 1874, and to "Water Birds," by the same, in 1877-78; has been a contributor to ornithological and zoological publications since 1876; is the author of "Contributions to the Natural History of Arctic America," Bulletin No. 15, United States National Museum, 1879; was special agent, Tenth Census, United States, on Fisheries of the Great Lakes, and of Narragansett and Buzzard's Bays, 1879-81. He contributed "Life History of North Atlantic Seals," to Prof. A. J. Allen's "Monograph of North American Pinnipedia," in 1880; and was associate author "North American Food Fishes," National Museum, 1881-83. He contributed many scientific papers in reports of the United States Fish Commission and Smithsonian Institution Bulletins of National Museum, 1876-83; also in the publications entitled "The Auk," "The Nidologist," "The Osprey," and "Forest and Stream," since 1876. He is the author of Special Census Reports on Fisheries of the Great Lakes, 1883, and was Determining Collector for the Milwaukee Public Museum in 1886. He was a contributor to "Birds of Michigan" in 1893, and has prepared scientific collections for State Normal schools of Wisconsin and other institutions since 1895.

Prof. Kumlien married a Miss Carr, and they have three children, Ludwig Baird Carr, Lawrence Lorraine and Alice Lenore.

WILLIAM PORTER. Professor of Latin in Beloit College, Beloit, Rock county, is one of the older instructors of that excellent institution, and has a warm place in the hearts of the old student world. His years of experience have tempered his spirit and made him deeply sympathetic with the awkward endeavor of callow youth on the way of knowledge. He appeals to the nobler love of learning, and has had a mighty influence in arousing a zeal for learning in the classes before him, and under his magic touch the forgotten past reappears, and Cæsar and Cicero and Livy and Horace breathe again.

Prof. Porter was born in Lee, Berkshire county, Mass., Jan. 10, 1820, and is a son of William and Mary Ann (Quincy) Porter, both natives of Massachusetts. They were the parents of two sons and two daughters, and three of their children are now living: Prof. William; Samuel Quincy, of Unionville, Conn.; and Mary W., wife of Franklin Chamberlin, of Hartford, Conn. The father was a lawyer, and practiced his profession in Lee until his death, in 1853, at the age of sixty-one years. His wife died in 1835, and is remembered as a lovely Christian woman. William Porter was a member of the Congregational Church. He served in the State Legislature, and was also district attorney for the four western counties of the State a number of years. His father, who also bore the name of William Porter, was a native of Massachusetts, coming of English stock, and passed all his life in Hadley, Mass., dying at the advanced age of eighty-four. He was a physician and also a farmer. He reared a large family. The history of the Porter family in the town of Hadley runs back to 1656. Samuel Quincy, the father of Mary Ann, mentioned above, was also a native of Massachusetts, and of English lineage. This family settled the town of Quincy, in that State, and gave it the name. It was first called Braintree, but received its present appellation in compliment to the character and standing of the various members of the Quincy family.

Prof. William Porter was reared in the village of Lee, where he grew to manhood. He obtained his primary education in the public school, supplemented same by a course at the academy in the village of Hadley, and made his final preparations for college at the Lenox Academy. He matriculated at Williams College, was graduated from that noble school in 1839, and read law in his father's office for the following year. He entered the theological seminary at Andover for the purpose of preparing himself for the Christian ministry, and was engaged in study for three years, but lost his health and had to abandon all ideas of a ministerial life. Going to Florida to regain his health, he spent seven years in that State before he dared to return to the North and undertake again a studious life. He was employed for two years in Marietta College, a well-known Ohio school, and in 1852 came to Beloit to take a place in the college, where he has taught from that time to the present, and has now almost completed a half century of continuous service in the noble work of education.

Prof. Porter and Miss Ellen G. Chapin were married July 13, 1854, and four children have blessed this union, William, Frank Chamberlin, Mary Quincy, and one child who died in infancy. (1) William is a physician in Hartford, Conn.; he married Mrs. Fannie P. Hall, and they have one child, Margaret Chapin. Mrs. Porter had two children by her former husband, Robert and Bessie. (2) Frank C. is a professor in the Divinity School of Yale University. He married Delia Wood Lyman, and is the father of two sons, Lyman Edwards and William Quincy. (3) Mary Q. lives at home, and is a teacher of German in the Beloit high school. Prof. Porter and his wife are members of the Congregational Church. He is a Republican.

CHALMERS INGERSOLL, the able and popular editor and publisher of the Daily and Weekly Free Press, of Beloit, Rock county, was born in Westfield, N. Y., Oct. 29, 1838, and is a son of Thomas and Sarah (Walker) Ingersoll, natives of Massachusetts and New York, respectively. They were the parents of three sons and three daughters, all yet living, viz.: Lucy, wife of C. K. Judson, Washington, D. C.; Julia A., wife of G. W. Tandy, of Freeport, Ill.; Orton, of Rock Island, Ill.; Chalmers; Clementine C., wife of W. W. Bigelow, of Chicago; and Joseph W., of Bowie, Md. The father was a teacher in early life in the academy at Westfield, and left the school room to enter the employment of D. Appleton & Co., remaining with them some years. He died in New York in 1847, at the age of forty-four. His wife remarried, becoming Mrs. Dean. Mr. Dean died, and she was again married, to J. W. Dean, who is now deceased; he reached the age of eighty-six. Mrs. Dean died in September, 1897, at the age of eighty-three. From early life she had been associated with the Presbyterian Church.

The paternal grandfather of Chalmers Ingersoll was a native of New York, and of English descent. He was a ship captain, and was drowned at sea while still in middle life. He was the father of two sons and one daughter. Chalmers Ingersoll's maternal grandfather was a native of New York, also of English descent, and was killed in an accident when twenty-eight years of age. He married Dorcas Finn, who came of Dutch ancestry, and had four children.

Chalmers Ingersoll lived at Westfield until nine years of age, when he went to live near Brockport, N. Y. The young lad spent four years in that community and then went to Greenfield, Mass., to live with an uncle, Charles J. J., a newspaper publisher. Chalmers attended school, and when quite young went into his uncle's printing office to learn the trade of a printer, working in vacations and out of school hours. After he had become a capable printer he worked a year at the case in Springfield, Mass., and in 1856 went to Freeport, Ill., to work for his brother-in-law, C. K. Judson, a prominent newspaper man of that early day. Mr. Ingersoll spent two years with him and became widely known in the printing fraternity as a very capable workman—a reputation that brought him an invitation to enter the office of the Chicago Tribune. He was in Chicago at the breaking out of the Civil war, and early yielded to the patriotic fever that was in the blood of the North, enlisting in Company G, 8th Ill. V. C., and serving three years with the Union colors. When his term of enlistment had expired he re-enlisted as a veteran. He was discharged before the close of the war on account of serious and chronic illness. Mr. Ingersoll was in every respect a capable and gallant soldier, and participated in some of the bloodiest scenes in the history of the Army of the Potomac. He was at Gaines Mills, and all through the Potomac campaigns, in the battles of Fredericksburg, Antietam, and Gettysburg, and in hundreds of engagements that then were called skirmishes, but which in any smaller war would have been termed battles.

After his return from the field of battle Mr. Ingersoll came to Beloit, and started the Free Press in February, 1866. He made a good paper, won a considerable support, and in 1872 sold his printing plant to Col. Frank, and became interested in manufacturing. He was the first to put out the paper plates used by grocers, and for a number of years had almost a monopoly in paper goods. Mr. Ingersoll became a leading character in State politics, and his work was recognized by his appointment as sergeant-at-arms in the State Senate during 1879 and 1880. In 1882 he formed a partnership with H. F. Hobart, and resumed the publication of the Free Press. Mr. Hobart retired from business the latter part of that year, and Mr. Ingersoll has been alone since that time, and has published a strong Republican journal. He was postmaster of Beloit when Mr. Cleveland became President of the United States, and had held that office about twenty months, and as soon as the new administration could reach him he was promptly thrown out. Upon the accession of President Harrison Mr. Ingersoll was again put in charge of the postoffice, and when Mr. Cleveland was President a second time he as quickly retired. President McKinley appointed him a third time to that position, and in it he is still serving the Beloit public very capably.

On September 12, 1865, was celebrated the marriage of Chalmers Ingersoll and Charlotte B. Rinewalt, a daughter of Adam and Mary (Lehn) Rinewalt. They live at No. 627 Church street, where he built a home in 1887. Mr. and Mrs. Ingersoll are the parents of three children, George B., Charlotte, and Charles J. J. The last named died of cerebrospinal meningitis when sixteen months old. George B. was married to Miss Theresa Jenkins, and they have two children—Sara and an infant; he is assistant postmaster, and is a practicing lawyer. Mr. Ingersoll is a member of Morning Star Lodge, No. 10, A. F. & A. M.; Beloit Chapter, No. 9, R. A. M.; Beloit Commandery, No. 6; and Wisconsin Consistory, and in these various branches of Masonry has displayed a deep and intelligent interest. He is also a member of the Knights of Pythias.

JOHN E. ANTHONY, D. D. S., of Evansville, Rock county, is a very successful dentist, and has a large patronage. He is a man of irreproachable personal habits, a genial and social gentleman, and is fully abreast of the times in everything that relates to his profession.

Dr. Anthony was born in Watertown, N.

Y., April 19, 1845, and was reared in his native State, near Watertown. He attended the public schools, and was well educated along general lines of culture. He selected dentistry for his life work, took a course in a dental school in Philadelphia, and finished in the city of New York. Opening a dental office at Carthage, in his native State, he there followed his profession for about a year, but was compelled to seek other employment on account of ill health, and be outside of the office for three years. He was at Niles, Mich., for about one year, and in 1868 spent a few months at Evansville. Six years later he came back to this prairie city, and engaged in his profession, and here he has made his home to the present time.

Dr. Anthony and Miss Katie R. Whaley, daughter of John Whaley, were married Jan. 12, 1879. They occupy a pleasant home on Main street, and are highly thought of in the community. Dr. Anthony is prominent in fraternal circles, and belongs to various orders. He stands high in Masonic associations, and holds membership in Union Lodge, No. 32, A. F. & A. M.; Chapter No. 35, R. A. M., at Evansville; and Janesville Commandery, No. 2, K. T. He is also a member of Evansville Lodge, K. P.; T. L. Sutphen Post, No. 41, G. A. R.; and the Modern Woodmen, and is popular and welcome in these various associations. Dr. Anthony is a Republican. He enlisted at Watertown, N. Y., early in 1862, as a member of Battery D, 1st New York Light Artillery, and was discharged Dec. 4, same year, on account of serious disability. He took part in the battle of Malvern Hill, and in a number of skirmishes.

REV. WALLACE M. SHORT, the scholarly and devoted pastor of the Congregational Church at Evansville, Rock county, is a man distinguished not less for his ability as a pulpit orator than for his profound interest in everything that relates to the moral and spiritual welfare of the community. He is at once loyal to the denomination with which he is associated, and faithful to the larger church of which it is but a part.

Rev. Wallace M. Short was born at College Springs, Iowa, June 28, 1866, and is a son of James B. and Eugenia (Noe) Short, natives of Illinois and Ohio, respectively. They were the parents of three sons and two daughters, four now living: Rev. Wallace M.; Rev. William H.; Jessie M., a graduate of Beloit College; and Frank E., in business in Beloit; Alice, who died in childhood, was the eldest child. The father was a farmer, and made a location in Iowa in 1856, at College Springs. There he reared his family, in the quiet and strengthening surroundings of a rural life, and there he lived until 1894, in which year he gave up the farm and went to Beloit, Wis., to spend his last days. He is a deacon of the Congregational Church, and with his wife has long been a devout member of that religious body. Mr. Short was a soldier in the Civil war, and served as a member of the 8th Iowa Cavalry. He was in the battle of Franklin, Tenn., and altogether participated in about thirty engagements, great and small. During his active life James B. Short was a man of considerable prominence in local affairs, and held various township offices, meeting all responsibilities placed upon him to the satisfaction of all concerned. His father, John Short, was a native of Tennessee, of Scotch-Irish descent, and followed an agricultural life. He was born in the closing part of the eighteenth century, and moved to Granville, Putnam Co., Ill., while still a young man. He served in the Black Hawk war, was a man of character and energy, and lived to be fifty-five years of age. He reared a family of eight children. Ebenezer Noe, the father of Eugenia, referred to above, was born in Connecticut, and was of French descent. He was a farmer, and after he lived in Iowa carried the mails at an early day, on horseback. He was an early settler in that State, and is still living at College Springs, at the venerable age of eighty-nine years. He is the father of seven children, four of whom are now living. His father served in the war of 1812.

Rev. Wallace M. Short attained his manhood on the farm at College Springs, began his education in the local schools, continued it at Amity (Iowa) College, and was graduated from Beloit (Wis.) College in 1893, taking the full classical course. He made his theological preparation for the ministry at Yale, and received his diploma from that institution in 1896. The same year he was called to the pastorate of the Congregational Church at Evansville, and at once entered upon its duties. He has won a standing in this community, not only as a capable and earnest preacher and pastor, but as an enlightened and progressive citizen of the town. Mr. Short made his own way through college. He learned the cheesemaker's trade when quite a young man, and followed it at College Springs, and also at Maryville, Missouri.

The year 1896 is a memorable one in the history of Mr. Short. It was the year of his graduation from Yale, it was the year of his call to Evansville, and it was the year of his marriage. On July 8, that year, he wedded Miss Mary E. Morse, daughter of James and Jennie (Smith) Morse, the former born in Ohio, the latter in England. Her grandfather Morse, who is now residing in Racine, at the advanced age of ninety-three, was a relative of Samuel F. B. Morse.

DAVID B. WORTHINGTON, editor and proprietor of the Beloit Daily and Weekly News, has devoted his whole life to newspaper work. He was born in Centralia, Wis., Oct. 10, 1863, son of Ralph Cushman Worthington, a direct descendant of the Cushman who chartered the "Mayflower." Our subject's mother, Susan Compton, was a native of New York. The parents were pioneers of Wood county, Wisconsin.

Mr. Worthington graduated from the high school in his native town at the age of fifteen, entered a printing office, and has ever since been in one in some capacity. As a young man he did reportorial work on the Milwaukee Journal, Duluth Tribune, Seattle Post-Intelligencer, San Francisco Chronicle and Chicago Times-Herald. On these able journals he secured a first-class journalistic training, which fitted him for the conduct of his paper at Beloit, in which he secured a half interest Jan. 1, 1897. Early in 1900 he became sole owner, and to-day publishes one of the ablest dailies in the State, besides conducting a large job-printing establishment, equipped with modern presses designed especially for catalogue and two-color work. Energy is the keynote of Mr. Worthington's success in business. He came to Beloit with only experience and push for his capital, took hold of a practically defunct paper, and in four years built up a property worth many thousands of dollars.

ROBERT M. HUNTINGTON (deceased) was for many years a stock farmer in the town of Platteville, Grant county, and is remembered as a thoroughly honest and upright man, who amassed a considerable fortune by unflagging industry and careful management. He was known as a straightforward and reliable man, and a kind neighbor, of genial and social character.

Mr. Huntington was born in July, 1839, son of Richard and Mary (Myers) Huntington, both natives of England. Richard Huntington came to this State as early as 1834, and settled two miles south of Platteville, on the Darlington road. He owned seven or eight hundred acres of the finest farm land in the county, put up a large brick house and fine barns in 1860, and was continually engaged in the improvement of the magnificent rural estate. Both himself and wife died on this farm, she in 1846, and he in 1871. For his second wife he married Miss Lucy Coleburn, of Vermont, who died in 1895. There were six children by the second union: Ellen is Mrs. Henry Dorscher, of Platteville. Charles died when a young man. Frank married Miss Estabrook, and lives in Lafayette county. Laura married Philip Roundtree, and is now dead. Samuel lives at Sioux Falls, S. Dak. Caroline is the wife of John Spink, of St. Paul. The children of Richard and Mary (Myers) Huntington were as follows: William Morsby married Miss Sarah Robinson, and settled on a part of the old homestead, where he lived until his death, in 1860, leaving a wife and one child, Edward; the young man is now a hardware merchant in the State of Iowa. Richard died unmarried. Lydia A. married George C. Huntington, and lives at Luverne, Minn., where her husband is engaged in the real-estate and banking business; they have three children, Pearl, Laura (Mrs. Ladew), and Guy (of Colorado). Robert M. is mentioned below.

Robert M. Huntington was educated in the Platteville high school, and followed farming, settling on the old homestead after his marriage. He put up buildings that are both useful and attractive, having one of the pleasant homes in the county. Mr. Huntington married Miss Mary M. Stephens, who was born in 1844, daughter of William C. and Ann (Mitchell) Stephens. Her parents were born, reared and married in England, coming thence to America in 1842, the year of their marriage, and settling in Grant county, Wis.; they died in Platteville. Of their family of six children, Ali is a resident of Platteville; George, of Fairfield, Iowa; Amo, of Platteville; Mary M. became the wife of our subject; Thomas and Harlan are deceased. Mr. Huntington died in 1872, leaving his wife with five children: Selina, born in 1863, received her education in the Platteville high school; she is now the wife of Bryant Trenary, a farmer in the town of Platteville, and they have one son, Clyde, who is now a young man; their daughter, Laura, died at the age of eight years. Annie, the wife of Frank Trenary, is mentioned elsewhere in connection with her husband. Albert, born in August, 1867, married Miss Mary Kleibenstein, and has one daughter, Gertrude, born in 1895; they now reside on his father's old homestead. William, born in 1869, is unmarried, and at home. Nellie, the youngest child, died when she had reached the age of fourteen; she was a very bright and promising young girl, and her loss was deeply felt.

On Aug. 3, 1876, Mrs. Huntington married for her second husband Wesley Smith, and to this union three sons were born: Arthur, of Moline, Ill.; Lester, of the United States navy; and Frank, of Platteville. Mrs. Smith is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, where she and her family worship.

Mr. Huntington was a Democrat. He was a man of marked domestic habits, finding a world of pleasure in the company of his wife and children. In 1892 Mrs. Smith purchased a home in Platteville, where she lived until 1900, in that year returning to her country home. The various representatives of this family are all very prosperous, and own fine estates in Grant and Lafayette counties.

REV. PETER PAPE, priest of St. Andrew's Catholic Church, of Potosi, Grant county, is a native of Wisconsin, having been born in Springfield Corners, Dane county, Feb. 14, 1866, son of Frank and Susan (Schaffhausen) Pape. Frank Pape came to Dane county while a young man, married, and settled on a farm of unbroken land near Springfield Corners, where he resided until his death, in 1884. His wife is still living, residing in Dane county.

Rev. Peter Pape received his early education in the common schools of his neighborhood, and then entered St. Francis Seminary, at Milwaukee, and was ordained to the priesthood June 22, 1890, by Bishop Richter, of Grand Rapids. He was first stationed at Kenosha, Wis., as assistant, remaining there two years. His next charge was the Church of St. Hubertus and St. Augustine, at Richfield, Washington county, where he remained three years and eight months, coming thence to Potosi on April 27, 1895.

Rev. Peter Pape is a member of the Catholic Knights and St. Andrew's Benevolent Society. Although still a young man, our subject has shown a high order of ability as a priest, and has attached himself to his people in a remarkable degree.

ST. ANDREW'S CATHOLIC CHURCH, of Potosi, Grant county, was organized in 1846, Rev. Andrew Tush celebrating mass that year on the first Sunday in Advent. The congregation consisted of some twenty families, and the first church edifice was a small frame one, 20x30 feet, to which additions were made until it covered an area of 50x30 feet. Connected with the church from the beginning was a parochial school, which was in charge of a lay teacher, and later of sisters from various orders.

Father Tush was succeeded by the following priests: Rev. Schraudenbach, 1851 to 1855; Rev. Michael Beiter, 1855 to 1856; Rev. Joseph Polking, 1856 to 1857; Rev. T. M. Obermueller, 1858 to 1859; Rev. F. Zuber, 1859 to 1863; Rev. L. Lenox, 1863 to 1864; Rev. H. J. Muckerheide, 1864 to 1865; Rev. J. M. Albers, 1866 to 1868; Rev. M. De'Becke, 1868 to 1871; James Kleiber, 1871 to 1872; Rev. J. A. Mueller, 1872 to 1874; Rev. N. A. Thill, 1874 to 1877; Rev. A. Bruhin, 1877 to 1880; Rev. Joseph Dreis, 1880 to 1886; Rev. P. M. Grobschmidt, 1881 to 1890; Rev. August B. Salick, 1890 to 1895; and Rev. Peter Pape, the present incumbent.

The present church structure is built of brick, handsomely furnished, covers an area of 100x50 feet, and has a tower 12x14 feet beyond the main edifice. It was erected by Father N. A. Thill, in 1875, at a cost of $12,000. The old church served as a school for a time, but is now replaced by a handsome building, constructed in 1896, of brick, two stories in height, covering an area 80x32 feet. The ground floor consists of three large rooms, while the second is thrown into a hall. This building was erected at a cost of $4,200. In the church itself, the appointments are very costly, the high altar, put in by Father Salick, costing $1,200. The congregation numbers 165 families, and about 480 souls.

The school, which is one of the best in the diocese, is in charge of sisters of the Order of St. Francis, of Wisconsin. The attendance is from 150 to 155 pupils, and the course of study a very fine one. The church has an order of Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, J. P. Stelphfling, president; J. J. Tobin, secretary; August Franke, treasurer; and Jacob Duve, assistant secretary.

ST. THOMAS CATHOLIC CHURCH, Potosi, Grant county, celebrated its fiftieth anniversary in 1886, having been organized sixty-five years ago, in what was then the village of Van Buren, although at present not one of the original members is living, the last survivor, Celestine Kaltersbuch, having passed away since the half century milestone of the church was passed.

From 1836 to 1840 the tiny church was dependent upon missionaries, and among those who ministered to the faithful congregation during those early days were Rev. Mathias Doras, now bishop of Dubuque, Iowa, and Father Mazzuchelli, of Galena, where the records were kept until the church was fully organized at Potosi. The first church building was of logs, and stood on the site of the present village of Potosi. Later it served as a residence for a Mr. Ragan. On June 2, 1841, the records were brought to Potosi. Father Causse was the first priest in charge, staying from 1840 to 1854, during which time he baptized 475 people, and his congregation increased to 500 people. Following this good priest were Fathers Princeton and Martin Hubbs, and then Rev. J. N. Brogard, who remained until 1857. The next incumbent was Rev. M. W. Gibson, 1857 to 1861, who was followed by Father G. H. Brennan and Rev. W. H. Verhoef, the latter remaining until 1865. Rev. J. M. Albers remained from 1865 to 1867 and part of 1868. Later Rev. Nuits and Rev. Vivaldi officiated, and they were succeeded by Rev. Thomas P. Hodnett. Father James Kleiber followed, from 1871 to 1873; from 1873 to 1876 Rev. J. A. Mueller was in charge, and was succeeded by Rev. James Tiernan, 1873 to 1876; Rev. J. C. DeVine officiated from 1876 to 1880, at which time he died, and was buried June 1, 1880, at Potosi. For a short time during 1880 Rev. William Bernhard officiated, assisted by Rev. Joseph A. Dreis, and they were succeeded by Rev. Grobschmidt, Rev. A. B. Salick, and Rev. Peter Pape, the present priest in charge.

The present church building was erected by Father Causse, in 1847, at a cost of $8,000. It is a substantial structure of brick, covering an area of 36x56, and is two stories in height, with a steeple sixty feet high. The interior of the church is beautifully finished, while the high altar is a marvel of beauty. The building adjacent to the church was built prior to 1845, and was used as a female seminary by sisters from Dubuque until 1852. During Father Albers' incumbency arrangements were made to have St. Thomas made a mission of St. Andrew's, which condition exists to-day.

WILLIAM HENRY BORDEN. M. D., has for over forty-six years been a medical practitioner at Milton, Rock county, and is still actively engaged in his profession. His long residence at Milton has been one of wide usefulness and eminent success, broken only by his service in the army during the Civil war.

Dr. Borden was born in Sharon, Schoharie Co., N. Y., Sept. 24, 1824, son of James and Rebecca Combs (Craigie) Borden, and grandson of Peletiah and Ellen (Gordonier) Borden, the grandfather a native of New York, of English extraction, the grandmother of Holland parentage. They reared a large family, eight sons and five daughters. Peletiah Borden was by occupation a farmer and blacksmith, and lived to the age of over seventy-five years. He served a short time in the Revolution.

James Borden, father of our subject, was born in Sharon, N. Y., and was reared a farmer. He married Rebecca Combs Craigie, a native of Monmouth, N. J., daughter of a cabinet maker, and one of a family of seven children—three sons and four daughters. She was of Scotch-Irish extraction. James Borden acquired the tanner's, currier's and shoemaker's trades, which he followed for a number of years, devoting his attention chiefly to tanning. He died at Otto, N. Y., Nov. 13, 1850, at the comparatively early age of forty-eight years. His wife survived until October, 1893, passing away at the ripe old age of ninety-three years and seven months. Both in their younger years were members of a Presbyterian Church which was later merged into the Congregational Church. To James and Rebecca C. Borden were born seven children, five sons and two daughters, of whom the following survive: Dr. William H., our subject; Marietta, wife of Hurd Strickland, of Otto, N. Y.; Lyman S., of Milton, Wis.; Jay, of Springville, N. Y., and James Craigie, of Otto, New York.

The boyhood of Dr. Borden was spent in Otto, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y. where he was employed in his father's tannery when not attending school. He was a pupil in the common schools, attended the select schools at Gowanda, N. Y., and later for nearly two years was a student of the academy at Fredonia, N. Y. When his education was thus completed he taught school for three terms. Then, deciding to adopt medicine as his life work, he began study in the office of Dr. Levi Goldsborough, of Otto, later entering the Medical Department of the University of Buffalo, at Buffalo, N. Y., of which he was one of the first students, and graduating from that institution April 19, 1849.

Dr. Borden visited Jamestown, N. Y., with a view to beginning his practice in that town, but a few weeks later was offered a partnership with Dr. Wilcox, at Randolph, N. Y., which he accepted. This partnership lasted a year, and at its conclusion Dr. Borden practiced for two years at Scio, N. Y. The illness of his old preceptor, Dr. Goldsborough, of Otto, presented an opportunity for a partnership in that town, which was accepted. But a year later, in 1854, the young physician, now confident of his future, resolved to begin anew in the West. Locating at Milton, Wis., in that year, he has there continued in practice ever since, except during the closing year of the Civil war, when he served as surgeon of the 1st Wisconsin Heavy Artillery, until the regiment was mustered out. He at once resumed his lucrative practice at Milton, which he has ever since continued. Dr. Borden is a member of the Wisconsin State Medical Society, and of the Board of Examining Surgeons of the Pension Bureau at Janesville, and has been for many years prominently identified with the medical papers of southern Wisconsin.

Dr. Borden was married, Jan. 23, 1851, to Miss Lavina Depew Van Campen, daughter of Capt. Benjamin and Mary (Saunders) Van Campen. To Dr. and Mrs. Borden have been born three children: Mary Alice is at home with her parents. Emily A. married George Van Campen, of Olean, N. Y., and has one child, Benjamin. James B., a graduate of Milton College, classical course, and a post-graduate of the State University at Madison, is now superintendent of public schools and principal of the high school at Marshfield, Wis.; he married Miss Mary Alice Tompkins, and has one son, William Henry. In the present home at Milton the family has lived for the past thirty-one years. Since the Doctor's purchase of the property he has remodeled it throughout, making his one of the attractive and inviting residences of the city.

Dr. Borden and family are attendants of the Congregational Church. For a number of years he was a prominent Odd Fellow, but is no longer active in the order. In politics he is an independent. Dr. Borden is a much respected authority in Milton, not only professionally, but in all matters that pertain to the general welfare. His long residence in the thriving little city has made him a living factor in its growth from its infancy, and the elements for well-being, to which for nearly a half century he has contributed so generously, will remain and widen their influence long after his active life work has drawn to a close.

GEORGE H. GOLDMANN, postmaster at Annaton, Clifton township, Grant county, is one of the leading men of the community in which he has made his home for so many years, and in which he has been instrumental in promoting the material welfare of the people. Our subject was born in Linden, Iowa Co., Wis., Nov. 14, 1853, son of Freimund and Helena (Gundrum) Goldmann.

Freimund Goldmann was born in Prussia, Germany, and came to Iowa county, Wis., while a single man. He married, in Linden, in 1851, and bought a soldier's land warrant, locating 480 acres of land, at eighty-five cents per acre. This land he improved, and made his home there until his death, which occurred in January, 1892: his wife still survives, residing on the home farm. To them ten children were born: Ellen, now Mrs. Clauer, of Beetown; George H.; Agnes, now Mrs. Fitzsimons, of Montfort, Wis.; Mary, Mrs. J. Conroy, now deceased; Lydia, Mrs. Hilery, of Nebraska; Charlie, on the home farm; Louis, at home; Lena; Minnie; Emil, who died in infancy.

Our subject was reared and educated in Linden township, coming to Annaton Feb. 8, 1875, and learning the trade of wheelwright in the shop of William Kraemer, in a building erected by Mr. Kraemer in 1871. The business consisted of the manufacture of wagons, buggies and other vehicles, all of the work being done by hand, and this establishment Mr. Goldmann still carries on, in connection with farming and conducting the postoffice. For a few years Mr. Goldmann successfully operated a mercantile establishment, but disposed of that enterprise, owing to pressure of other duties.

On Sept. 23, 1878, Mr. Goldmann was married at Annaton to Miss Emma Kraemer, born in Philadelphia, Penn., a daughter of William Kraemer, a native of Germany, who came to Philadelphia, and thence in 1856 to Liberty township, Grant county, where he purchased forty acres of land, on which he erected a shop and embarked in a wagon-making business. Later he removed his plant to Annaton, built a shop, and also conducted a general store. Here he died in 1889, and his widow still survives, residing at Lancaster. To himself and wife were born eight children: Emma, Mrs. Goldmann; Kate, Mrs. Wetter, of Lancaster; Philopena, Mrs. Henry Sander, of Platteville; Lizzie, Mrs. Roethe, who died in Clifton township April 19, 1900; Mary, Mrs. George Damm, of Lancaster, who with her husband met with a frightful accident from an explosion of gasoline on Sept. 1, 1899, from which she died the following day, and he thirty-six hours from the time of the accident; Minnie, Mrs. Louis Stippich, of Wichita, Kans.; Louise, Mrs. Herman Bast, of Lancaster; and Caroline, Mrs. Kramer, of Lancaster.

The family of Mr. and Mrs. Goldmann is an interesting one: William L., Ernest F., Amelia J., Herbert H., George A., and Frieda H., all at home.

Mr. Goldmann is a staunch Republican, active in the affairs of his party, and has served most acceptably as postmaster for eleven years, having been appointed May 25, 1889, succeeding S. F. Moody, of Wingville. The office is quite an important one, having been established about 1865; and a considerable amount of business is transacted through it. In addition to his other offices and duties Mr. Goldmann was justice of the peace, having held that office eight years, and has been a notary public a number of years since. Few men in Grant county are more widely known, and certainly none is more highly esteemed, than Mr. Goldmann.

KIMBLE KILLAM, superintendent of the Rock County Insane Asylum and Almshouse, Janesville township, is a public official whose record shows that he has faithfully discharged the trusts heretofore reposed in him, and that he is a man to whom may safely be trusted the care of the unfortunates of his locality.

Kimble Killam was born in Milton, Rock county, Jan. 18, 1849, a son of Rush and Ada J. (Kimble) Killam, natives of Pike county, Penn. The paternal grandfather of our subject, Moses Killam, was a native of Pennsylvania, of Mohawk-Dutch descent. By occupation he was a farmer and surveyor, and he died at an advanced age. He had sixteen children. The grandfather on the mother's side, Burnham Kimble, was also a native of Pennsylvania, and of Mohawk-Dutch descent. The family resided in that state for several generations prior to the time of Burnham Kimble. By occupation he was a farmer, and he died when an old man; he had eleven children.

Rush Killam, the father of Kimble Killam, was a farmer, and migrated to Wisconsin in 1839, entering a farm from the government, in the northern part of Milton, in sections 1 and 2. This property he improved, and resided on it until his death, which occurred in 1871, when he was fifty-seven. His widow still survives, residing on a farm in Lima, owned by Kimble Killam. In religious belief Mrs. Rush Killam is a Methodist, while her husband was a Universalist. During his life Rush Killam was township supervisor and assessor. Five children were born to this worthy couple, one son and four daughters, four now living: Lucy A.; Kimble; Harriet, deceased, who was the wife of S. F. Minard; Cornelia I., wife of J. J. Neal, of Chicago; and Augusta, wife of August Dabbert, of Chicago.

Kimble Killam, our subject, was reared to manhood in Milton township, attended the public schools, and later went two terms to Milton College, after which he returned to his occupation of farming. After his father's death, when he was twenty-two, Kimble Killam rented the home farm for seven years, then purchased it, and after improving the property sold it in 1895, and bought the farm of 160 acres in Lima township which he still owns. Here he resided until he was elected, by the board of trustees, as superintendent of the Rock County Insane Asylum and Almshouse, which position he assumed on Feb. 1, 1900. Prior to this date Mr. Killam held various public offices, having been supervisor of Milton township a number of years; chairman of the town board several terms; assessor in Milton township for five years; and a member of the board of trustees of the Asylum for four years before he was appointed superintendent.

The buildings, which are very comfortable and spacious, were erected, in 1893, in Janesville township, about three miles north of the city of Janesville, near the Rock river, and are surrounded by the poor farm of 382 acres. The former location was in Johnstown township, but the present one is considered better adapted to the requirements of the institutions. The new buildings were occupied on May 1, 1894, and the average number of insane confined is about 150; those in the almshouse number about fifty-five.

On Dec. 18, 1873, Kimble Killam married Miss Mary A. Marquart, daughter of Philip and Nancy (Livingston) Marquart, and seven children, two sons and five daughters, have been born of this union: Grace C., Myrtie E., Inez M., Nellie M., Rush P., Mark and Eva. Mrs. Killam is a consistent member of and worker in the Baptist Church. Politically Mr. Killam is a Republican, and an earnest supporter of the principles of that party. The family is an old one in this part of Wisconsin, and very highly respected, and Mr. and Mrs. Killam enjoy the esteem of a large circle of acquaintances and friends.

HERBERT S. GILKEY, junior member of the well-known lumber firm of Pendleton & Gilkey, extensive wholesalers, with their general offices at Janesville, Rock county, is one of the younger business men of that city, whose youth is in years alone. He was reared in a lumber country, and the odor of the mills has been familiar to him from his earliest boyhood. He has been connected with the mills, travelled on the road, and there is little about the lumber business that is not well-known to him.

Mr. Gilkey was born at Oconto, Wis., July 4, 1868, and is a son of Harding W. and Mary (Overton) Gilkey. His father was born in Maine, while his mother is a native of Wisconsin. They had three sons and three daughters: Everett H., of Mountain, Wis.; Herbert S., whose name appears above; Susan, of Hayes, Wis.; Arthur, of the same place; Lucy, wife of William Cody, of Janesville; and Mabel, wife of F. Dickinson, of Green Bay. Harding W. Gilkey was but a small boy when he accompanied his parents to Oconto, Wis.; they were among the earliest settlers of that city. There he grew to manhood, and there he made his home until the spring of 1899, when he moved to Janesville. He is a man of much more than ordinary culture, and followed the life of a teacher for more than twenty years, serving as principal and superintendent of the Oconto schools, and as county superintendent. In middle life he engaged in business, keeping a general store, and buying and selling lumber lands in northern Wisconsin. Upon his removal to Janesville he gave up active business relations, and is now living a quiet and retired life. He and his wife are Methodists, and he is a Republican politically. His father, Samuel Gilkey, was a native of Maine, and came to Oconto about 1849 to engage in the hotel business. He was a man of more than ordinary ability, and was elected sheriff of Oconto county several terms. He died in 1872, when about sixty-one years old. His family consisted of three sons and one daughter. William Overton, the maternal grandfather of the gentleman whose life forms the theme of this biographical sketch, was born in Massachusetts, and was one of the early settlers of Kenosha, Wis. He had two daughters and one son.

Herbert S. Gilkey grew to manhood in Oconto, and was given fine educational opportunities, graduated from the Oconto schools, and later attended the Oshkosh Normal. He began teaching in a country school when he was fourteen years of age, and taught three years. At eighteen years of age he became a traveling representative of an Oconto mill, and for six years sold lumber. In 1891 he formed a partnership with Frank R. Pendleton, and engaged in business in Janesville, under the firm name of Pendleton & Gilkey, wholesale dealers in cedar products. Mr. Pendleton is located at Everett, thirty-three miles from Seattle, Wash., where they have extensive interests. They have several lumber yards in Wisconsin, and one in Michigan.

Mr. Gilkey and Miss Lenora Runkel, a daughter of Louis and Christina (Weber) Runkel, were married Oct. 15, 1890, and they have three children: Weber, Margaret and Helen. Mrs. Gilkey is a lady of many attractive qualities, and is a worthy associate of her husband, both in society and at home. They have an elegant and commodious home at No. 168 Garfield avenue. Mr. Gilkey belongs to Oriental Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and in his political relations is a Republican. He is at present serving his second term as alderman in the city council, from the Third ward, and is president of that body.

ALBERT G. KNUTSON is a prosperous and well-known farmer in the town of Clinton, Rock county, and is a man of generous impulse and kindly spirit. He is a native of the town, and has taken part in its history for almost fifty years, in which time tremendous changes have taken place, and southern Wisconsin, in his youth on the frontier line, is now in the very heart of the old Northwest. And the man whose name introduces this article has helped in the making of this new world. He has worked out, carried himself as a man of honor and character, paid his debts, dealt squarely with all men, and is now, in middle life, at a very comfortable pitch of prosperity, not won by sharp dealing, but dug out of the earth—the more honor to him and his kind.

Albert G. Knutson was born at his present residence, near the village of Bergen, on the Wisconsin and Illinois State line, January 2, 1853. Here he grew up, attended the district school, and when he became a man assisted his father with the farm work. Then he took charge of the farm, which he operated on shares for several years, until in 1883 he bought out the other heirs, and is now the sole owner of 158 acres of as choice farming land as may be found in the United States. This is known as the "Wetteren Farm," perpetuating the name of the home of his father in Norway in the memory of his children and descendants in the New World.

Mr. Knutson and Miss Christina Hanson were married March 28, 1883. She is a daughter of Oliver Hanson and Tone Even-son, her father a farmer, and one of the first settlers in the town of Capron, Ill. He was a man of high standing among his neighbors, and kindly thought of by all. Mr. and Mrs. Knutson are the parents of eight children, Clara Adelia, Hilda Jurane, Tonetta Marie, George Henry, Myrtle Regina, Roy Ernest, Walter Truman and Earl William.

Gulick Knutson, the father of Albert G., was born Nov. 10, 1810, in the kingdom of Norway, where he received his education, and became in his manhood a lumberman and live stock dealer. On March 15, 1842, he married Christina Ingebretson, daughter of Ingebrct Erickson, a farmer in Norway. Mr. and Mrs. Knutson came to this country in 1846, bringing with them their two daughters, and, buying land, settled near Bergen, in the town of Clinton, Rock county. This farm he subsequently sold, and bought the farm now divided between his two sons, Knute G. and Albert G. Here he lived until his death, which occurred June 24, 1894; his remains are interred in the family cemetery on the farm owned by Albert G. Mrs. Knutson was born May 14, 1814, and makes her home with her sons. She is the mother of six children, Cornelia, Christie, Mary, Knute G., Albert G. and Ruby. Mary died at the age of thirty-one, and Ruby at the age of thirty-eight. Gulick Knutson was always a member and a liberal supporter of the Lutheran Church, and once donated two acres of land near the center of his farm for its use as a cemetery. He was a Republican, and a public-spirited man throughout his career.

Albert G. Knutson is walking well in the footsteps of his father, loyally stands by the church of his parents, and is repeating his father's noble and generous character.

WILLIAM GUNN. England has contributed much valuable material to the upbuilding of our Commonwealth, men of brawn and muscle, men of brains and character, in whom old Anglo-Saxon liberty and daring have developed a noble humanity. Mr. Gunn, whose rural home is found in Section 10, Rock township, Rock county, has embodied in his own career the best ideals of his ancestry, and given to them a significance peculiarly American.

Mr. Gunn was born in Lincolnshire, England, March 28, 1834, a son of John and Rebecca (Tawlkes) Gunn, both natives of England, who had four sons and four daughters, five now living: William; Alice, wife of a Mr. Bowen, of London, England; Anna, wife of Edwin Bowen, of Stowe, Lincolnshire, England; Jesse E., of Sydney, Australia; and Henry, a traveler. John Gunn was a man of ready resources, and followed various occupations in life, prospering in whatever he undertook. He was a veterinary surgeon, carpenter, brewer, and hotel-keeper. He died in Lincolnshire, England, about 1882, at the age of seventy-five. His wife died in 1877, when sixty-four years old. He was a prominent member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and was advanced in its councils. His father, William Gunn, who was a farmer, also lived to an advanced age. He had four sons and one daughter. Henry Tawlkes, father of Rebecca Tawlkes, was a native of England, and died in his native land, where he was a farmer and a stock raiser. He had a numerous family.

William Gunn, the subject of this article, lived in England until he was sixteen years old, and was educated at a school known as Cooley's Charity, a fine practical establishment, founded by a Mr. Cooley. There were three grades, and the languages, engineering, etc., were taught. Mr. Cooley supported the school from his own funds, and also furnished the books for the students, who were limited to those of the middle class and poor families. Each member of each poor family was given a full suit of clothing every Christmas, and each poor family received a ton of coal, all provided by Mr. Cooley. At church each Sunday a loaf of bread was given to the head of each poor family. Our subject was reared on a farm, and in 1850, with a company of his neighbors, crossed the ocean and located in Warren county, Penn., engaging in the lumber business. He lived there until 1865, in which year he came West and settled in Rock township, Rock Co., Wis., buying the farm which has since been his home. It then consisted of 156 acres, but it has been considerably enlarged and well improved, and now comprises 190 acres, with a commodious stone house, a large barn, and other needed farm buildings. It is about two and a half miles from Janesville, and is regarded as one of the most complete agricultural establishments in the county.

On June 25, 1857, Mr. Gunn married Hannah McGee, daughter of Joseph and Rachel (Thompson) McGee, and they had two children: John A. and Thomas M. B. John A. married Margaret Finley, and is a farmer in Rock township; they have seven children, Hannah, Willie, Mary, James, Kittie, Adelbert and Biddle. Thomas M. B. married Alice E. Ratheram, and lives on the home place. Mrs.

Hannah Gunn died very suddenly from heart disease, April 27, 1900, in Decherd, Franklin Co., Tenn., whither she had gone hoping to restore her failing health. She was a woman of beautiful character. Her parents were natives of Pennsylvania, the father being a farmer and lumberman. He was justice of the peace for many years, becoming widely known as "Squire Joe McGee," and had a great record for pronouncing marriage ceremonies. His father was a soldier of the war of 1812, and was in the battle of Lundy's Lane. When he died he was almost one hundred years of age.

Mr. Gunn is a Republican, was supervisor of the town sixteen years, chairman of the town board twelve years, chairman of the county board two years, a trustee of the Rock County Insane Asylum six years and has been treasurer of the school district twenty-two years.

Mr. Gunn was a soldier in the Union army during the war of the Rebellion, and served with honor and fidelity, enlisting Aug. 18, 1862, in Company F, 145th P. V. I., and remaining in the service two years and eleven months. He was badly wounded in the left hip at the battle of Fredericksburg, and there he also lost part of the fourth finger of his left hand. That was the only battle of any importance in which he participated. After that engagement he was clerk in the York Hospital, at York, Penn., where he remained until discharged, July 18, 1865, on account of wounds received in battle. While in this hospital he was transferred to Company 108, 2d Battalion, Veteran Reserve Corps, First Lieut. William L. Mitchell, commanding. Mr. Gunn was adjutant of W. H. Sargent Post, No. 20, G. A. R., but resigned in the spring of 1900, by reason of his removal from the city of Janesville.

JAMES CALDWELL, a retired farmer and well-known citizen of Janesville, Rock county, is an ex-soldier, having served bravely in defense of the Union during the war of the Rebellion, when the courage of men was tried to its utmost, and they proved, for all time, the metal of which they were made.

James Caldwell was born in Janesville township, Rock county, Oct. 4, 1848, a son of James and Eliza (Alford) Caldwell, natives of Scotland and England, respectively. The paternal grandfather of our subject died in Scotland in middle life, after rearing a large family.

The grandfather on the maternal side was Thomas Alford, a native of England, who died in that country; he had a family of fourteen children.

The father of our subject, James Caldwell, was a sailor during his early manhood, came to America about 1842, and settled in Janesville, where he took up land from the government, and later bought additional property, until at one time he owned 366 acres, but afterward sold eighty acres, and improved the remainder. This land was located in sections 3 and 9, and he resided upon it for many years, rearing his family. When sixty-three years old Mr. Caldwell went on a trip to England, and died there, being buried in London. His widow, who accompanied him on the trip, still survives, residing in Janesville. In religious belief Mr. Caldwell was a Presbyterian, while Mrs. Caldwell is an Episcopalian. Six children were born to this worthy couple, five sons and one daughter, four of whom are now living: Thomas, of West Concord, Minn.; James, our subject; Alexander, of Center township, Rock county; and William, of the town of Porter, Rock Co., Wisconsin.

During his boyhood our subject worked upon his father's farm, attending the district schools as opportunity offered. Although but a boy, even in the closing days of the war, he felt it his duty to go to the front and risk his life in the cause he loved so dearly, so in 1864 he enlisted in Company A, 43d Wis. V. I., serving one year, participating in the battle at Johnsonville, Tenn., and other minor engagements, and at all times displaying courage and fortitude. After the close of the war Mr. Caldwell returned home, and began life for himself, working a rented farm in Minnesota. However, it was not long before this enterprising young man had sufficient money saved to purchase a farm of 160 acres for himself, in Dodge county, Minn., and here he remained several years, cultivating his property. Later Mr. Caldwell sold his farm, and purchased the interest of the other heirs in the old homestead in Rock county, which now contains 320 acres. Here he resided until 1896, when, retiring from active work, he removed to Janesville, renting the farm, and is now living in a beautiful home at No. 15 Forest Park boulevard. In addition Mr. Caldwell also owns 640 acres in South Dakota, 320 acres being near Wapton; 160 near Aberdeen; and 160 near Ipswich.

On Nov. 4, 1877, James Caldwell married Miss Eleanor M. Chase, born Dec. 28, 1858, daughter of Samuel and Elvira M. (Maxson) Chase, and three children were born of this union: Harriet M., Beatrice C. and Laurien J. The great-grandfather of Mrs. Caldwell was Lord Michael Pitt, of England. Her paternal grandfather, Calvin Chase, a native of England, died in New York State, where he served as captain in the state militia. He had three children, Samuel, the father of Mrs. Caldwell, being one. It is a peculiar coincidence that Calvin Chase had three children, and that two of his sisters had the same number, as did also his son Samuel, and the latter's daughter, Mrs. Caldwell, as well as his son, Frank L. Chase. The maternal grandfather of Mrs. Caldwell, Laurien Maxson, was a native of New York State (although the family is of French descent), and belonged to the New York State militia; he now resides at St. Peter, Minn., in his eighty-fourth year. Five children were born to himself and wife. Samuel Chase, the father of Mrs. Caldwell, was a native of New York State, as was his wife, and came to Wisconsin at an early date, locating in Walworth county, where he resided for several years, pursuing his occupation of farming. Later he removed to Winthrop, Minn., where he died in 1896, aged sixty-four years, his widow still surviving, and residing in Minneapolis with her son. Of the three children born to this couple, Mrs. Caldwell and Frank L. (of Minneapolis) are the only survivors.

Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell attend the Episcopal Church, of which Mrs. Caldwell is a member. Mr. Caldwell belongs to W. H. Sargent Post, G. A. R., and politically is a Republican. Among a large circle of friends, as well as in their immediate family, Mr. Caldwell and his pleasant wife enjoy a well deserved popularity for their many excellent qualities, and are deservedly considered as representatives of the substantial people of Janesville.

JOHN NAGLE, of Bloomington township, Grant county, was one of the defenders of the Union during the dark days of the Civil war, having enlisted in August, 1864, in Company H, 43d Wis. V. I. He was on duty during his whole term of service, and, though at times ill from hard marching and severe duty, he managed to keep out of the hospital, pre-fering to remain with his company. The 43d rendezvoused at Milwaukee, went from there to Nashville, Tenn., and thence to Johnsonville, where the government stores were located, and where the regiment remained, doing guard duty, for a considerable time. This was an important point, and, owing to the large amount of supplies stored there, its possession was very much desired by the Confederates, and the troops were under Rebel fire a large part of the time. Later the regiment went to Nashville, and remained at that place until January 1, 1865, when it was divided into details and engaged in railroad guarding. During the last part of the war Mr. Nagle was detailed at Elk River Fort, and remained there until hostilities ceased.

Mr. Nagle represents an early and well-known family of Grant county. He was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1842, a son of Thomas and Eliza Nagle, the former a native of Ireland, the latter of Scotland. When he was a small child the family moved to Grant county, Wis. In fact, the parents had come to the county previous to his birth, but decided to return to Cincinnati, and not until 1842 did they locate here permanently; they were early settlers of Patch Grove township. Our subject was one of five children, two sons and three daughters.

The lady who now bears the name of Mrs. John Nagle was formerly Miss Jane Foster, a daughter of Thompson Foster. Mr. and Mrs. Nagle have had seven children, three sons and four daughters. Mr. Nagle is one of the most prominent citizens and successful agriculturists of Bloomington township, where he has a pleasant home and fine farm.

JOHN LITTLE, the accommodating pathmaster of Janesville, Rock county, and a farmer, residing in Section 28, of that township, was born in Roxburghshire, Scotland, in 1830, a son of John and Isabel (Blythe) Little, natives of Scotland. The paternal grandfather of our subject died in Scotland and the maternal grandfather, Thomas Blythe, also died there, when about eighty-two years of age; he had two children.

John Little, Sr., was a farmer, and operated a lime-kiln. Coming to America in 1853, he located in Janesville township, where he bought 200 acres, to which he added more land, improving it all. Here he died, aged seventy-six, in about 1865. His first wife died about 1841, a staunch Presbyterian, as was also Mr. Little. The second wife of Mr. Little, Isabel Irving, died in June, 1867, without issue. To the first union were born eight sons and one daughter, five of whom are now living: Thomas, John, James and Walter, of Janesville township; and Andrew, of Blue Earth, Minnesota.

John Little, our subject, was educated in the schools of his native land, coming to this country with his father in 1853, since which time he has resided continuously in Janesville township, remaining with his father until his death. John Little now owns 160 acres of the old homestead, finely improved. Employing the best methods of cultivation, he has been enabled to bring his land up to a high grade of cultivation, and his broad acres show the result of his efforts.

On November 30, 1861, John Little was married to Miss Jane Scott, daughter of Walter and Elizabeth (Armstrong) Scott, and ten children have been born to this union, four sons and six daughters: John, who married Ella Gentle, lives in La Prairie, and has two children, Fay and Norman; Isabella, who married James Duthie, lives in Bradford township, Rock county; Walter, unmarried, is at home; Bessie married Lester Van Galder, who is now deceased; Thomas died aged eighteen months; Annie is teaching school in district No. 5; Mary married Frank Korn, and lives in Janesville township; Jane married Eugene Smith, resides near Tiffany, La Prairie township, and has one son, Harold; Maggie is living at home; Willie died, aged three months.

Mrs. Little is a consistent member of and earnest worker in the Presbyterian church. Politically Mr. Little is independent in his views, voting with the party whose platform contains the principles most nearly in accordance with his own ideas. For many years Mr. Little has been pathmaster in Janesville, has also served as school director, and is justly regarded as one of the representatives of the best class of farmers in Rock county.

GEORGE M. APPLEBY, of Beloit, Rock county, holds the responsible position of city marshal, and has for a number of years discharged the duties of that position in an intelligent and fearless manner. He is highly thought of as a police officer, and his honor and integrity as a man are unquestioned.

Mr. Appleby was born in Avon, Rock Co., Wis., Aug. 30, 1855, and is a son of John Thomas and Sarah (Landdragin) Appleby, both natives of England. They were the parents of seven children, five of whom are now living: John Thomas, Jr.; Elizabeth, wife of Albert Graves; George M.; Caroline, wife of Henry Graves; and William H. The father was formerly a silk weaver. He came to this country, and settled in Wisconsin at an early day, locating in Janesville, where he was a butcher for some years. For the last fifteen years he has led a retired life, living in Beloit, in the home of his son George M. His wife died in 1865. She was a Seventh-day Adventist. The paternal grandfather of George M. Appleby lived in Boone county, Iowa, where he and his wife died at an advanced age. He was a general merchant, and served as a justice of the peace. The father of Sarah Landdragin was a merchant in London, where he died.

George M. Appleby lived in Avon, Wis., until he reached the age of nineteen years, attended the public schools, and was reared on a farm. When he attained his majority he moved to Beloit, where he secured the appointment of assistant city marshal, and so energetic and capable did he prove that six months later he was made the city marshal, and has been retained in this position by every succeeding city administration. Mr. Appleby and Miss Anna Noble, of Marengo, Ill., were married Jan. 1, 1885. Mrs. Appleby is a daughter of John and Jane (Corvan) Noble, and is the mother of one daughter, Flossie. She is a member of the Episcopal Church. Our subject is a member of the order of Modern Woodmen, and is a Republican politically. He is deputy sheriff of Rock county, having held this position for five years, and is poor master for the southern tier of towns in Rock county, including Beloit and the village of Clinton.

HAROLD KNILL, of the town of Beloit, Rock county, was born in Gloucestershire, England, Jan. 24, 1849, and was only six months old when his parents came to the United States. They lived in Genesee county, N. Y., for three years, and then removed to Wisconsin, settling in the town of Beloit. Harold was only eight years old when his father died, and he went to live with a half sister, at Racine, Wis., being an inmate of her home for seven years. At the age of fifteen the young man came back to the town of Beloit, and here has made his home to the present time. He has been chiefly engaged in farming, owning a highly cultivated farm of sixty-seven acres, and has given much attention to dairying, which has proved very profitable to him. He has put up fine buildings, designing them himself, and is a modern and up-to-date farmer in every respect, disposing of his product at the highest prices of the season. Mr. Knill began business for himself when eight years old, selling papers in Racine, Wis., and has accumulated his property through his own exertions, and with the help of his estimable wife. They have had little to help them but their own courage and self-reliance, and are already well-to-do people, while in the prime of life.

Mr. Knill and Miss Mary E. McNeal were married in Beloit Oct. 13, 1875. Mrs. Knill was born in the town of Beloit, and is a daughter of John and Clara McNeal. Mr. and Mrs. Knill have one daughter, Maude L.

Henry Knill, father of Harold Knill, was born in London, England, and married Mary Ann Sterry, who was born in Norfolk. He died in the town of Beloit when fifty-two years old, and she at the age of eighty-five. They were the parents of nine children, of whom Harold was fifth in the order of birth. Henry Knill was an English gentleman, and came to this country with a fortune. He built the Grand Trunk railroad in Canada, and the Racine & Mississippi, now a part of the Milwaukee system, the road running from Racine to Galena; in building it he lost money, though his wife and family would have been very comfortable but for a dishonest administrator, and they were left with only a small home.

ELIJAH N. CLARK, M. D., of Beloit, Rock county, is both a physician and a dentist, and though now at an advanced age still continues to practice dentistry at intervals. He has had a varied and eventful life, and has maintained a character and standing above reproach throughout his many years.

Dr. Clark was born at Amherst, Mass., Feb. 10, 1817, a son of Elijah and Sybill (Green) Clark, both natives of that State. They were the parents of ten children, of whom the two older daughters died in infancy, and the seventh son, Barnard, died in his eighteenth year. The others all attained maturity. The Doctor and his sister, Mary Ann, now widow of Woodhull Helm, are the only surviving members of this family. The father, who was a farmer, moved to Marion, Wayne Co., N. Y., where he settled on a farm, and died at the age of fifty-four. His widow survived a number of years, and in 1845 came to Beloit with her son Rufus, making that city her home as long as she lived. She and her husband were Congregationalists, and he was a deacon in the church. Simeon Clark, the father of Elijah, was born at Amherst, and there spent his entire life, reaching the age of eighty years. He was of English descent, and followed the trade of a millwright. Joel Green, the father of Sybill, referred to above, lived at Amherst, and was a farmer. He was of English descent.

Dr. Elijah N. Clark lived in his native town until he was twelve years old, and began his studies in the common school. At the age of sixteen he was a teacher at Marion, Wayne Co., N. Y., and was engaged in that vocation four years. When he was twenty he began the study of medicine with Dr. Asahel Clark, his eldest brother, as his preceptor. He was graduated from Geneva College in 1841, and was a practicing physician at Phelps, Ontario Co., N. Y., for five years. In 1847 he made his first appearance in the city of Beloit, remaining there until 1852, when he was carried away by the flood of gold seekers and made his way to California, where he spent about three years. At the expiration of that period he returned to Beloit, and that city has since been his home. He practiced medicine and dentistry until 1887, when he confined himself exclusively to the work of the dentist. He also practiced medicine and dentistry in California. He was a charter member of the Wisconsin State Dental Society.

Dr. Clark and Miss Sarah A. Sutton, daughter of Robert B. Sutton, of Lyons, N. Y., were married in 1842. They became the parents of five children, Delaphine, Emma, Hattie, Matie, and Robert B. Delaphine married Nelson Chamberlain, and became the mother of two children, Grace and Hattie, both of whom are engaged in teaching; Mrs. Chamberlain is now deceased. Emma married George F. Ackley, and is the mother of three children, Elaine, Bert, and Willard. Hattie married Oliver P. Smith, and they have two children, Sadie and Roy. Matie is the widow of Fred Messer; they had one child, Marion. Robert lives in Chippewa Falls, Wis.; he married Harriet J. Williams.

Mrs. Sarah A. Clark died in 1876, in Beloit. She was a member of the Presbyterian Church. Dr. Clark married for his second wife Mrs. Carrie E. Conant, of Beloit. They went to Evanston, Ill., where they had a wedding supper at the home of George E. Redfield; Mrs. Clark was seized with a spasm of coughing, which could not be checked, and she died before midnight, June 19, 1882. In 1887 Dr. Clark married Miss Emily Caroline Rowe. They belong to the First Presbyterian Church, in which he has filled the position of elder for fifty years. He was one of the charter members, and is the only one of the first official board of the church now living. The Doctor is a Mason, member of the Odd Fellows and Sons of Temperance, and has been associated with these various orders for many years. On account of his age he does not now meet with them except in spirit. He is a Republican, and in early life was a Whig. Dr. Clark owns a fine arm adjoining Beloit on the southeast, but situated in Illinois. It contains 175 acres of land, and is very valuable.

CARL A. HANSEN, M. D., the oldest practicing physician in point of service in Lafayette county, is a native of Kongsberg, Norway, where he was born May 31, 1844. He received his literary training in the unexcelled schools of his native land, and for several years prior to his coming to America made an especial study of pharmacy, with the intention of entering the medical profession, and later attended medical lectures at the University of Christiania.

In 1865 he started for the New World, and began his professional career at Brodhead, Green Co., Wis., but remained in that place only a year, when he went to Wiot, Lafayette county, at the time an important mining town. After coming to this country Dr. Hansen felt that it would be well for him to pursue a course of medical studies as taught in America, and accordingly entered Bennett Medical College, Chicago, for a course of lectures. In 1876 he became a resident of Argyle, where he has since followed the practice of his profession, meeting with richly deserved success. His clear insight into human nature, his fine attainments, and his wide sympathy have made him a welcome visitor in the sick room and a clever and successful physician. He has a wide practice, and has found friends and a home in his adopted country. Dr. Hansen is a member of the Wisconsin Eclectic Medical Society and of the National Eclectic Medical Society, and fraternally is an esteemed member of the Masonic Order.

In 1865 Dr. Hansen was united in marriage, at Brodhead, to Miss Sarah Jane Clegg, who was born in Logan county, Ohio, Aug. 13, 1844, and came to Wisconsin with her parents in 1854. Dr. and Mrs. Hansen have two sons, both of whom are successful practicing physicians: Charles O., born Dec. 2, 1867, was graduated from Bennett Medical College, Chicago, and now resides in Neenah, Wis., engaged in the practice of his profession; Oscar L., a graduate of Rush Medical College, Chicago, is now practicing in Argyle.

WILLIAM E. STEVENS, a well-known contractor and builder of Beloit, Rock county, learned very early in life that all success which is really desirable comes only as the result of conformity to the great laws of industry and rectitude, and the history of his life is the story of a sound and honorable career. He is still in middle life, and his character and standing in his own community make him in every sense one of the representative men of southern Wisconsin.

Mr. Stevens was born at Monroe, Wis., Sept. 16, 1853, a son of Jedediah D. and Esther (Humphrey) Stevens, natives of New York; the former, born in Hamilton, that state, March 25, 1798, died March 23, 1877. The mother died in July, 1884. They were married in 1845, and were the parents of five children, three of whom are now living: Edwin H., of Ashland, Neb.; William E.; and Joy W., living near Springfield, S. Dak. Jedediah D. Stevens was first married in 1827, at Batavia, N. Y., to Miss Julia Eggleston, daughter of Ebenezer and Anna Eggleston, and five children were born to that union, two of whom are now living: Everts C., of Aberdeen, S. Dak.; and Saloma, widow of Horace Bisbee, of East Milan, Mich. Mrs. Julia Stevens died in 1842. The father, a clergyman of the Congregational Church, came west to Wisconsin in 1827, and spent fourteen years preaching to the Indians. He was a singularly pure and devoted missionary. He was a son of Jonathan Stevens, who was from Southwick, Mass., and was one of the earliest settlers in western New York. He was a deacon in the Congregational Church, and a man of much force of character. He married Lucy Barry, a native of Meriden, Conn. Jonathan Humphrey, father of Mrs. Esther Stevens, was of English descent, lived at East Bloomfield, N. Y., and was a farmer by occupation. He died at his own home in old age. He was the father of ten children.

William E. Stevens spent the greater part of his early life in Walworth and Rock counties, Wis., with the exception of three years during which he lived in Illinois, and has made his home in Beloit since the fall of 1869. He obtained his education in the schools of Waterford, and supplemented their instruction with study at Allen Grove Academy, and later Beloit Academy. When he reached the age of nineteen years he set himself to the carpenter's trade, and this was his occupation until 1883. Since that year he has done contract work, and has been engaged in some of the most important construction in the city and vicinity. He does his work thoroughly, and his buildings stand as they are represented. Our subject has just formed a partnership with J. Frank Deul, and is engaged in the planing-mill business at Rockford, Ill.; they are doing business under the firm name of Stevens & Deul Manufacturing Co. Percy Howard Stevens, son of our subject, is located in Rockford, and has charge of the office.

Mr. Stevens and Miss Sarah Brown were united in marriage Nov. 29, 1877. Mrs. Stevens was a resident of Beloit at that time. She is a daughter of Charles and Martha (Gregory) Brown, and comes from a long-lived family on her mother's side. Her maternal grandmother lived to be nearly one hundred years old, and her grandfather reached the age of over ninety years. Mr. and Mrs. Stevens have four children, Percy Howard, William Earl, Leland Eddy and Wayne Harold. The family reside at No. 535 Park Place, occupying a house which Mr. Stevens built in 1891. He and his wife are Christian Scientists in religious belief. He is a Republican.

It is an interesting bit of family lore that the father of William E. Stevens spent the winter of 1832 with Black Hawk, at Rock Island, Ill. He was employed during the winter of 1862-63 at New Orleans, looking after the sick Wisconsin soldiers, and assisting them home. He was one of the trustees of Beloit College in the early days.

DAVID WILKINSON. The real wealth of a community is not in its banks and business blocks, but in the integrity and worth of its people, for the influence of a good life goes farther than a bag of dollars in forming the future status of manner and morality. When our subject, David Wilkinson, was born away across the water, in England, Feb. 6, 1832, no one would have predicted of the little Lancashire lad the successful and honorable life that has been his, fertile in good deeds, and an example to the young of the reward awaiting him who lives justly and industriously, temperately and honestly.

The parents of our subject were John and Ann (Brenan) Wilkinson, both born in England, the former Jan. 28, 1803, the latter in 1805. John Wilkinson was the son of David and Ellen (Yates) Wilkinson, who were born in 1765, and married in 1795; both died in England. The father of our subject, John Wilkinson (2), was married in England Feb. 7, 1830. He was the manager of some zinc works in Wales for some time before coming to America, and also filled the position of bookkeeper for the Liverpool Ship Building Co. In March, 1844, he left his native country for the United States, taking passage on a sailing-vessel, and after a long and tedious voyage the welcome port of New Orleans was reached. Following the Mississippi until he came to Galena, Ill., he settled at Scales Mound, in Jo Daviess county, but in the fall of that year he moved to Big Patch, Wis., where they lived during the remainder of their lives, his death occurring Nov. 15, 1879, and his wife's July 14, 1866. Both John Wilkinson and his wife were valued and consistent members of the Primitive Methodist Church, and were known as worthy Christian people. A staunch Republican after settling in his new country, he never wavered in his faith to that party during the rest of his life. In 1850 he made a trip to California, crossing the Plains, but did not make a protracted stay there.

Eleven children were born to John and Ann Wilkinson: David, our subject, is the eldest of the family. William, who was born in England in 1833, married Miss Mary Al-tizer, of Smelser, settled on his farm near the old homestead, and died in 1861, leaving two children, John and Oliver, now residents of California. John, born in England in July, 1835, married Hannah Roe, and died after coming to America; he left two children, Frances and John. Ellen, born in England, died when a child. Thomas, born in England in May, 1839, married Anna Slack, of Grant county, and now resides in Linn county, Iowa, where he has been a prosperous farmer for thirty years; he has a family of ten children, Albert, Edward, Nellie, Thomas, Anna, Emma, James, Hall, Milford and Yetta. Elizabeth, born in Wales in August, 1841, married William Landshutz, of Smelser, who died in 1888, leaving his wife and two children, W. H. (who with his mother resides in Big Patch) and Laura (the latter now deceased). James, born in England Aug. 7, 1843, married, first, a Miss Rawson, who died leaving him one son, William, now of Dubuque, Iowa; his second marriage was with Elizabeth Simpson; he resides in Lemars, Iowa. Anna is deceased. Mary A., born in Grant county, married L. A. Jackson, resided in Smelser, and died Aug. 5, 1874. George, born in 1850, married Sophia Kopp, of Platteville, and now resides on the old Wilkinson homestead, in Smelser, with six children, Mary, Sophia, Carl, Elizabeth, Catharine and Gretta. Robert, born at the old home in Smelser, in November, 1852, married Mary Whittaker, formerly of Delaware, and resides in Pipestone county, Minn.; he has four children, James, Palmer, Bell and Harold.

David Wilkinson, our subject, acquired his early education in England, his opportunities in Smelser being confined to a term of three months. However, he had the advantage of having an intelligent and educated father, and under his supervision he continued his studies. In 1855 he married Miss Isabella Harker, a daughter of George and Isabella Harker, this family being among the English-American families who have become prominent in Smelser township. Mrs. Wilkinson was born in 1834, and was called from life in April, 1880, leaving three children: Elizabeth, born Dec. 30, 1856, was a student at Platteville, married Joseph Thomas, of Grant county, and resides on a farm in Smelser; they have five children, Edward, Walton, Isabel, Gretta and Jessie. James, born in January, 1859, died in August, 1870. Ellen, born in February, 1861, married George Reige, of Smelser, and died Aug. 31, 1889, leaving one daughter, Florence.

In December, 1886, Mr. Wilkinson married Miss Susanna Robinson, of Platteville township, a daughter of Joseph and Hannah Robinson, of an old pioneer family. She was born in 1848, and died in Big Patch Oct. 8, 1899, leaving many lamenting friends. During her life she had been noted for good works, and was one of the leading members of the Primitive Methodist Church, in which her father had long been a local minister.

After his first marriage Mr. Wilkinson settled on a farm for some two years, and then purchased the Kay gristmill, at Big Patch, which he has managed for over thirty-five years. In 1858 he engaged in the mercantile business, in connection with his milling, and until 1900, when he sold, he did a prosperous business. Mr. Wilkinson has always been an ardent Republican, but was appointed by President Buchanan as postmaster at Big Patch, and in all the changes of administration since that time has been continued in office, his character being so high that no citizen could ever be found as an opponent. For forty-one years he has efficiently held this government appointment, this being, in itself, a testimonial of the esteem in which he is held, irrespective of party.

So prominent a man as Mr. Wilkinson could not escape election to the county and township offices, and he has performed the duties of them all, at various times. He has been town treasurer of Smelser for the past three years, and for the three preceding years was town assessor. Reared in the Primitive Methodist Church, he has always adhered to its teachings, and has been a liberal and cheerful contributor to its support. In all things Mr. Wilkinson has been a worthy citizen, always ready to aid in benevolence where he found a deserving object, has served well and faithfully in his public life, and the regularity of his habits has made him a pleasant factor in the home circle. Grant county has in David Wilkinson a representative citizen.

WILLIAM CRAVEN is a highly esteemed resident of Platteville, Grant county, where he is now living retired from active business. He has been a noted hunter of large game in his day, and has killed more wolves, bear and deer than any other man in Grant county. He was born in Wayne county, Ohio, March 14, 1843.

Samuel Craven, his father, was born in Washington county, Penn., in 1800, and his mother, Sarah (Metcalf), was born in the same county in August, 1808. They were married in 1832, and then moved to Wayne county, Ohio, where they settled on a farm, upon which he erected a log house. In this primitive home they lived happily for many years, later building a fine modern house, where Mr. Craven died in 1888, and his wife in 1882. Before his marriage with Sarah Metcalf he had married Margaret Boher, who bore him two children: James, deceased; and Hiram, of Paulding county, Ohio. Nine children were born of the second union: (1) Stewart, born in Ohio, in May, 1823, was reared to manhood on the home farm, and then joined Van Amberg's Show, with which he remained for many years, working his way upward until he became the trainer for the noted elephant "Romeo." He married a lady from Philadelphia, and for some years made that city his home, later going to Dallas, Texas, where he owned a large ranch, upon which his death occurred some ten years ago. His wife and child, Charles, survive him, and make their home in Texas. (2) Susan, born in January, 1835, became the wife of S. C. Long, of Wayne county, Ohio, and at her death left four children, Stewart, Lewis, Mary and William. (3) Mary, born Jan. 8, 1837, married Dr. Barnheart, who became a surgeon in the Civil war, and died, leaving one child, Capitola, who is married and lives in Indiana. Mary is also deceased. (4) John and (5) Sarah died in childhood. (6) William is our subject. (7) George, born in May, 1845, grew to manhood, and enlisted in an Indiana regiment during the Civil war, after which he came west to Wisconsin, and worked for some years in the Laflin & Rand Powder Mills. He married Ella Douglas, of Platteville, and moved to Nebraska, thence going to Oklahoma, where he now resides. He has a family of seven children, Della, Charles, Cora, Wilbur, Jennie, Stewart and Julian. (8) Lucinda is the widow of Solomon Staher, of Wayne county, and has two children, Sarah and Frank, the latter of Oklahoma. (9) Samuel C., born in 1851, was educated in the higher schools of Ohio, married Emma Winkler, and then located on the old homestead, remaining there until 1898, when he removed to Oklahoma, to engage in the livery and feed business. He has two children living, Melissa and William; another, Charles, is deceased.

William Craven was educated in the excellent public schools of Ohio. In 1862, at the age of eighteen, he enlisted in Company F, 102d O. V. I., and was assigned to the Western Army. His first duty was in Kentucky, where his regiment took part in the fighting against Gen. Bragg, engaging him at Perryville. Later they took part in several battles in Tennessee, where they wintered in 1862. They remained in Tennessee one year, and Mr. Craven, being taken ill at Clarksville, was obliged to pass some time in the hospital there, and later was detailed from the Invalid Corps as manager of the government farm established there. In the fall of 1864 he joined his regiment at Decatur, Ala., at which point the Union forces engaged Hood's army, and followed him in his march to Nashville. The 102d Ohio served continually until the close of the war. After the war was over Mr. Craven returned, in July, 1865, to his home, and passed the fall with Forepaugh's show. In 1866 he located on his father-in-law's homestead, where he remained until 1900, in that year purchasing a home in Platteville, and has since lived retired. In 1894, while engaged in a hunting expedition in northern Wisconsin, he captured a pair of fawns, which he brought home, and they became the progenitors of the fine herd of deer on his farm.

Politically Mr. Craven is a staunch Republican, and has held the office of justice of the peace. Socially he belongs to Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R., of Platteville, and to the I. O. O. F. at Washburn. In religious faith the family are Presbyterians.

On March 22, 1866, Mr. Craven was united in marriage with Miss Mary E. Burns, daughter of Thomas and Jane (Thompson) Burns, of Lima, Wis. Both Mr. and Mrs. Burns were born in Ohio, the former in October, 1817, the latter in December, 1821. Mrs. Jane (Thompson) Burns was the daughter of Archibald and Martha (Fitzsimmons) Thompson, who moved to Ohio from Pennsylvania among the early settlers of that State. Thomas Burns located in Grant county, Wis., in 1842, and settled in the town of Lima, and there in 1849 his wife died, leaving him with two children, Mary E., wife of our subject; and Thomas J., now a merchant of Casey, Iowa. The children were taken back to Ohio, and were cared for until grown by their Grandfather Burns, a gallant old soldier of the war of 1812. Thomas J. Burns, brother of Mrs. Craven, enlisted in the 120th O. V. I. during the Civil war; later he married Miss Sidney Aukerman, and moved to his present home in Casey, Iowa; he has three children, Carrie, Thomas and Etta. Mrs. Craven was highly educated in the schools of Ohio, and for several years was one of the successful teachers of that State.

To Mr. and Mrs. Craven have been born nine children, four of whom died in childhood. The others are: S. C., born in Lima in 1867, married Myrtle Hake, of Platteville, and now resides on the old Burns homestead, which he owns; they have three children, Flossie, Mellie and Neal. Mabel, born in April, 1871, was educated at the Platteville Normal, became one of the successful teachers of Lima, and is now the wife of Ralph King, of Ellenboro, by whom she has two children, Ivan and Margie. Bell, born in February, 1876, educated in the Platteville Normal, became a well-known teacher in Grant county, and is now the wife of Ernest Harrison; they reside in Aitkin, Minn., where he is a merchant; they have one son, William Harrison. Burns, born in April, 1880, still makes his home with his parents, and is at present a student in the Platteville Business College. Bessie, born in April, 1883, is a student at the Platteville Normal.

S. B. SPENCER, who for the past twelve years has efficiently served as justice of the peace at Platteville, Grant county, was born in Springville township, Susquehanna Co., Penn., March 1, 1834, a son of Daniel R. and Myranda (Baldwin) Spencer, the former a native of Concord, N. H., and the latter of Vermont. They were of Scottish descent, and early settlers of Springville township, Susquehanna Co., Penn., where the father, a farmer by occupation, died in 1836. The mother long survived him, dying in Wyoming county, same State, in 1888. Our subject is the only member of the family now living.

S. B. Spencer was reared and educated in his native county, whence he came to Grant county, Wis., in 1851. Locating in the town of Beetown, he was engaged in mining there for two years, and then moved to Lancaster, where he learned the mason's trade. After a residence of five or six years at the latter place he went to Boscobel, and accepted a position in a store. While there the Civil war broke out, and he enlisted, in 1862, in Company G, 33d Wis. V. I., for one year, being elected ordnance sergeant. He was on detached duty most of the time, and was honorably discharged at Vicksburg in 1863. Returning to Grant county, he purchased a farm in Harrison township which he operated for three years, and in 1871 came to Platteville, where he has since made his home.

In Grant county Mr. Spencer was united in marriage with Miss Lucy Beroyl McKenzie, by whom he had two children, Edward M. and H. M. He was again married, in 1886, his second union being with Miss Hannah Straw, by whom he also has two children, Hazel E. and Estella M. Mrs. Spencer is a native of Grant county, and a daughter of Richard and Mary (Place) Straw. Her father, who was a well-known smelter, died in Platteville May 10, 1892, at the age of seventy-five years, two months and twenty-five days; he was one of the first settlers of the county. Her mother continues to reside in Platteville.

Socially Mr. Spencer is a member of Melody Lodge, No. 2, F. & A. M., and W. T. Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R., in which he has served as chaplain. Both he and his wife are earnest and consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and are highly respected by all who know them. In his political affiliations Mr. Spencer is a Republican. He was census enumerator in Platteville in 1890. In 1887 he was elected justice of the peace, and has since filled that position, with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of his constituents. He is thoroughly impartial in meting out justice, his opinions being unbiased by either fear or favor, and his fidelity to the trust reposed in him is above question.

CHARLES C. CLARKE has for the past twenty years been a prominent stock dealer at Milton Junction, Rock county. He is a man of active temperament, who has had a wide experience in life, gained by extended travel and by following various vocations. Reared a farmer, and inheriting from his father, who was a practicing physician, a keen and comprehensive mind, he has found in the stock business a congenial and most profitable field for his talents.

Mr. Clarke was born in Madison county, N. Y., Dec. 1, 1833, son of Dr. Henry and Lorinda (Coon) Clarke, natives of New York. The father was the son of a Rhode Island farmer, who lived to an advanced age, and reared a large family. The maternal grandfather of our subject, Daniel Coon, was a native of New York State, and there followed farming through his long life; he left a large family. Henry Clarke, the father, practiced medicine in Madison county, N. Y. In 1836 he came West, and for two years lived at Chicago, Ill., then a struggling but ambitious village, in 1838 removing to Walworth, Wis., where he continued the practice of his profession until his death, in 1853, at the age of sixty-one years. His wife survived until 1896, passing away at the age of eighty-two years. Both were prominent members of the Seventh-day Baptist Church. Dr. Clarke was an influential citizen, as well as a successful physician. He was a member of the State Legislature in New York, and was elected to discharge the same legislative duties in Wisconsin. He was the father of eleven children, nine sons and two daughters, of whom six survive: Charles C., our subject; Benjamin F., of Los Angeles, Cal.; Oliver P., of Walworth county, Wis.; Frederick J., of Walworth; John M., of Milton Junction; and Hannah M., wife of Lafayette Cook, of Cecil, Wisconsin.

Charles C. Clarke was four years old when brought by his father to Walworth county, where he was reared on a farm, receiving his education in the district schools. Seeking a more active life than that presented by the farm, Mr. Clarke in his younger years went to Chicago, where for three years he kept a grocery store. Then for a time he served on the police force of that city. In 1860 he went to Pike's Peak, Col., and for a year engaged in mining. Returning to Chicago in 1861, he became a contractor and builder for a number of years, after which he spent seven years engaged in flour-milling at Rockton, Ill. In 1880 Mr. Clarke came to Milton Junction. For one year he conducted a lumber business in connection with stock dealing, then gave his entire attention to the latter business, which grew steadily under his wise management, and which he has continued ever since. For the past fourteen years his brother, John M. Clarke, has been associated with him in the stock business. They have attained marked success, and our subject ranks as one of the best and most favorably known business men of Rock county. He is a stockholder in the State Bank at Milton Junction.

Mr. Clarke married, Jan. 1, 1856, Miss Mary B. Sherburne, daughter of Joseph and Rebecca (Atwood) Sherburne, natives of Vermont, who in 1844, with their five children, migrated to Wisconsin and located in Walworth county, where they engaged in farming. Of this family, Phoebe is now the widow of Lucian Covey, of Chicago; Edwin is deceased; Mary B. is the wife of our subject; George A. is a resident of Covert, Mich.; and Emily R. is the wife of Edgar O. Burdick, of Milton Junction. Joseph Sherburne died in Walworth county in 1876, aged seventy-four years, and his wife died in 1891, aged eighty-two years. Both were members of the Seventh-day Baptist Church. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Clarke, John Sherburne, was a Vermont farmer, and lived to about the age of seventy-two years. Her maternal grandfather, Elijah Atwood, was also a Vermont farmer. He was killed in middle life by the kick of a horse.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarke are prominent members of the Seventh-day Baptist Church. Politically he is a Prohibitionist. He is a member of the school board of Milton Junction.

SIGMUND STEUERT, of the town of Fennimore, is one of the pioneers of Grant county. He was born in the Black Forest, Germany, Nov. 14, 1820, son of Jacob Steuert, who died when our subject was four years old. His mother survived many years, and died in her native land. Mr. Steuert was one of five children, and the only one of the family who came to this country. His father was a painter, and made a specialty of painting clock faces, and this became the trade of the son. Clockmaking was one of the principal industries of the people of that region.

In 1842 Sigmund Steuert came to this country, in company with a neighbor who had already been in America. They were forty-two days in making the passage from Bremen to New York, on the sailing-vessel "Westfall." Our subject spent the winter in Pennsylvania, and the following year went to Stark county, Ohio, where he traveled, with a horse and buggy, selling clocks, and made a few hundred dollars. He followed this business for about three and a half years, and then came to Grant county, making the journey to Columbus from Canton by canal, from there to Xenia by stage, and from there to Cincinnati by railroad. From that city he went down the Ohio to St. Louis, and thence to Galena by steamer, where he took the stage to Potosi, Wis., reaching that point March 18, 1846. A relative by the name of Celestine Kaltenbach had been a resident of the village from 1836. That spring he came to Fennimore, and bought land with the money he had earned in Ohio. Mr. Steuert had but five francs when he entered Pennsylvania. While in that State he desired to visit an uncle in Philadelphia, and, not wishing to spend his money on the fare, walked in, and paid his way by repairing clocks for the farmers on the road. It was a characteristic performance. He had nerve and strength.

When Mr. Steuert bought land in the town of Fennimore he had as a partner Marcus Beyerli, who sold out to him after some two years and went to California, making the voyage around Cape Horn, and, as he was never heard of, it is supposed he perished by the way.

Mr. Steuert and Miss Cynthia Stephens, a native of Kentucky, were married July 30, 1848. She died in August, 1857, leaving four children: Samuel, of Fennimore; Cornelia, the wife of William Moran, of Nebraska; Jacob, a resident of Kansas; and Sarah, who died at the age of eight years. A child named Sigmond died in infancy. Mr. Steuert was married May 9, 1858, to his present estimable wife, Margaret Ann (Clyde), who was born in Mercer county, Penn., March 20, 1820. Her parents, Solomon and Sabina Clyde, came to Mineral Point, Wis., in 1850. They had eleven children, several of whom died young in Pennsylvania. Six of their children reached Wisconsin, and made homes for themselves in this State, where they cared for their parents. The mother died at Montfort in December, 1858, and the father died in August, 1865. Three of their daughters are now (1901) living, Mrs. Steuert being the eldest. Mrs. Eliza Reynolds is in South Dakota. Mrs. Nancy Davy, of Boscobel, Wis., is the youngest. Mrs. Jane McLimans, Mrs. Sarah Smith, and a brother of Mrs. Steuert lived in Boscobel. The latter was captain of a company in the war of the Rebellion; he died in Minnesota.

Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Steuert, as follows: Samuel, who is now at Fennimore, was a soldier in the war of the Rebellion, serving in the 48th Wis. V. I. Sabina is the wife of Eugene McDonald, and lives on the old home farm of her parents, then in Fennimore, now included in the town of Mt. Ida. When Mr. Steuert arrived in the town of Fennimore there were but slight settlements between that town and Lancaster. He became possessed of a fine farm there, and there all his children were born. In 1884 he removed to the village of Fennimore, where he yet lives, respected and highly esteemed by all who know him. He and his wife belong to the Methodist Church. She has been a member of the church since she was fourteen and her husband for more than forty years. Mr. Steuert was in early life a Democrat, but when slavery became the leading issue he joined the Republican party. When the old issues were settled forever, feeling that the destruction of the saloon is the most vital question before the people, he became a member of the Prohibition party, and has worked with it for a number of years. Mr. Steuert was the first German settler in what are now the towns of Fennimore, Mt. Ida, Hickory Grove, Marion, and other northern townships. He was justice of the peace for twelve years, and at his first and last elections to this office not a single vote was cast against him.

JOHN DINSDALE, of the town of Fennimore, Grant county, is one of the earliest settlers of that section. He has lived there since 1849, and he has been a permanent settler in the town of Fennimore since June, 1850.

Mr. Dinsdale was born in the town of Askrigg, Yorkshire, England, Nov. 12, 1825, son of James and Elizabeth (Thompson) Dinsdale. The Dinsdale family has been resident in Askrigg for many generations. James Dinsdale, the grandfather of John, died at the age of eighty-four. Edward Thompson, the father of Elizabeth, married Dorothy Newton. Our subject's father had ten children, only two now living: John; and Mrs. Dorothy Alderson, of Denver, Colo. The father died in England in 1843, at the age of fifty-five years. His eldest son, Matthew, was the first to come to America, arriving here in 1846, and he followed mining for a time at Mineral Point, Wis. He became a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1849 he went to California, and spent two years in the land of gold. Returning then to England, he married Miss Mary Ann Mann, and when he came back to the United States he brought with him his mother, his brother Edward, and sister Lizzie. He put up a store at Linden, Iowa Co., Wis., and was engaged in its management for several years, later in life renting it and removing to Madison, that his children might have the benefit of the State University. He lived at Madison ten years, and preached at various places in the vicinity. After his daughter's graduation and marriage to Magnus Swanson, of Chicago, he returned to Linden, where he died in 1897. A sister of John Dinsdale married a Mr. Munden, of Geneva Lake, and another sister, Jane, married a Mr. Chapman, in England, and came to this country in 1848. The mother lived with her children after coming to this country, and died at the age of sixty-nine years.

John Dinsdale was reared as a farmer and dairyman. He was married, May 24, 1847, to Miss Tirzah Chapman, who was born at Worton, Yorkshire, but a few miles from the birthplace of her husband, in 1826. The young couple came to this country in 1849, as noted above, bringing with them their two children, Elizabeth and James. They left home Feb. 13, sailing from Liverpool on the ship "Saxony," and landed at New Orleans on the last day of the following April, making their way up the river to Galena, Ill., and from there to the town of Linden, Iowa county; in May of the following year our subject entered eighty acres of land in the town of Fennimore, Grant county. He erected a log house, which was his home for eighteen years, and at the expiration of that time built his present residence. By judicious investments he has increased his original eighty acres to a magnificent rural estate of 400 acres, and has long been numbered among the prominent and successful farmers and stock raisers of his town.

Mr. Dinsdale was bereft of the wife of his youth in 1869. She was the mother of twelve children. Miss Grace Eddy became his second wife. She died in 1891, the mother of three children, two of whom are living. Ten children of the first marriage are still living, namely: Elizabeth, James, Zipporah, B. C., Dorothy, Alice, Hattie, Abbie, Mary A. and Tirzah C. The deceased children were Isabella

M. and Matthew E. Of the children born to the second marriage Ella P. and Grace A. are living; Eddy is deceased.

Mr. Dinsdale has been closely identified with the growth and development of Grant county for many years, and has been very active in everything relating to the best interests of the community. He has been associated with the Methodist Church since 1850, and has been class-leader for forty-eight years, and steward for fifty years. He has been a trustee of the Ebenezer Church, in the town of Wingville, since its erection, in 1861. Politically he is a Republican of the Lincoln type, and has lately been identified with the Prohibition party. No man is better known or more highly esteemed in the town of Fennimore than Mr. Dinsdale, and he is well worthy of a place in any record.

WILLIAM COWDUROY, who died at his residence in Platteville, Grant county, Dec. 13, 1899, and was for many years a dealer in general merchandise at that city. He was a native of London, England, born in 1836, and received his early education in that city. When fifteen years old he sailed for America, and landed in New York City in the spring of 1851, without a friend and without money, but he soon succeeded in finding employment at $5 per month and board, and not long afterward, in recognition of his industrious habits and attentiveness to his duties, this compensation was increased to $13.

In 1853 young Cowduroy sought a home in the West, and found it in the then village of Platteville, Wis., where he lived until the spring of 1856. He was next employed, temporarily, as a clerk on Mississippi river steamboats, and then went to La Crosse, Wis., where he remained three years, in 1859 going to St. Louis, Mo., where he secured an important position in the State and county assessors' office, holding same until 1861. He was next appointed paymaster of the Missouri State militia, an office he filled until 1863, when he returned to Platteville, Wis., and engaged in mercantile trade, which was ever afterward his occupation.

In September, 1857, Mr. Cowduroy married, for his first wife, Miss Elizabeth Elgar, also a native of London, England, and a daughter of William Elgar, a pioneer of Grant county. This lady died May 21, 1879, leaving her husband with two children, Lizzie and Harry. Lizzie was born in La Crosse, Wis., was educated in the State Normal School, Platteville, married William Bauer, of Chicago, and died the mother of one son, William, who lives with his grandmother, Mrs. Cowduroy, in Platteville. Harry Cowduroy was born in St. Louis, Mo., was also educated in the Platteville State Normal, and is now in the employ of the Grant Paving Co., of Omaha, Neb.; in Council Bluffs he married Miss Katie Kirscht, who has borne him one daughter, Gertrude Elizabeth.

The second marriage of William Cowduroy took place in October, 1880, to Mrs. Elizabeth (Stephens) Campbell, a lady of Platteville; to this union no children were born.

Religiously Mr. Cowduroy was a member of the Episcopal Church, to which his widow also belongs, and of which they had been constant attendants for many years and liberal supporters through their financial contributions. Politically Mr. Cowduroy was identified with the Republican party, and active in the government of the city. Fraternally he was a member of K. of P. Lodge No. 125, of Platteville; was also a member of the A. O. U. W. and the M. W. of A., and in both the latter orders held official positions for some years. Besides being one of the oldest merchants in Platteville Mr. Cowduroy was a stockholder and director in the State National Bank, took a deep and active interest in building up his city, and as a business man his reputation for fair dealing and integrity was well established throughout Grant county.

ERASMUS WITHERBEE was born in Hazel Green, Grant county, where his home is found at present, May 15, 1843, and is a son of Hiram and Experience A. (Day) Witherbee. The father was born April 17, 1810, at the main entrance to Bunker Hill Monument, and the mother Oct. 30, 1823, at Edwardsville, Madison Co., Ill. Hiram Witherbee was the son of Calvin and Harriet A. (Estabrook) Witherbee, the former a native of Scotland, the latter of Massachusetts. Calvin Witherbee was a ship carpenter and a seafaring man. He died in New Orleans, from yellow fever, about 1815.

Hiram Witherbee came from Madison county, Ill., to Wisconsin as early as 1832, and followed lead mining for a number of years near Hazel Green, finally becoming the owner of valuable mineral lands which he controlled throughout life. He was quite successful, and about 1850 bought the "Empire Hotel" property at Hazel Green. For some nine years he was the popular landlord of that hostelry, which he then traded for a farm in Smelser, near what is now called Elmo Station, where he died in 1867. Mrs. Experience A. Witherbee died in 1850. She and her husband belonged to the Presbyterian Church. In connection with Mr. Crawford and one or two others Mr. Witherbee was instrumental in the erection of the first Presbyterian church in Hazel Green, which was destroyed by the tornado of 1876. Hiram and Experience A. Witherbee were the parents of five children, of whom three died in infancy; the survivors are Erasmus and Hiram J. Mr. Witherbee married for his second wife Miss Margaret A. Eastman, of Grant county, and to this union were also born five children, all of whom are living: (1) Experience A., born in Hazel Green in 1852, is the wife of Charles Nepier, of Chicago. (2) Levi, born in September, 1853, is married, and is the owner of a cattle ranch in Yuma county, Colo. (3) L. C. is a partner with his brother Levi in the cattle business. (4) Julian V., born in Grant county, is now a traveling representative of the St. Louis Stock Yards; he found a wife in Colorado. (5) Orvil O., born in Smelser, Grant county, has become a noted physician and surgeon, and lives in Los Angeles, Cal.; he is married, and has two children.

Hiram J. Witherbee, the only brother of our subject, was educated at the Platteville Normal School. In his early life he was a miner and farmer, and was a school teacher in Grant and Lafayette counties for several years before his entrance into pastoral work, in 1885. He is a Methodist clergyman. Miss Julia A. Haney, of Grant county, became his wife, and they have had the following children: (1) Harriet A., who died Aug. 1, 1898, was a young lady of great promise, and a worker in the church of her town, where she had many friends. (2) Hiram S. is a clergyman of the Methodist Church at Brush, Colo., and (3) Oliver Day, a minister of the same church in Wisconsin. (4) Miss Elizabeth H. is at home.

Erasmus Witherbee grew to manhood under the parental roof, and obtained his education in a private school in Hazel Green, and the academy at Platteville. In 1862, leaving school, he enlisted in Company I, 25th Wis. V. I., under command of Col. Montgomery. The regiment was mustered into the government service at LaCrosse, Wis., and sent to the Western frontier, New Ulm, Minn., to protect the settlers from the raids of the hostile Indians. In the early part of 1863 it was sent to Kentucky, and in May of that year was made a part of the forces which were to hold the Rebel Johnson in check until Vicksburg should be compelled to surrender. After the fall of that stronghold the 25th Wisconsin was sent to Helena, Ark., and in the following spring it was sent to Kentucky, and was marched overland to Mooresville, Ala., where Mr. Witherbee was taken sick, and compelled to seek the hospital at Decatur, in that State. After a furlough at home he joined his regiment at Rome, Ga., in time to follow Gen. Sherman to the sea. The 25th was part of the army that marched clear through to Washington, and took part in the "Grand Review." At the close of the war Mr. Witherbee could say that he had served as a soldier in every Southern State except Florida and Texas, and in the greater number of the Northern States. An honorable discharge from the service was given him at Washington in June, 1865. At Helena, Ark., Mr. Witherbee was made quartermaster sergeant Nov. 1, 1863, and throughout the war maintained a high standing as a soldier and a clear-headed and intelligent man.

After the close of the war Mr. Witherbee returned home, and the same year went to Lincoln, Neb., to take up a homestead claim, securing a good farm. He was married, July 4, 1876, in Philadelphia, to Miss Mary Richards, a daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth Richards, of an old and prominent family of Smelser, Grant county, and formerly from Tennessee. Mrs. Witherbee was born in Platteville, Wis., where she received her education in the academy and the State Normal. The house which they occupied at the beginning of their married life was situated on part of the land purchased by his father from the government, and here a fine home was erected in 1880. The greater part of Mr. Witherbee's business life has been devoted to mining, and he owns a large acreage of valuable mineral lands, to the development of which he is still giving much attention. To him and his wife have been born a family of three children: (1) Blanche, born in Hazel Green in 1877, acquired a good education in the village school, and was a graduate in voice culture, under Prof. Churchill, of the Platteville State Normal. She is now at home, and has been one of the successful music teachers in this part of the State. (2) Exie L., born in August, 1881, is a graduate of the Hazel Green high school, and has studied at the State Normal, Platteville. She is now a grammar school teacher in Hazel Green. (3) Pearle, born in 1888, is now a student at the home school.

Mr. Witherbee was identified with the Republican party for many years, became a Greenbacker during the administration of President Hayes, for twelve years was a Prohibitionist, and in 1896 and 1900 was a strong advocate of the election of W. J. Bryan, believing in legislation for the benefit of the masses. For twelve long years he helped to wage the war against the liquor traffic, but in 1896, becoming convinced that the mass of the American people, of whatever persuasion, want and will have their whisky, he transferred his allegiance as noted. A public-spirited and upright citizen of the town, he has been called on to fill several local offices, was a member of the school board twelve years, and town clerk two years. Mr. Witherbee is adjutant of W. O. Topping Post, No. 266, G. A. R., at Hazel Green. Mrs. Witherbee is a member of the Congregational Church, and that church has always received a liberal support from her husband.

FRANK WOOD, one of the representative, enterprising business men of Janesville, Rock county, proprietor of a grocery establishment at the corner of Madison, North Academy and Ravine streets, is fast building up a very desirable trade, catering to the wants of his customers in a manner that secures continued patronage.

Frank Wood was born in Janesville Oct. 19, 1842, a son of Royal and Eliza (Andrews) Wood, natives of New York City. His paternal grandfather, Silas Wood, was a native of Ohio, a farmer by occupation, and came to Wisconsin in the early days, settling on a farm about eighteen miles from Janesville, in Rock county, where he died at an advanced age. He had four children. The grandfather on the mother's side, Francis Andrews, was engaged in handling meat in New York City, where he operated a large market. His family consisted of four or five children, and he died when quite an old man.

Royal Wood, the father of our subject, was a sailor on the lakes in early manhood, and came to Wisconsin in 1840, locating in Janesville, where he engaged in the grocery business. Later he embarked in a livery business, and continued same for over twenty years. Now Mr. Wood has retired from active business pursuits. His wife died in December, 1899, aged about seventy-six years. For many years Royal Wood was register of deeds. He and his wife were Unitarians in religious belief. They were blessed with nine children, six sons and three daughters, three of whom are now living: Frank; Royal, of San Diego, Cal.; and Wesley P., of Chicago.

Frank Wood, the subject proper of this biography, has lived in Janesville all his life, attended the public schools, and is thoroughly identified with its best interests. Upon the outbreak of the Civil war, like so many others, he was fired with patriotism, and enlisted in the 12th Wisconsin Battery, Light Artillery, serving about three years. At the battle of Savannah, Ga., Mr. Wood was wounded, and he participated in the battles of Corinth, Iuka, Altoona, Ga., Sherman's march to the sea, and many other less important engagements. After the close of the war Mr. Wood returned home and became a brakeman on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, serving in this capacity for several years; was then made baggage-man; then freight conductor; and finally passenger conductor. Feeling the need of rest, Mr. Wood finally retired from the service of the railroad in 1883, and until January, 1900, did not engage in any line of business aside from attending to his personal affairs. At that date he purchased the grocery concern of W. S. Phillips, made many desirable innovations, and now carries a full line of provisions, and is fully prepared to supply his trade promptly and efficiently. In addition to his pleasant home, at No. 210 West Bluff street, Janesville, which he erected, Mr. Wood owns other real estate throughout the city, all of which is valuable.

On Jan. 24, 1866, Frank Wood married Miss Maria Johnston, daughter of William H. and Henrietta (Steinberger) Johnston, and one daughter was born to them, Carrie, who married Arthur W. Wheelock, of Rockford, Ill., and has a daughter, Marguerite. Mrs. Wood is a consistent member of the Episcopal Church, and a very estimable and charitable lady. Politically Mr. Wood is a Republican, and steadfastly upholds the principles of his party upon every occasion. Genial, public-spirited and enterprising, Mr. Wood has made many friends, and his success in life is well deserved.

JAMES HAGGART, one of the prominent farmers and business men of LaPrairie township, Rock county, was born in the village of Fonda, Montgomery Co., N. Y., Dec. 13, 1843, son of James and Deborah (Veeder) Haggart, natives of New York, and grandson of James Haggart, who emigrated from Scotland, his native land, to America, and settled in Montgomery county, N. Y., where he reared a large family and lived to a good old age. He was a farmer. Abraham Veeder, the maternal grandfather of our subject, was a native of New York, of Holland-Dutch descent. He was a farmer, and served as a soldier in the war of 1812. He died in Montgomery county, N. Y., at a ripe old age, leaving a large family.

The father of our subject was a farmer by occupation. He moved from New York State to Wisconsin in 1851, purchasing 213 acres of land in La Prairie township, Rock county, and twenty-seven acres in the town of Turtle, which he improved. He died in November, 1877, aged seventy-five years. His wife died Oct. 8, 1882, aged eighty-three years. They were devout members of the Presbyterian Church. Of their nine children, three sons and six daughters, three survive: Anna, wife of James Wilson, of Canton, Kans.; Sarah, wife of C. N. Wright, of Shopiere, Rock Co., Wis.; and James, our subject.

James Haggart was seven years old when brought by his parents from New York to Wisconsin. In 1852, the year following, the family returned to Fonda, where for six years the father kept hotel. They then repeated the journey to Wisconsin. James was reared a farmer boy in La Prairie township, attending the common schools. He remained on the farm of his father until the latter's death, then took charge of the home place, which he still owns and operates. In addition to farming he is also engaged in the creamery and general merchandise business at Shopiere, and is one of the successful and influential business men of La Prairie township.

Mr. Haggart married, Sept. 30, 1869, Miss Laura Nash, daughter of Samuel Leonard and Ann Elmira (Kimball) Nash, who came from New York to Rock county, Wis., in 1853, when she was seven years old, locating in Turtle township, and there engaging in farming. Later they removed to Manchester, Ill., where the father died in 1884, having attained the age of almost eighty-four years; his wife survived until September, 1887, dying at the age of seventy-two. Four children were born to them, of whom two are now living: Lois, who lives with her sister; and Laura, wife of our subject. To James and Laura (Nash) Haggart have been born three children: Archie, who died at the age of twenty-one years and two months; James L., who lives at home; and one who died in infancy.

Mr. Haggart in politics is a Republican. Fraternally he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. He is highly respected for his sterling traits of character, and is a typical representative of those sturdy and forceful characters to whom the people of Wisconsin are deeply indebted for the high development of the State during the past half century.

BENJAMIN A. GRAVES, a venerable farmer of Harrison township, Grant county, whose years command the respect his character deserves, was born in Mercer county, Penn., Dec. 11, 1823, a son of Roswell and Mary A. (Bates) Graves.

Roswell Graves was born in New Haven, Conn., and his wife in Virginia. They were married in Mercer county, Penn., where Mrs. Graves' father, Christian Bates, was living. Roswell Graves was educated by his parents, Roswell and Lucy (Arnold) Graves, of New Haven, Conn. (the latter a sister of Benedict Arnold), and was a teacher in early life. He lived in Pennsylvania, following farming and teaching, until 1854, when he came to Grant county, Wis., and took charge of the County Poor Farm. He acted in this capacity for some ten years, and then moved to Crawford county, Wis., where he bought a farm, and spent his remaining years in its cultivation. He and his wife died some years ago. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and frequently filled the pulpit as a local preacher. He held a number of local offices, and was justice of the peace for many years. Mr. and Mrs. Graves reared a numerous family, all born in Mercer county, Penn.; Elizabeth, their eldest daughter, was married in her native county to Alanson Taft, and they came West, settling in Crawford county, Wis., where she died, leaving a family who still reside in that section of Wisconsin; Benjamin A. is the eldest son; the others were named Lucy, Joab, Rhoda, Roswell, Almira, Alanson, John and Mary.

Mr. Graves received a district-school education in Mercer county, Penn. In 1842 he married Miss Lurancy Ray, of Kinsman, Ohio, the daughter of George and Lucinda Ray, of Vermont, who moved to Ohio at an early day, and from there to Wisconsin by wagon. They settled in Grant county, and after a few years journeyed still farther West, to Fayette county, Iowa, where they died, full of years and honor. Mrs. Graves was born in Cattaraugus county, N. Y., in 1828, and was quite young when taken by her parents into Ohio, where her education was mostly obtained. She was an ambitious and capable girl, and taught winter school several years after coming to Wisconsin. Mrs. and Mrs. Graves moved to this State soon after their marriage, and after one or two changes made the location in Harrison township which has proved so desirable that they occupy it to this day. He bought 107 acres of George McFall. At the time of purchase this farm was but little improved, but Mr. and Mrs. Graves have converted it into one of the most desirable tracts in Grant county.

Mr. Graves enlisted in Company K, 44th Wis. V. I., and served under Gen. Thomas in the Army of the Tennessee. He was discharged in August, 1865, and came home to his wife and the eight children he had left on the farm. He has continued his residence on this place to the present time, and here he and his worthy wife are enjoying a full share of the comforts of life in their declining years. They are the parents of ten children, of whom Joab and Lorenzo died in childhood. George was born in Ohio in 1843, married Miss Harriet Coates, of Grant county, and is now a resident of Fennimore. Roswell, born in Grant county in 1848, married Miss Sarah Coates, a sister of the wife of his brother George, and settled on his farm in Ellenboro township, where he died in April, 1900, leaving a wife and three children, Jesse, Benjamin R. (both engineers on the Western railroad) and Dove. Mary A., born in Grant county in 1850, married William Roddick, and settled on a farm in Ellenboro, where he died in 1887, leaving her with two children, Mabel and Millie; she died in April, 1900, and her children live in the old home. Arnold Graves was born in Grant county in 1852, married Rosella Singe, and now resides on his farm in Harrison township; they have one daughter, Glenly. Martha, born in Grant county in 1854, married Cassius Lathrop, of Crawford county, where they now live; they have four children, Lester, Fern, Flossie, and Loren. Lucy, born in 1858, is now the wife of Jacob Dietzman, of Crawford county, and the mother of six children, Ethel, Orra, Elva, Laverne, Claude and Clyde. Lurinda, born in February, 1862, is the wife of Timothy Culver, a Harrison township farmer, and has two children, Lela and Leda. Hattie, the youngest daughter, was born in September, 1864, was educated in the Platteville Normal, and for several years was a successful teacher of Grant county; she married Jasper Shipton, of Grant county, and located in Wapello, Iowa, where he kept a hotel; both died in April, 1900—a melancholy instance of the frequent coming of the dread archer, four deaths occurring in the family within a short time.

Mr. Graves has always been a Republican. He was treasurer of the school district for four years, and a constable in the town of Harrison a number of years. Mr. and Mrs. Graves are among the old-time prominent families of Wisconsin, and are well known and highly respected. Their many acts of charity and kindness have been felt in many homes in this community, and they are widely respected and beloved.

JOHN E. WISE, of Beetown, Grant county, became a member of Company I, 20th Wis. V. I., Aug. 14, 1862, enlisting at Beetown, and was identified with the history of that famous regiment throughout the war. He was at Prairie Grove, where Capt. McDermott fell and the regiment lost heavily, more than half its number being left on the field of battle. He served throughout the war as a brave and loyal soldier, and was discharged from the United States service at Galveston, Texas, July 14, 1865. His health was badly shattered by the long and terrible experiences through which he had passed, and he suffers to-day from the ill effects of his life as a soldier.

Mr. Wise was born in Canada in February, 1837, a son of Joseph and Madeline Wise. He left his parents when twenty-one years old, went to Beetown, where the father died, and the mother lived to pass the century mark; she died in the home of her son, John E., Sept. 30, 1899, at the age of one hundred years, three months and ten days. She was the mother of seven children. Daniel, one of the sons, went into the Union service, and died in hospital, at the age of twenty-five.

John E. Wise has been twice married. His first wife, Caroline Polkenhorn, died after his return from the war. His present wife was Julia McDaniel. No children were born to the first marriage, but of the second union fourteen children have been born, of whom seven are now living.

WILLIAM EDWIN HOWE, of Boscobel, is the district attorney for Grant county, and the present mayor of the city in which he resides. He is a prominent lawyer, and displays great familiarity with the fundamental principles of the law, is quick to make application of these to the complicated cases that come before the courts, and is regarded as a rising man in his profession.

Mr. Howe came to Grant county in April, 1892, and located in Boscobel, which has been his home to the present time. He was born in Monona, Clayton Co., Iowa, Jan. 17, 1851, a son of Henry E. and Mary E. (Wood) Howe, natives of Gill, Mass., and Cattaraugus county, N. Y., respectively. They were married at Galena, Ill., where they lived some years, in 1850 removing to Clayton county, Iowa, where they engaged in farming, to him a most congenial occupation. In 1870 they came to Madison, Wis., and there Mr. Howe was for a time in business as a groceryman. He died in Madison, at the age of sixty-nine, in 1879, and his death marked the close of a busy and upright life. He was the father of two children by his first wife, one of whom, Leonard Howe, is now living at Ovatonna, Minn. Mrs. Mary E. Howe first married a Mr. Purcel, and had two daughters by him: Melissa, Mrs. Skinner, of Madison; and Anna, Mrs. C. W. Turner, of LaCrosse, Wis. Mrs. Howe died in Madison in 1890, at the age of sixty-six. Both she and Mr. Howe were buried at Monona, Iowa. They were the parents of six children, five of whom grew to maturity: Elmer L. is the publisher of a paper at Ripon, Wis. William Edwin lives at Boscobel. Frank A. is in the wood and coal business at River Falls, Wis. Carrie L. married Lew F. Porter, of Madison. Eliza M., Mrs. Aithison, is a resident of Madison.

William Edwin Howe passed his early boyhood on the farm, and attained a strong and vigorous manhood. He had a thirst for knowledge, and made such advancement in the local schools that at the age of eighteen he was able to enter the Freshman class of the University of Wisconsin. He was graduated with the class of 1873, with the degree of B. A., took first honors, and displayed marked ability throughout his course. He at once entered the law office of J. H. Carpenter, of Madison, and when the fall term opened became a student in the law school of the University. He was graduated from the law school in 1874, and was at once called to St. Louis to assist in settling the estate of his uncle, Lyman Howe, for years an extensive lumber dealer in that city. In 1876 Mr. Howe entered into partnership with Mills Tourtellotte, under the firm name of Howe & Tourtellotte, and opened a law office in LaCrosse, Wis. They practiced together in that city until the firm was dissolved by the election of Mr. Howe as municipal judge. In 1885 Mr. Howe went to Madison, S. Dak., and followed his profession two years, but was obliged to engage in other business on account of ill health; he turned his attention to real estate, and was in a hotel at Madison for a time. In 1892, as noted above, Mr. Howe came to Boscobel and opened a law office. Here he resumed the practice of his profession, and his success was immediate. He now stands in the front rank among the members of the Bar in his district. In 1896 he was elected district attorney, and again in 1898. In the spring of 1899 Mr. Howe was chosen mayor of Boscobel, and he has also served the city two years as city attorney; held that position also at Madison, S. Dak. Mr. Howe has a good law library, and is very familiar with its contents. He does a general law business, and practices in both the State and United States district and circuit courts. He is a Republican, and during campaign times his voice is frequently heard on the hustings. Socially he is a Mason and a member of the Independent Order of Foresters.

Mr. Howe was married June 23, 1875, to Miss Mary I. Carrier, daughter of Terrence Carrier, of Boscobel. Mrs. Howe was born in Janesville, Wis., and is a lady of most estimable character. Mr. and Mrs. Howe have had four children: Fannie, the oldest, died at Madison, S. Dak., when nine years old, and is buried at Boscobel; T. H. was born in LaCrosse June 11, 1881; Grace C. and William C., twins, were born in Madison, S. Dak., Aug. 8, 1888.

ELIJAH TROLLOPE, an energetic and progressive business man of Cassville, Grant county, who is now successfully engaged in the grocery trade, was born in Vermont Jan. 6, 1845. His parents, Thomas and Elizabeth (Dewing) Trollope, were natives of England, and on their emigration to the New World first located in Canada, where they made their home for six years before their removal to Vermont. In 1854 they came to Little Grant, Wis., and the father is still a resident of Little Grant, Grant county; the mother died in 1894.

Elijah Trollope passed his early life principally in Grant county, and in its public schools he received his literary education. On starting out in life for himself he followed farming in Lancaster township for some time, but is now engaged in the grocery business in Cassville. On Jan. 21, 1895, he was married at Beetown to Mrs. Flora A. Hendricks.

Responding to the President's call for more volunteers during the Civil war, Mr. Trollope enlisted at Lancaster Jan. 4, 1864, in Company I, 20th Wis. V. I., and remained in the service for some time after hostilities ceased. He took part in the capture of Fort Morgan and Spanish Fort, was later transferred to Company G, 35th Wis. V. I., and was honorably discharged at Brownsville, Texas, March 11, 1866, after which he returned to Boscobel, Grant county. He is now one of the leading members of Joseph Mueller Post, No. 218, G. A. R., of Cassville, in which he is filling the office of adjutant.

JOHN ANDERSON. It is astonishing to witness the success of young men who have emigrated to America without capital, and, through their own unaided efforts, have become quite well-to-do. The readiness with which they adapt themselves to circumstances and take advantage of opportunities offered brings to them success and wins them a place among the leading men of the community in which they reside. In John Anderson, of Patch Grove township, Grant county, we find a worthy representative of this class. He was born in Ireland in 1834, though his family is not of Irish ancestry, but, as the name indicates, of Scotch origin. In 1852 he emigrated to the United States, and, after spending some time in New York, came to Wisconsin, since which time he has been a resident of Grant county. He made his home for a while in Wyalusing township, and since 1861 has lived in Patch Grove township, where he owns and operates a good farm.

On July 24, 1862, Mr. Anderson was united in marriage with Mrs. Cornelia W. Stiles, widow of Demiston Stiles, and a daughter of Henry Patch, a well-known pioneer of Grant county, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this work. Mrs. Anderson was born June 28, 1832, and was only four years old when brought by her parents to Grant county. By her first marriage she had three children, one of whom, Chauncey Stiles, is still living. To Mr. and Mrs. Anderson have been born ten children, and seven still survive.

Mr. Anderson began life for himself a poor boy, but by industry and good management he has secured a competence, and is now one of the substantial and prosperous men of his community, as well as one of its most prominent and influential citizens. Both he and his wife are widely and favorably known, and it is safe to say that no couple in the county are held in higher regard.

HOMER M. PAUL, a retired farmer, now living at No. 12 Prairie avenue, Janesville, Rock county, was born in the town of Chili, Monroe Co., N. Y., Oct. 2, 1852, and is a son of Lemuel and Susan (Burrows) Paul, both natives of New York. They had three children, two of whom are now living: Adelbert R., of Davenport, Iowa; and Homer M.

The father was a farmer, and a man of unusual business capacity. He came to Wisconsin in 1870, and located in Janesville, buying a farm which was then in the extreme southern part of the city, and contained 500 acres. He cultivated same until his death, in 1896, when he was over eighty years of age. His first wife, the mother of Homer M., died in 1858, when thirty-four years old. They were not identified with any church, but held to the Baptist faith. He was a Republican. For his second wife Mr. Paul married Miss Lucretia R. Paul, and had by her a family of two sons and two daughters, all of whom grew to maturity: Louis; Edward H.; Vinnie May, wife of Charles Wright; and Clara B., wife of John Cripe. His father, Zebulon Paul, who was a farmer, died in New York when eighty years of age. He was the father of six children. Grandfather, Burrows died early in life, and scarcely anything is known concerning him.

Homer M. Paul lived in Monroe county, N. Y., until he was eighteen years old, and had very good opportunities for obtaining an education. He was reared on the farm, and attended Hicks College, a somewhat celebrated local institution. In 1870 he came to Janesville in company with his parents, and attended Fellows College one winter. Then he took up farming, and lived at home until he was twenty-five years old. His father gave him eighty acres, and to this he has added another eighty, having a fine farm in Section 7, La Prairie township, and also owning three other eighty-acre tracts in the town of Janesville. He has always followed farming, and is a skillful and successful tiller of the soil.

Mr. Paul and Miss Sarah Louise Read were married Nov. 14, 1877. She is a daughter of William H. and Margerie A. (Ercanbrack) Read. They have had four children, Alta Ann, Susan Ada, Gertie Blanche, and Marion Ava. Mr. Paul is a member of Wisconsin Lodge, No. 14, I. O. O. F., and is a staunch Republican. He has served as supervisor of La Prairie township three terms, and is highly regarded by his friends and neighbors. Mr. and Mrs. Paul are genial and hearty people, hospitable in their home, and friendly to all. They are full of cheer and encouragement, and carry sunshine in their lives.

Mrs. Paul's parents were early settlers in Rock county. They had eight children, all but one now living: Martha Elizabeth, wife of E. E. Eddington; George Warren, on the old homestead; John R., of La Prairie township; Sarah L., wife of the gentleman whose name introduces this article; William Arthur, of La Prairie township; Mary, deceased; Jennie, wife of Charles Campbell, of Beloit; and Thornton, of La Prairie, who married Miss Mathie Finch, and lives on the old homestead. Mrs. Paul's father, William H. Read, died in 1880, eleven days before completing his sixty-second year. Her mother died in June, 1886, aged fifty-seven. They were among the early settlers of La Prairie township, and were lifelong agriculturists. He bought government land, and in the early days hauled his grain to Milwaukee, and brought back supplies. His father, John Read, was a native of Bangor, Maine, where he died when eighty years old, from injuries received in falling down stairs. Mrs. Paul's maternal grandfather, Philip Ercanbrack, was born near Gloversville, N. Y., and ran a canal-boat; he lived to old age, and his parents both lived to be over ninety.

JOSEPH EMERSON, D. D., LL. D., deceased. This distinguished representative of classical learning and philosophical culture was the occupant of the chair of Greek at Beloit College for more than fifty-two years, and his name was associated with the history of the college from its beginning.

Dr. Emerson was born in Norfolk, Conn., May 28, 1821, and was a son of Dr. Ralph Emerson, a native of Hollis, N. H., a Professor in Andover Theological Seminary for twenty-five years, and previously Pastor of the Congregational Church at Norfolk, Conn., for thirteen years. Dr. Ralph Emerson married Eliza Rockwell, a native of Colebrook, Conn., and they were the parents of nine children, three of whom are now living: Samuel Emerson, of the University of Virginia; Ralph Emerson, a manufacturer at Rockford, Ill., associated with the Emerson Manufacturing Co.; and Elizabeth, wife of Rev. J. S. Humphrey, of Oak Park, Ill. Mary, wife of Prof. Joseph Haven, of the Chicago Theological Seminary, died December 31, 1896. Charlotte, wife of Rev. Dr. W. D. Brown, of East Orange, N. J., was the first president of the Federation of Women's Clubs of the United States; she died in February, 1895. Rev. Daniel Emerson was pastor of a number of churches in Missouri, Michigan and Ohio. Rockwell Emerson was a lawyer in New York City. Ebenezer Porter Emerson was a farmer in Winnebago county, Ill., and an owner of real estate in different parts of the State; he died in June, 1891. Rev. Ralph Emerson came to Illinois in 1857 and located at Rockford, where he died in 1863, at the age of seventy-five. His widow survived until 1875, attaining the age of seventy-nine. She was a member of the Congregational Church, in which her husband was an honored minister.

Deacon Daniel Emerson, the father of Ralph, was the leading citizen of his native town, Hollis, N. H., represented his town nineteen times in the State Legislature, and served in the State Constitutional Convention. He was a Revolutionary soldier and participated in three wars, each time as captain, the third time going out in command of a company. He was a farmer, and also had an interest in a store. He died in 1820, at the age of seventy-four. His father, Rev. Daniel Emerson, was born in Reading, Mass. He served as a chaplain in the French war. The history of the Emerson family in this country begins with Thomas Emerson, who settled in Ipswich, Mass., in 1638. His son Joseph came with him from Hertfordshire, England, when he was eighteen years old. In England the Emerson family are clearly traced back to Ralph Emerson, in the time of Henry VIII, in 1535. The family is of Norman antecedents, and its coat of arms is a compound of those of English, Norwegian and Danish royal families. It was presented to "Raffe" Emerson in England, and was brought to Massachusetts, where it may be seen on the tombstone of Thomas Emerson, at Ipswich. Joseph Emerson, son of Thomas, became a clergyman at Milton, Mass., and was in charge of the parish there when the town was burned by the Indians in King Philip's war. He went to Concord, Mass., where the parents of his wife, Elizabeth Buckley, lived. Her father, Rev. Edward Buckley, was a son of Rev. Peter Buckley, the first settler of that town.

Martin Rockwell, a farmer, of Colebrook, Conn., the maternal grandfather of Prof. Emerson, of Beloit, was born in 1772, and died in 1851. He came of a good old Puritan line. His ancestor six generations back, Deacon William Rockwell, was a member of a church formed in Plymouth, England. This church elected Messrs. Warham and Maverick their pastor and teacher, respectively, emigrated to this country in 1630 and settled in Dorchester, Mass. In 1636 the greater part of the church moved to Windsor, Conn. From that point Samuel Rockwell, the father of Martin Rockwell, moved to Colebrook in 1776, and was the fifth settler in that town.

Joseph Emerson was born at Norfolk, Conn., where he lived until nine years old, when he was taken by his parents to Andover, Mass., and there attained his majority. He fitted for college in Phillips Academy, a famous old school at Andover, entered Yale in 1837, and was graduated in 1841, after which he was a teacher for one year at New London, Conn. He went back to Andover and studied theology in the Seminary there for two years, returning to Yale, where he taught four years. In May, 1848, he came to Beloit, Wis., and for fifty-two years, until his death, was Professor of Greek in Beloit College, being a member of the first Faculty of that institution. In addition to his teaching and writing for Beloit College the Professor did much preaching and lecturing in Wisconsin and the West. A volume of his "Lectures and Sermons" was published in 1897. One of the finest buildings of Beloit College, built by Dr. D. K. Pearsons, was named "Emerson Hall" in his honor. Prof. Emerson died of general debility August 4, 1900, honored and mourned by the college, the community, and the educational world at large.

Dr. Emerson and Miss Mary Cordelia North were married Sept. 1, 1852, at New Britain, Conn. Mrs. Emerson was the daughter of Alvin and Clarissa (Burnam) North. They had the following children: Ralph Chapin, born March 20, 1855, died Aug. 31, 1855; Charles Alvin, born Aug. 29, 1856, is now a druggist in Beloit; Clara Eliza, born April 4, 1866, is a teacher at New Haven, Conn. Charles Alvin married Miss Delia Blodgett, and they have two children, Charles Alvin, Jr., and Cordelia. The first wife of Prof. Emerson died Nov. 13, 1879, and on July 9, 1884, he married Miss Frances Helen Brace, a daughter of Harvey and Hannah (Thompson) Brace. The latter, in connection with her husband, founded the Art Department of Beloit College, whose art collections, secured by their united efforts, are of great value.

QUINCY O. SUTHERLAND, M. D., is a well-known and eminently successful physician of Janesville, Rock county, whose reputation as a skillful practitioner extends beyond the confines of his native State. He is a son of Chester and Sarah A. (Rood) Sutherland, and a brother of that distinguished Rock county lawyer, George G. Sutherland, whose biography appears upon another page. His family history is there given, with more or less attention to detail, and for some interesting particulars in connection therewith the reader is referred to that sketch.

Dr. Sutherland was second, in the order of birth, in a family of six children—five sons and one daughter. He was born April 13, 1848, in the town of Fitchburg, Dane county, his boyhood was passed upon the paternal farm, and his young ideas were first taught to "shoot" in the district school. Later he matriculated at the State University, at Madison, entering the preparatory and graduating from the academic department, in the class of 1871. The bent of his mind was wholly toward the study of medicine, and he pursued his professional studies at Hahnemann College, Chicago, receiving his degree from that institution in 1874. He at once commenced practice at Janesville, in which city his native talent, aided and developed by close study and a resolute determination to keep in close touch with the progress of the times, has won for him a large clientele and an enviable reputation.

At the very outset of his career, which was destined to prove so successful, the Doctor married Miss Addie Green, a daughter of Timothy and Jane (Jessup) Green. The issue of this union has been three children, Charles, Frederick and Ella. The daughter is yet a pupil in the Janesville high school, while the two sons are studying medicine at Chicago.

Dr. Sutherland is a member of numerous medical societies, and has been the recipient of many honors at the hands of his professional brethren. He was for several terms president of the Rock County Medical Society, and is an honored member of the Wisconsin Homeopathic Medical Society, in which he has held every office, as well as of the American Institute of Homeopathy, the American Public Health Association, and the Pan-American Public Health Association. At present (1901) he is a member of the Wisconsin State Board of Health, and has rendered most valuable service to the city of Janesville in the position of president of the board of education. He is fond of social pleasures and a delightful host, although the many and exacting calls upon his time prevent his devoting as much time as he would like to relaxation and recreation. He is a Master Mason; in politics a Republican; and in religious faith a Congregationalist, both himself and his wife being members of that communion. His pleasant home is at No. 306 South Second street, where he erected a handsome residence in 1889. He is possessed of a comfortable fortune.

GEORGE GEER SUTHERLAND. Although not yet past middle life, Mr. Sutherland has won for himself an enviable position at the Rock County Bar, and is one of Janesville's most substantial and influential citizens. His family is of Scottish origin, although both his grandfather and father were born in New York. The former, Joshua Sutherland, was a native of Dutchess county, that State. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. By occupation he was a farmer and millwright, and he was held in high regard by his neighbors as a citizen, a man and a patriot. He was the father of a large family, and died after reaching threescore years and ten.

Mr. Sutherland's father, Chester Sutherland, was a carpenter and joiner and cabinet-maker by trade, and came from New York to Wisconsin while yet a young man, locating first at Milwaukee. He bought 320 acres of land in the town of Fitchburg, Dane county, four miles from Madison, to which he subsequently added other small parcels by purchase. He died there, in 1889, at the ripe old age of seventy-four. His widow, Mrs. Sarah Ann (Rood) Sutherland, is yet living, in Madison, and is a devout member of the Methodist Church, as was also her husband. He was a man of no little influence in the community, his bright mind and blameless life alike commanding respect, and filled various local offices, among them those of supervisor, county superintendent of schools, and township treasurer. His wife was born in Vermont, and is, like himself, of Scottish ancestry. Her father, Orlin Rood, migrated from the Green Mountain State to Illinois, bringing his family with him, and found employment on the building of the Illinois & Michigan canal. He bought considerable real property in Chicago, as well as valuable pine lands in Wisconsin, and was the owner of several sawmills.

George G. Sutherland was one of a family of five sons and one daughter, all but one yet living. Two elder brothers—Henry J. and Quincy O.—live in Wisconsin, the former near Madison, and the latter at Janesville. Another brother, Albert W., has his home in Randolph, Iowa, while the only sister, Annie E., is the wife of George Gill, of Madison. Our subject was born in Fitchburg March 21, 1851, and was educated at the State University at Madison, graduating from the academic department in 1872, and from the law school two years later. The following eighteen months he devoted to gaining a thorough knowledge of practice, in the office of J. D. Gurnee, Esq., of Madison, and in 1876 began the active practice of his profession at Janesville. He has continued to follow same since that date, and is at present senior member of the firm of Sutherland & Nolan.

Mr. Sutherland has promoted and aided in the organization of many important commercial, financial and mechanical enterprises in the city of his residence. Among these may be named the Janesville Cotton Mills, which employ from 350 to 450 hands in the manufacture of brown sheetings; the Bower City Bank; and the Choate-Hollister Furniture Co. Of each of these he was one of the incorporators, and in each is a director, being president of the first named. His rare business ability, no less than his recognized high standard of fidelity to trusts reposed in him, admirably qualifies him for positions of such high responsibility. Mr. Sutherland is also a large owner of real estate. He is a Mason, of the thirty-second degree, being a member of Western Star Lodge, No. 14, A. F. & A. M.; Janesville Chapter, No. 5, R. A. M.; Janesville Commandery, No. 2, K. T.; and the Milwaukee Consistory. He is a Democrat, but has never either held or sought political office.

Our subject resides, with his wife and three children, at No. 256 Park Place, in what was formerly known as "the Wheelock Place." Mrs. Sutherland before marriage was Miss Agnes Sayre, daughter of David F. and Sarah E. (Ely) Sayre. Their marriage was celebrated on June 30, 1880, and, as has been said, has been blessed with three children, Sarah, Clarence and Frank. Mrs. Sutherland is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

GEORGE W. HALL, SR., of Evansville, Rock county, has had a varied and eventful history. He has thoroughly tried all changes of fortune, and knows by sad experience the meaning of the "ups and downs" of life. He has made money, and scattered it to the winds. He began life for himself with no capital but his ambitious spirit and clever brain. Drifting into the show business, and finding himself peculiarly fitted for it, he made it his life occupation, and has but recently retired from the sawdust arena. He has now disposed of all his circus property, and is living in Evansville, with extensive real-estate investments in Rock county and elsewhere.

Mr. Hall was born in Lowell, Mass., Dec. 5, 1837, and is a son of Joseph B. and Susan (Nichols) Hall, both natives of New Hampshire. Six children were born to them: George W.; Benjamin Franklin, who during the Civil war became a member of the 13th Wis. V. I., and died in the hospital at Nashville; Orrin, of Oshkosh, Wis.; James, a farmer at Antigo, Wis.; and Byron and Charles, both of whom died when children, from scarlet fever. The father was a watchman at Lowell, Mass., when a young man, and then went to Manchester, N. H., where he ran a stationary engine. In mature life he became a partner in a sash, door and blind factory, under the firm name of Baldwin, Stephens & Hall. The factory burned down, and Mr. Hall became connected with a car-making firm at Bakersville, N. H. He afterward owned a steam mill on the Merrimac river, opposite Manchester, until it was destroyed by fire. He owned a farm at Hillsboro, N. H., and in 1859 came to Rock county, Wis., and bought a farm at Magnolia, where he spent the last years of his life. He died in 1882, at the age of seventy-four. His widow survived a number of years, dying in 1895, at the age of eighty. He was a Baptist, and she a Methodist.

John Hall, the grandfather of George W., Sr., was a native of New Hampshire, and came of English stock. He was a farmer, and died in middle life, in his native State. He was the father of four sons and one daughter. His father was a veteran of the Revolution, and for many years drew a pension for his services in that struggle.

Samuel Nichols, the father of Susan, mentioned above, was a native of Massachusetts, and of Scottish descent. He was a farmer in the town of Stoddard, and died in his native State when between ninety and one hundred years old. He had four sons and one daughter. His father also served in the Revolution, and drew a pension.

George W. Hall spent his earlier years in Lowell and Manchester, until he reached the age of ten. Then an uncontrollable longing to be with the circus manifested itself, and he would run away from home in the spring, spend the summer with some circus, and then return home in the fall to spend the winter at home. He did this until he was about seventeen, when he graduated from the district school, as he himself says, by having a fracas with the teacher, and with that he made his way to Boston, and found work in a candy factory at $4 a month. When he had accumulated $13.64 he quit. He went to Concord, and started peddling popcorn on the trains and at various towns. In 1855 he took himself to New York, and followed the same business during the winter, spending the summer season with various circus organizations. From these experiences he acquired the name of "Pop-corn George," a name that he has never lost through all the mutations of fortune.

Mr. Hall joined the Dick-Sands wagon show in New York in 1860, came by wagon road through Canada into the West, and spent the following winter with his father in Magnolia, Wis. He followed the side show business with various organizations for several years. He was with Jesse Maybell, and after leaving him organized a show of his own, and attached himself to the great Bailey show, and later in the same season to the Van Amberg organization. He left that organization at Cleveland, and made the round of the county fairs. He spent the next winter at Magnolia, and occupied himself as a trapper. The next season he was with the Orton side show, left them at Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, and joined Howe's European Show, and when the county fair season came on he made that route. In the late fall he went to Madison, Wis., and had a museum during the winter. Subsequently he was with Frank Howe's show, then started another museum combination, and conducted it at Madison during the winter. The following year he and John Long, of Janesville, organized a show, which they ran through the lead-mining regions of Wisconsin, and came back to Janesville in June completely bankrupt. Mr. Hall reorganized it as a side show, put it alongside of the Jim French circus, and traveled in this way until the fair season began. This was the most prosperous year that he had so far experienced. He closed the season with $4,800 and a farm which he had bought and paid for, all after his June failure.

Mr. Hall had a side show of his own with McKinzie & Johnson, prominent circus men, and ran with them for several years. In 1881 he organized a large circus for himself. He had a circus, menagerie and museum, and traveled with same until 1885, visiting every State in the Union excepting Montana, Nevada and California. He crossed the Atlantic, and the Caribbean Sea in 1885, and showed in all the West Indies, including the Bahama Islands. The next year he returned to the United States and leased his show to George DeHaven, and at a later period sold it to him. For five years the show traveled under the name of "Col. George W. Hall's United States Railroad Shows." In 1887 our subject bought the Bignley show, reorganized it, and conducted it for two years. In the fall of 1889 he formed a partnership with Samuel McFlynn, and was with him until the summer of 1891, when he sold to Mr. McFlynn. He formed a partnership afterward with his son Charles, reorganized a show and went South, and remained in that region two years. He afterward bought his son's interests, and continued alone in the business until 1898. In 1897 he went to Mexico, crossing at El Paso and Juarez, and showed about a year in that country, with Orrin Brothers. They spent six weeks in the city of Mexico, and visited all the important Mexican cities except Tampico. In 1898 Mr. Hall disposed of all his show interests, and is now making his home in the city of Evansville, where he has a fine residence in the southern part of the town, surrounded by twenty acres of tobacco land. He has extensive real-estate investments in Rock county, and owns altogether 466 acres in the county. He owns fine residences in Tampa, Fla., in Denver, Colo., and in Anoka county, Minnesota.

Mr. Hall and Miss Sarah Wilder were married in March, 1855. Mrs. Hall is a daughter of Levi Wilder, and has been a helpful companion to her ambitious and enterprising husband. They have had four children, George W., Ida, Charles and Jessie. George married Miss Lida Wood, and they have three children, Frank, Grace and Charles Russell. Ida married a Mr. Blair, and died when thirty-three years old. Charles died in Meridian, Miss., where he was a partner with "Sam" McFlynn at the time of his illness and death. Jessie married Frank Macart, and is the mother of two children, Fred and Vivian.

Mr. Hall is the oldest showman now living, in the point of years of continuous travel. He claims to be the first person to introduce the breeding of Poland-China hogs in Rock county, and one of the first to encourage tobacco raising on a large scale. He has proved that marsh tiling is a success—a fact which will be of interest to the farmers of Rock county—having made the marsh land the most productive land in his locality. In his extensive travels Mr. Hall has had many thrilling experiences that would be deeply interesting if submitted to the public. However, he prefers not to exploit his adventures in a boastful or sensational manner.

JOHN M. AND GEORGE H. ROBINSON are energetic and progressive young farmers in the town of Platteville, Grant county, and have made many friends by their open and manly conduct.

John M. Robinson was born in October, 1862, in a log cabin near the site of the house where he now lives, and is a son of Thomas and Ann (Hilton) Robinson. The father was born in Hook, Yorkshire, England, in April, 1815, and the mother in Lincolnshire, England, Nov. 10, 1818. They were reared in their home country, were married in 1839, and lived in England for two years afterward, coming to America and to Grant county, Wis., in 1841. They settled on reserved mineral land, which he purchased from the government at a later period. He bought more land, and before his death was the owner of 500 acres in one body, was a successful farmer, and became very wealthy through his own industry. He built a log cabin, which was their home until 1863, in which year he erected a large brick house, and there made his home until his death, July 14, 1898. He was widely known as an honest and conscientious citizen, was always ready to help in the establishment of schools and churches, and there is a church building on his land for which he and Richard Huntington together gave the site; they also dedicated the cemetery. His worthy wife survived him one year, and died Aug. 16, 1899. They had nine children, seven of whom are living: (1) Sarah, born in England in 1840, married James Huntington, and settled on a farm near Darlington, where she died in 1873, leaving seven children—Allen, of Elk Grove; Bell, Mrs. George Turner, whose husband is sheriff of Lafayette county, and lives at Darlington; Amelia, wife of George Booth, a Grant county farmer; Albert, of Darlington; Charles (he visited the Paris Exposition in the summer of 1900); Wilbur, a farmer in Lafayette county; and Frank, a resident of Wood county, Wis. (2) Miss Jane, born in Grant county in 1844, is at home, and she and her sister Amelia together cared for their aged parents during their lives. (3) Mary, born in May, 1846, married Thomas Edgar, of Grant county, and they settled in Kansas, where she died May 26, 1899, leaving five children, Lillie (wife of Charles Kuhlman, of Oketo, Kans.), George, William, Florence, and Olive. (4) Thomas A., born in October, 1849, married Miss May Topins, of Grant county, who died on his farm in Lafayette county, leaving one daughter, Laura M., now Mrs. Newell, of Iowa. Mr. Robinson later married a sister of his first wife, and is now living on a 240-acre farm in Grundy county, Iowa. (5) George H. was born in 1851. (6) Charles W. was born in December, 1853, is unmarried, and is settled on one of the home farms. (7) James Richard, born in October, 1855, is a partner of his brother Charles. (8) Amelia A., born in November, 1857, obtained her education in the home school, and is a lady of culture and refinement; her kindly presence is felt and appreciated by the family. (9) John M. Robinson is the youngest of a large family; he was a student for one year at the Platteville Normal, grew up at home, and became manager of the paternal estate when quite young. After the death of the parents the four sons continued on the large estate; they have three houses and a number of barns. Charles and Richard farm eighty acres, which they purchased, adjoining the old homestead. John and George are partners in the management of the old homestead, and are doing well. The Robinsons are one of the old pioneer families that settled in Grant county when Wisconsin was mostly given over to the wilderness. The family are all Republicans, and the father was roadmaster for seven years.

J. L. FINLEY, a prosperous farmer and prominent resident of Cassville, is one of the pioneers of Grant county, having been identified with its interests for half a century. He is a native of Missouri, born at Ste. Genevieve, Dec. 3, 1833.

John Finley, his father, was born in Finleyville, Washington Co., Penn., in 1794, and in that State grew to manhood and was married, his first wife dying in Washington county. At an early day he moved to Corydon, Ind., where he wedded Miss Margaret Thompson, who was born in Louisville, Ky., in 1802. There he was engaged in merchandising for two years, and later conducted a store at De Witt, Ark., after which he moved to Ste. Genevieve, Mo., where he was similarly employed. In 1834 he moved to Dubuque, Iowa, and became one of the early merchants of that place, conducting a general supply store for about four years. In 1838 he located on the Mississippi river, at what became known as Finley's Landing, named in his honor, and there he kept a wood yard for five years. At the end of that time he located on a farm at Durango, in Dubuque county, Iowa, where he made his home until his death, in 1847. Subsequently his widow and family settled near Spechts Ferry, on the Mississippi river, and during the season of 1849-50 her son J. L. had charge of the ferry. In 1851 the family moved to Potosi, Wis., and Mr. Finley has since made his home in Grant county. The mother died in Waterloo township Aug. 22, 1860. The children were Thompson, who died at Finley's Landing in June, 1842, at the age of seventeen years; Wilmot, who died in Hurricane, Grant county, in 1855, aged twenty-eight; Margaret, who died at the age of twenty-four years; J. L., whose name introduces this sketch; Howard, who enlisted at Waterloo, in 1862, in the 25th Wis. V. I., and was killed at Decatur, Ga.; Mrs. Julia Engles, a resident of Oelwein, Iowa; and Mrs. Isabelle McDowell, a resident of Missouri. The rest of the family, which numbered eleven children, died young.

The boyhood and youth of J. L. Finley were principally passed in Iowa, and in the spring of 1851 he came with the family to Grant county, Wis., where he has since successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits. In 1855 he took up his residence in Waterloo township, where he opened up and improved a farm, making his home there until his removal to Cassville, in 1879. He still carries on farming.

Mr. Finley was married in Beetown, in 1855, to Miss Eliza J. Vedder, a native of Chautauqua county, N. Y., and a daughter of A. W. and Susan (Hogle) Verder, the former born in Cortland county, same State, in 1809, the latter in Genesee county, in 1820. Her paternal grandfather, John Vedder, was one of the early settlers of New York. Her maternal grandfather, Andrew Hogle, a Revolutionary hero, came to Grant county, Wis., in 1842, and located in Lancaster township. During 1841 and 1842 he carried the mail between Galena and Prairie du Chien, and also drove a stage and engaged in farming. In 1875 he moved to Le Mars, Iowa, where he made his home until his death, in 1897. His wife died in 1894, at an advanced age. In 1842 A. W. Vedder, father of Mrs. Finley, came to Grant county from New York, making the journey from Chicago with teams. He located at Beetown, where he owned and operated a farm of 200 acres, and, being a machinist, he manufactured the first threshing machine used in Grant county. He worked at his trade in the government employ two years. His death occurred in Beetown, in May, 1898, and his wife died in October, 1896. Their children were Jefferson, a resident of Dakota; Mrs. Eliza J. Finley; Mrs. Irene Wood, who lives on the old home farm; and Mrs. Ella Alsip, a resident of Bushnell, S. Dak. Mrs. Finley also has a half brother and sister, A. J. Vedder, of Mason City, Iowa; and Mrs. Lucy Gardner, of Lancaster, Wis. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Finley, namely: Clara B., now the wife of Frank Teasdale, of Cassville; James, who wedded Mary Johnson, and lives in Twin Valley, Minn.; Myrta, wife of Willis C. Nickles, of Cassville; and Effie D., at home.

When President Lincoln issued a call for more volunteers to aid in crushing out the Rebellion, Mr. Finley enlisted in August, 1862, in Company H, 25th Wis. V. I., for three years, and on Aug. 29, 1864, he re-enlisted, in Company E, 43d Wis. V. I., for one year or during the war, being sworn into the United States service at Milwaukee. His regiment became a part of the Army of the Potomac. For some time he was stationed at Johnsonville, Tenn., on detached duty, and also near Nashville, where he assisted in the construction of block house No. 1. He was honorably discharged at Nashville July 6, 1865, and mustered out at Milwaukee. In politics Mr. Finley is a Republican, and he most efficiently filled the office of constable for four years while a resident of Waterloo township, and three years in Cassville. He and his wife are widely and favorably known, and are numbered among the leading citizens of the county, as well as among its honored pioneers. Mrs. Finley is a prominent member of the Order of the Eastern Star, in which she has served as matron and associate matron, and is also a great worker in Woman's Relief Corps, No. 47, of Lancaster. In her youth she was a school teacher.

SHASTA E. BARNARD, of Evansville, Rock county, is a member of the well-known tobacco house of Barnard & Wilder, and is a man of fine business habits and unswerving integrity. By strict attention to the work before him and reliable methods he has won a name and a standing of which any man might be proud.

Mr. Barnard was born in the town of Porter, Rock Co., Wis., at the family home, four miles east of Evansville, and is a son of Elliott D. and Susan (Webb) Barnard, both natives of the State of New York. The family history and antecedents of the Evansville Barnards are fully set forth in the biographical sketch of E. D. Barnard, which appears elsewhere.

Shasta E. Barnard spent his childhood and youth on the farm in Porter township, and grew to manhood with the privileges and opportunities of the farmer boy for the acquirement of a sound physique and the accumulation of a vital force that should last through a hard and busy lifetime. He attended the district school and the seminary at Evansville, and was engaged in farming until 1881. His father had moved into Evansville the previous year, and was engaged in the tobacco business with Thomas Hutson. Shasta Barnard became interested in the business in 1881, and bought out the interest of Mr. Hutson some years later, the firm then becoming E. D. Barnard & Son. They continued in business until 1893, when the personnel was changed by the retirement of the senior Barnard and the entrance of Mr. Wilder, so that it became Barnard & Wilder. The new firm owns extensive warehouses at Oregon and Madison, as well as at Evansville, and is doing a large and increasing business. Our subject is a stockholder in the Union Telephone Exchange.

On April 3, 1881, Shasta E. Barnard married Miss Lilla C. Lee, daughter of T. T. and Julia (Lowe) Lee, and they have had two children, Fred and Orland K. Fred died when a boy of eight years. Mr. and Mrs. Barnard have an elegant and inviting home on West Main street, erected in 1901. Mr. Barnard is a member of Union Lodge, A. F. & A. M.; of the local lodge of the Knights of Pythias; and of the Modern Woodmen of America. He and his wife are members of the Order of the Eastern Star. Mr. Barnard is a Republican in political sentiment.

DR. CHARLES C. DEVEREAUX is a fine example of the younger generation of Wisconsin's native sons. He is a skilled dentist of Janesville, Rock county, and has come to the practice of his profession trained in the best schools of the country, representing the ripest scientific culture of the times.

Dr. Devereaux was born in Evansville, Wis., Feb. 26, 1868, son of Edward and Eva (Whaley) Devereaux, natives of New York and Ohio, respectively. They were the parents of four sons and four daughters, and six of their children are now living: Theodore E., of Fort Dodge, Iowa; Harry C., of Algona, Iowa; Charles C.; Claude H., of Humboldt, Iowa; Lula B., wife of Albert Dixon, of Evansville, Wis.; and Kittie D., wife of Arthur Snashall, of the same place. The sons are all dentists of high professional character and unusual ability. Edward Devereaux was a cheese and butter maker for many years, and was an early settler in Rock county. The first few years of his residence in Wisconsin were passed in Milwaukee. He moved to Evansville, which city is still his home; his wife died there Dec. 16, 1899. He is a member of the Baptist Church, as was also Mrs. Devereaux. His father, Theodore Devereaux, spent his early life in the State of New York, and died in Iowa, well advanced in years. The Devereaux family was originally French, but has lived many generations in this country, and ranks among the oldest and proudest in New England and New York. The maternal grandfather of the subject of this writing died when a young man.

Charles C. Devereaux was reared on the farm near Evansville, attended the public schools, and lived on the farm until he was twenty years old. He selected dentistry as his life work, and went into the office of Dr. Theodore Devereaux, where he studied until 1891. That fall he entered the Haskell Post Graduate Dental College, and completed the course there. He continued with his brother until 1893, in which year he entered the Chicago College of Dental Surgery, and was graduated with honor in the spring of 1896. He resumed practice with his brother at Fort Dodge, Iowa, and remained with him until January, 1898, when he came to Janesville and opened an office, and at once commanded a flattering clientage from among the best people of the city.

Dr. Devereaux is popular in fraternal circles, and is a member of Union Lodge, No. 32, A. F. & A. M.; Evansville Chapter, No. 5, R. A. M.; the A. O. U. W.; the Royal Arcanum; and the Royal League; when at college he joined the Delta Sigma, and retains an active interest in that fraternity, holding his membership in Beta Chapter, and also in the Supreme Chapter. In these various associations his manly and genial character has never failed to command respect and win him warm personal friends. He is an active worker in the Southern Wisconsin Dental Association, where his learning and skill are recognized. In politics he is a Republican.

WILLIAM STEVENS, a retired stock and grain dealer at Evansville, has been identified with the business interests of that region from an early day, and counts a host of friends among the farmers and stock dealers of Rock county. Mr. Stevens was born in Franklin county, N. Y., near Fort Covington, Jan. 10, 1842, a son of William and Mary (McMillan) Stevens, natives of Vermont and New York, respectively. They were the parents of five children, four of whom are now living, David E. and William, of Evansville; Jennie A., wife of A. Van Patten, of Perry, Iowa; and Styles H., of Fort Covington, N. Y. The father, who was a farmer, died in New York in January, 1881, at the age of seventy-five. The mother died in 1877, at the age of seventy; she was a Presbyterian. His father, Ebenezer Stevens, was a native of Vermont, of Scottish and English descent, and was a farmer by occupation. He died in New York at the age of eighty. He was pressed into the war of 1812 as a teamster. David McMillan, the father of Mary McMillan, mentioned above, was of Scottish descent. He was a farmer in Franklin county, N. Y., and was between seventy-five and eighty years of age when he died.

William Stevens was reared on his father's farm in Franklin county, N. Y., where he attended the district school. He remained at home with his parents until 1869, in which year he came to Evansville and established himself in the stock and grain business. This was his vocation for twenty-five years. Since then he has mainly occupied himself with the management of two extensive farms near the city, one in the town of Union, containing 300 acres, and the other in Porter and Center townships, containing 440 acres. He has a beautiful home in Evansville, which he built in 1896.

Mr. Stevens and Miss Elvira Gilman, daughter of Obed and Sarah (Case) Gilman, were married June 17, 1874. They have had two children born to them, Mary and Meda. Mary died in 1881, when she was a bright and winning child of two years. Mrs. Stevens belongs to the Methodist Church, and our subject is a member of Leota Lodge, No. 16, I. O. O. F. He is a Democrat, was mayor of Evansville two years, and has served the city several years as a member of the board of aldermen. He is a careful business man, and a public-spirited citizen.

HON. ANDREW BARLASS (deceased) was one of the earliest settlers of Rock county, and long occupied an elegant and commodious home on his farm in Section 36, Harmony township. The locality was scarcely less than a wilderness when he arrived in Wisconsin, and he addressed himself with energy and perseverance to the creation of a productive and supporting farm out of the beautiful wild land. He was eminently successful in all his undertakings, and became quite prosperous and well-to-do before his death. He is remembered as a hard-working and upright farmer, and a worthy citizen.

Mr. Barlass was born in Kinross, Scotland, Sept. 30, 1822; and was a son of David and Mary (Marshall) Barlass, both born and bred in Scotland. They had a family of three sons and one daughter: Thomas, of Bradford township, Rock county; Mrs. Helen Brown, of Harmony township; David, of Harmony; and Andrew, our subject. The father was a farmer, and died in Scotland when only twenty-eight years of age. His widow came to Wisconsin, settled in Rock county in 1844, and died Jan. 14, 1875. Our subject's grandfather, Andrew Barlass, died in Scotland in old age. He had six children. Mrs. Barlass' father, who died in Scotland when an old man, had two sons and three daughters.

Andrew Barlass came to this country in 1842, and locating in Johnstown township, Rock Co., Wis., worked for his uncle, Robert Barlass, two years. Then he bought the farm noted above, added eighty acres to it, and at the time of his death owned 160 acres. He always followed farming, though he was a natural mechanic. He had received a good common-school education in Scotland, one of his teachers being a nephew of Robert Burns. He first married Miss Margaret Clink, who bore him four children, Margaret, Mary, Helen and David. Margaret married David Clark, of Harmony township. Mary married Robert Clark, of Harmony township. Helen married David Duncan, a physician in Chicago. David married Ella Hill, and lives at Hastings, Neb. Mrs. Margaret Barlass died in 1851, and on June 18, 1861. Mr. Barlass married Miss Margaret Beveridge, a daughter of James and Christina (White) Beveridge. Six children were born to this union: Christina Jane, Agnes May, Andrew James, Christina, John Albert and William Frank. Christina Jane died when five years and four months old. Agnes May married William Koehelin, who is now deceased. The other children are all at home.

Mr. Barlass was a man of prominence in his day. With his wife he belonged to the United Presbyterian Church, and had a high standing for integrity and moral character. He was a staunch Republican, and served as chairman of the town board, school director, assessor and justice of the peace for many years, and was a member of the General Assembly of Wisconsin for three years. He was president of the township insurance company. He died July 26, 1895, at the age of seventy-two years and ten months.

James and Christina (White) Beveridge, parents of Mrs. Barlass, were natives of Scotland. They had four children: James, a soldier in the war of the Rebellion, who died at his home in Iowa, leaving a widow, Margaret (Clink) Beveridge; Christina, wife of John Addie, of Northville, S. Dak.; Margaret; and John G., of Doland, S. Dak., who married Margaret Allen. The father was a farmer. The mother died in Scotland in 1846, when about thirty-five years old, and he came to this country in 1852, bought a farm in Johnstown township, Rock Co., Wis., and lived there until 1853, when he sold out and bought a farm of eighty acres in Harmony township. This he sold later on, moving to Iowa, and later returned to Wisconsin, where he has lived with his daughter for the last five years. Mrs. Barlass came to this country when ten years old with her aunt, Miss Jane Beveridge, who brought the three youngest children of Mr. Beveridge to this country, and returned to Scotland a year later. Mrs. Barlass' paternal grandfather, James Beveridge, died in Scotland at an advanced age. Her maternal grandfather, James White, was born in Scotland, moved to England, and died in New South Wales.

JOHN A. KLINDT. No better illustration of the characteristic energy and enterprise of the typical German-American citizen can be found than that afforded by the career of this prominent business man of Cassville, Grant county. Coming to this country with no capital except his abilities, he has made his way to success through wisely directed effort, and he can now look back with satisfaction upon past struggles.

Mr. Klindt was born May 15, 1844, in the village of Prasdorf, near the city of Kiel, Holstein, Germany, a son of Claus and Catharine (Sneclode) Klindt, natives of the same place. The father, who was a tailor by trade, spent his entire life in Germany, where he died at the age of eighty-three years, the mother at the age of seventy-eight. Their children were John A., Anna, a resident of Luverne, Iowa; and Lena, Mrs. Ramm, who makes her home in the same place.

In his native land John A. Klindt received a common-school education, his summers being devoted to work, his winters to study, during his boyhood and youth. In August, 1864, he came to America, and on reaching Cassville, Wis., found that his capital consisted of a silver half dollar, dated 1823, which he still has, and intends to keep as a memento of those early days. That fall he engaged in threshing on a farm, and attended school during the winter. On May 1, 1865, he entered the employ of C. L. La Grave & Barks, proprietors of a warehouse and store, as clerk and bookkeeper, and on May 1, 1868, became connected with the business of which he is now the head. Mr. Klindt served as clerk and bookkeeper for John Geiger until the latter's death, in December, 1873, and on January 20, 1874, purchased the stock of goods and commenced business on his own account. He was alone until March 1, 1878, when he formed a partnership with Gustav and O. F. Geiger, under the firm name of Klindt, Geiger & Co., dealers in general merchandise, buyers and shippers of grain and produce, and proprietors of the Cassville Creamery. The last named industry was established by them in 1885, and has since been conducted most successfully. As merchants they carry a large and well-selected stock of dry goods, groceries, clothing, boots, shoes, crockery, flour, groceries and, in fact, everything found in a first-class establishment of the kind. They are part owners of the Cassville Electric Light Plant. The firm is also extensively interested in the canning business, owning and operating one of the largest canning factories in the State; the main building, erected in 1893, is 50x160 feet, with an addition 48x110 feet, and a pickle shed 50x110 feet, and here employment is furnished to from seventy-five to one hundred people. This enterprising house also holds interest in a new canning and pickle factory which is now under construction at Janesville, Wis., and concerning which the Janesville Daily Recorder of April 21, 1901, makes mention as follows:

"Yesterday afternoon the articles of incorporation of P. Hohenadel, Jr., & Co. were filed with Register of Deeds Rowe. The incorporators are P. Hohenadel, Jr., John A. Klindt, Otto F. Geiger, and Otto Fahling, all of Cassville, and the capital stock is $100,000. Work has been well started on the new plant and ground is broken. The plans have been accepted and work on the buildings will be pushed to a rapid finish. All the acreage has been secured and the company have arranged for leasing several good-sized farms which they will plant with such products as need more experience in the care of."

In April, 1875, Mr. Klindt married Miss Ida Sager, a native of Mecklenburg, Germany, who came to America in 1863 with her parents, Christian and Mary (Wodrich) Sager. The family located in Cassville, Wis. Mr. Sager, who was a gardener in his native land, followed that occupation for a time in this country, and then took charge of the vineyard of Gov. Dewey, who was from Cassville. Mr. Sager is still living here, at the ripe old age of eighty-two years, but his wife is now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Klindt are the parents of four children: Gustav A., born March 24, 1878; Edith Alma, May 31, 1885; John Arthur, April 12, 1888; and Irving, Oct. 24, 1891, died Feb. 24, 1892.

In the spring of 1879 Mr. Klindt visited the Fatherland, and found his parents both living at that time. Returning home in the fall of that year, he was nominated by the Republican party for representative to the General Assembly, and was elected by a large majority. He could have had the office a second term, but on account of the death of his partner, Gustav Geiger, in 1880, his business interests would not permit it. He has been prominently identified with public affairs in Cassville, and has most efficiently served as president of the village board for a number of years, and also as treasurer of the high school. Religiously Mr. Klindt was reared a Lutheran. His life record is one well worthy of emulation, and contains many valuable lessons of incentive, showing the possibilities that are open to young men who wish to improve every opportunity for advancement.

ALMERON EAGER, of Evansville, Rock county, is president of the Baker Manufacturing Co., and for years has been a leading spirit in the business interests of the city. He is a man of much intelligence, force of character and uncompromising honesty.

Mr. Eager was born in Sangerfield, Oneida Co., N. Y., March 14, 1838, a son of William and Caroline (Northrup) Eager. His father was born in Oneida county, and his mother in Delaware county, N. Y., and they were reared and married in their native State. Nine children were born to them, seven of whom are now living: Amy, wife of Peter Case, of Fredericksburg, Iowa; Almeron, of Evansville; Adelia, wife of William Case, of Fredericksburg; Alvin, of Grand Island, Neb.; Amos, of Lincoln, Neb.; Orinda, wife of John Ellison, of Fredericksburg; and De Witt, of Beaver Crossing, Neb. The father, who was a farmer, came West in the spring of 1855, locating in the town of Union, Rock Co., Wis., where he died in 1861, at the age of sixty-one. His wife died in Oneida county, N. Y., in 1850, at the early age of thirty-eight. She was a Methodist. Oliver Eager, the paternal grandfather of Almeron Eager, was a native of Massachusetts, and an early settler in Oneida county, N. Y. He died at the age of sixty-five. He was a farmer, and the father of five children. Almeron Eager's maternal grandfather was also a native of New York, and died when his daughter Caroline, mentioned above, was about three years old, leaving one son and one daughter. He was a hard-working, honorable man.

Almeron Eager was reared on the Oneida county farm, and obtained his education in the district school. He came to Rock county, Wis., in the fall of 1854, and bought eighty acres in the town of Union, which he improved and afterward sold. He then purchased a tract of 200 acres, lying two and a half miles east of Evansville, and partly improved it. In 1868 Mr. Eager moved into Evansville, and in partnership with W. S. Smith opened a general store. Smith & Eager continued the store fourteen years, and then bought leaf tobacco for some three years or more. In the meantime, in 1883, a company was formed to build a tack factory in Evansville, and four years later Mr. Eager became associated with it as secretary. He held that position until the company went out of business. In 1873 Mr. Eager, in company with A. S. Baker, L. M. Shaw, L. Mygatt, C. Snashall and W. S. Smith, organized the Baker Manufacturing Co., to engage in the manufacture of windmills, tanks and pumps. Mr. Snashall was president of this corporation, and W. S. Smith secretary. Since 1885 Mr. Eager has been president, and Clifford Smith secretary. The company give employment to some sixty or seventy-five persons, and have an authorized capital of $300,000. They ship goods all over the United States, and won two gold medals at the world's fair for the best wind and power mill.

Mr. Eager and Miss Olive Boyce, daughter of Henry and Mary (Almy) Boyce, were married Nov. 26, 1863, and they have had four children, Clarence, Gertrude, and two who died in infancy. Clarence died when one year and nine days old. Gertrude married Lile Humphrey, and is the mother of one child, Leonard. Mrs. Eager is a member of the Methodist Church. Our subject belongs to Union Lodge, No. 32, A. F. & A. M., Evansville Chapter, No. 35, R. A. M., and Janesville Commandery, No. 2, K. T. He is a Republican, and takes pride in the fact that he cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln. He was town treasurer for many years; a member of the village board of Evansville for many years, and president of the board three years; has been a member of the county board of supervisors nine years, and is still acting in that capacity. On Nov. 6, 1900, he was elected assemblyman for the Second District of Rock county, receiving 2,670 votes, his opponent 915 votes. Mr. Eager owns a number of store buildings and residence properties in Evansville. He built his present home, at No. 321 West Main street, in 1878. While he was on the farm he spent a year and a half in the book delivery business.

Our subject has traveled in every State and Territory in the Union, and has visited all points of interest in the United States. In 1899 he took a trip to Alaska. In 1900 he traveled through Europe, attended the world's fair at Paris, went through Germany, saw the Passion Play, visited the mountains of Switzerland, went through the St. Gothard tunnel (the longest in the world), and journeyed over Holland, Belgium, England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

FLOYD D. MURDOCK is yet living at the place where he was born, Sept. 13, 1856, at the corner of Wall and Franklin streets, Janesville, Rock county, where he has built a magnificent row of flats. Both his grandfather and father were born in New York, as were also his mother and her parents. His paternal grandfather, who was a farmer, died in his native State at an advanced age, leaving a large family.

Edwin Murdock, the father of Floyd D., settled in Janesville in the 'forties, and engaged in business as a grain dealer and grocer, following these lines until his death, at the age of fifty-seven, in 1883. He was a citizen of prominence, and for several years represented the First ward in the city council. He married Adelia Hoyt, whose father, Charles Hoyt, was likewise a New York farmer, but removed to Wisconsin, and was one of the early settlers of Rock county. Later he removed to Iowa, and died there in his seventy-sixth year. Mrs. Edwin Murdock is still living; she is a devout Baptist. She bore her husband four children: Ida, now the wife of Myron Clark, of Rock county; Floyd D.; Edwin H., of Janesville; and Jessie, Mrs. Thomas A. Nolan.

Floyd D. Murdock has passed his life in the city of his birth. After leaving school he began working for his father, and on the latter's death succeeded to the ownership and management of the business. He has been successful, bringing to bear upon his undertakings sound common sense, as well as reflective power and sagacity. He sells hay and feed, as well as grain, shipping a great deal to Chicago and Milwaukee, and carries on an extensive and remunerative trade, enjoying the confidence and respect of the entire community, and the sincere esteem of a wide circle of personal friends. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias and of the A. O. U. W., and in politics is a Republican. On Dec. 6, 1883, Mr. Murdock married Maggie Josepha Inman, and they have two children, Floyd Verne and Edna Floydine.

Mrs. Murdock comes of English lineage on the paternal, and French on the maternal side. Her father's ancestors crossed the Atlantic in the "Mayflower," and her great-grandfather, Edward Inman, served under Washington in the Revolutionary war, holding the rank of colonel. Her grandfather was John E. Inman. The family were long-time residents of Pennsylvania, John E. Inman being a large land owner near Wilkesbarre. After disposing of his holdings there he came West, buying large tracts in Illinois and Wisconsin, and making his home in Carroll county, Ill. He was the father of five sons and three daughters, and lived to celebrate his seventy-fifth birthday. Edward Inman, Mrs. Murdock's father, was for several years a conductor in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., but the fracture of a leg compelled him to seek other employment. For a time he conducted a dry-goods store at Wilkesbarre, but subsequently (in 1857) removed to Wisconsin, settling in Bradford, where he died in 1892, at the age of sixty-nine years. His widow yet survives, and has her home in Janesville. Her name before marriage was Margaret J. Mutchlar, and her father (the maternal grandfather of Mrs. Murdock) married Margaret San Tee. Both were of French descent, but residents of Wilkesbarre, where Mr. Mutchlar was a successful coal operator. They were the parents of four daughters and one son.

ALLEN S. BAKER, manager of the Baker Manufacturing Co., of Evansville, Rock county, is a native of that city, where he was born Jan. 12, 1842. He belongs to one of the old Virginia families whose ancestry on the paternal side runs back to England, and on the maternal side to Germany.

Daniel Baker, the grandfather of Allen S., was born in West Virginia, but in early life removed to the vicinity of Cincinnati, Ohio, where he and his wife spent their lives. They had a numerous family, of whom John T. (the father of Allen S.) and Aaron were the only ones to come to Wisconsin. The former became a resident of Rock county in 1837, and the latter was also a resident of that county, but lived only a few years after coming to the State.

John T. Baker was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, in October, 1806, and in 1836 removed to Bloomington, Ill., where he remained only a short time. In the fall of the following year he settled in the town of Avon, Rock county, where he entered a claim upon which the family resided until the spring of 1840. That year he sold out, and removed into the town of Union, where he again entered a claim, and secured land which he converted into a valuable farm. This became the old homestead of the family, and here Mr. Baker lived for many years. He died in the village of Evansville in April, 1876. Mr. Baker was twice married, his first union being with Miss Jemima Robinson, who died in Union in the fall of 1850. Both he and his wife were members of the Methodist Church, in which he held official position. He afterward wedded Mrs. Jane Gray (Sandford) Sale. By his first marriage he had seven sons and two daughters, the first and last being daughters. The eldest daughter and two sons are dead. The surviving members of the family are David E., of Clermont, Iowa; Edward J., living in Maryville, Mo.; Francis A., of Evansville, Wis.; Stephen J. and Allen S., of the same place; and Caroline J., wife of John Davenport, of San Rafael, Cal. The deceased daughter, Mary Ann, died after reaching womanhood. Thomas, the youngest son, died at the age of nineteen years. Aaron died when twenty-seven years of age, in 1865.

In his early years Allen S. Baker served an apprenticeship to the trade of blacksmith, and that trade was his occupation for several years. When the Civil war broke out he was one of the first to respond to his country's call for troops to crush out the Rebellion. On April 20, 1861, he became a member of Company H, 2d Wis. V. I., which regiment formed a part of the famous Iron Brigade, and in that gallant command he served in several of the most important battles of the war. He was at Gainesville, Fitzhugh Crossing, Chancellorville, and Gettysburg. At Gainesville he was severely wounded in the right shoulder and was sent to the hospital at Philadelphia, where he remained until February, 1863. By that time he had recovered his health, and he rejoined his regiment, only to be again severely wounded on the first day of the great battle of Gettysburg, July 1, 1863. The facts concerning this wound were remarkable. Mr. Baker was struck in the abdomen by a minie ball, which, instead of passing straight through his body, took a circular direction, striking his thigh bone was deflected, and lodged in the fleshy part of the spinal column, where it became deeply imbedded. The surgeons feared to attempt the removal of the ball from the very great danger of severing an artery in the operation. So the missile remained in the same position for many years without apparent change, when it began working its way to the surface, and on March 19, 1889, after having remained in his body for nearly twenty-six years, it was discovered close to the surface, where it had worked its way to a position from which it was easily removed by Mr. Baker without surgical aid. After being wounded at Gettysburg Mr. Baker was not able to do farther duty in the field. He went to Washington, and was presently mustered out. Returning to his home, he resumed the blacksmith trade, and also engaged in carriage making. In the spring of 1873 the Baker Manufacturing Co. was organized under the firm name of A. S. Baker & Co. It was composed of the following named business men of Evansville, who contributed equally to its establishment: A. Eager, W. S. Smith, Caleb Snashall, Lancing Mygatt, Levi M. Shaw and A. S. Baker. They began business with a paid-up capital of $6,000, and were incorporated Feb. 17, 1879, with a capital stock of $20,000, under the name of the Baker Manufacturing Co. On March 15, 1883, the capital was increased to $100,000, of which one-half was paid up. About this time M. V. Pratt bought an interest in the business, and March 13, 1885, Mr. Snashall sold his stock to the remaining stockholders and retired from business. The company remained in the hands of the other stockholders until the death of Mr. Smith, in the fall of 1891. The paid-up capital of the company Jan. 1, 1899, was $100,000, and the surplus $105,712.56. With profit-sharing in view, the company reorganized with a capital of $300,000. They manufacture pumps, windmills, tanks, grinders, wood saws, and other goods and appliances, and employ from sixty to eighty men. To a great extent the success of this institution is due to the business ability and executive force of Mr. Baker.

Mr. Baker and Miss Margaret Sayers were married March 23, 1865. She was born on the historic battle field of Brandywine, Del., in October, 1844, a daughter of John and Sarah (Reed) Sayers. Her father died when she was but twelve years old, her mother surviving until 1876. They were the parents of four children who reached mature years: Elizabeth, the eldest, died in 1885. Margaret was the second in the order of birth. Sarah, the youngest daughter, married Thomas Hathorne, of Delaware. Robert is a resident of Delaware.

Three children have blessed the union of Mr. and Mrs. Baker: Elsie, born in October, 1867; John, in July, 1869; and Bessie, in November, 1875. Elsie married Robert Hartley, who is assistant cashier of the Bank of Evansville; she is a stenographer in the office of the Baker Manufacturing Co. John is single, and is a superintendent of the works of the company. Bessie graduated from the Rockford (Ill.) Ladies College, and is now teaching in the Highland University, at Highland, Kans. The family reside at the corner of Liberty and First streets, where Mr. Baker built a home in 1865, and erected his present handsome residence in 1883.

Mr. Baker is one of the representative business men of Rock county, and is regarded as an enterprising and progressive citizen of Evansville, in the welfare of which he has always taken a deep interest. He was formerly a Republican, but he is now independent, and favors the principles of the Prohibition party, holding that the liquor traffic should be suppressed by the strong arm of the law. He and his wife are members of the Congregational Church, in which he serves as deacon. He was president of the village board of trustees one term, and on the county board two terms.

He is at present school treasurer of District No. 6, which includes the city of Evansville and a portion of the adjacent country. Our subject is one of the organizers of the Evansville Telephone Exchange, and is its president.

GEORGE PAGE, a well-known citizen of Grant county, an ex-soldier of the war of the Rebellion, and a retired farmer, is a native of Great Yarmouth, County of Norfolk, England, and was born Oct. 26, 1819. His early life was passed at sea, and was quite an eventful one, which will be detailed, as far as space will permit, below.

Richard and Mary (Greenland) Page, the parents of our subject, were also natives of Norfolk, where they passed all their lives. They reared a family of four sons and three daughters, of which family George is the only survivor. As a lad he was employed as errand boy in a large shop or store in his native town, but as it was early decided that he should become a sailor he began the study of navigation when but twelve and a half years old, and has still in his possession many of his exercises in books which bear the date of 1830. Before he was thirteen years old he went to sea as a cabin boy, and eventually became an able-bodied seaman. The first two years of his sea life were spent in coasting around England, Scotland and Ireland, and he then shipped for a voyage up the Mediterranean sea, passed through the Grecian Archipelago and the Dardanelles to Constantinople, and then back through the Dardanelles to Smyrna, Turkey in Asia; thence he sailed for Falmouth bay, England, for further orders. On the homeward voyage the vessel was caught in a dense fog in the Mediterranean, and ran ashore at Apes Hill, off Gibraltar, and the next day ran into Gibraltar bay to be inspected. She was pronounced to be seaworthy, however, and proceeded on her voyage. From Falmouth Mr. Page went to London, and thence made two voyages to St. John, N. B., but on returning, on the second voyage, his vessel was wrecked, through the ignorance or carelessness of the pilot, when but nine miles out of Liverpool.

Mr. Page then made a third trip across the Atlantic, but this time he came to stay, relinquishing ocean life. He left Liverpool about the middle of December, 1836, reached the banks of Newfoundland in thirteen days, and fourteen days after, near the middle of January, 1837, reached New York. He was at that time seventeen years old. Soon after his arrival he sailed for New Orleans, La., and was there employed on a steamer plying up and down the Mississippi river and confluent streams, being thus engaged about three months when he was taken seriously ill; he made his last trip down the "Father of Waters" to the Crescent City on a flat-boat, and while thus prostrated was robbed of all his cash and all his clothing save what he had on at the time. What rendered this robbery the more shameful was the fact that the culprit was a comrade in whom he had placed his confidence, and whom he had considered to be a faithful friend.

When Mr. Page recovered his strength he again started up the Mississippi, branched off into the Ohio river at Cairo, Ill., and landed at Mount Vernon, Posey Co., Ind., in the vicinity of which city he spent about nine years in farming. Here another episode of his life took place, one of the most important, his marriage to Miss Nancy Jane Altizier, a daughter of Elias and Thyrza (Taylor) Altizier, the former a native of Virginia, of German descent, and the latter of Tennessee. Mrs. Page was born May 3, 1824, in Posey county, Ind., where the family had lived for many years, and where her father died; her mother died later, at the home of her daughter, in Webster county, Iowa. Elias Altizier was twice married, and to each union were born four children, Mrs. Page being the eldest living of the last marriage; one is deceased, and the other two are Eli J., a resident of the State of Washington; and Sarah Ann, Mrs. Renshaw, of Lancaster, Wisconsin.

Mr. and Mrs. Page came from Indiana to Wisconsin, arriving at Platteville, Grant county, April 11, 1846, but remained a short time only, and then settled in Ellenboro, same county, where he purchased and improved a good farm, and became a prominent citizen. He served as assessor and tax collector at different times in Ellenboro. He was enrolling officer during the early part of the Civil war, but decided to enter the army, and enlisted Oct. 1, 1864, in Company C, 25th Wis. V. I. He joined his regiment at Atlanta, Ga., marched with Gen. W. T. Sherman in his famous expedition through the State to Savannah, usually called the march to the sea, and took part in several other important military operations under that redoubtable, grim warrior. After the war Mr. Page marched with the victorious Union host from North Carolina through to Washington, D. C., participated in the grand review, and received an honorable discharge in June, 1865. Although never wounded, Mr. Page was permanently injured in health while in the army, and soon after his return he disposed of his farm, and with his estimable wife retired, to live in quiet in Lancaster.

During all Mr. Page's long residence in this country, but two of his family have come to America. His brother William came several years after our subject had arrived, and died in St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 12, 1883, leaving a widow and four children; another brother, John, who was a sea captain, made a brief visit to George, returned to Great Yarmouth, and died a number of years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Page were, for a long time after the close of the war of the Rebellion, active in the affairs of the Grand Army of the Republic, but their declining years precluded their continuing their work in this organization. They are members of no church, but they are strictly believers and church goers, ever governed by principles of charity, love for their fellow beings and strict justice to all. In politics Mr. Page is a Republican in sentiment, but has not sought favor from the party in whose interest he exercises his franchise. Contented with the felicitous society of his wife, for he has no children, he passes his time at his happy home, honored and respected by all his neighbors.

CHARLES W. LONEY, a well-known and esteemed old settler of Grant county, was born Aug. 21, 1808, in Franklin township, Ross Co., Ohio, a son of James A. and Nancy (Warren) Loney, both of North Carolina.

James A. Loney was a shoemaker by trade. Before the birth of our subject he moved to Ross county, Ohio, settling twelve miles south of Chillicothe, on the Scioto river. To him and his wife were born five sons and seven daughters, namely: John D., Esther C., Charles W., Rhea M., Sarah S., Alfred H., Enos J., Nancy A., Miranda P., James H., Eliza J. and Mary W. All lived to mature years and married except one son, who died at the age of fourteen. The father of James A. Loney, a native of Ireland, settled in North Carolina, and reared a family of three children, John, James A. and Mary. The maternal grandfather of our subject lived in Tennessee; he had a family of four sons and three daughters, Tilghman, John, Charles, William, Rhoda, Nancy and Rebecca.

Charles W. Loney was reared upon a farm. When twenty-two years of age he left his native State and migrated to Mound township, Warren Co., Ind., where he taught common school for two years. He engaged in farming during the summer, and continued teaching in the winter season for thirteen years, until 1846, at which time he went north to the home of John Switzer, in Fennimore, Grant Co., Wis., bought land and commenced farming, alternating with teaching short terms. When Wisconsin was admitted to the Union Mr. Loney was elected superintendent of schools and justice of the peace, which latter office he held for twenty years; during that time he married one hundred couples, and decided some very complicated points of law. In the spring of 1866 Mr. Loney commenced a mercantile career, on a small scale, on the public highway leading from Lancaster to Boscobel, within the limits of the present village of Fennimore. As time went on he increased his business until he had a very desirable establishment, but for the last ten or twelve years he has retired from active life.

About 1832 Mr. Loney married Miss Mary Switzer, of Ohio, and to this union have been born two sons and two daughters: Mary Ann, July 14, 1833; Charles Wesley, Jan. 30, 1836; Nancy Jane, July 8, 1838; and William H. Harrison, July 16, 1840. All of these children lived to maturity, and three are still alive; one died in 1863, during the Civil war.

Charles W. Loney is one of the landmarks of Grant county, and, although he has reached the advanced age of ninety-two, he is still in possession of all his faculties, and is a very remarkable old gentleman.

CHARLES J. PEARSALL, a young and enterprising business man of Evansville, Rock county, is vice-president of the D. E. Wood Butter Co., and is popular not only for his thorough knowledge of his business, and his prompt and accurate business habits, but also for his fine personal qualities.

Mr. Pearsall was born in Plainfield, Otsego Co., N. Y., July 20, 1860, son of Edwin

R. and Helen M. (Smith) Pearsall, both native to the soil of New York. They were the parents of three sons and two daughters: Charles J.; Nellie S., of Salt Lake City; Hattie M., wife of M. C. Joslyn, of Elgin, Ill.; Benjamin S., of Elgin, secretary and treasurer of the D. E. Wood Butter Co.; and Clifford R., treasurer and manager of the wholesale and retail jewelry house of J. H. Lyson & Co., of Salt Lake City. The father was a farmer in New York. In 1876 he moved to Illinois, and engaged in the creamery business at Huntley, McHenry county, which he owned until his death, though not actively engaged in its management toward the close of his life. He died Jan. 10, 1901, at Elgin, Ill., aged sixty-seven years, his wife in February, 1897, aged sixty-four years. They were Methodists in early life, but in Illinois they united with the Congregational Church. His father, Simon Pearsall, was a native of Connecticut, but settled in New York when young, and lived to be ninety-three years old, passing away in the summer of 1900, at his home in New York State. He was a molder, and in later life a farmer; his last business years were spent in a store of which he was proprietor and manager. Simon Pearsall married a Miss Marvin, who died many years ago, and they had one son. His second wife was a Miss Fern, Capt. Benjamin F. Smith, the father of Helen M., mentioned above, served in the State militia. He was a native of Connecticut, and followed farming. His wife died in the East, and he afterward came West, and died at Big Rapids, Mich., at the home of a daughter, when he was over seventy years of age. His wife was sixty-four at her death. His remains were taken back to the old homestead in Otsego county, N. Y. He had four daughters and two sons.

Charles J. Pearsall spent the earlier part of his life in Otsego county, N. Y., where he had a good preparation for active life in the public schools of that region. In the spring of 1876 he came to Illinois, locating at Huntley with his parents, and there he lived for twelve years. He spent four years in Nebraska, and for the past ten years he has lived in Evansville. His entire business life has been spent in connection with the creamery. He began as an apprentice, and served two years before he was pronounced competent to do business for himself. For nine years he held the position of foreman in a factory at Coral, Ill., and then was made manager of a line of creameries in Clay and other counties in Nebraska, being engaged in this work for three and a half years. Coming to Evansville, he formed a partnership with Mr. Wood, and his business career in this city has been both profitable and satisfactory.

Mr. Pearsall and Miss Harriet I. Ellis, daughter of Benjamin F. and Ellen (Miracle) Ellis, were united in marriage Nov. 11, 1887. Mr. and Mrs. Pearsall are the parents of three sons and one daughter, Robert E., Clifford J., Barbara E., and Philip D. Mr. Pearsall is a Mason, and belongs to Union Lodge, No. 32, A. F. & A. M., and Evansville Chapter, No. 35, R. A. M., and is also a member of the local Knights of Pythias and the Modern Woodmen. He is a Republican in his political affiliations, and is at present serving as alderman from the First ward, and is president of the city council.

HON. A. CLARKE DODGE, one of the leading citizens of Green county, occupies a peculiarly honorable and responsible position as a member of the legislative and law-making body of the State, and for years has been one of the most progressive and representative business men of the city of Monroe. He is now somewhat advanced in years, but his natural force is not abated nor the vital flame burned low.

Mr. Dodge was born in Barre, Vt., Nov. 6, 1834, a son of Joseph and Lorenda (Thompson) Dodge, both natives of that State. They had three children: A. Clarke, Laroy and Wesley. The two latter were soldiers in the Union army during the Civil war. Laroy enlisted Sept. 1, 1861, in Company B, 10th Vt. V. I., and was wounded in the battle of Fisher's Hill, Va., Sept. 21, 1864; he was sent to the National hospital at Baltimore, where he died Oct. 29, 1864. Wesley entered the service Nov. 19, 1861, as a member of Company C, 1st Vermont Cavalry, and served in the Army of the Potomac; he was shot in Wilson's raid, around Petersburg, June 23, 1864, was taken prisoner, and died the next day.

Joseph Dodge was a farmer in Barre, Vt., where he was born Nov. 14, 1795, and where he died Aug. 3, 1864. He first married Azubah Thompson, who bore him four children, only one of whom is now living, Joseph Thompson Dodge, of Madison, Wis. His second wife, Lorenda, died May 15, 1844, at the age of forty-three years. He married for his third wife Electa Marsh, who became the mother of one child, Ellen Amanda, now the widow of Henry G. Staples, of Lyndonville, Vt. Mr. Dodge held various local offices from time to time, and was regarded as an honorable and capable man. He was captain in the State militia, a position for which he was well fitted by his services in the war of 1812; he received a land warrant from the government as a reward for his loyalty at that time. He was on Lake Champlain, trying to reach the scene of the battle of Plattsburg, but could not reach the field until the fight was over. His father, Asa Dodge, was a native of Winchester, N. H., where he was born Feb. 13, 1770. He moved to Barre, Vt., with his brother John and acquired a farm in 1791. He spent his life upon it, and died there May 12, 1855. He was also a soldier in the war of 1812, and for his military services received a land warrant, which came to him the day he died.

Isaac Stevens Thompson, the father of Lorenda Thompson, mentioned above, was born at Holden, Mass., April 26, 1763. He married Catey Wheeler, of Rutland, Mass., Jan. 8, 1790, and immediately moved to Barre, Vt. His father was born in 1735 in Holden, Mass., where he died Jan. 3, 1787. He was a captain in the American army during the war of the Revolution, and selectman of Holden in 1780, 1782 and 1783. He married Azubah Stevens, and they were the parents of eight children, of whom Isaac was the eldest. The wife of Isaac S. Thompson lived to be ninety-four years of age. There were two brothers, William and Richard Dodge, who came from England in 1639 and located at Salem, Mass., and from them have come most of the Dodes in America, excepting the Block Island Dodes.

A. Clarke Dodge, now an old resident and business man of Monroe, Wis., was reared at Barre, his native place. There he was educated, at Barre Academy. Mr. Dodge left Vermont when twenty years old, and coming West, helped in the location of the Milwaukee & Mississippi Railroad (now a part of the Milwaukee system) in 1855, from Janesville to Monroe, and thus early acquired an acquaintance with the country which afterward became his home. From January, 1856, until the fall of 1857 he lived in Chicago, where he held the position of assistant librarian in the Mechanics' Institute Library. He was a school teacher in Rock county and in Monroe from 1861 to 1864, having moved to Monroe the first-named year, and he has since been continuously a resident of the city.

In Monroe Mr. Dodge's public and business career has been both successful and honorable. He has been identified with the Republican party since its organization, and has received many evidences of regard at the hands of his fellow citizens. He was elected a Presidential elector in 1888, receiving more votes than any other man on the ticket. For more than thirty years he has represented his city and county in a great majority of the County and State conventions of his party. For more than twenty-five years Mr. Dodge served continuously on the school board, and for the greater part of that time was the president of that body. He was nine times elected on the county board, and for five terms served as its chairman. He was on the committee that planned and built the county insane asylum, served as chairman of the committee that prepared the plans for the new court house, and was a member of the building committee that had in charge the construction of that elegant building, acting as its secretary. Mr. Dodge was nominated for the General Assembly in 1898, without solicitation on his part, and was elected by the largest majority of any man on the ticket except the treasurer; he was elected to the Assembly again in 1900. Throughout his business and public career Mr. Dodge has exemplified a fine character and a lofty spirit. He has been an upright and clean-handed man, and has a host of friends throughout the county and State. For many years he has been a dealer in lumber, grain and coal, and by industry and wise management he has accumulated a competence. Mr. Dodge and Miss Sarah E. Kidder were married Nov. 4, 1860, and to this union three children have been born, Charles S., Lewis and Flora E. Charles is manager of the Monroe planing-mill; he married Nellie F. Weatherby, who died Nov. 12, 1900, and has four children, George Clarke, Helen J., Laroy and Edward Wesley. Lewis is keeping books in his father's lumber office. Flora E. is the wife of Charles E. Shriner, of Monroe. Mr. and Mrs. Dodge are members of the Unitarian Church, and he belongs to Monroe Lodge, No. 72, I. O. O. F., and has filled nearly all the chairs in the order, of which he has been a member thirty-three years, and has repeatedly served as representative to the Grand Lodge. He is a member of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, his National number being 12,011 and his State number 211. His great-grandfather, Nathaniel Brown Dodge, was a soldier in the Revolution, enlisting in Capt. Alexander's Company at Northfield, Mass., Feb. 21, 1776, and serving in the ill-starred expedition from Fort Ticonderoga to Ouebec, keeping a pocket diary from March 23 to Dec. 7. This diary, which has a note for every day of the intervening time, is now in the possession of Mr. Dodge. It is in a perfect state of preservation, and has lately received a new dress, befitting its age and historic value.

CHARLES W. STARK. Brought when a boy of six years to Wisconsin by his parents in 1846, the subject of this sketch, Major Stark, now postmaster at Tiffany, Rock county, has remained ever since a resident of the county, save the four years when he served in the army during the Civil war. Entering as a private, he soon won promotion for meritorious and gallant conduct, and was mustered out an officer. His career in civil life has been equally successful. He has actively followed farming through life until quite recently, and has been prominently identified with local public affairs.

Major Stark was born at Halifax, Windham Co., Vt., Aug. 5, 1840, son of William H. and Clarissa S. (Plumb) Stark, both natives of Vermont. William Stark, the paternal grandfather of our subject, was a native of Connecticut, of English ancestry. He had a family of ten children. He engaged in farming for a half century at Halifax, Vt., where he died at the age of about ninety years. James Plumb, the maternal grandfather of our subject, was also a native of Connecticut. He moved when a young man to Halifax, Vt., there engaged in farming, and died aged about seventy-six years. He reared a family of eleven children.

William H. Stark, the father of our subject, was born in 1810, in Vermont, where he received a good common-school education and engaged in farming. He served in the Vermont State militia, and was elected to the Legislature of his native State. In May, 1846, he came to Wisconsin, and located in Tiffany.

He bought a farm of 208 acres, in 1864 purchased eighty acres, and later two other eighty-acre tracts, all of which he improved. Twice he was elected to the Wisconsin Legislature, and he held a number of the more important local offices; for many years he was a member of the town board of supervisors, serving as chairman of the board, and he was also town assessor and treasurer for many years. He was reared a Presbyterian, but later became a member of the Universalist Church, which was the faith of his wife. He died in Tiffany in 1894, aged eighty-three years and eleven months. His wife died in 1893, aged eighty-three years. Five children were born to them, three sons and two daughters, of whom three survive: Juliette Maria; Charles William, our subject; and DeWitt Q., of Tiffany.

Charles William Stark was six years of age when, in 1846, he came with his parents to Wisconsin. He attended the district schools, and spent his youth on the home farm. He had just attained his majority when he enlisted, Sept. 1, 1861, in Company F, 13th Wis. V. I. In August, 1862, he was commissioned second lieutenant of the 22d Regiment, and thirty days later was transferred to the 33d Regiment. He was promoted to first lieutenant in April, 1863, and in December, 1864, was commissioned captain and transferred to Company E, of the same regiment, commanding the company until mustered out and discharged at Madison, Wis., Sept. 1, 1865. For meritorious services during the campaign against the city of Mobile "and its defenses" he was breveted major, United States Volunteers, effective March 26, 1865, receiving his commission a few days later. He was also acting aid-de-camp and provost marshal during the last year of the war, serving on the staff of Col. J. B. Moore and Col. L. M. Ward. Major Stark witnessed much active campaigning during his four years' service. He participated in the siege of Vicksburg; was at Jackson, Miss., in 1863, when his brigade in ten minutes lost all but 225 men out of 900 engaged; served throughout the Atlanta campaign in command of a detachment of the 33d Wis. V. I.; was in the second battle of Nashville in 1864; and participated in the capture of Old Spanish Fort, near Mobile, which was taken by assault following a siege of fourteen days, the brigade to which he belonged being the principal troops engaged in the assault that resulted in the capture of the fort at midnight of April 9, 1865. During the siege of Old Spanish Fort Major Stark had charge of the construction of the trenches and approaches to the fort, and was highly commended by Generals A. J. Smith and E. A. Carr for the efficiency of his work. He also engaged in a large number of skirmishes. Through exposure while in the army his right eye was affected so that he has since lost the sight of it.

After the war Major Stark returned to his old home at Tiffany, and engaged in farming. His father gave him a tract of eighty acres, to which by purchase he subsequently added another eighty-acre tract, located in the southwest quarter of Section 26. This property he farmed and rented until 1896, when he sold it, well improved. He now owns the seventeen acres of land in Section 35, town of La Prairie, on which he resides.

Our subject married, Jan. 20, 1868, Miss H. Eliza Nash, daughter of Jefferson and Matilda (Owen) Nash, and by this marriage there was one daughter, Nellie Matilda, who married Charles H. Weirick, of Shopiere, and has two children, Marion and Maurice. Mrs. H. Eliza Stark died Oct. 8, 1879. She was a member of All Souls Unitarian Church. For his second wife our subject married, Sept. 20, 1882, Mrs. Cora M. Hemmingway, widow of John Hemmingway, and daughter of Hugh Chapin. By this marriage Mr. Stark has three children: Charles W., Jr., Hubbard, and Cora M. By her former husband Mrs. Cora M. Stark had one son, Hugh. She died Oct. 8, 1887, aged twenty-seven years.

Mr. Stark has been prominent in public life. On Oct. 25, 1865, he was appointed, by the Treasury Department at Washington, Inspector of Distilled Spirits and Coal Oil in and for the Second Collection District of Wisconsin. In the spring of 1868 he was elected town clerk and held that office two years. He was then elected register of deeds of Rock county, and re-elected two years later, serving four years. While filling that responsible office he for three years was the owner of the Rock County Abstract, and during the same period he built at Janesville 350 fanning mills. In 1874 he was elected alderman of the Second ward in Janesville, on the Republican ticket, and he served as such in the common council of the city until he went back to his farm. Returning to his farm in 1876, he has followed agricultural pursuits ever since, in connection with wagon repairing. He has served as assessor four or five years, and in 1900 was census enumerator of La Prairie township. Though a Republican in politics, the Major was appointed postmaster at Tiffany Oct. 28, 1895, during the administration of President Cleveland, which office he still holds. He has been prominent in politics, and both he and his father have attended numerous county, Congressional and State conventions. Major Stark became a member of Good Samaritan Lodge, No. 135, F. & A. M., of Clinton, Wis., in 1864, and of Janesville Chapter, No. 5, R. A. M., in 1872. He is a member of W. H. Sargent Post, No. 20, G. A. R., and also of the Society of the Army of the Tennessee, established at Raleigh, N. C., April 25, 1865.

MARK GOODRICH. This well-known citizen and representative farmer of Mt. Ida township, Grant county, was one of the brave defenders of the Union during the Civil war. In August, 1861, at Mt. Ida, he enrolled his name among the members of Company H, 7th Wis. V. I., and was mustered into the United States service at Madison, the regiment being assigned to Gen. McDowell's command. His enlistment was for three years, but on account of disability he was honorably discharged Feb. 27, 1863, being at that time in the convalescent camp near Alexandria, Va. He returned to his home in Mt. Ida township, but, improving in health, he resolved to again enter the service of his country, and on Dec. 11, 1863, enlisted for three years, or during the war, in the 33d Wis. V. I., with which he took part in a number of important engagements, including Gen. Banks' unfortunate Red River campaign; the siege and capture of Fort Blakely and Spanish Fort; the siege of Mobile; and the battle of Nashville, under command of Gen. Thomas. He received his final discharge Sept. 4, 1865, and again returned to his home in Grant county.

A native of New York, Mr. Goodrich was born in Allegany county in 1842, a son of Elijah and Polly (Dempsey) Goodrich, the former a native of New Jersey, the latter of New York. In 1843 the family migrated from the Empire State to Wisconsin, and took up their residence in Fennimore township, Grant county, a few years later removing to Mt. Ida township, where the father entered a tract of government land which became the homestead of the family, and which his sons now own and occupy. He followed the occupations of farming and blacksmithing, and died upon his farm in Mt. Ida township. His first wife, the mother of our subject, died in Fennimore township, and he subsequently married Almira Russell, who died on the homestead in Mt. Ida township in June, 1899. By the first union there were three children: Mark, the immediate subject of this biography; Mary, wife of Thomas Cooper, of Mt. Ida township; and Adeline, wife of Frederick Werley, of the same township. One son was born of the second marriage, Lewis Edwin, who, with Mark, owns the homestead farm.

Mark Goodrich was quite young when he came with his parents to Grant county, which has been his home continuously since. He and his brother have a fine farm of 145 acres, under a good state of cultivation, and in its operation are meeting with excellent success, being among the most thorough and systematic agriculturists of their township. Both are highly respected citizens of the community, and Mark Goodrich is an esteemed member of Sam Monteith Post, G. A. R., of Fennimore.

LYMAN D. CULVER, familiarly known as 'Squire Culver, is a representative farmer and leading citizen of Ellenboro township, Grant county, where his manly virtues and upright character have won him a host of friends.

Mr. Culver was born in Huntington, Ohio, April 7, 1840. His father, Joshua N. Culver, was born in Randolph, Portage Co., Ohio, Nov. 30, 1808, and his mother, Caroline C. Tillotson, was born in December, 1814, near Rochester, N. Y. Joshua N. Culver was a son of Timothy Culver, who was born in Massachusetts in 1775, and was a soldier in the war of 1812. He married a Merryman, and through her our subject is related to the Morton family, the same one to which ex-Vice President Levi P. Morton belongs. Levi P. Morton and Levi Merryman Culver were named after the same man. Our subject's great-grandfather, Joshua Culver, born in 1750, was a soldier in the Revolution.

Joshua N. Culver, the father of Lyman D., spent the earlier part of his life in Ohio, where he married, and was for some years a farmer in Lorain county. In 1846 he brought his family to Grant county, Wis., buying a farm in Harrison township, and here he and his wife completed their lives. He died in 1892, outliving her by seven years. He cast his first vote for William Henry Harrison for President, and his last for Benjamin Harrison. Mr. and Mrs. Culver were both consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and were strong workers in its behalf. They reared a family of seven children, all sons. (1) Henry Morton Culver, the eldest, was born in Ohio in September, 1833, and grew to manhood on the parental farm in Grant county. He married Miss Elizabeth Thomas, and they began their married life as renters of a portion of the family estate. She died Dec. 22, 1863, and he only survived until May 7, 1864. They left two children—Linnie L., now Mrs. W. G. Corpian, of Grant county, and Delos L., now of Potosi. (2) Otis Morton died in childhood. (3) Levi M., now of Syracuse, N. Y., was station agent for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad at Woodman and Wauzeka, Wis., for a number of years. He married Miss Amelia Lillie, who died in Iowa, and they had five children—Lillie, a graduate of the White-water Normal, and now a prominent teacher in Milwaukee; Rose, deceased; Fred, who died when a young man; Hattie, wife of Frank Rhodes, a banker, of Estherville, Iowa; and Roy, now a real estate dealer at Port Arthur, Texas. (4) Lyman D. is our subject. (5) Elmer E., born in Grant county in 1849, married Miss Emma R. Curry, of Minnesota, and they live on the old homestead in Harrison township. They have a family of five living children, Otis, Herbert, Guy, Arthur and Cora. (6) H. L., born in Grant county in April, 1853, married Miss Happy P. Pickett, of Crawford county, and lives in that county, where he owns a farm of 320 acres. He is the father of sixteen children, eleven living: Charles, Alva, Everett, Ethel, Asa, Masel, George, Edith, Alta, Edna and Lennice. (7) D. T., born Dec. 26, 1857, married Miss Rynda Graves, and they have two children, Leda and Lelah. For some time they lived on the old homestead, but their home is now in Platteville.

Lyman D. Culver received but a limited education in the district schools, as he was able to attend only during the short three-months winter terms. However, he was a great reader of history and a lover of useful books, so he accumulated a stock of information that has proved valuable all his life. In 1861 he enlisted in Company F, 7th Wis. V. I., which became a part of the Iron Brigade, and served in Virginia under Gen. McDowell and other commanders of the Army of the Potomac. He was taken sick at Fredericksburg, and lay in hospital for a long time. He was finally discharged at Washington, in November, 1863, and sent home on account of disability. In July, 1864, he married Miss Honor A. Ivey, the estimable daughter of James and Mary A. Ivey, old and prominent pioneers of Grant county, where Mrs. Culver was born in November, 1846; she received her education in the district schools of Harrison township. The young couple immediately took up farming, and in March, 1865, bought eighty acres of wild land in Ellenboro township, where Mr. Culver erected a log house, and there their life work began. They lived in the log house until 1880, when it was replaced by a fine frame house, provided with all modern improvements, and they have now one of the finest homes in Grant county, known as the "Evergreen Avenue Farm," from the fact that fine rows of evergreen shade trees are on both sides of the road. Mr. Culver owns 160 acres in Ellenboro, and 200 acres in Harrison township, having purchased the old homestead from his brother D. T. He may well be counted among the solid and successful farmers of southern Wisconsin.

Mr. and Mrs. Culver have had nine children: (1) Eber, born in 1865, is unmarried, and living at home. (2) Adda, a bright young girl, died when fourteen years old. (3) Henry, born March 7, 1869, was a student in the Platteville high school and the Valparaiso (Ind.) Normal, is a young man of scholarly attainments, and takes an active part in the local affairs of Ellenboro township, serving as town clerk. He is an active worker in church and Sunday-school. (4) Jennie Ivey, born in August, 1871, is a student at the Platteville Normal, class of 1902, and is one of the successful teachers in this section. She is a great worker in the church and Sunday-school. (5) Jesse N., born Sept. 26, 1873, is unmarried, and is a resident of Iowa. (6) Benjamin F., born in January, 1876, is at home. (7) May L. and (8) Gay L., twins, born Nov. 23, 1878, and (9) Edward D., born Dec. 9, 1883, are all students at the home schools. Mr. Culver has always been a worker in the Republican ranks. He has been school director twenty-five years, and is now justice of the peace, an office that he has held for five years. He is a member of W. T. Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R., at Platteville.

RALPH PARKER BLEASDALE, one of the prominent farmers of Janesville township, Rock county, enjoys the distinction of being a native of Wisconsin, having been born Oct. 23, 1854, in Section 19, where he now resides, a son of Ralph P. and Eliza C. (Dickson) Bleasdale, natives of England and Scotland, respectively.

Ralph P. Bleasdale was a bookkeeper, following that occupation in England and after he immigrated to America, whither he came with his parents in 1845. The family located in Rock county, Wis., where they engaged in farming. Later Ralph P. Bleasdale went back to Leeds, England, in 1846 or 1847, and married, after which he returned to Rock county, farming until 1851 in Rock township. At that time he bought a farm of 120 acres in Section 19, Janesville township, later added forty acres, and resided upon it until his death, in 1880, at the age of fifty-four, improving the property, and increasing its value. The parents of our subject had four sons and three daughters: John William, of Chicago, Ill.; Joseph Robert, of Findlay, Ohio; Ralph Parker, our subject; Frank Thornton, of New Carlisle, Ind.; Eliza Hannah, wife of Frank Case, of Clarion, Iowa; Agnes Jane, wife of Charles Hawk, of Center township, Rock Co., Wis.; and Florence Annie, wife of Orrie Case, of Belmond, Iowa. The paternal grandfather of our subject, Robert Bleasdale, was a native of England, and died in Rock county, Wis., at the advanced age of seventy. By occupation he was a farmer. His family consisted of seven children. The maternal grandfather of our subject, John Dickson, was a native of Scotland, an architectural modeler by trade. Coming to America in 1860, he resided with his daughter, Mrs. E. C. Bleasdale, until 1861, when he died, aged sixty-seven years. He had five children, two sons and three daughters.

Ralph Parker Bleasdale has lived all of his life upon the farm where he was born, except two years which he spent in Iowa. Having always followed farming, at the death of his father he took charge of the farm. On March 23, 1892, Mr. Bleasdale married Mrs. Almeda Isabel Jenkins, daughter of Charles and Lucy (Vesper) Foote. In his political affiliations Mr. Bleasdale is a Republican, and socially he is a member of Janesville Lodge, No. 55, F. & A. M., and also belongs to the Caledonian Society. Both Mr. and Mrs. Bleasdale are hospitable people. They reside on the farm of our subject's mother, which Mr. Bleasdale is actively engaged in improving, and are enjoying all the comforts of life.

PHILIP C. GRIMM is one of the successful business men of Cassville, Grant county, a member of the well-known firm of Grimm Brothers, general merchants and grain dealers, who established business at that place in 1871. He was born in Coblenz, Rhine Province, Germany, Dec. 12, 1847, a son of Valentine and Henrietta (Fuerstenhaupt) Grimm, of whom further mention is made in the sketch of Hermann Grimm, on another page of this volume.

Philip C. Grimm was reared in his native land, where he was educated in French, English and German. In 1871 he bade good-by to home and friends and came to the United States, sailing from Hamburg and landing in New York. He proceeded at once to Cassville, Wis., and for seventeen years was employed as clerk in the mercantile establishment of Klindt, Geiger & Co., during that time acquiring an excellent knowledge of the business, which has been of great advantage to him in his subsequent career as a merchant. In partnership with his brother Hermann he has since conducted a general store and engaged in the grain business, meeting with good success in both undertakings.

At Cassville Mr. Grimm was married, in 1874, to Miss Mary E. Lawrence, a native of that place, and a daughter of Thomas and Deborah (Smith) Lawrence, who were born in Ireland, and came to Cassville at a very early day. Here her father enlisted in the war of the Rebellion, and died in the service. Mrs. Lawrence is still a resident of Cassville. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Grimm are Charles L., Harry Leroy, Lawrence T., Ralph H. and Hazel Kittie. The parents are both active and earnest members of the Baptist Church, and Mr. Grimm has served as superintendent of the Sabbath-school for nine years. He is quite prominent in business and social circles, and is a member of Dewey Lodge, No. 98, K. of P., of Cassville, and the Ancient Order of United Workmen in Nebraska. In his political views he is independent, supporting the men whom he believes best qualified to fill the offices, regardless of party lines.

RICHARD H. BARLOW is a prominent and popular photographer of Janesville, Rock county, and because he puts into his work genuine artistic skill and discernment has made it a great success. He is always seeking the artistic effect, and whatever he sends forth to the world has always a touch of the light, and is not simply a mere reproduction of the outward alone.

Mr. Barlow was born near Delavan, Walworth Co., Wis., April 2, 1864, son of Silas V. and Antoinette (Goff) Barlow, natives of New York and Wisconsin, respectively. They had two children: Richard H., whose name introduces this article; and a child, who died in infancy. Silas V. Barlow came from Elmira, N. Y., to Wisconsin with his parents when fifteen years old, and located with them in Walworth county. There he grew to manhood and there he engaged in the cultivation of his own farm near Delavan, in which thrifty Wisconsin city he is now living with his wife, and is engaged in the livery business; he moved into town seventeen years ago. Politically he is a Republican. His wife attends the Methodist Church.

Rev. Silas U. Barlow, our subject's grandfather, was a Methodist clergyman, born in New York, of English ancestry. He came West in the early days, and worked at carpentering and farming through the week, preaching on Sundays, frequently making long trips on horseback in order to fill his engagements. He died in Delavan, Wis., at the age of eighty-three, leaving a large family. Stephen C. Goff, the maternal grandfather of our subject, was born in Buffalo, N. Y., and was an early settler in Walworth county, owning a farm at Heart Prairie, Wis.; in early life he was a painter and glazier. He reared a small family, and was over seventy at the time of his death.

Richard H. Barlow was reared on the farm in Walworth county, and was afforded opportunity for the acquisition of a very good education. He attended the district school, passed through the public schools of Delavan, and attended Clark's Business College one winter. Leaving school, he had charge of a stationary engine one season, and then began the study of photography, which has become his life work. In November, 1893, he came to Janesville, and, in company with Alphonso E. Hatch and Robert H. Fitch, bought the photograph gallery of Mr. Turner, the business being conducted under the firm name of Barlow, Hatch & Co., who together owned and operated five studios. After a short time Mr. Barlow sold out his interest in the other studios, buying his partners' interest in the Janesville gallery, which he has carried on most successfully up to the present time. He stands high in his chosen calling, and was a member of the executive committee of the Wisconsin State Photographers' Association at its last annual meeting. Mr. Barlow attributes part of his success, at least, to the excellent business training he had from his father, who conducted an agricultural implement business in Delavan for many years, and has also had a livery barn there for sixteen years.

Mr. Barlow and Miss Gertrude M. Harper were married Oct. 7, 1896. She is a daughter of Robert and Hannah (Atcheson) Harper, and is a lady of much character, enjoying many friends, and sympathizing heartily with her husband's artistic tastes and proclivities. Their home is at No. 5 Jefferson avenue. Mr. Barlow is a member of Oriental Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and is a Republican in politics.

LASELL C. BREWER, the genial host of the "Park Hotel," of Janesville, Rock county, conducts a first-class hostelry upon modern plans, and provides his guests with all conveniences, and furnishes a table that has gained for his house a wide-spread reputation.

Mr. Brewer was born in Otsego county, N. Y., in the village of Hartwick, Feb. 27, 1838, a son of Jonathan W. and Julia (Leland) Brewer, natives of New York and Vermont, respectively. The paternal grandfather of our subject, Jonathan Brewer, was a native of New York State, where he engaged in farming, reared a large family, and died at an advanced age. The maternal grandfather, Joshua Leland, a native of Vermont, was also a farmer. and later a lawyer, and had a number of sons and daughters. Jonathan W. Brewer, the father of our subject, conducted a foundry, blacksmith shop and plow works, in Hartwick, N. Y., for many years. In 1846 he removed to Michigan, buying a farm near Owosso, in the town of Bennington, where he resided until his death, which occurred in July, 1872, when he was seventy-four years of age. His wife survived him several years, and was eighty-two at her death. Both were members of the Universalist Church, and very worthy and highly esteemed people. During the Mexican war Jonathan W. Brewer served his country in a brave and gallant manner, as colonel of a regiment. Four children, three sons and one daughter, were born to him: Helen M., wife of Joseph H. Howe, of Owosso, Mich.; Emory L., of Owosso, Mich., a boot and shoe merchant; Lasell C., of Janesville; and Burns W., of Owosso, Michigan.

Lasell C. Brewer resided in New York State until 1846, and then moved with the family to Michigan, where he grew to manhood, working on a farm until the war of the Rebellion broke upon the country. Fired with patriotism, Mr. Brewer enlisted, in December, 1861, in Company E, 14th Mich. V. I., and served until the close of the war. At Brentwood, Tenn., Mr. Brewer was wounded, and again, although but slightly, in front of Atlanta, in the collar-bone. Entering the ranks for his bravery Mr. Brewer was promoted until he attained the rank of captain. Among the engagements in which he participated might be mentioned Shiloh, the first and second battles of Nashville, Missionary Ridge, Resaca, Stone River, Chickamauga, and Buzzard's Roost, and he was fighting almost continuously until the fall of Atlanta. After the second battle of Nashville Mr. Brewer was promoted in the 30th Mich. V. I. and went out as first lieutenant of Company K. Later he was promoted to the rank of captain, commanding the company about three months, when he was honorably discharged, in June, 1865.

After the war Mr. Brewer engaged in the livery business in Owosso, Mich., continuing same for some time, during which period he served most acceptably as both alderman and city marshal. Leaving Owosso, Mr. Brewer removed to Dane county, Wis., and bought a farm of 320 acres, which he cultivated for some years, and later sold. During his term of residence in that county he was elected chairman of the town board of supervisors, and held the position as long as he remained there. After selling his farm Mr. Brewer engaged in the hotel business at Evansville, Wis., and on Feb. 5, 1896, bought the "Park Hotel," in Janesville, which he still conducts. After taking charge of this popular house Mr. Brewer made a number of desirable improvements, and by his efforts has largely increased its patronage.

On Feb. 4, 1868, Mr. Brewer married Miss Ellen M. Graves, daughter of S. W. and Mary R. Graves, and four children have been born to them: Lena G., who married Joseph Coleman, of Fort Atkinson, Wis., and has two children, Arlene May and Carroll; Chester L., a professor in Albion (Mich.) College, who married Grace Brownell, a daughter of Isaac C. Brownell; Burns W., in high school at Janesville; and Claude, who died when he was eighteen months old.

Socially Mr. Brewer is a member of the F. & A. M. Lodge No. 81, of Owosso, Mich., and for many years was a member of Suthers Post, G. A. R., of Evansville. Politically he is independent, voting as his convictions dictate, and in addition to the offices already mentioned served as clerk of the school board, chairman of the board of health, and justice of the peace, in Rutland, Wisconsin.

Possessing as he does, in marked degree, the qualities necessary to success in his calling, Mr. Brewer has extended his circle of acquaintances and friends until it embraces many States, his house being a favored one with travelers who pass through Janesville, as well as with the people of that city. Genial and entertaining, Mr. Brewer is an acquisition wherever he goes, and enjoys not only the esteem, but also the admiration, of all who know him.

JAMES PIERCE is one of the oldest and best-known pioneers of Milton township, Rock county. In 1838, before he had attained his majority, he left his home in New York State for the wild and undeveloped West. Coming by boat to Milwaukee, he soon became identified with the settlement of the Rock River Valley.

Mr. Pierce was born in Alfred township, Allegany Co., N. Y., Dec. 26, 1817, son of Samuel and Susan (White) Pierce, both natives of Rhode Island. Of their five children, four sons and one daughter, two survive: William, of Danbury, Iowa; and James, our subject. The father in 1851 followed his son West, and located in the southwestern part of Milton township, Rock county, where he died in 1865. His wife survived many years, spending her later years at her old home in New York State, and living to the age of ninety-four. Both were members of the Seventh-day Baptist Church. The paternal grandfather of our subject, Daniel Pierce, also lived to a ripe old age, having almost attained his ninetieth birthday at the time of his death. He removed with his family from Rhode Island, his native State, to Alfred, Allegany Co., N. Y., about 1817. The maternal grandfather of our subject was a sea-faring man of Rhode Island.

James Pierce was reared on his father's farm in New York State, and in his youth attended the district schools. Possessing the pioneer spirit, he landed in Milwaukee July 11, 1838, and at once started for the Rock River Valley. The first halt he made was at Du Lac Prairie. He began work for Joseph Goodrich in Milton township, Rock county, as farm hand and clerk in the store, and two years later, upon his marriage, began life for himself.

On Sept. 24, 1840, Mr. Pierce married Miss Olive Hall, daughter of Gardner and Nancy (Stillman) Hall, and to them three children have been born: Clark R., who married Rachel B. Butts, and lives at Edgerton, Wis.; Alonzo D., who died, aged thirteen months; and Susan M., who died at the age of fourteen years. Mr. and Mrs. Pierce are prominent members of the Seventh-day Baptist Church, and for many years he has been chairman and treasurer of the Seventh-day Baptist Church at Milton Junction.

In Territorial days Mr. Pierce served as deputy county surveyor under John Hopkins, of Beloit. He has been assessor of the township, overseer of highways, and for many years supervisor, and discharged the duties of justice of the peace for a period of twenty-two years. In politics Mr. Pierce is a Republican.

HON. JOSEPH HARRIS, one of the men of Grant county who have assisted in making history within the legislative halls of the State capitol, is now resting from his labors and enjoying a well-earned repose in the city of Cuba, Grant county.

Joseph Harris was born in Cornwall, England, March 8, 1823, a son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Jacka) Harris, natives of England. The father died in England when our subject was a small boy, and the mother married Thomas Nichols, later coming to Hazel Green, Grant Co., Wis., where she passed away. To her first marriage four children were born: John died in England before our subject came to this country; Charles came to Wisconsin, crossed the Plains to California, and mined until his death, in 1898; Mary A. married John Vivian, in Wisconsin, and she and her husband went to California by water (Mr. Vivian succeeded beyond his wildest hopes, and when he died, in 1895, left a magnificent property, including 4,000 acres of land. His family all reside in California); Joseph is our subject.

Mr. Harris received his early education in the schools of his native land and when he came to America, in April, 1844, he settled at Hazel Green. In 1849 the gold fever broke out, and among the thousands who crossed the Plains in search of the king of metals was Joseph Harris. After some two years, during which time he successfully prospected and mined, Mr. Harris returned to Hazel Green, but the love of the venturesome life proved too strong, and he returned to California in 1852, again remaining two years. In 1854 he again returned to Wisconsin, purchasing land in Hazel Green, which he still owns, and which he developed into one of the finest stock farms in Grant county. In addition to this he also owns a fine farm of 340 acres in Smelser, and he is one of the prosperous farmers and stockmen in that section of the county. For many years Mr. Harris continued to raise stock for the Chicago market, but he now resides at his comfortable home in Cuba City, retired from active business life.

In 1846 Mr. Harris married Miss Rebecca Bawden, and eleven children have been born to them: John T., for twenty years a resident of Texas; Mary A., now wife of John McCarthy, of Minnesota, who has four children; Rebecca, now wife of Josiah Kempthorne, of Iowa, who has four children; Charles, married, a farmer of Smelser township; Joseph, married, a prominent butcher of Cuba City; Ethelinda, educated at the Platteville Normal, and now wife of G. W. Marvel, of Nebraska (she has a family); Jacob, married, a stock dealer of Cuba City, and a member of the Cuba City Bank, which was organized in 1898; Nettie, now wife of Rev. Mr. Thomson, a Congregational clergyman, now stationed at Ashkum, Ill. (they have a family); Laura B., educated at the Platteville Normal School, and now the wife of Matthew Hendricks, one of the leading merchants and bankers of Cuba City (she has a family); Allie B., twin sister of Mrs. Hendricks, now the wife of Prof. T. J. Metcalf, of the Platteville State Normal, from which institution of learning they both graduated (after his marriage Prof. Metcalf removed to Merrill, Wis., where he began to practice dentistry, having also graduated from the Chicago Dental College); and T. H. Harris, a graduate of the Chicago Dental College, now a dentist at Beresford, South Dakota.

Mr. Harris was originally a Henry Clay Whig, and when the Republican party was formed gave his support to its principles, and has continued in its ranks ever since. In 1860 Mr. Harris was honored with election to the Legislature of Wisconsin, and re-elected two terms, after which he refused the nomination several times, feeling that he had given as much of his time as he could spare from his business to affairs of State. In addition, he filled all of the town offices from time to time, and always received the hearty support of his constituents. Mr. Harris was reared in the Church of England, but is a man of wide sympathies and broad opinions, and he willingly gives his support to any church work, feeling that every denomination is working for the betterment of humanity.

AARON T. MOORE, a retired farmer of the town of Paris, Grant county, was born in Wayne county, Ill., Jan. 11, 1843, a son of George A. and Mary F. (Jordan) Moore. The father was born in Allegheny county, Penn., near Pittsburg, April 5, 1806, and the mother in Indiana, July 29, 1811.

George A. Moore was reared on a farm in Pennsylvania, and after his marriage, in 1828, settled on a farm in Posey county, Ind., where he and his wife lived for some years. The family then removed to Wayne county, Ill., purchasing a farm there, which Mr. Moore tilled four years. In the spring of 1844 Mr. Moore and his family settled in the town of Paris, Grant Co., Wis., on a tract of wild land, and here the remaining years of his life were spent, and under his energetic treatment was developed a fine farm. He died March 4, 1883. His wife survived many years, and passed away Jan. 19, 1899. Mr. Moore regarded himself as an old Jacksonian Democrat, but on the breaking out of the Rebellion had felt obligated to vote with the Republican party, and continued to vote their ticket after that time. Mrs. Moore was a member of the Congregational Church, and was known as a fine Christian woman. Mr. Moore was not identified with the church as a member, but he was always interested in moral movements, and was a liberal contributor to the support of the church. Mr. and Mrs. Moore were the parents of eleven children, three of whom died in childhood. (1) David S. Moore, their eldest son, was born in Indiana, and was reared in Grant county, where he married Miss Emaline Richard, a native of that county. He spent almost his entire life as a farmer in the town of Paris, and died in 1892, leaving a widow, but no family. (2) Benjamin F. Moore, born in Indiana, when a young man with his brother David crossed the Plains to the gold fields of California, where they were fairly successful. Both came back to Wisconsin, where Benjamin married Miss Sarah Crull, of Grant county, and moved to British Columbia, where he is engaged as a stock and fruit farmer. They have a family of three children, Mary, George W., and Lucretia. (3) Kezia C. Moore, born in Indiana, was reared to womanhood in Grant county, and married John D. Irens, of Platteville. Three children constitute their family. (4) George W. Moore, born in Indiana, enlisted in Company I, 10th Wis. V. I., in 1861, and died at Louisville, Ky., in December, 1862. (5) Aaron T. Moore was next in the order of birth. (6) Mary E. Moore, born in Grant county, was reared to womanhood in her parents' home, and married John A. Blakely, of Harrison, Grant county, who is now a retired farmer in Rockville, Wis.; he was a soldier in the Civil war. They have had five children. (7) John H. Moore, born in Grant county, is a musician of note. He has never married. (8) Martha J. Moore, born on the Grant county homestead, married August Lenhe, and makes her home on the homestead place. They have two children, Leroy and Frank.

Aaron T. Moore grew to manhood on the home farm, and acquired his education in the public schools of the town. When he was nineteen years of age he enlisted in Company I, 25th Wis. V. L., and served in the far West until the month of November, of the following year, keeping the Indians under control. In December the 25th Wisconsin came back to the State, and in February went to Columbus, Ky., where four months were spent in guard duty. In May the regiment was moved down the Mississippi, and it had an active part in the operations around Vicksburg. When that stronghold surrendered the regiment was transported to Helena, Ark., where it did good work in army operations in that region for several months. In the month of February, 1864, it was sent across the State of Mississippi and back to Vicksburg, and took part in Gen. Sherman's operations against Gen. Johnston. This regiment had a part in the operations that followed on the Cumberland river, in Tennessee, and was with Gen. Sherman in the campaign around Atlanta; formed a portion of the General's magnificent army with which he marched to the sea, and broke the backbone of the Rebellion; was in the grand review at Washington; and was there mustered out of the service June 7, 1865. The record of this regiment, when told at length, as it cannot be in the limits of a volume like this, is one of the most brilliant and patriotic of any of the noble organizations that Wisconsin sent to the front.

Mr. Moore returned to the old homestead and took up a farmer's life as soon as his military days were over. In February, 1869, he married Miss Harriet Brady, a daughter of R. S. and Jane Brady, old pioneers of Grant county, originally from Ohio. Mrs. Moore was born in Ohio, where she spent the early part of her life, but her girlhood was mainly passed in Grant county. After his marriage Mr. Moore bought a farm in the town of Paris, where he and his wife made their home until the death of Mrs. Moore, in May, 1897. Since that time Mr. Moore has lived retired. They had no family.

Mr. Moore is a Republican, has been a member of the Paris town board a number of terms, has been several times a delegate to the county convention, and in 1901 was elected chairman of his town. He belongs to W. T. Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R., at Platteville. He is also a member of the Knights of the Globe, No. 25, at Dickeysville, Wis. Religiously he was reared a Protestant, and has always been a liberal contributor to the support of the local churches. Mr. Moore is a representative citizen of his town, and has made a record in his long and useful life of which any man might be proud.

HERMANN GRIMM, one of the leading citizens and prominent business men of Cassville, Grant county, is a member of the firm of Grimm Brothers, general merchants and grain buyers of that place, where he has made his home since the spring of 1852. With the growth and upbuilding of the town he has been prominently identified, and, while promoting his individual prosperity, has materially advanced the interests of his adopted home.

Mr. Grimm was born Dec. 28, 1832, in Coblenz, Rhine Province, Germany, and is a son of Valentine and Henrietta (Fuerstenhaupt) Grimm, the former also a native of Coblenz, the latter of Naumburg, Saxony. The father, who was a municipal officer of Coblenz, died at that place in 1876, and the mother died there in 1880. Of their ten children, Hermann is the eldest; Valentine came to Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1854, and was later engaged in the manufacture of cigars at St. Louis, Mo., until his death, in 1892; Hugo was associated with his brother Valentine in business, and died the same year; Aloys is a prominent business man of Cassville, Wis., his sketch appearing on another page of this volume; William is still a resident of Coblenz, Germany; Joseph makes his home in Bloomington, Ill.; Gustoph died in St. Louis in 1895; Philip C. came to Cassville in 1871, and is the junior member of the firm of Grimm Brothers; Anna and Helen are still residents of Germany.

Hermann Grimm grew to manhood in his native land, and acquired his education in its public schools. In the spring of 1852 he set sail from Liverpool, England, for America, and after a voyage of six weeks landed at New York. He proceeded on his journey by rail to Erie, Penn.; by boat to Detroit, Mich.; by rail to Chicago and Rockford, Ill.; by stage to Galena; and by river to Cassville, Wis., where he arrived in June, 1852. In 1859 he opened a livery stable at this place, which he successfully conducted until 1888, and then embarked in his present business, in partnership with his brother Philip. They carry a large and well-selected stock of general merchandise, deal in grain, and handle all kinds of produce.

In 1859 Mr. Grimm was married, at Cassville, to Miss Elizabeth Ishmael, a native of Illinois, and to them have been born seven children, namely: Henrietta, Mrs. Duncan, of Cassville; Kate, Mrs. Stevens, and Bertha, Mrs. Stevens, both of Rhinelander, Wis.; Valentine, of Cassville; William, at home; Jennie, Mrs. Willis P. Colburn; and Eldridge, of Rhinelander.

Fraternally Mr. Grimm affiliates with the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and politically he is identified with the Democratic party. He was chairman of Cassville township for twenty-two years, and has been one of the trustees of the Grant County Insane Asylum since 1884. He takes an active interest in all enterprises for the good of his town or county, and is a recognized leader in public affairs. By untiring industry and sound judgment he has won merited success in his business undertakings, and is in all respects worthy of the high regard in which he is held by his fellow citizens.

J. M. ROSE, a prominent contractor and builder of Platteville, Grant county, is a native of Ohio, born Jan. 31, 1845, in Roseville, Muskingum county, a son of John and Mary (Woolard) Rose, natives of Ohio and Pennsylvania, respectively. In 1849 the family came to Grant county, Wis., and took up their residence in Platteville, where the father followed the carpenter's trade until called from this life, in 1862. The mother long survived him, dying in 1880, leaving three children, namely: Elizabeth A., now Mrs. Townsend, residing in Platteville; George L., living in Dubuque, Iowa; and J. M.

J. M. Rose grew to manhood in Platteville, and is indebted to its splendid public-school system for his educational privileges. In early life he learned the cabinet trade with W. & J. Grindell, working with them for eight years. He then abandoned the cabinet trade and took up carpentering, which latter trade he still follows. For a number of years he has engaged in contracting and building, now having his eldest son as partner. He draws his own plans and specifications, and has met with well-deserved success in his chosen occupation, as mention of a few of the many handsome residences he has erected will testify—B. F. Huntington's, Will Rindlaub's, H. G. Chase's, H. E. Stephens, Thomas Jenkins, and many others.

In Platteville Mr. Rose was married, in October, 1866, to Miss Lizzie Stephens, a native of Mineral Point, Iowa Co., Wis., and a daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Letcher) Stephens, natives of Yorkshire, England, and early settlers of Grant county. Mrs. Stephens died in 1874. Thomas Stephens still survives, aged about eighty-five years. Mr. Rose has had eight children born to him, one of whom, Nora, died in 1873. The living are John W., Jesse G., Cora E., Will A., Charles G., Walter E., and Myrtle M.

In December, 1863, Mr. Rose laid aside all personal interests to enter the service of his country, enlisting for three years or during the war in Company E, 25th Wis. V. I., which regiment was assigned to the 17th Army Corps, and accompanied Sherman to the sea. Mr. Rose was mustered in at Madison, Wis., Jan. 14, 1864, and took part in all the engagements in which his command participated up to the battle of Decatur. These included the battles of Resaca, Snake Creek Gap and Dallas. At Decatur, he received a severe gunshot wound in the side and arm and was left on the field for twenty-four hours, it being supposed that he was fatally injured. He was then taken to the field hospital, and later to Marietta, Ga. Receiving a furlough he came home, and as soon as able reported for duty at Madison, Wis. He was then transferred to the United States Army Hospital at Prairie du Chien, and remained there until honorably discharged from the service, in February, 1865. Mr. Rose is now an honored member of W. T. Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R., and is also a member of the Knights of the Globe. He uses his right of franchise in support of the men and measures of the Republican party, and, as every true American citizen should, he takes an active interest in public affairs. He is well and favorably known, and is a worthy representative of one of the honored old families of Platteville.

CHESTER C. BENNETT, the principal member of the C. C. Bennett Shoe Co., of Janesville, Rock county, enjoys an enviable reputation as a business man and a genial gentleman throughout the city and county. He is now in the prime of life, and has a circle of friends of which any man might well be proud.

Mr. Bennett was born in Lima township, Rock Co., Wis., May 25, 1865, and is a son of George and Susan (Osmond) Bennett, both natives of New York. They were the parents of five sons, three of whom are now living: Dr. L. F. Bennett, of Beloit, Wis.; Chester C.; and James B., who is now living on the home farm. Orrin G., another son, lived to become a member of the medical profession, and attain some standing in that line, but is now deceased. The father, who has always been a farmer, came to Wisconsin about 1851, and located on the farm which has continued to be his home until the present time: it originally consisted of 120 acres, but he now owns 160 acres. Here he has lived and reared his family, holding an honorable position in the world. He and his wife are still on the farm, though its care has fallen into the hands of their youngest son, James. The aged parents are members of the Baptist Church, and have worthily sustained their religious professions throughout their lives. George Bennett has always been a Republican. His father was a native of New York, and died in that State while still a young man. The maternal grandfather of Mr. Bennett, Caleb Osmond, was born in England, but came to this country early in life. He located in New York, moved to Ohio, and from that State came to Wisconsin when it was still largely a wilderness. He was a farmer, and had a farm near Milton Junction, where he died when eighty-nine years old. He was the father of a large family.

Chester C. Bennett was reared to manhood on the farm in Lima township, attended the district school and Milton (Wis.) College, and began teaching when he was nineteen years of age. He was a teacher for three years, and then clerked in a dry goods store in Janesville six months. He spent some time as a clerk in a grocery store in Chicago, and held the position of buyer for the establishment. Returning to Janesville, he bought a grocery store in that city Sept. 24, 1889, and conducted same until the spring of 1892, doing a fine business, and building up a good trade. That year he sold it, and turning his attention to real estate and loaning money soon secured a very extensive patronage. On April 20, 1896, he formed a partnership with George H. Cram, of Beloit, and established a shoe store in Janesville, which quickly became a center of trade. Mr. Bennett bought out Mr. Cram's interest Dec. 16, 1897, and formed a stock company, now called the C. C. Bennett Shoe Co. (incorporated), which has become a brilliant success.

Chester C. Bennett and Miss Laura E. Chapman were married Nov. 5, 1889. She is a daughter of Mrs. A. E. Chapman, and is a lady of many charms and graces. They are the parents of two children, Ermine F. and Audrey E. The family has a pleasant home at No. 1 Jeffris flats. Mrs. Bennett is a member of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Bennett is a member of several fraternal associations, and is popular wherever found. He belongs to Janesville Lodge, No. 55, A. F. & A. M.; the Knights of Pythias; the I. O. O. F.; the A. O. U. W.; and Rock River Encampment. He is a Republican politically.

T. B. SHERMAN, one of the well-known business men of Stitzer, Grant county, Wis., is engaged in the furniture and lumber business at that place, and belongs to one of the early families of Lancaster.

Mr. Sherman was born in Franklin county, Vt., in 1853, son of Cyrus L. and Fanny (Barber) Sherman, also natives of the Green Mountain State. The mother of our subject was a daughter of the Hon. Joel and Aseneth (Melvin) Barber, natives of Connecticut, who migrated first to Vermont, and then, in 1856, to Lancaster, Wis. There Joel Barber died, at the advanced age of eighty-seven, and his wife died in the same city at the age of eighty. The Hon. Joel Allen Barber is a brother of our subject's mother, as is also the venerable Theodore Barber, who is now eighty-seven. Mrs. Cyrus L. Sherman was born in Vermont April 29, 1822, was married June 18, 1849, and died in 1889, after a long and active life in Lancaster. Cyrus L. Sherman was a contractor and builder. In 1854 he migrated to Grant county, Wis., where he died soon afterward, in 1860. His children are: Myron, a resident of California; T. B.; Mary F., wife of a Mr. Bushnell, of Madison, Wis.; and Arthur, a resident of California.

T. B. Sherman was reared in Lancaster, being educated in the public schools of that place, and learning his father's trade of carpenter and joiner. For fifteen years Mr. Sherman worked at his trade in Lancaster, then removed to Stitzer and embarked in his present business, which he has built up until it is the leading one of the town. Since 1891 Mr. Sherman has been postmaster, and has rendered efficient service in that capacity.

In 1880 T. B. Sherman was married to Miss Fanny Carter, of Lancaster, a daughter of William and Ann (Fox) Carter, natives of England who in 1850 emigrated to the United States, and settled in Lancaster, Grant Co., Wis. Near that town Mr. Carter opened up a farm, where he died in 1875, and his wife passed away, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman, at Stitzer, in 1892.

In political matters Mr. Sherman adheres to the principles of the Republican party, and socially he is connected with the Odd Fellows and the Woodmen. He takes an active interest in the welfare of the community in which he lives, and is regarded as a good citizen, a kind friend and a prosperous business man.

JOHN LEVITT, deceased. The name of Levitt is a familiar one to the old settlers of Monticello township, Lafayette county, and one they have all learned to respect because of the manly qualities of those who have borne it. John Levitt was a native of Yorkshire, England, born June 12, 1816, and his early life was passed in his native county. In 1832 he came to America, proceeding at once to Wood county, Ohio, and in 1838 located in Wisconsin, his first home being within the confines of Green county, near Monroe. On March 10, 1839, he arrived in Monticello, where he secured a claim of government land on Section 34. This tract proved very valuable under his careful management, and he improved it with good buildings, and made of it a comfortable home.

On March 11, 1844, Mr. Levitt was united in marriage with Miss Sarah Alderson, a native of England, and their union was gladdened by ten children, two of whom died in infancy. The others were: Mary Ann, Mrs. Peters, who died Dec. 9, 1900, while on a visit from her California home to the old homestead in Wisconsin; Richard, a resident of California; John, a resident of Monticello township; Luther B., at the old home; Cynthia E.; Charles W.; Edwin D.; and Alice B., wife of James Lamont, of Cherokee county, Iowa. Mr. Levitt died at his home March 22, 1897, having passed the age of fourscore years. The wife and mother, whose birth occurred April 26, 1827, still survives, lovingly cared for by her devoted children. The Leavitt homestead is one of the oldest in this part of the county, and has been in the continuous possession of the family for over sixty years.

Mr. Levitt had not reached man's estate when he came to this country, and was wholly without means, but his steady habits, clear head and willing hands furnished him with what proved to be ample capital, and he gained a competence sufficient to enable him to enjoy all the comforts and many of the luxuries of life during the evening of his career. He was a public-spirited citizen, and took a deep interest in all that pertained to the welfare of his community. He was a worthy member of the Methodist Church, steadfastly endeavoring to practice in his life the faith he professed. Two of his brothers, William and Richard, also came to this country, and became well known in Monticello township, both highly respected; the latter removed in 1890 to Kansas, where his death occurred March 15, 1900.

CAPT. JOHN McDERMOTT is numbered among the gallant men who hastened to the defense of the country, and whose lives were sacrificed in upholding the flag.

Our subject was born at Carrick, Ireland, in 1822, and came to the United States at the age of nineteen, first locating in Wisconsin, at Mineral Point, Iowa county, where, like most of the early settlers of that part of the State, he engaged in mining. At the age of twenty-four he married in Highland township, Iowa county, Miss Elizabeth Fletcher, of Mineral Point, and about 1850 located on land in Fenimore, Grant county. In 1852, when the gold excitement in California was at its height, he crossed the Plains to the Pacific coast. Returning after an absence of about two years, Capt. McDermott resumed farming, and was successfully pursuing that occupation when the war of the Rebellion was inaugurated. His loyalty to the Union, his fearlessness and sense of duty, did not long permit him to stand idly by and see others rushing to the front, while he remained at home in the pursuit of ordinary business. Early in 1862 he began raising a company, and succeeded in the formation of Company C, 20th Wis. V. I., with Capt. McDermott in command. The regiment was organized in August, 1862, and soon after was engaged in active service at the front. At the battle of Prairie Grove, Ark., Dec. 7, 1862, the 20th took a prominent part, and made the first charge on the enemy. They were met unexpectedly by a greatly superior force, and were obliged to fall back. While doing so, the color bearer and color guards were the especial targets of the enemy, and were shot down. As the colors fell Capt. McDermott seized the flag, to prevent its falling into the hands of the enemy, but had scarcely done so when he too fell dead. Thus died, in defense of his country, a brave soldier and loyal-hearted citizen.

Capt. McDermott was sincerely mourned, not only by his own command, but by all who had come to know his gallantry and sterling worth. It is the universal testimony, of those who knew him best, after nearly forty years have passed away, that when Capt. McDermott died the Nation lost one of its bravest officers. He left his wife with six children to rear. The noble mother, faithful to the charge that devolved upon her, carefully brought them up, and all have become respected and useful men and women. They are: Sarah, wife of Samuel Steuvert, of Fennimore; Mary, wife of Leander Walker; Emma; Isabel, wife of Melvin Shearer; Dr. Thomas E. McDermott; and Prof. Edward Eugene McDermott. The good wife and mother passed away at her home in Fennimore Nov. 1, 1887, deeply mourned by her family and friends. She was a lady of a high order of ability, and will long be remembered by all who knew her.

THOMAS E. McDERMOTT, M. D., was educated at the Platteville Normal School and the Wisconsin State University, at Madison. In 1879 he entered Rush Medical College, Chicago, where he pursued the study of medicine, and then entered the Chicago Medical College, from which he graduated three years later with the degree of M. D. Following his graduation, for a year and a half, Dr. McDermott was resident physician of the Cook County Hospital, Chicago, since which time he has resided at Fennimore, engaged in the practice of his profession. Dr. McDermott has built up a large and lucrative practice, and is held in high esteem, both professionally and socially.

Prof. Edward Eugene McDermott was educated at the Northwestern State University, Evanston, Ill., where he graduated in the class of 1883. For three years he was principal of the high school at Lancaster, and now occupies the Chair of Oratory in the University of Minnesota.

GEORGE R. BARKER, the genial, well-known supervisor of Janesville township, Rock county, was born in Chautauqua county, N. Y., Oct. 25, 1839, a son of Job and Phoebe (Smith) Barker, natives of Massachusetts and Vermont, respectively.

Caleb Barker, the paternal grandfather of our subject, was a native of Massachusetts, and a farmer by occupation. He married a Miss Eddy, and reared a large family. His death occurred at Granville, N. Y., where he is buried, and where the majority of his children lived. The maternal grandfather of our subject, George Smith, was a native of Vermont, and a brother of Samuel Smith, of Smithfield, R. I., born about 1785. By occupation he was a farmer. He married Rachel Read, a daughter of John and Hannah (Farnum) Read. The Read family trace their origin in America to Col. Thomas Read, who came to this country in 1630; and in England back to Thomas Read, Esq., of Barton Court, in the County of Berks, England, 1575. George Smith and his wife had nine children. He died in the East, while yet in the prime of life.

Job Barker, the father of our subject, was a farmer, who came to Rock county in 1840, and took up government land, owning at one time 1,240 acres, most of which he improved, although he died in 1846, aged forty-eight years, his wife surviving until 1879, when she died aged seventy-six. Both Mr. and Mrs. Job Barker were members of the Society of Friends, but after moving West Mrs. Barker attended the Episcopal Church. Phoebe Smith was the second wife of Job Barker, who by his former wife had two children: Walter, of California; and Angeline, of Santa Ana, Cal., the widow of Leonard Marsh. In the family of which our subject was a member there were six children, three sons and three daughters, four of whom are now living: Cecelia A., wife of J. W. Coolridge, of Baldwinsville, Mass.; George R., of Janesville township; Julius H., who lives with his brother George; and Eugenia, widow of J. H. Conrad, a resident of Chicago.

George R. Barker was only six months old when brought to his present home, in 1840, where he has resided ever since. His early education, obtained at the district schools of his neighborhood, was supplemented by two terms at Milton (Wis.) College, since which time Mr. Barker has devoted his attention to his agricultural interests. After his marriage he came into possession of a portion of the family estate, and in 1868 built his present substantial and comfortable home. Although he owns 200 acres, Mr. Barker only farms a little over 100 acres himself, renting the remainder of his property.

On Feb. 21, 1867, Mr. Barker married Miss Margaret A. Cargill, daughter of Capt. William and Edna (Davis) Cargill, and six children, two sons and four daughters, have been born to them: Edna Phoebe, wife of William Bradley Conrad, of Janesville, has one son, Bradley; Julius Morville, who married Pauline Davis, of Brunswick, Mo., is a partner in the tobacco factory at Brunswick, Mo.; Ella Claire is the wife of Arthur P. Allen, steward in the Northern Hospital, near Oshkosh, Wis.; Mary Rogers is temporarily in Chicago, although her home is still with her parents; George Cargill is still at home; and Margaret, also at home, graduated in 1900 from the Janesville high school.

The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Barker, Thomas Cargill, was a native of Scotland, and a custom-house official. Mrs. Barker's maternal grandfather, Isaac Davis, was born and lived on Long Island, N. Y. The parents of Mrs. Barker came from Long Island, N. Y., to Rock county in 1857, settling in Harmony township, and engaging in farming, although until his migration Mr. Cargill had been a sailor. He followed farming until a few years prior to his death, when he removed to the city of Janesville, dying March 26, 1893, aged eighty years and two weeks. His wife died in 1887, aged seventy-four years. Five sons and one daughter were born to this couple, five of whom are still living: Margaret A. (Mrs. Barker); William W.; Samuel; Sylvester, and James. Thomas is deceased.

Mrs. Barker is an active and consistent member of the M. E. Church; and Mr. Barker belongs to the A. O. U. W., and the Grange. Politically his affiliations are with the Republican party, and he has most acceptably served as supervisor of Janesville township for nine years, and as chairman of the Janesville township board for six years. Mr. Barker was also township treasurer for eight years, and has been treasurer of school district No. 3 for many years. For sixty-one years Mr. Barker has been a resident of Janesville township, and he enjoys the distinction of being the oldest resident, as well as one of the most esteemed and honored of its citizens. No man has the welfare of the township more at heart than has Mr. Barker, as he has most conclusively proven by his many years of faithful service as a public official, as well as in his character as a private citizen.

JACKSON PACE, one of the oldest and most honored citizens of Wyalusing, Grant county, is a native of Virginia, his birth occurring in Bedford county May 10, 1815. He is the only child of John and Polly Pace, though his mother had several children by her second marriage. His father died of yellow fever at Norfolk, Va., when Jackson was but a child.

Jackson Pace was reared in the family of a maternal uncle, and when about fifteen years of age commenced earning his own livelihood, working in a tobacco factory, where he was employed several years. Leaving his native State in 1840, Mr. Pace went to Warren county, Mo., where he worked in a similar establishment for three years, and then came to Wisconsin, locating first at what was called Pigeon Diggings, near Lancaster, Grant county, where he engaged in mining until 1847. On August 5, that year, he wedded Miss Mary Allensworth, who was born July 20, 1827, and died Sept. 8, 1869. To that union were born six children who reached adult age, but two daughters are now deceased, Nancy and Mary. Those living are Rebecca Jane, born May 4, 1851; Rachel F., May 2, 1857; Mitchell, May 9, 1859; and Thomas Grant, March 1, 1864.

In 1849 Mr. Pace took up his residence in Lancaster, but two years later moved to Beeton, and about 1857 bought a farm, which he operated for a time, and then sold. He engaged in mining and farming until 1858, when he moved to Wyalusing, and has since made that place his home.

Politically Mr. Pace was first a Whig, and later a Republican, and fraternally he is a member of the Masonic Order, with which he has been connected for nearly half a century. He and his family are worthy members of the Congregational Church, and are held in high regard by all who know them. He is remarkably bright and active for one of his years, is pleasant and genial in manner, and has a wide circle of friends and acquaintances who esteem him highly for his sterling worth. His life has been manly, his actions sincere, and his example is well worthy of emulation.

CAPT. S. W. OSBORN. For a half century Capt. S. W. Osborn, the subject of this biography, has been a resident of the city of Darlington, Lafayette county, which now delights to honor him as one of her distinguished citizens. He was born at Franklin, Delaware Co., N. Y., July 1, 1811, a son of Samuel and Polly (Webster) Osborn, both of whom were natives of Connecticut. The maternal grandfather, Michael Webster, who was a soldier in the war of the Revolution, died in Ashtabula county, Ohio, at the age of 102 years, retaining his faculties until the close of his long life. The paternal grandfather, Samuel Osborn, was also a soldier in the Revolution; he spent his last days in his native State, Connecticut.

In 1813, when our subject was but two and one-half years old, his parents migrated from the State of New York to Ashtabula county, Ohio, and the father died near Sandusky in 1820, the mother passing away in Ashtabula county in December, 1877, at the age of nearly ninety-four years. Capt. Osborn is one of a family of four sons and two daughters, three members surviving at the present: S. S., who resides in Chicago, born Oct. 21, 1804; our subject; and Mrs. S. E. Barrett, born in Franklin, N. Y., in July, 1813, who is a resident of Darlington, Wis., and has one daughter, Mrs. R. S. Woodworth, a resident of Pennsylvania. Those who have passed away were S. A., Mrs. S. M. Sanford, and S. C.

Having the misfortune to so early lose their father, our subject and other members of the family were given homes with relatives until able to provide for themselves. In common with many pioneer families, the mother's means were limited, while there were many mouths to feed, but our subject took upon himself as many responsibilities as one of his age could bear, and was not long dependent upon any one. His boyhood and early manhood were spent in Ashtabula county, where he early engaged in farming, later becoming a miller, attending to his business steadily and pursuing it with success. In April, 1850, Capt. Osborn came to Lafayette county, and thus became acquainted with the proprietor of the plat of Darlington. Soon after he returned to Ohio, the same year, he was solicited to return West and assist in the erection of a large mill at Darlington. Accepting the terms of this offer, he returned to Darlington in 1851, assisted in the building of the mill, and operated it for fourteen years. At the time of his location in the city the population was sparse, and his is the only family now residing here that was located permanently, except that of Charles Blakely.

When the Civil war broke out, in 1861, Capt. Osborn was not long in making up his mind to offer his services to his country. From youth he had been opposed to slavery, in 1844 had voted for James G. Birney, and was a pronounced Abolitionist in his views. His age caused him to be refused a place in the ranks at the opening of the war, but a little later, when rules became somewhat relaxed, from necessity, he was admitted, his service beginning in the fall of 1861, as captain of Company I, 16th Wis. V. I., which left Camp Randall March 14, 1862. His baptism of fire was on the bloody field of Shiloh, where his regiment lost heavily, his own company's ranks being decimated, his first lieutenant being killed, while the second was wounded. Soon after this battle Capt. Osborn was taken ill, and came home on a sick furlough, but rejoined his regiment before he had sufficiently recovered, taking part in the battle of Corinth, Miss.; however, his health was so precarious that he could no longer be of use to the government, and he returned home in December, 1862.

For several years after his return Capt. Osborn was unable to engage in any work continuously, but, thanks to a good constitution and a well-ordered life, he has recovered enough to pursue his ordinary vocations, although he will probably never fully recover his former vigor. As soon as able he again resumed work at the mill, where he remained for four years, since which time he has been variously engaged. For four more years he was the efficient superintendent of the Lafayette Poor Farm, then traveled through the South for a season, in the interests of the King Bridge Co., of Ohio. Always an ardent Republican, for a number of years he was postmaster at Darlington, and in 1865 was a member of the Assembly branch of the Legislature. Capt. Osborn was a delegate to the first Republican convention held in Wisconsin, in 1856, this being the only Republican organization of the party in the State. Until 1844 he voted with the Whigs, in 1840 voting for Harrison, in 1848 for Van Buren, the Free-Soil candidate, and since the formation of the Republican party he has cast his vote with it at every election.

The marriage of Capt. Osborn took place March 1, 1835, to Miss Julia M. Gardner, a native of Massachusetts. She passed away April 18, 1897, after a married life of sixty-two years. Four children were born to this marriage, three of whom survive: Mrs. S. M. Orton, wife of Hon. P. A. Orton, of Darlington; H. W., a physician of Cleveland, Ohio; and C. F., an attorney of ability, who is judge of the probate court of Lafayette county; the other, Mrs. Julia M. Hodge, died many years ago.

Within the brief limits of a volume of this kind, no adequate sketch can be given of as prominent an individual as our subject. Capt. Osborn is one of Lafayette's most esteemed and respected citizens, and is honored also as one who has assisted materially in the growth of the city to which he came in its infancy, and whose development he has watched with so much interest and pride.

REV. WILLIAM CLARKE WHITFORD, President of Milton College, of Milton, Rock county, was born May 5, 1828, near the village of West Edmeston, in the town of Edmeston, Otsego county, N. Y., the eldest of four sons born to Capt. Samuel and Sophia (Clarke) Whitford.

The father of our subject was a lineal descendant of Pasco Whitford, who was born about 1640 in Bedfordshire, England, emigrated to America about 1665, and resided in Newport, East Greenwich, and Kingston, R. I. In the four generations succeeding him, the other ancestors of Samuel were directly connected by marriage with prominent families of Rhode Island by the names of Wells, Congdon, Burdick, Clarke, Brown, Babcock, Maccoone, Saunders, and Greenman. Capt. Samuel's grandfather, Joshua Whitford, of Stonington, Conn., and of Berlin, N. Y., enlisted in 1775 and in 1778 in the Continental Army of the Revolution, and was present at the evacuation of Boston, Mass., by the British. He took part in the expedition of Gen. Sullivan against Newport, R. I. He became ensign also, in a company of militia raised in Stonington, Conn., in 1777. Sophia (Clarke) was a descendant in two lines from Joseph Clarke, Jr., of Newport and Westerly, R. I., a nephew of Dr. John Clarke, immigrant in 1637, pastor of the first Baptist Church in Newport, and deputy governor of Rhode Island. The ancestral home of this family was in the parish of Westhorpe, County of Suffolk, England. Members of it in direct lines, in Rhode Island, became related by marriage with the families of the State named Hubbard, Champlin, Reynolds, Perry, Hazard, Freeman, Potter, Babcock, and Pendleton.

Capt. Samuel Whitford was born the fourth of twelve children, in the town of Brookfield, Madison Co., N. Y., Aug. 28, 1797, of parents who were reared in the town of Berlin, Rensselaer Co., N. Y. He was a farmer by occupation nearly all his life, and raised and bought cattle and sheep, selling them in the large markets of the State. Samuel Whitford was only sixteen years of age when his father, David Whitford, died, leaving an invalid wife, Mrs. Meribah Whitford, and nine living children, and but one daughter younger than Samuel, and two of them crippled from their birth; Mrs. Whitford was a daughter of Nathan and Eunice Greenman, of Berlin, N. Y. The care of the family came upon the youth's shoulders. He worked the small farm left by his father, teamed to different towns and cities for store keepers, and manufactured potash in Otsego, Madison and Allegany counties, N. Y., devoting all his earnings for fourteen years to the support of his mother, brothers and sisters. On October 26, 1826, he married Sophia, the eldest of eight children born to Joseph and Hannah (Clarke) Clarke, natives, respectively, of the towns of Westerly and Hopkinton, R. I. Sophia Clarke was born Feb. 6, 1802, in the town of Brookfield, N. Y., but lived the greater part of her life in the town of Plainfield, Otsego Co., same State. She, too, lost her father at an early age, and greatly assisted her mother in supporting the younger children of the family. The first five years after their marriage Samuel Whitford and his wife resided in the town of Edmeston, where he bought and cleared a densely wooded farm, but they soon afterward returned to the town of Plainfield, to live at the old Clarke homestead, cultivating a portion of the old farm. Here his death occurred Sept. 21, 1848, and hers July 14, 1888. He possessed remarkable physical strength and endurance, great soundness of judgment, and superior moral and religious characteristics; and in his later years, though favored in boyhood with but three months of schooling, he exerted considerable influence and held various positions of trust and honor, in both the military and the civil life of his town. Mrs. Whitford inherited a somewhat delicate body, sensitiveness of feeling, strong affections, and a very tenacious memory, and exhibited through life a marked piety and an absorbing desire to help others. Of their children, Rev. William Clarke was the eldest. Hamilton Joseph, born April 4, 1830, became the owner of the parental farm, and cared most tenderly for his invalid mother until her death, and he, himself, departed this life at Leonardsville, N. Y., Oct. 28, 1896. Albert, born May 28, 1832, was graduated by Union College, at Schenectady, N. Y., has been occupied nearly all his adult life in teaching, having served as principal of De Ruyter Institute for two years, filled the chair of mathematics in Alfred University for four years (both in New York State). In addition he has been connected with Milton College for thirty-eight years as one of its main professors, and at times its acting president, besides discharging the duties of a county superintendent of schools for one term. Herbert David, born July 9, 1834, enlisted in a Wisconsin infantry regiment, and served as a volunteer soldier for three years in the Civil war, being engaged in some of the severest battles of the Southwest, subsequently joining the regular army, and experiencing for four years the hard life belonging to service in the Rocky Mountains; he now has quarters in the National Soldiers Home near Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Rev. William Clarke Whitford passed his early life on his father's farm, and from infancy has been noted for his extraordinary physical activity. He attended usually a district or select school in the winter, and worked at tilling the soil during the other seasons of the year. At twelve years of age he developed an insatiable fondness for reading, and for the ensuing five years he applied himself assiduously to the perusal of all works of travel, history, biography, practical moral instruction, and standard poetry, which came within his reach.

Finding farm work ill suited to his ruling taste, he began to make preparations to enter some literary or professional calling; and accordingly, at the age of sixteen years, he entered Brookfield Academy, near his home, where he studied nearly three years. When almost of age he was admitted as a student in De Ruyter Institute, where he fitted himself to become a member of the Senior class of Union College, from which he was graduated with degree of Bachelor of Arts, in 1853. He began teaching when sixteen years of age, and paid his expenses largely in this way while in attendance at both Brookfield Academy and De Ruyter Institute. Immediately after leaving Union College he began the three-years course of study in Union Theological Seminary, of New York City, and completed the course May 5, 1856. While in this institution he supported himself in part by teaching private pupils, and supplying the pulpits of two small churches. He was ordained to the gospel ministry April 13, 1856, by the Seventh-day Baptist Church at New Market, N. J. There for nearly two hundred years many of his ancestors had belonged to the denomination of which this church was an honored member, and he, himself, while living in the town of Plainfield, N. Y., had joined this religious body by profession of his faith and by baptism when fourteen years of age. Prior to both graduations mentioned above he had assisted in collecting data for the first elaborate map of Madison county, N. Y., and had filled for part of a year the position of assistant principal of Milton Academy, Wis., and that of principal for two years of Union Academy, at Shiloh, New Jersey.

On May 29, 1856, he entered upon the duties of pastor of the church of his faith at Milton, Wis., and continued in this charge during the following three years. It was a period of almost incessant activity. In it he averaged at least four sermons a week, made over a thousand pastoral visits, raised $870 for benevolent purposes outside of the support of the gospel and of education in the society, conducted five distinct revival seasons, and added to the church 154 persons, more than doubling its membership.

In the summer of 1858, while still serving the church, he accepted the principalship of the Academy in the place, which grew rapidly in vigor and popularity under his administration. During the Civil war its spirit of patriotism led 312 of its students to enlist in the service of their country, many of whom were aided by Rev. Mr. Whitford in securing positions as officers in different regiments of the State. After this oversight, extending over nine years, he induced the stockholders of the institution to convert it, by an act of the Wisconsin Legislature, into a College, March 13, 1867, and he was at once chosen by its Board of Trustees as its President, and also as the head of this Board. The former office he has held all the time since, though granted on one occasion a leave of absence of nearly five years, when he was filling a State position. Thus he has served forty-three years continuously as head of the institution. Under his administration old debts have been canceled, additional rooms and other accommodations furnished, an endowment fund of over $83,000 secured, and 277 students graduated, some of whom have distinguished themselves in the liberal professions, and as teachers in high schools and universities, and two of them as State Superintendents of Public Instruction in Wisconsin.

In the denomination to which he belongs Rev. Whitford has filled important positions besides the pastorate of the Milton Church and that at Rock River, in the vicinity. In the former church he has served as superintendent of its Sabbath-school for fifteen years. In the denomination above mentioned, he has been twice the president of its General Conference, its principal organization, besides a moderator of its Northwestern Association, and chairman of the executive committee of the latter for many years. He originated the scheme of this denomination for raising a memorial fund at the two hundredth anniversary of its existence in America, for the purpose of aiding, chiefly, its institutions of learning. In the prosecution of this movement he visited most of its churches in this country, and secured a considerable portion of this fund, which now amounts to fully $350,000. In 1884 he was the editor of a magazine entitled The Seventh-day Baptist Quarterly, and for nine years prior to 1896 he was corresponding secretary of the Seventh-day Baptist Education Society. He has served as corresponding editor of the Sabbath Recorder, the denomination organ, having had charge since 1888 of its department of History and Biography. He was a member of the committee appointed by these people to secure and arrange their exhibit at the World's Fair in Chicago, in 1893, and to represent them at the Parliament of Religions held the same year in that city. In 1897 he presented an historical address at the centennial anniversary of the First Brookfield Church, N. Y., with which he united in his boyhood. Recently, at the dedication of a monument erected to the memory of the early pastors of the First Hopkinton Church belonging to this denomination, in Rhode Island, he delivered an elaborate address, reviewing the career of the Seventh-day Baptists in New England since 1665. His sermons presented at public gatherings of these people would form a good-sized volume.

President Whitford has acted as visitor several times, appointed by the State, at the University of Wisconsin, and at the State Normal Schools. He was for one year the president of the State Teachers Association. From 1867 to 1882, with the exception of intervals amounting to three years, he was a member of the State Board of Normal Regents, and for four years ex-officio Regent of the University of Wisconsin. In 1868 he served as a member of the Lower House of the State Legislature, and was chairman of its standing committee on Education. He has often been sent as delegate to County, Congressional, and State conventions of the Republican party. In 1877 he was elected, and in 1879 re-elected, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, filling that office during four years. While in that position he established the present grading system of the country schools of Wisconsin; labored to organize public schools in the newer portions; secured the enactment of a compulsory education law—the same as the one now in force in most essential respects; earnestly advocated the method of raising a State tax for the support of public schools, especially in the more sparsely settled districts—a measure subsequently adopted by the State Legislature; settled what seems to be the permanent policy of the State regarding the supply of text-books in such schools; and published well-considered suggestions for providing for these schools better arrangements for warming, ventilating, seating and lighting their buildings—many of these suggestions being subsequently adopted in other States in the Union, and by the United States Commissioner of Education. For four years of the time he was State Superintendent he was chief editor of the Wisconsin Journal of Education, the organ of the State Teachers' Association. His addresses on educational subjects in the State, and elsewhere in the West and East, have been numerous and well received.

Rev. Mr. Whitford has written more than a score of works or articles on educational subjects for publication. Among these the most important are "The History of School Supervision in Wisconsin;" "Historical Sketch of Education in Wisconsin," a book of 110 pages printed by the State for the National Centennial held at Philadelphia in 1876; four elaborate annual reports of the Department of Public Instruction of Wisconsin; a circular of 200 pages on "Plans and Specifications of Schoolhouses for the Country Districts, Villages and Smaller Cities of Wisconsin," ten thousand copies of which were published and distributed by the State; "On the Free High Schools of Wisconsin;" "Text Book Legislation in the Different States;" "Grading System for the Country Schools of Wisconsin;" "Co-education of Sexes in our Schools;" "The History of Education among the Seventh-day Baptists in America;" "The History of Milton College," published by the State; "The Education of Work;" "The Self-Reporting System in Schools;" and "Christianity in the Higher Schools." Among his publications on other subjects may be mentioned the following, as perhaps the most interesting: "The Principles of Church Discipline;" "Lessons From a Four Months Trip in Europe;" "Effectiveness of Preaching;" "The Prominent Ideas Illustrated in the History of the Milton Seventh-day Baptist Church;" "Christ, the Student's Model;" "The Semi-Centennial of the Milton Sabbath School;" "A Memorial Address on the First Fifty Years of the Northwestern Seventh-day Baptist Association;" a work of sixty pages on "Outline Instruction in Elocution;" "The Effect of Culture of a College upon its Graduates;" "Thoroughness in the Preparation for the Pursuits of Life;" and "Intelligent Heroism." To this list could be added the titles of numerous biographical sketches published in various papers and reports. President Whitford has prepared a full description of the three engagements of the Civil war in the Glorieta Pass of the Rocky Mountains in New Mexico, with views of the picturesque battle-fields and adjacent scenery. He has gathered materials for a "History of the Town of Milton," and intends soon to complete his "Popular and Illustrated History of the Seventh-day Baptists." His Baccalaureate sermons and some of his popular addresses will soon appear in a work of 375 pages, now being published. He has visited on several occasions many points of interest in our Southwestern States and Territories, and in certain portions of the Republic of Mexico. In 1891 he made a tour through the principal countries of Europe. The information he gained in these travels he has presented in various lectures.

The honorary degree of Master of Arts was conferred upon him in 1858 by Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., and that of Doctor of Divinity in 1883, by Blackburn University, of Jerseyville, Illinois.

President Whitford was married (first) Oct. 19, 1850, to Miss Elmina Esther Coon, of Lincklaen, Chenango Co., N. Y., a daughter of Clarke and Betsey (Burdick) Coon, whose ancestors for several generations lived in Rhode Island. She was graduated by De Ruyter Institute in 1850, was a very amiable and accomplished young woman, and had fitted herself for teaching and for foreign missionary work. Her death, from quick consumption, occurred within six months after her marriage. Mr. Whitford's second wife had as her maiden name Miss Ruth Hemphill. She was a daughter of James and Sarah (Morrison) Hemphill, of Hartsville, Steuben Co., N. Y., both of whom were descended from early Scotch-Irish settlers in New Hampshire, and were born and reared in the town of Henniker, in that State. Her grandfather, James Hemphill, Sr., served in the Continental army during the Revolutionary war, was present at the battle of Bunker Hill, and in other engagements in New England. Mrs. Whitford was born June 15, 1829, in Deerfield, Oneida Co., N. Y.; was graduated in 1848 by Alfred University; was married to Mr. Whitford, March 23, 1852, at Shiloh, N. J., where they were both engaged in teaching in the academy of that place. She began when only fourteen years of age to teach a district school, and subsequently conducted a select school at Adams Center, N. Y., and was the sole instructor for three years in a seminary at New Market, N. J. Since coming to Milton, in 1856, she has taught—at different intervals—in the College at least twenty-five years. She is a woman of great industry and ripe culture, and endowed with a superior moral and religious nature. Four children have blessed their union, only one of whom is now living: Minnie, the eldest, died at the age of five years; William, when sixteen months old; Freddie, at the age of twelve years; and Milton Clarke, the youngest, was born Sept. 17, 1866, at Milton, where he still resides, and is a commercial traveler in Minnesota and the two Dakotas.

President Whitford has a powerful physical and mental organization, and has been trained to habits of ceaseless industry. While performing an immense amount of work, he seldom shows any signs of fatigue. He is exceedingly fond of public speaking; and with a full voice, earnest manner, ready action of mind, and a practical view of the questions discussed, he attracts and holds closely his audiences. He takes the greatest delight in teaching his classes, usually numbering six to eight daily, and pursuing his favorite studies in history, philosophy, rhetoric, and elocution. In fact, from his early boyhood he has always considered the principles, methods, and uses of education as furnishing the main topics for his investigation and for advancement by his personal efforts. In his religious opinions and practices he is entirely devoid of cant or bigotry, while his convictions in respect to the doctrines and precepts of Christianity are firm and ardent. He has the pleasure of knowing that the youth who have been under his instruction have reached a higher plane of intelligence and culture, and have been greatly influenced and benefited in their moral and spiritual careers. President Albert Salisbury, of the State Normal School at Whitewater, Wis., who completed his preparatory and collegiate courses of study in Milton College under the administration of Mr. Whitford, writes of him as follows: "But his greatest and most enduring work lies in the personal impress that he has left upon thousands of young men and women who have passed under his hand. His large sympathetic nature, his high ideals, his untiring industry and unquenchable enthusiasm, and, above all, his own life of steadfast self-sacrifice, have made him a source of inspiration to all who come within his circle as a teacher."

WILLIAM H. LONG, a successful dairyman and farmer of the town of Platteville, Grant county, Wis., has richly earned the right to be written up among the successful men of his calling in that section. He has gained a good share of this world's goods by industry and economy, and is counted a faithful citizen and a good neighbor.

Mr. Long was born in the town of Platteville Dec. 7, 1840, and is a son of Louis and Mary (Gregory) Long, the father born in Tennessee, the mother in Missouri. They were among the first settlers of Platteville. Mrs. Gregory, the grandmother of our subject, was one of the first white women in the town. Louis Long settled here and engaged in mining, and carried on a teaming business from Galena, Ill. Here he reared his family, and here his wife died, in November, 1887. After her death he moved to Nebraska, where he passed away in 1893, in the home of one of his daughters, full of years and honor. He was noted far and near for his great strength when he was in his prime. He was deeply religious, and helped to establish the Methodist Church in Platteville. Politically, he was a Republican, and a strong defender of the Union during the Civil war. Mr. and Mrs. Long had three children of their own, and one adopted daughter. Andrew, their oldest son, was born in Platteville in 1838, and married Catherine Womack; they lived in Platteville until a few years ago, when he moved to Lancaster. William H. is the gentleman whose name appears at the beginning of this article. U. I., born in 1842, was a soldier in the 25th Wis. V. I., serving with his brother William H., and followed Sherman to the sea; he was seriously wounded at Atlanta, but survived the war, married Margaret Cummings, and is a farmer in Nebraska; they have a family of six children, Jesse, Charles, Lucy, Fred, Pearl, and Annie.

William H. Long grew to manhood in Platteville, where he attended the public school. In 1863 he enlisted in the 25th Wis. V. I., and followed the fortunes of that historic regiment through the remaining years of the war. He was a good soldier, and was in many hard-fought battles, was at Vicksburg and at Atlanta, and in numerous conflicts, and though many of his regiment were killed or wounded he was unhurt. Mr. Long belonged to the pioneer corps, and was often detailed as forager. After the war closed he returned to wife and family, having married, in 1861, Mrs. Minerva Dowdy, the widow of Adolphus Dowdy. Mrs. Long is the daughter of John and Martha Day, a prominent family in old Kentucky, and was born in Lexington, that State, in April, 1839, coming into Wisconsin with her parents when very young. Her father settled at Lancaster, remaining there some years, lived for a time in Iowa county, and then moved to Richland Center, where he died in 1855. His widow survived thirty years, and passed her last days in Minnesota, in the home of a daughter.

Mr. Long bought his present farm in 1867, and took up his home there. He secured eighty acres northwest of Platteville, and has erected good buildings, and cleared up one of the fine farms of Grant county, his land being all under a good state of cultivation, and stocked with well-bred horses and cattle. Our subject and his wife have had five children: Rhoda died in childhood. Frank, born in 1863, died in 1869. Nellie M., born in 1866, married William Waldron, of Omaha, where they now reside, with one son. Cora L., born in December, 1870, married David Burrows, of Harrison township; they reside in Grant county, and have four children, Ella M., Willie, Albert E. and Katie W. William A., born Dec. 5, 1872, died when he was a lad of twelve years. Mrs. Long had two children by her first husband: Mary E. is the wife of William R. Cummings, and lives in Mr. Long's house; they have fourteen children, Edith, Nettie, Abbie, Ida, Frank, Clarence, Annie, Myrtie, Mary, Ethel, Clyde, Jasper, George and Lester. Rosa C., born in Jackson county, Wis., in 1857, married Charles Hoffman, of Omaha, and is now deceased; they had two children, Myrtie and Hattie.

Mr. Long has always been connected with the Republican party. His wife is a member of the Primitive Methodist Church, and while not a member, he is profoundly interested in the welfare of the same. He belongs to Sherman Post, G. A. R., at Platteville. While in the service, and when he was a young man, he was noted for his wonderful strength; he has been known to lift five or six hundred pounds as easily as most men lift a hundred.

JOHN C. RECH. The life of Mr. Rech has been filled with experiences of a shifting—and not infrequently adventurous and exciting—character. He was born in Bavaria, Germany, July 6, 1821, a son of Henry and Margaret (Rech) Rech.

Mr. Rech learned the trade of a baker in his father's shop. On reaching the age of seventeen years he became inflamed with a longing to win fortune in the Western hemisphere, and in 1838 he bade adieu to home and kindred, and set sail for the shores of America. He landed at Baltimore, and for a month worked at his trade. But wages were exceedingly low, and an offer of one dollar per day as a workman to dig a canal then in process of construction attracted him. For two or three months he was thus employed, when exposure induced a low, malarial fever, and for eight months he lay in bed at Havre de Grace. When he was able to be about he found his way to a Dunkard settlement near Little York, Penn. The people, in accordance with the precepts of their faith, cared well for him during one winter, and with the return of spring he felt able to resume hard work. His kind friends had told him at the outset that such work as his health would permit him to perform would be accepted by way of payment for board and care; but so faithfully and satisfactorily had he done what he was able that, when he left them, he was presented with a suit of clothes and eleven dollars in money. Going to Columbia, he found work with a lumberman, who employed him to haul logs from the Susquehanna to his sawmill, and at this he was able, for a time, to earn two dollars a day. He was liked and trusted by his employer, who offered him a position in his own home, as a sort of "handy man" about the house, the compensation to be eight dollars per month, with board, and an opportunity to be given him to attend school. This proposal young Rech gladly accepted. But he was young in years, awkward in manners, and utterly without familiarity with the ways of the world, and soon found himself unequal to the task of enduring the ridicule which was heaped upon the head of the "green," overgrown, German boy. He accordingly once more set forth, to seek another home, which he found with Judge Braden, of Butler, Penn., who hired him as a farm hand. It was there that he obtained his first naturalization papers, which were issued to him by the Judge himself. From Columbia he went to Lockport, N. Y., and it was there, in 1840, that (although without sanction of law) he cast his first Presidential ballot, voting for Harrison and Tyler. For a short time he worked on the Erie and the Maumee canals, and in the autumn of 1840 drifted to the lead mines of Galena and southwestern Wisconsin. For several years he spent his summers in the mines and his winters in Ohio.

A natural fondness for military affairs induced Mr. Rech to join a military company at Cincinnati, which was ordered to support Gen. Taylor on the Rio Grande four months before the actual declaration of war by Congress. The company to which Mr. Rech belonged was assigned to Gen. Butler's brigade, his division commander being Gen. Hamer, and they took part in the battles of Monterey and Buena Vista. Mr. Rech attended and nursed Gen. Hamer after the latter was wounded at Monterey, and that gallant, intrepid leader died in his arms. Mr. Rech's company was called into service for twelve months only, and at the expiration of that period the majority of the men returned home, but not the young naturalized citizen from Bavaria. He enlisted in another regiment, which was attached to the command of Gen. Scott, and took part in the advance on the City of Mexico, but peace was declared while his regiment was yet forty-five miles from the conquered capital. The war ended, Mr. Rech returned to Grant county, Wis., settling at Potosi, and for many years worked in the mines and smelting works. In 1878 he purchased the farm on which he has lived for over twenty-two years, honored by his fellow citizens and beloved by his friends. The trials, exposures and hardships attendant upon the vicissitudes of his early life have not, however, failed to leave their impress upon his physique. He is now (1901) in his eightieth year, yet his intellect remains clear; and if his mind dwells largely upon memories of the past, his spiritual vision looks forward to the future without dread.

On Sept. 9, 1849, Mr. Rech married Mary Toulouse, by whom he has had four children, Henry, Margaret, Rebecca and John. Mrs. Rech was born near Dubuque, Iowa, Jan. 5, 1834. Time has dealt gently with her, and she shows but few marks of his touch. She is a daughter of Jefferson and Rebecca Toulouse, who migrated from Canada to Potosi, Wis., while comparatively young. Mr. Toulouse died there, upon his farm, May 29, 1891, at the age of eighty-five years. His widow survived nearly nine years, and fell asleep Feb. 22, 1900, at the home of her daughter in Oklahoma Territory. They were the parents of eleven children, and two of their sons, John and Joseph, did gallant service during the Civil war as members of the 25th Wis. V. I. Mrs. Rech is the eldest of her parents' surviving children, the others being Mrs. Rebecca Schawp, John, Peter, Jefferson, Joseph, Mrs. Ella Vanatta, Theresa (the wife of Barney Vannatta), and Mrs. Margaret Scott (the latter of Cloverdale, California).

EDWARD BYRNE, deceased. Among the prominent citizens of Smelser township, Grant county, who have passed out of life, leaving an honorable history behind, was Edward Byrne, the subject of this sketch.

Mr. Byrne was born in County Wicklow, Ireland, in 1811, a son of Christopher and Catherine (Murphy) Byrne; grew to manhood and married, and was a widower, with five sons and two daughters, when he decided to make a new home and find better opportunities for his children in America. Arriving in the United States in 1847, he was attracted to the town of Hazel Green, Wis., on account of the proximity of the mines. The children mentioned were: Edward, the eldest. Mary A., who married Charles Breen, died in Hazel Green, leaving two children, Thomas and Ellen; the former married Delia Ryan, and the latter became the wife of Samuel Hawkins. Thomas died in 1873. Katie married Patrick Rogan before coming to America, where they first settled at Hazel Green and later at Ironwood, Mich.; there her husband died, leaving two children, James and Maggie. Richard resides in Cuba City. Henry died on his way home from California. John is a resident of Cuba City. Thus the name has been scattered over a wide territory.

In 1848 Mr. Byrne married Miss Esther Deevy, of Grant county, who was born in Ireland Aug. 2, 1822, the capable daughter of Edward and Anna (Murry) Deevy, both of whom lived in Ireland. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Deevy: Esther, Mrs. Byrne; and John, who is supposed to have died in Ireland. Mrs. Byrne was educated in her native country, and was the only member of her family to find a home in America. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Byrne lived at Hazel Green, where he continued to mine until 1854, in that year purchasing the home in Smelser township where he resided until his death, in July, 1888. During his life Mr.

Byrne took a great interest in his farm, and improved and beautified it with comfortable and appropriate buildings, also placing the land under the best state of cultivation. At the time of his death he was possessed of 160 acres of fine land, where his family enjoy all the comforts of life. The daily existence of this good man was directed by the teachings of the Catholic Church, of which he and all his family have ever been consistent members. A family of nine children was born to Mr. and Mrs. Byrne: Christopher, born in Benton, Lafayette county, in December, 1848, married Ellen Killbride, who was a daughter of Michael and Ellen Killbride, one of Grant county's pioneer families; they have seven children. Katie, born in 1851, married Ambrose Brown and died soon afterward in Iowa. Henry, born in Hazel Green, in 1853, died in 1896, a young man of good parts, who was regretted by all. Mary A., born Aug. 6, 1856, is a student at the home schools, and she and her sister Esther care for their aged mother. Edward, born in 1858, manages the home farm. Thomas, born in 1860, resides at home. Esther, born in 1861, a very estimable lady, manages the household in connection with her sister Mary. Julia, born in 1863, died in childhood. John, born in 1865, lives at home.

In politics Mr. Byrne was a Democrat, and his sons have followed in his footsteps. This is one of the fine old families of Grant county, one that has helped place her in the van in the State of Wisconsin.

GEORGE LUCIUS COLLIE. A. M., PH. D. This is a name familiar to the students of Beloit College, and to the world of education, as the professor of geology in that excellent institution. He was a student there in his earlier life, and attracted attention by the fine work he was doing throughout his college course. Passing from its walls, he went abroad to make a more thorough preparation for his life work as a teacher and instructor in the higher learning. For nine years he has been a member of the Faculty of Beloit, at present serving as the Dean of the Faculty. He is doing the same solid work that has characterized his entire life, and is a popular and helpful personality among the young people, upon whom his influence for good is pronounced.

Dr. Collie was born at Delavan, Wis., Aug. 11, 1857, a son of Rev. Joseph and Ann (Foote) Collie, natives of Scotland and Ohio, respectively. They were the parents of five children, four of whom are now living: Prof. George L.; Arthur, an army surgeon at Iloilo, Panay; Winfred, a dentist at Delavan, Wis.; and Glenwood, a student of medicine in Chicago. Rev. Joseph Collie was a Congregational clergyman in Delavan, and had been pastor of a church in that city for more than forty years. He is now a resident of Williams Bay, Wis. He was a chaplain of the Christian Commission, and stationed in Kentucky, during the war of the Rebellion. His father, George Collie, a native of Aberdeenshire, Scotland, was a stone-mason, and died in his native land when a young man. He was the father of three sons. Lucius Foote, the father of Ann, was a native of Massachusetts, of English descent, and was also a Congregational minister. He died in Sacramento, Cal., at the age of ninety. He was the father of two sons and one daughter.

Prof. George L. Collie spent his youth and early manhood under the parental roof at Delavan, Wis., where he was graduated from the local high school in 1875. He immediately connected himself with Beloit College, in the city of Beloit, and was graduated from that institution in 1881. His studious youth gave promise of excellent scholarship in his riper years, a promise that was largely fulfilled in his college course. The young collegian was employed for a year in a railroad office in Chicago, as a freight reviser, and then became the assistant principal in the Delavan schools. He did such satisfactory work that he was made principal of the same schools. From Delavan he went to Harvard College, where he did post-graduate work for three years, and earned and received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in 1893. The same year he was invited to Beloit College, to take the chair of geology. He accepted the invitation, and this field has been the scene of his work to the present time. He is a capable teacher, understands his subject thoroughly, and presents it in a magnetic and inspiring way, well calculated to arouse the enthusiasm of his pupils.

Dr. Collie and Katharine A. Burrows were united in marriage March 26, 1896. They have a fine home and a pleasant residence at No. 920 College street, Beloit. Mrs. Collie is the daughter of Harmon Ary and Eliza (Hatch) Ary, of Ohio. Dr. Collie and his wife are members of the First Congregational Church of Beloit. He is a member of the Beta Theta Pi college fraternity. He has published a number of geological papers, and is a Fellow of the Geological Society, of America. Politically the Doctor is a Republican.

PERRY C. WILDER, now serving his third term as mayor of the city of Evansville, Rock county, is a member of the firm of Barnard & Wilder, wholesale dealers in leaf tobacco, and is one of the most conspicuous and energetic business men of Rock county.

Mr. Wilder was born in Granger, Medina Co., Ohio, Nov. 7, 1852, and is a son of Calvin H. and Mary Ann (Oviatt) Wilder, natives of Connecticut and Ohio, respectively. They were the parents of six sons and one daughter, and four of their children are now living: Perry C., of Evansville; Stephen C., of Chicago; Carey C., of Denver, Colo.; and Newton D., of Evansville. The father, who was a Baptist minister, came from Ohio in 1864, locating at Argyle, Lafayette Co., Wis., and preached there until 1868, in which year he moved to Evansville for the sake of his children's education. He preached at various points for a number of years, among them being Windsor, Middleton and Avon. He died in Evansville in 1887, at the age of sixty-three. His wife died in 1873, when forty-eight years old. His father, William Wilder, was a native of Connecticut, and was one of the pioneer settlers in Medina county, Ohio, where he hewed a farm out of the solid forest, and spent his remaining years in that community, being about seventy-five years old when he died. He was a captain in the State militia. Great-grandfather Wilder was a Revolutionary soldier. The Wilders came originally from England, but there is much German blood in their veins. The maternal grandfather of Perry C. Wilder was a farmer, and lived in Wayne county, Ohio. He was about sixty years old at his death.

Perry C. Wilder came with his parents to Wisconsin and lived at Argyle until he was sixteen, and attended Evansville Seminary. He taught school when he was fifteen years old. He was a clerk for Hon. L. T. Pullen, of Evansville, until the firm was merged into that of Winston, Pullen & Co., the first banking house of Evansville. He kept their books until 1873, when he and Charles F. P. Pullen formed a partnership and engaged in a general mercantile business. The firm was dissolved, and Mr. Wilder entered the employment of E. D. Barnard, in his tobacco business, and in 1882 became a member of the firm, which had been known as E. D. Barnard & Son. In 1893 it became Barnard & Wilder, E. D. Barnard retiring and his son Shasta continuing. They have warehouses at Oregon and Madison, Wis., as well as at Evansville. They employ 125 hands, and ship their tobacco all over the United States and into Germany.

Mr. Wilder and Miss Alice D. Pease, daughter of Milton and Sarah (Black) Pease, were united in marriage June 26, 1890, and they have one son, Marlin Elliott. Mr. Wilder is a Baptist and his wife a Methodist. They have an elegant home at No. 236 West Main street. Mr. Wilder belongs to Union Lodge, No. 32, A. F. & A. M.; Evansville Chapter, No. 35, R. A. M.; Janesville Commandery, No. 2, K. T.; the Knights of Pythias; the Knights of the Globe; Leota Lodge, I. O. O. F.; and the Daughters of Rebekah and Order of the Eastern Star. Mrs. Wilder also belongs to the two last named. Our subject is a Republican, and has been very active in public affairs. He was first elected mayor of Evansville in 1899; was president of the village board the last year (1895) that organization existed; was a village trustee in 1887; and was clerk of the town of Union in 1879 and 1880. He was a member of the county board in 1895 and 1896, has been a member of the board of education for eight years, and is now clerk of that body. He is serving his second term as a member of the Republican State central committee from the First Congressional District. Mr. Wilder held the postoffice under President Harrison from 1890 to 1893, and resigned on account of other pressing business interests.

THOMAS J. JONES. The pioneer settlers of any locality who attained success were men of hardy enterprise and indomitable spirit, and those who came in the early days to this part of Wisconsin were no exception to the rule. Among those who since 1850 have found a happy dwelling place within the borders of Lafayette county, and have left the impress of their own individuality upon its activities, is Thomas J. Jones, the subject of this sketch.

Mr. Jones was born in North Wales March

23, 1823, son of John and Jane Jones, both of whom were also born in Wales, where the mother passed her last days. The father came to America, and in his old age was ministered to by our subject until his death, in 1871. Our subject came to America on a sailing vessel, landing in New Orleans in 1848, the journey consuming two months. He then made his way up the Mississippi river as far as Galena, thence to Dodgeville, in Iowa county, Wis., where he immediately found employment at his trade of mason. In 1850 he made a purchase from Major Rountree, of Platteville, of 160 acres of land, his present farm, upon which he erected a rock house, in which he has resided until the present time. Following his trade, he built many rock houses throughout Grant, Iowa, and Lafayette counties, all of these attesting his superior work, as they will long remain after he is gathered to his fathers.

The marriage of Mr. Jones occurred in 1852, to Margaret Devaney, of Mineral Point, a daughter of Robert and Jane Devaney, who were born in Wales, where they died. Mrs. Jones was born in Wales in 1825. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Jones settled in the new home, where for thirty-six years they lived in happiness, the death of Mrs. Jones, in 1888, breaking the tender tie. Mrs. Jones was a woman of Christian character and her cheerful and capable management in the privations of pioneer life, with its toil and danger, endeared her not only to her own family but to all others who came within her acquaintance.

The children born of this union were five in number: Robert died when two years old. John, born in 1855, married in California, where he still resides, being a bookkeeper in a mint in that State; he was a cadet in a military school in San Francisco from which he graduated. Mary, born in 1856, married John Prytchect. Annie, born in 1858, married Morris Jones, a native of Wales, and they now reside in Gage county, Neb., where they own a half section of land; they have a family of six children, Maggie, Miriam, Jennie, Owen, William, and May, the two eldest being married. Elizabeth, born in 1860, married Robert R. Hughes, in Iowa county, where they live on a farm; they have three children, Lena, Thomas and Maggie.

John Prytchect, the husband of the eldest daughter of our subject, was born in Wales July 16, 1844, coming to Wisconsin in 1868 and, settling on the Jones homestead after his marriage, he managed the latter as well as his own. His land comprises a whole section adjoining that of his father-in-law. Mrs. Prytchect died in 1889, and in 1895 Mr. Prytchect was again married, his second wife being Miss Ellen Thomas, the daughter of T. O. and Ellen Thomas, who came to this county in 1892; she was born in 1864 in Wales, where she received a good education. The children of the first marriage were: Thomas P., born in 1873, who married Elsie Evans; Margaret, born in 1875, who married Eugene Euloe; John, born in 1877, who married Adeline Suher, of Platteville; Robert, born in 1888; and Samuel, born in 1886, who died two years later. Mr. Prytchect is one of the leading stockgrowers of this section, owning much cattle and many fine horses, besides great numbers of fine hogs.

Although Mr. Jones began life in Wisconsin without a dollar, he has, by the exercise of energy, good judgment and thrift, become one of the substantial and moneyed men of Lafayette county. Fortunate transactions in real estate resulted prosperously for him, and although during his life he has seen much hardship, and worked industriously, he has now the reward. The people of the community where he has lived so long look upon him with respect, and he will long be remembered for the many acts of generosity and kindness which he has delighted to show to those less fortunate than himself.

STEPHEN VIVIAN, a well-known and popular citizen of Lancaster, Grant county, first came here in 1858. He was born in Cornwall, England, Oct. 20, 1825, a son of James and Elizabeth Vivian, who passed their lives in Cornwall.

The mother died when Stephen was three years old leaving himself and sister Mary, who was a young girl when brought to America by her brother, in 1848. She married, and at her death left a daughter. Mr. Vivian is thus the only member of his father's family living, as far as can be ascertained, although his father married a second time and had born to him a son.

Stephen Vivian learned blacksmithing in his native country, and in 1848 came to the United States, at once locating at Dodgeville, Iowa Co., Wis., where he engaged in lead mining for one season. He then went to what was known as Franklin, now called Island. In the spring of 1849 he went to the Lake Superior country, and worked at his trade until 1858, when he came to Lancaster township, following farming until 1863. He then returned to the mining district of the North, and for twelve years was employed in the iron mines of Marquette county, Mich. In 1875 he came again to Lancaster township and resumed farming operations, but since 1885 his residence has been in Lancaster city.

Mr. Vivian was married, in 1852, to Miss Frances Harvey, who died in 1885, and in 1887 he married Miss Elizabeth Angwin, who was born in England and came to this country with her parents, Richard and Frances (Tippett) Angwin. They first located in Illinois, later removed to Michigan, and finally returned to Illinois, dying at Galena—both on the same day, Jan. 31, 1892. Mrs. Vivian was one of a family of eight children, of whom seven are still living, viz.: Mrs. Jane Bowden, Mrs. Martha Annette, Mrs. Salina Goldthrop, and Miss Eliza, all of Galena, Ill.; Mrs. Mary Osborne, of Michigan; Richard, who lives in Missouri; and Mrs. Vivian: the deceased, William, died Dec. 31, 1854, at the age of ten years.

In his political views Mr. Vivian is fundamentally a Republican, but at times he votes the Prohibition ticket. It can truthfully be said of Mr. Vivian, what can be said of but few men, that he has not tasted liquor for the sixty-five years since he signed the pledge, when a boy ten years old, and it may well be questioned whether he had tasted it prior to that age; and it can be added that he never used tobacco in any form. Mr. and Mrs. Vivian have a most pleasant home, which is the abiding place of true domestic felicity. They are consistent members of the Methodist Church, and are well known to and truly respected by every resident of the township and many others outside its limits.

BURTON SUMNER has been long identified with the growth and development of Grant county, of which, with occasional brief intervals, he has been a resident for nearly sixty years. He has entered upon the seventh decade of his life with rugged strength and unclouded intellect, hale, hearty and well-preserved in both mind and body. He was born in Erie county, N. Y., Nov. 7, 1839, a son of Joshua and Anna Sumner, natives of New York.

Joshua Sumner, not wholly satisfied with his environment, came to Wisconsin on what may be said to have been a prospecting tour in the spring of 1843. Being satisfied with what he saw, and perceiving a bright outlook for the then sparsely settled territory, he selected a location at British Hollow, in the mining region of Southwestern Wisconsin. He sent word to his wife to meet him with their family, then consisting of six children (all yet living)—the youngest not being born until 1845—to accompany him to their new home in a country whose resources had yet to be developed, whose forests were to be felled, and whose virgin soil was to be reduced to subjection. In the autumn of that year (1843) the family started on the toilsome, tedious journey. They traveled by water to Chicago (then a mere muddy, straggling settlement) and thence by ox-team to their point of destination, the husband and father meeting them at Chicago. After a residence of twelve years at the "Hollow" the family removed to Hurricane. In that township is situated Mr. Sumner's farm, and at his home his father passed away in 1895, his mother having gone to her reward many years before. The children, four daughters and three sons, are Sarah, Elizabeth, Almira, Olive, Byron, Burton, and George W.

At the outbreak of the Rebellion Burton Sumner's veins were filled with patriotic fire, and in 1862 he enlisted in Company C, 25th Wis. V. I., commanded by the celebrated Col. (afterward Gen.) Jeremiah M. Rusk, who subsequently filled Wisconsin's gubernatorial chair. The record of the 25th is unsurpassed by that of any of the gallant regiments which left the State to fight, to suffer and to win renown in Southern bivouac and on Southern battlefields. At the time of its being mustered in the regiment was ordered to proceed from LaCrosse into Minnesota, which State was then being terrorized by Indian raids, and the men's first experience of actual danger came early in their term of service. The Redskins having been whipped into submission, the command proceeded to Columbus, Ky., and thence to Snyder's Bluff, on the Mississippi, where it constituted a part of the force deployed to prevent Gen. Joseph E. Johnston from attacking Grant in the rear or going to the relief of Pemberton, who was then hemmed up in Vicksburg. Climatic influence and bad water brought about an epidemic of malarial fever among the Northern troops, and Mr. Sumner was one of the large number thus affected. In fact, so general was the scourge that at one time only fifteen members of his company were able to report for duty, while the percentage of sick men in other companies was little, if at all, lower. After the surrender of Vicksburg the 25th was ordered to Helena, Ark., whence they returned to Vicksburg in time to take part in the famous raid on Meridian, Miss., joining Sherman's army at Resaca, and fighting in all the hotly-contested battles around Atlanta. Immediately after the engagement at Jonesboro Mr. Sumner was taken, broken in health, to the hospital at Marietta, Ga., returning to Atlanta about the time that Gen. Sherman set out for Savannah. Being unable, because of physical disability, to accompany his regiment, he—in company with many of his comrades—was sent home on a sick furlough. Having measurably regained his health he reported for duty at Madison, but owing to the interruption of communication with Sherman's army it was impossible to send the convalescents forward until three months had elapsed, the men meanwhile chafing at their enforced inactivity. Finally, news being received of the army's arrival at the Atlantic coast, he and his companions were at once sent forward, going through Hilton Head, N. C., to Broad River, where Mr. Sumner remained in the convalescent camp for a fortnight. He at length rejoined his regiment at Raleigh, and was received with a hearty welcome, Gen. Rusk himself taking the private by the hand and congratulating him on his return, saying, "We will have music now till you can't rest." The surrender of Johnston to Sherman put an end to further warfare in the Carolinas, and from Raleigh the victorious army proceeded on its long, toilsome march to Washington. The 25th participated in the grand review at the National capital, and was mustered out in June, 1865.

Mr. Sumner was married in 1866 to Irena M. Richardson, whose father, Harris Richardson, married Lucy Gordon, whose birthplace was in Connecticut. Mr. Richardson was born in New York, removed with his family to Ohio, and thence to Southwestern Wisconsin, settling at Hurricane, Grant county, at an early date in the county's history. He died there in 1860, and his widow in 1866. Mrs. Sumner is one of a family of five children, all of whom are yet living. She has borne her husband three children: Mary, George and Rosa.

Mr. Sumner, as may be readily believed from the story of his life, is a man whom his fellow townsmen hold in deservedly high esteem. Genial, generous, industrious and upright, his friends are many, and he is most thoroughly respected by those who know him best. Lancaster has been his home since he first fixed his residence there, with the exception of his period of military service and the seven years between 1876 and 1883, when he and his family resided at Lac qui Parle, Minnesota.

JOHN JOHNS, one of the leading stock dealers and farmers of Smelser township, Grant county, is a native of Smelser, having been born there Jan. 13, 1861, a son of Frederick and Mary (Heil) Johns.

The parents were born in Germany and St. Louis, Mo., respectively. Grandfather Johns died in Germany, and Frederick Johns' mother brought him to Smelser; he was the only child. They first settled in Jefferson, Hazel Green township, where Frederick Johns grew to manhood, and after his marriage he settled on a farm in Smelser, where he lived throughout life. He was one of the early cattle dealers of this section, buying and selling herds to the government and private dealers. Politically he was a staunch Republican, and in religion he was a member of the M. E. Church. He died in 1887, his wife two years later, in 1889. Mr. and Mrs. Johns had ten children: Caroline married Harmon Roush, and has four children, William, Mary, Lavinda and Lulu; Frederick is deceased; John is our subject; George married Lena Reese; Wesley married Lavinda Cullen; Peter married Laura Himan, and has had three children, Hazel, Maud and Benjamin; Joseph married Minnie Reese; Josephine, twin of Joseph, is deceased; William married Nettie Cullen; and Millie married Joseph Cullen.

Our subject was educated in the schools of his district, working upon the farm in the summer and going to school in the winter. Soon after he had attained his majority he rented a part of his father's farm, consisting of 800 acres in Smelser. In 1894 Mr. Johns purchased what is known as the Eastman property, in Smelser, commenced shipping stock in partnership with Jacob Harris, and has developed the finest stock farm in Grant county, thousands of cattle being shipped by them every year to Chicago, in addition to outlying districts. In addition to horses and cows Mr. Johns raises a very fine strain of hogs, and the prices he receives, while they are not at all in excess of the value, are still regarded as "fancy" figures by those less fortunate.

In 1887 Mr. Johns married Miss Lavinda Heil, of Grant county, daughter of Frederick and Ann Heil, who was born June 30, 1867, in the town of Smelser, where she grew to womanhood, receiving a district-school education. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Johns resided on the old farm until Mr. Johns commenced his stock shipping business, and upon his purchase of the Eastman property they moved thereto, and now have a beautiful home of about 200 acres, all nicely cultivated. To Mr. and Mrs. Johns have been born children as follows: Joseph L., Dec. 5, 1887; Herbert E., Feb. 14, 1889; Amy H., Sept. 19, 1891 (died Jan. 8, 1898); John McKinley, Nov. 5, 1896; Bertha, May 12, 1898; and Frederick E., April 18, 1900. Politically Mr. Johns has always been one of the staunch supporters of the Republican party, although he has never aspired to office, refusing steadily to be placed upon the town board. Religiously both he and his estimable wife were brought up in the M. E. Church. They are people of whom every one speaks well, and who are sincerely liked for their many admirable qualities.

LIEUT. JOHN GRINDELL. ex-soldier, furniture dealer, and brick manufacturer, of Platteville, Grant county, now retired from active business, was born in Ireland in 1828, and is the only survivor of the five children of Thomas and Jane (McMullen) Grindell, who in 1830 settled in Toronto, Canada, and there passed the remainder of their lives.

John Grindell when a boy learned the cabinet maker's trade in Toronto, came to Platteville in 1849, and in March, 1850, started for California overland, crossing the Missouri river May 1. He went by the way of Fort Laramie, and through the South Pass of the Rocky Mountains, and crossed the Humboldt river and Big Desert. At Salt Lake City the party ran short of provisions and were obliged to pay $15 for a bucket of flour and proportionately high prices for other necessities. They finally reached Hangtown, Cal., at the end of five months. Mr. Grindell spent two years in the mines, and was fairly successful in his search after wealth, but of the four men who comprised the party—Messrs. Gale, Gillis, Holmes and Grindell—he was the only one to live to return.

On his return to Platteville John Grindell, with his brother William, opened a furniture store in the place, which they conducted together for forty years, when William purchased John's interest, and the latter engaged in the manufacture of brick, which he still continues to control. During the Civil war Mr. Grindell raised a company of volunteers in Platteville for the Army of the Tennessee, and under his first term served one hundred days, as first lieutenant. He then re-entered the service, and continued in the army until the close of the war in the same rank. At the close of the war he returned to Platteville and re-engaged in business.

In 1852 Mr. Grindell married Miss Susan Cook, daughter of David and Maria Cook, of Wisconsin, but formerly of the State of New York. Mr. and Mrs. Grindell at once settled in Platteville, where he owned some real estate, and resided in the same dwelling from that time until 1885, when he erected a fine brick house on the site of the first one. Our subject has thus lived on the same spot over forty-eight years. To their marriage were born six children: Ada is the wife of T. L. Clary, a prominent lawyer of Platteville; John H., who is a marble worker in Platteville, married Miss Clara Kyle, and has three children, Roy, Ada and Donald; Albert, who married Miss Ina Dickinson, removed to California, where his wife died soon after arrival, and on his return, with his little daughter, Ina, he assumed charge of his father's brick works; David E. was educated in the State Normal School, married Miss Alice Davis, of Ohio, and is traveling in the theatrical profession (he has no children); Susan died when eighteen months old; Arthur B. is a student in the chemical department of the State University at Madison. The mother passed away Jan. 31, 1900, after a wedded life of forty-eight years.

In politics Lieut. Grindell has been a most active Republican, and in 1866 he was elected treasurer of his town. In 1880 he was made president of the village board, and he also served as president of the village council, of which he was three times elected a member. In religion he is a Methodist, having joined that church early in life, and was a member of the building committee that had charge of the erection of the fine brick church edifice in 1877; he has also been a trustee for twenty-seven years, and has ever been a liberal contributor to the support of church work in all its departments. Fraternally he is one of the oldest Masons in Platteville, and was a member of the building committee having in charge the erection of the fine Masonic hall in 1882; he is also one of the oldest Odd Fellows in the city; and is a member of Sherman Post, G. A. R., of Platteville.

In February, 1897, Lieut. Grindell, by an accidental fall, so badly injured his right leg as to incapacitate him for active business, and he is now living in retirement, but not as a recluse. He has shown himself to be one of the most progressive and enterprising business men of the city, has acquired a competency, is regarded as one of Platteville's most substantial citizens, and bears a name that has never been tarnished by a breath of calumny.

HON. PHILO A. ORTON, of Darlington, Lafayette county, was born March 24, 1837, at Hamilton, N. Y., which was also the birth-place of his father, Philo A. Orton.

The Ortons come from old English stock, being descended from Thomas Orton, who settled at Windsor, Conn., in 1640. In 1800 Judge Orton's grandfather removed from Tyringham, Mass., to Hamilton, N. Y., which remained the Orton home until 1850, when his father migrated with his family to Wisconsin and settled at Beloit. In 1855 the family removed to Darlington, where the subject of this biography has since resided. His mother, whose maiden name was Nancy Collins, was born at Burlington, N. Y. The father died at the home of Judge Orton on July 12, 1872, and the mother at the same place a number of years later. The father of our subject was distinguished for his high integrity and sterling worth, and his mother was a woman of strong character. Their sons are all living, except Capt. Thomas Orton, of the 3d Wis. V. I., who fell at the siege of Atlanta July 25, 1864; and Lyman O. Orton, who died at Mishawaka, Ind., in 1899.

In 1851-52 our subject attended Beloit College, and in 1857 was a student at Madison (now Colgate) University, in his native town of Hamilton, N. Y. It was his intention to follow the occupation of civil engineer, and his college course was adapted to that end, but the panic of 1857 completely paralyzed all efforts at railroad construction, in which he had expected to find employment. Therefore he gave up his original plans and turned his attention to law, beginning its study in the office of James R. Rose, at Darlington. He was admitted to the Bar in 1859, and has since continuously practiced law at that place, for more than thirty years being the senior member of the firm of Orton & Osborn, one of the oldest law firms in the State. Judge Orton, early in his professional career, gained an enviable reputation as a strong and conscientious lawyer, and so great was his success that before he had reached his thirtieth year he was regarded as occupying the front rank among Southwestern Wisconsin lawyers, a division of the Bar second to none in the State, and including at that time such bright minds as those of Strong, Dunn, Mills, Cothren, Crawford, and others of equal note. The uniform success which has attended Judge Orton has always been merited, being the fruit of thorough preparation and untiring effort. He delights in work, and never feels better than when fully occupied, and under a strain which weaker physical or mental natures could not endure.

The essential honor and integrity of Judge Orton's dealings with fellow attorneys, with clients, and with all with whom he comes into contact, has been a prime factor in securing for him his high professional reputation, and has contributed to the result equally with his superiority of mind. Before a jury Judge Orton is strong and eminently logical, presenting his arguments methodically, passing rationally from premise to conclusion, and often not only with convincing weight but with moving eloquence. Fluent in speech and correct in language, his extensive reading is frequently shown in excellent illustration. Before the court he is certain of respectful and attentive hearing, to which his legal attainments and his recognition of the true function of an advocate entitle him.

In 1862-63 Judge Orton was prosecuting attorney for Lafayette county, and from 1870 to 1874 he filled the office of county judge. During the Rebellion he was a war Democrat, and remained in Democratic councils until 1880, being candidate for attorney general on the Democratic ticket in 1861; was Independent candidate for circuit judge in 1870; and the Democratic candidate for representative in Congress in 1876; though he had a flattering vote, his personal popularity could not overcome the Republican vote, and he was defeated. He has always taken an interest in the cause of good government. In 1880 he voted for Garfield for President, and since that time has acted with the Republican party. In 1898 he accepted the nomination for the Assembly branch of the Legislature, and was elected by a large plurality over James H. Clark, the Democratic nominee.

In 1874 our subject obtained a controlling interest in the Lafayette County Bank, which he held until 1882, when he organized the First National Bank of Darlington, of which he has always been president, being also president of the Benton State Bank, at Benton, Wis. He is a charter member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity, Colgate University; is a Mason, belonging to the Blue Lodge, Darlington Chapter, and Mineral Point Commandery, and for several years was master of the Darlington lodge; he was deputy grand master of the Grand Lodge of the State for two years.

Judge Orton was married Jan. 27, 1862, to Sarah M. Osborn, daughter of Capt. S. W. Osborn, of Darlington, and two children have been born to them: Susanne, a graduate of Rockford College and of the Woman's Medical College, of Chicago; and Robert E., now assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Darlington.

EZRA I HILO DOTY (deceased), one of the men to whom the present commercial importance of Janesville is due, was for many years closely identified with its best interests, and his death was deeply mourned, not only by his family but by the community at large.

Ezra Philo Doty was born in Peru, N. Y., Aug. 27, 1826, a son of Zuri Shaddai and Phebe Ann (Bostwick) Doty. The parents of Zuri Doty, Ezra and Anna (Mellens) Doty, were natives of Vermont, his birth occurring Sept. 28, 1760, hers Aug. 4, 1767. Ezra Doty, Sr., was a soldier of the Revolution, and afterward a captain in the provincial army. During the war of 1812 he also served his country bravely, and he died on June 24, 1840, while his wife passed away in 1813. The maternal grandfather of our subject, a Mr. Bostwick, was a resident of Pennsylvania, and died in that State from an accident, a tree falling upon him. In his family there were four sons and one daughter, all now deceased.

Zuri S. Doty, father of our subject, was born at Bennington, Vt., on July 23, 1804, and came to Turtle, Rock county, in 1841, settling near Shopiere, where he took up a large tract of land from the government, and resided some years. Later he removed to Janesville, and conducted a sash, door and blind factory and also a general store. As his means increased Mr. Doty erected several business houses, bought considerable land in the corporate limits of Janesville, and platted what is known as Doty's addition to Janesville. During his residence in Janesville Zuri S. Doty purchased on Oct. 10, 1853, the Janesville Free Press for his son, in conjunction with J. Baker, and the paper was conducted under the name of Baker & Doty until, on June 7, 1855, Mr. Baker became the sole proprietor. The Free Press was started on Jan. 6, 1853, by an association of Free Democrats, among whom the most prominent were J. M. Burgess, J. Baker, R. B. Treat, O. Guernsey, and E. A. Howland, with Mr. Baker as editor. About 1865 Zuri Doty moved to Madison, built and owned a number of houses, and engaged in various business enterprises, but later removed to Chicago, and resided in that city for several years. While on a visit to Madison he died, on April 16, 1885, aged eighty-one years, eight months and twenty-three days. During the time he resided in Janesville he was a justice of the peace, and was a very wealthy, influential and honorable man. Eleven children were born to this good man, five of whom are now living: Anna, wife of Peter Fryer, of Kansas City, Mo.; Milton H., of Brodhead, Wis., who rose from sergeant to the rank of captain during the Civil war; Martha A., wife of Courtland Stone, who now lives in Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mary, widow of Edwin Boswick, of New Milford, Conn.; and Edgar H., of Chicago.

Ezra Philo Doty, the subject of this sketch, was brought to Turtle, Rock county, where he grew to manhood. Later he removed to Janesville, and was associated with his father in the sash, door and blind manufacturing business, becoming his successor; was the organizer of the Doty Manufacturing Co., and its treasurer until his death. The specialty of this company was the Doty washing machine.

On May 26, 1847, Ezra P. Doty married Miss Abigail Mary Austin, daughter of Ira and Permelia (Worcester) Austin, and five children were born of this marriage: (1) Henry (deceased) married Ella J. Lappin, daughter of Thomas Lappin, and had one son, who did not survive his first year; upon the death of the mother Henry married her sister, Mary Esther Lappin, and two children were born to them, Lawrence Lappin and Harriet Mildred. Henry Doty died June 2, 1894, aged forty-five, having been born June 5, 1849. (2) Alta Marie, wife of Charles Atwood, of Janesville, has eight children. (3) Edward P., who married Margaret Hullihen, daughter of Dr. Hullihen, of Janesville, has three children. (4) Minnie, deceased, wife of Dr. Charles E. Wintermute, had two children, Ruth Anna and Horace; the latter died, aged three months. (5) Anna S. is the wife of Charles Fifield, an attorney, formerly of the firm of Fethers, Jeffries & Fifield, now judge of the municipal court; they have three children, Minnie Eloise, Alta and Frances Fethers.

Mrs. Doty was born Sept. 6, 1832; she had a twin sister, Mary, who died in infancy; and a sister, Ann Eliza, now wife of Vinton L. Merrill, of Lebanon, Kans. The parents of Mrs. Doty were natives of Vermont, and her mother died at Phelps, N. Y., on April 15, 1845, aged thirty-eight, having been born on July 15, 1807. The father of this last mentioned lady, the grandfather of Mrs. Doty, was a soldier in the war of the Revolution, and also took part in the war of 1812. Ira Austin, father of Mrs. Doty, came West to Wisconsin in the early days of the State, settling in Janesville, but returned to Phelps, N. Y., and married Elmira M. Howe. Again coming West, Mr. Austin settled on a farm in Sauk county, but afterwards removed to Madison, where he and his wife kept a large boarding-house, he dying on Nov. 12, 1862, and she on June 21, 1895, in that city.

In religious belief Ezra P. Doty followed the Universalist faith, while his widow is an Episcopalian, and all of their children became connected with Christ Episcopal Church of Janesville. The political affiliations of Mr. Doty were with the Republican party, although he was not a politician. While in the prime of life Mr. Doty was taken from his family, on March 7, 1869, aged forty-two years, eight months, and the death cast a gloom not only over his household, but over Janesville, where for so many years he had been so important a factor. Mrs. Doty still survives, a very charming and intelligent lady, who enjoys the respect and veneration of her family and a large circle of friends.

SAMUEL JARVIS CUCKOW was at the time of his death one of the venerable and most highly respected residents of Janesville, Rock Co., Wis. He was a native of England, where his birth occurred, in Rochester, Kent, Jan. 16, 1815, and was the second son of Elizabeth and Thomas B. Cuckow. The latter was born in England in 1787, and died at the home of his son, in the town of Bradford, Rock county, Nov. 24, 1874. Thomas came to America in 1818, but soon returned to England, taking his family back with him. Robert Cuckow, father of Thomas, died in 1838, aged seventy-one years; his entire life was passed in England.

Samuel Jarvis Cuckow was brought up and lived in England, where he learned the printer's trade. In January, 1836, he married Sarah Eliza Bridgeland, born at Boxley, England, in 1814, and came immediately to New York. To them were born two children in New York City, Mary A. and Thomas J. They returned to England in 1840. After that two more children were born, Eliza and Eleanor B. His wife died in July, 1849. Two years later, with his motherless family, Mr. Cuckow came to Wisconsin, and settled on the farm in Bradford, Rock county, which farm, and the additions thereto, he owned at the time of his decease. In 1885 he removed to Evanston, Ill., to live with his daughter, Mary A. Her death occurring a year later, he went to Janesville, Wis., where he continued to reside until the time of his death, March 5, 1901. For his second wife he married Eliza S. Filmer, born in England in 1815, and who came alone to New York from England. They were married in New York City in May, 1853, coming immediately to Wisconsin, where she died Aug. 18, 1900. Two children were born to them, Samuel F. and Ruth O. The latter died in 1893. Mr. Cuckow's life was a busy one, and yet he found time to take a keen and intelligent interest in all that pertained to the welfare of his adopted country, and he won for himself a high place in the estimation of those who knew him for his industry and integrity of character.

W. J. FUNSTON, D. D. S., of Platteville, Grant county, and an ex-soldier of the war of the Rebellion, was born in Coshocton county, Ohio, in 1840, and is a son of J. D. and Isabel (McKinley) Funston.

While our subject was still an infant his parents removed to Jefferson county, Ohio, where the mother died in 1850, when the father came to Wisconsin and located in Richland county. There he passed the remainder of his life, dying in 1893. They were the parents of five children, of whom the Doctor was the eldest, and of whom two, besides him, are still living, viz.: Mary, wife of A. J. Campbell, a farmer at Milton Junction, Wis.; and Theodore F., of Galesville, this State. The latter served three years in the Civil war, and was honorably discharged for physical disability. He is one of the most respected citizens of Galesville, and has a wife and one child.

Dr. Funston received his preliminary education in the public schools, and began the study of dentistry when a young man with Dr. John McKinley, of Urichsville, Ohio. He was still a student when, in response to the call to arms, he enlisted, in August, 1862, in Company E, 52d O. V. I., Col. Daniel McCook, and took part, among other engagements, in the battles of Perryville, Ky., Stone River, Chickamauga and Missionary Ridge, Tenn. He was then detailed as adjutant's clerk, and filled that position until the cessation of hostilities. He was with Gen. Sherman in his Atlanta campaign, the historical march to the sea, at the siege of Savannah, at Chattanooga, and at the last battle of the war, Bentonville, N. C. The Doctor is alluded to by his companions in arms as a brave and faithful soldier, who never shirked or neglected his duty under any circumstances.

After the war had ceased and he had been honorably discharged, the Doctor returned to his Ohio home for a short time, then going West began the practice of dentistry in Plattsburg, Mo. After remaining there a short time he sold out and came to Wisconsin, in the spring of 1866, to visit his father, whom he had not seen for twelve years. Stopping a while in Richland county, in the fall of 1866 he opened a dental office in Platteville, Grant county, and did a thriving business until 1873, when he went to California, visiting the cities of Sacramento, San Francisco, San Jose, Oakland, Salinas City, and the Spanish Mission of Soledad. Returning to Platteville in 1874, he has since done the leading business in his line there.

In 1882 Dr. Funston married Mrs. F. E. Thomas, who was born at Alton, Ill., and came to Wisconsin with her parents. They have reared three children: Genevieve and Morna, students of the State Normal, of Platteville; and Nanon, a grand-daughter, an invalid. Religiously the Doctor and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which they are both earnest and active workers, the Doctor being one of the directors and trustees. Politically he has always voted with the Republican party, but has never aspired to public office. Fraternally he is a charter member of W. T. Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R., in which he has held the offices of adjutant and post commander; of I. O. O. F. Lodge No. 6, of Platteville, of which he has been noble grand, and is also secretary of his lodge; and of Lodge No. 125, K. of P., of Platteville. He has been an officer in the fire department of his town for twenty years. Mrs. Funston is a member of the Rebekahs, auxiliary to the I. O. O. F. The Doctor and his estimable wife are among the most respected residents of Platteville, where his professional reputation stands on a par with that of any dentist in the county.

THOMAS LITTLE, one of the prominent and highly esteemed farmers of Janesville township, is a native of Scotland, born in Roxburghshire June 18, 1827, a son of John and Elizabeth (Blythe) Little, also natives of Scotland. The paternal grandfather of our subject died in Scotland. The grandfather on the mother's side, Thomas Blythe, had two children, one son and one daughter; was a farmer by occupation, and died well advanced in years.

John Little, the father, was a farmer early in life, but later became a contractor and lime burner, and came to America in 1853, settling in Janesville township, Rock Co., Wis., where he bought 200 acres of land and greatly improved it. Having lost his first wife, mother of our subject, in Scotland, in 1841, he married Isabella Irvin, who died in 1867, two years after the death of her husband, who passed away in 1865, aged about seventy-six. Both he and his first wife were members of the Presbyterian Church. They had eight sons and one daughter, five now living: Thomas, John, James, Walter, and Andrew.

Thomas Little was reared in Scotland, attending the public schools, and engaged in farming and working in the public lime kilns. Upon coming to America, in 1853, he settled in Rock county, Wis., where he has since resided. Upon his father's death the property was divided, and his share was the 160 acres of land in section 28, Janesville township, upon which he now resides, and which he has brought to a high state of cultivation.

On Nov. 20, 1875, Thomas Little was married to Mrs. Sarah Little, widow of George Little, and daughter of Bartholomew and Elizabeth (Dixon) Spence, and two daughters have been born of this union: Elizabeth Grace, who is a teacher; and Anna Belle, at home. Mrs. Little had two sons and one daughter by her former marriage: John Thomas, who married Miss Aggie Brauns, resides in Chicago, and has one son, George Lester; Bartholomew Walker, who married Miss Ellen Brown, resides in Janesville; and Elizabeth died at the age of two years.

The grandfather of Mrs. Little died in England, and her father, Bartholomew Spence, was also a native of England, as was his wife. They came to America in 1848 and settled in Dunkirk, Dane Co., Wis., where Mr. Spence died in 1864, aged about sixty; and his wife died some two years later, aged sixty-two. These two worthy people were Methodists in religious faith. They had six children, two sons and four daughters, five now living: Joseph; Ellen, wife of Henry Thompson; Sarah, wife of Thomas Little; Elizabeth, wife of Walter Little; and Catharine, wife of Bartholomew Harwick. John is deceased. By occupation Mr. Spence was a farmer, and cultivated and occupied a fine farm in Dane county.

Politically Mr. Little is an Independent, voting as his conscience dictates, for twenty-seven or twenty-eight years served as supervisor, and for twenty years as clerk of the school board, his sterling honesty and faithful adherence to duty making him an almost perfect public official, with whom could be implicitly trusted the affairs of the several positions he filled. Mr. Little is the eldest of the four brothers settled in Janesville township, all of whom are prosperous and highly respected. Although fully identified with the country of his adoption, Mr. Little entertains pleasant recollections of his native land, and is one of the best of its representatives among our Scotch-American citizens.

JOHN S. PEDLEY, in his lifetime one of the successful farmers and stock raisers of New Diggings township, Lafayette county, was a native of Yorkshire, England, where he was born June 6, 1842, a son of William and Alice Pedley.

Early in his life our subject was brought by his parents to America, here grew to manhood, and was trained to work on the farm, later engaging to some extent in mining. He purchased a farm in New Diggings township, and made his home there until 1883, when he sold the farm and purchased another in Aurelia, Cherokee Co., Iowa. There he lived for ten years, at the end of that time returning to New Diggings and purchasing his father's old home farm, one of the finest in the township, where he resided until death claimed him, in December, 1896. The large stone house and modern outbuildings give an air of solid comfort and substantial prosperity, and are the result of Mr. Pedley's careful management and natural business ability. A year after his death a new barn was erected, and his widow has displayed business ability quite unusual to her sex in the management of her husband's estate. In politics Mr. Pedley was always a Republican.

In July, 1873, Mr. Pedley was united in marriage with Miss Mary A. Harker, daughter of Thomas and Rose (Metcalf) Harker. She was born in England in February, 1853, and was educated in New Diggings township, whither she had come with her father in childhood. Three children were born of this marriage: Luella, born in November, 1875, received her education in the Iowa schools; William, born in 1879, and Eva, born in 1883, are students at the home schools. Mrs. Pedley is a charming lady, of unusually high attainments, and wins many friends by her loving and lovable disposition.

Thomas Harker, father of Mrs. Pedley, was born in Yorkshire, England, in December, 1824, and his wife, Rose (Metcalf), was born in the same county some few years later. They were married in England, and there Mrs. Harker died in 1858, leaving three children: (1) William, born in January, 1849, married Miss Jane Cottingham, and moved to Iowa, where his wife died, leaving five children, Walter, Willie, Joseph, Mamie and Jennie. For his second wife he married Miss Grace Finch, by whom he has two children, Harry and Lulu. He now makes his home in Preston, Grant Co., Wis. (2) Isabel, born in January, 1851, married Reuben Howell, and lives in Iowa. She has two children, Pearl and Emma. (3) Mary A. is Mrs. Pedley. In 1860 Thomas Harker brought his three motherless children to America and located in New Diggings township, Lafayette Co., Wis., where he purchased a farm and remained until, a few years previous to his death, he moved to Shullsburg. Returning to England, he wedded, that year, for his second wife, Miss Anne Bird, who still makes her home in Shullsburg. By this marriage there were seven children: Hannah, now Mrs. Robert Hall, of Darlington, Wis.; Jane, Mrs. Henry Kramer, of Shullsburg; Maggie, Mrs. William Douglas, of Shullsburg; Isaac, who married Alda Ewing, and lives on the old homestead; Lillie; Thomas; and Luella, who died in childhood. Mr. Harker passed away in April, 1896.

Both the Pedley and Harker families were members of the Methodist Church. Mr. Pedley, like his wife, had been a faithful member for over thirty years, and he was serving as steward and trustee at the time of his death.

THOMAS CARTHEW (deceased), formerly a successful miner in the town of Potosi, Grant county, was born in Cornwall, England, Aug. 8, 1817, and exhibited in his life and character many of the typical virtues of his race.

Mr. Carthew grew to manhood in his native country, where he received his education at the hands of the local teachers. When he was twenty-nine years of age he crossed the ocean to seek a home in the United States, located at White Oak Springs, Ill., and was a miner for some years. Wisconsin at that time attracted the attention of the vigorous and hardy, and Mr. Carthew came here and labored in the mines. In Wisconsin he married Miss Harriet Webster, and the young couple went to California along with the great stream of the adventurous and hopeful who were pouring into the West in search of gold. In California his wife died, in 1853, leaving him one daughter, who is now living in the city of New York. Four years later Mr. Carthew came back to Wisconsin, and buying a farm of 160 acres near Rockville, Grant county, engaged in its cultivation. He was a hard-working and careful farmer, and accumulated a very handsome property. In 1869 he married Miss Mary L. Callaway, whose parents came from Cornwall, England, and first purchased a farm in Rockville, which they sold, then purchasing a farm at Blake's Prairie; her father died there in 1878. Her mother is still living, and is a resident of Lancaster. Mrs. Carthew was born Oct. 24, 1848, in Cornwall, England, but spent all her early life in Grant county, where she attended the district school and received her education. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Carthew settled at Rockville, where he engaged in farming, and made many handsome improvements on his place, having a choice farm. He died July 15, 1895, leaving a widow and three children. Mr. Carthew was a Democrat, though never an aspirant for office, and was a man of good standing and fine spirit. He led a long and useful life from the highest motives.

Thomas Carthew, the eldest son, was born Sept. 16, 1871, in Rockville, where he grew up, received a good education, and was a graduate of the Dubuque Business College, working for some time as a shipping clerk in that important Iowa city. In April, 1896, he married Miss M. Annie Chalder, daughter of George and Elizabeth Chalder, old pioneers of Grant county, and the young couple lived on the old Carthew farm until his death, April 11, 1900. His widow and two children—George R. and Violet E.—survive him, and are occupying the home. Mr. Carthew was one of the promising young men of the county, and had many friends who mourned his untimely death. He was absolutely conscientious and honest, was a dutiful son and a loving husband and father, called away all too soon.

Moses Carthew was born March 27, 1876, and grew up on the old farm, where he still remains, having charge of his mother's estate. He is a young man of character and ability.

Olive M. Carthew was born July 18, 1883, and is now a student at the Platteville high school.

Mrs. Carthew purchased in August, 1896, the old Goodrich home, near Platteville, where she has a large farm, with fine buildings, constituting one of the choice and desirable estates of Grant county.

ABRAM PHELPS for a number of years prior to his decease lived retired from active life, and was one of the most venerable figures to be seen on the streets of Janesville. He lived at No. 155 Pleasant street, and though recently he bore but a small part in the work of the world, he was in his time an active and influential man, and won a high standing by industry, integrity, and an unblemished character.

The Phelps family, which is of English origin, and can be traced back more than a thousand years, was founded in America by three brothers who crossed the ocean at an early day and settled at Windsor, Conn.; one of our subject's ancestors was among the Puritan settlers of Massachusetts, and took a large part in the founding of the Nation. Mr. Phelps was born in Egremont, Berkshire Co., Mass., Dec. 27, 1811, a son of Zacheus and Rebecca (Grace) Phelps, natives of Connecticut and Massachusetts, respectively. They had a family of seven sons and two daughters, and the gentleman whose name appears above was the last survivor. Zacheus Phelps was a farmer. He died in 1813, but his wife was a capable and energetic woman, and kept her children together until they were able to do for themselves. In 1830 Abram Phelps went to Michigan, where his brother Norman and sister Harriet were living, in Monroe county, and he made his home with them for a time, while he followed his trade of carpenter. He went back to Massachusetts after staying in Michigan about a year, and came West again in 1835, bringing his mother with him. In the fall of 1837 they moved to Freedom, Portage Co., Ohio, where his mother died in 1841, when about sixty-two years old. About this time Mr. Phelps traded his Portage county farm for one in Geauga county, Ohio, and moved there, making that his home for nineteen years.

On Feb. 1, 1838, Mr. Phelps married Miss Marietta Moore, daughter of Stephen and Martha (Dodge) Moore, and two sons were born to them, Milton, Moore and Frank W. Both served in the Civil war, Frank lacking one year of graduation from Meadville (Penn.) College when he enlisted; he died from measles contracted while in the service, at the age of twenty-one, unmarried. Milton M. Phelps was graduated from Meadville College. He married Miss Henrietta Bain, and they had four children, all now deceased, Frank Bain, George Norris, John, and one who died in infancy. Frank B. married Miss Elizabeth C. DeGaine, and died four years later. George Norris was drowned when fourteen years old. John died when two years old. Milton M. Phelps was municipal judge in Janesville for six years. He was a lieutenant in the Union army during the war of the Rebellion, and was acting adjutant of his regiment when he was shot through the lungs in the second battle of Bull Run. He was under treatment for sixty days and then returned to the front, but was not able to do duty, and was discharged on account of disability. He had an accident in Janesville July 21, 1898, colliding with the cars while riding a bicycle, and died Sept. 27. A very eloquent tribute of the Bar Association to his memory appears elsewhere in this volume. Mr. and Mrs. Abram Phelps survived all their family.

In 1866 Mr. Phelps came to Wisconsin, locating in Rock county, and buying a farm of 202 acres in Rock township, three miles from Janesville, where he built a fine house and other good buildings, and devoted himself to the cultivation of the soil until 1884. That year he rented his farm, and with his wife moved to Janesville, where he passed away March 31, 1901. For many years the cheery home at No. 155 Pleasant street has been a center of helpfulness. To many it has proved a blessed haven, made so by the practical Christianity which sweetened and glorified the lives of the aged couple who for more than sixty-three years have traveled hand in hand. Both devoted their lives to the service of Christ in their youth. He was a member of the Court Street Methodist Church, as is his widow, of which he was a class-leader, and he was always an active worker in the church, serving on the official board and doing anything he could to promote its prosperity. He and his wife were both members of the church before their wedding. The following is taken from an article which appeared in the Janesville Gazette of April 1, 1901: "Their religion inspired universal respect because it had withstood the test of unusual affliction, and because, in spite of great sorrow, they came to a lovely old age, gracefully and graciously. When life seemed best worth living came the tragic series of deaths which shocked the entire community and swept away all family ties for the aged couple who were left to bear the great burden of sorrow. Mrs. M. M. Phelps died in December, 1897, and a month later her son followed. Judge Phelps lived on for a few months, and then came the collision of his bicycle with a railway train, and in September, 1898, he, too, passed on to the life beyond the grave. Within a year Mr. and Mrs. Phelps had seen their family pass away, yet deep as was their sorrow no word of complaint ever passed their lips.

"Misfortune again visited the home when, nearly two years ago, Mrs. Phelps fell and broke her hip. It was feared that she could not recover from the shock, but her mission had not yet been fulfilled, and she can now walk around the house with the aid of a crutch and cane. Three weeks ago Mr. Phelps was taken ill with heart trouble, and one week ago last Friday night he suffered a severe stroke of paralysis, which would have proved fatal immediately to a man of less marvelous vitality. Although he lay as if unconscious during the last week of his illness he retained his mental faculties, and was able to make himself understood. The voice of his beloved wife was always able to rouse him, and he never failed to respond to her good-night or good-morning greetings with a word or a hearty pressure of the hand. The end came very peacefully.

"Mr. Phelps was a lovable gentleman, cheerful and happy in his disposition, noble in character, and ever ready with a kindly word or an act of helpfulness. His life was ruled by the gospel of love, and he knew his guide-book, the Bible, so thoroughly that if he were given the substance of a verse of Scripture he could tell the exact book, chapter and verse where it could be found. Mrs. Phelps has no immediate relatives, except a half sister, but she finds great comfort in the sustaining presence of Mrs. Elizabeth C. Phelps, the widow of Frank Phelps, who has now cared for father, son and grandson in their last days on earth.

"The passing away of Abram Phelps marks the closing of a remarkable life. His death is one that touches with peculiar interest the hearts of many people because of the rare history of that life whose influence was so far reaching and ever tending to the uplifting of mankind. Such a death must cause universal sorrow, but around it can center no gloom, only the triumphant confidence that for him and those who loved him death has no sting, the grave no victory."

Our subject was a Republican, and took a keen interest in politics, but never would consent to take anything but a local office, in which he might directly serve his neighbors.

Mrs. Phelps' father, Stephen Moore, was born in New Hampshire, on the Merrimac river, and her mother near Bath, Maine, the Moore and Dodge families being New Hampshire and Maine people, respectively. Stephen Moore was a soldier in the war of 1812, and was known as Major Moore; his father served in the war of the Revolution.

J. MARTIN BURGESS, the popular cashier of the Bank of Cassville, and justice of the peace and notary public, was born in Muskallonge, Beetown township, in 1847, and is a worthy representative of a prominent pioneer family of Grant county.

Henry Burgess, his father, was born in Kentucky Dec. 19, 1808, a son of William Burgess, who married a lady named Johnson, both also natives of that State, and early settlers of Bond county, Ill., where William Burgess opened up and improved a farm. There a stockade was built, to which during the Indian troubles of 1812 he took his family for protection. He was a member of the Mounted Dragoons, in the State militia, and was wounded in the shoulder by an Indian during an attack. He continued to make his home in Bond county, Ill., until his death, which occurred in 1853. His wife died some years previously.

Henry Burgess, the father of J. Martin, was reared and educated in Bond county, Ill., and in 1845 came to Potosi, Grant county, Wis., locating in Beetown township in the fall of the same year. He was engaged in mining until about 1853, when he purchased a tract of wild land in Cassville township, which he transformed into a well improved and highly cultivated farm. In early life he affiliated with the Democratic party, but on the formation of the Republican party, in 1856, he joined its ranks, continuing one of its staunch supporters until his death. In 1856 he was elected justice of the peace in Cassville township, and held that office continuously until 1893. In that capacity he performed his first marriage ceremony Nov. 1, 1857, and during the succeeding years married 130 couples, the last being on March 14, 1892. He also served as chairman of the town board, and was town clerk for twenty years. Henry Burgess was twice married, the first time in Bond county, Ill., about 1832, to a Miss White, who died in that State. To them were born four children: William, a farmer, who died in Cassville, Wis., in 1858; John H., who enlisted in 1862 in Company C, 2d Wis. V. I., and died at Arlington Heights the same year; Elizabeth Jane, who died in Nebraska in 1896; and Mary Ann, who died in that State in 1894. Mr. Burgess was again married, in Wisconsin, in 1845, his second union being with Harriet Leanova Matthews, who died in March, 1885, while his death occurred May 5, 1895. The children born to them were Joseph Martin, whose name introduces this review; James T., principal of the high school at Sargents Bluff, Iowa; George P., postmaster and justice of the peace at Graham, Clayton Co., Iowa; and Harriet, who died at the age of three years. By a former marriage the mother had two children: Sarah, wife of Butler Throssel, chairman of the county board of Franklin county, Iowa; and Adaline, now Mrs. Bates, of Kingman county, Kansas.

Reared in Beetown and Cassville townships, J. Martin Burgess began his education in the district schools, and later attended the high schools of Cassville and Lancaster. For twelve years he successfully followed school teaching in Grant county, Wis., and Clayton county, Iowa, and for a time was in the employ of a railroad company. In June, 1899, he was made cashier of the Bank of Cassville, and is now filling that responsible position in a most creditable and satisfactory manner. In 1894 he succeeded his father as justice of the peace, and up to January, 1900, had married thirty-eight couples. He also served as town clerk a number of years, and is now notary public.

At Cassville, in 1872, Mr. Burgess was united in marriage with Miss Mary Woodall, a native of Dubuque county, Iowa, of which her parents, Obediah and Mary (McGinnis) Woodall, were pioneers. Her father died in Clayton county, Iowa, in 1893, having survived his wife many years. Mr. and Mrs. Burgess are active and influential members of the Baptist Church, in which he is serving as deacon, and he was superintendent of the Sabbath school in 1899. Socially he is a prominent member of Cassville Lodge, No. 235, F. & A. M., in which he now fills the office of worthy master. He is one of the most popular and highly respected citizens of Cassville, and those who know him best are numbered among his warmest friends.

REV. GEORGE W. ANDREWS, Union evangelist, who now makes his home in Milford, Dickinson Co., Iowa, is a representative of one of the early families of Lamont township, formerly a part of Fayette township, Lafayette county.

Charles Andrews, his father, was born in Crawford county, Penn., June 14, 1833, son of Robert Andrews. The family is of Irish origin, but came to America in Colonial days. As Robert Andrews died when his son Charles was but nine years of age, the latter was thrown largely on his own resources at a very early age. The mother, however, was a most excellent and capable woman, and reared her children to be honorable and useful members of society. She died at the advanced age of eighty-nine years.

In August, 1853, Charles Andrews, accompanied by his brother William R., left Pennsylvania and located in Wisconsin. They worked in different parts of the State before coming to Lafayette county, and in 1857 made their permanent settlement in the township of Fayette, now Lamont. William R. died at his home in June, 1900, leaving a family of four sons and four daughters. Charles Andrews purchased the farm in Section 23, of David Jolly, a well-known old settler, and eventually became possessed of four hundred acres, besides land in Iowa. He married Miss Jane McMannus, a native of Pennsylvania, who came to Lafayette county with her parents, George and Sarah McMannus, in 1855. George McMannus died at the age of sixty-six, and his wife at the age of eighty-seven; they had but two children: George, who lived to be nineteen; and Jane, who became Mrs. Andrews. Charles Andrews was long a prominent and well-known citizen, honorable and successful in his business career, and ever held in high esteem as an energetic and progressive citizen. He was ever ready to help the unfortunate, and was greatly beloved by his friends. Socially he was identified with the Masonic fraternity, the I. O. O. F. and the K. of P. His death occurred in January, 1899, and his wife, who survives him, lives at Argyle. They were the parents of four children: Rev. George W.; John H., a resident of Lamont township; Lizzie; and Willard.

Rev. George W. Andrews was born on the old homestead May 14, 1861. When he was eleven years of age his father removed from the farm to the village of Argyle, in order to give the children the benefit of an education. He was but twenty years of age when he was married, and immediately after marriage returned to the homestead farm in Lamont, and for two years engaged in agricultural pursuits. He then moved to his present home in Dickinson county, Iowa, where he has a fine farm. In February, 1891, Mr. Andrews was converted, and he has ever since labored with all the earnestness and enthusiasm of his nature to spread Christ's kingdom in the hearts of men. Since 1896 he has been engaged as a Union evangelist, and while the major portion of his work has been in the State of Iowa he has made some stirring appeals in the vicinity of his old home, in Wisconsin. He has been eminently successful in his religious work, his sincerity touching the hearts of his hearers and making his appeals more convincing.

Mr. Andrews married Miss Luella Jane Goodman, daughter of Henry and Lavina Goodman, who emigrated from Cornwall, England, in 1856, and were early settlers of the township of Wiota, Lafayette county; they now make their home in O'Brien county, Iowa. The children born to this union are six in number, three sons and three daughters: Charles G., Lela May, Lavinia J., William C., John H., and Lenore Andrews.

M. T. CAMP, a well-known and highly esteemed citizen of Platteville, Grant county, was born at that place in 1847, and is a worthy representative of one of its prominent pioneer families. His father, William Camp, came here in early manhood, and was married in Platteville to Miss Sarah Gillman, a native of Illinois, who came to Grant county in 1832 with her parents, Charles and Lucinda Gillman, whose last days were spent in Platteville. M. T. Camp had a brother, John, who served three years in the Civil war as a member of the 10th Wis. V. I., and one year in the 44th Regiment.

Responding to his country's call for aid during the dark days of the Rebellion, Mr. Camp enlisted, at Platteville, in November, 1863, for three years or during the war, and was mustered in at Madison, Wis., as a member of Company C, 7th Wis. V. I., which became a part of the Army of the Potomac. Mr. Camp participated in all the engagements in which his command took part, including the battles of the Wilderness, Laurel Hill and Spottsylvania. When the war ended he received an honorable discharge, in July, 1865, and returned to his home in Platteville. He is now a member of W. T. Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R. Politically he is a stalwart supporter of the men and measures of the Republican party.

On Dec. 25, 1867, Mr. Camp was married, in Platteville, to Miss Margaret Edwards, a daughter of William Edwards. They are widely and favorably known, and have many friends in the community where they reside.

GEORGE C. WILKINSON, who since 1901 has made his home in the town of Benton, Lafayette county, inherited from his father those sterling characteristics of heart and brain that have made him a successful farmer and miner, as well as a popular and respected citizen. He was born in Benton township July 8, 1868, son of George and Isabella (Allinson) Wilkinson, both of whom were natives of Yorkshire, England.

George Wilkinson was born April 30, 1831, and came to America in early manhood, having when he landed a monetary capital of five dollars, with which he intended to commence life on the Western frontier. He had a limited education, but natural business tact won for him the success that literary training often fails to accomplish. For two or three years after his arrival he worked on farms in New York State, and then came West. His first farm was in New Diggings, Lafayette Co., Wis., but after a year of farm work in Wisconsin he turned to mining. In August, 1864, Mr. Wilkinson wedded Miss Isabella Allinson, who was born in March, 1846, daughter of Thomas and Jane Allinson, who were natives of England, and early settlers of Lafayette county. Shortly after his marriage Mr. Wilkinson purchased the old Allinson home, Thomas Allinson having died, and for the remainder of his life lived in the stone house early erected by his father-in-law, and which is still standing, in a good state of preservation. Mrs. Wilkinson died Sept. 23, 1877, and Mr. Wilkinson on Jan. 29, 1896. He was a member of the Church of England, while she was a devout Methodist, her father, Thomas Alkinson, having been a local preacher for many years, and the founder and builder of the stone church now in use at New Diggings. Of the seven children born to Mr. and Mrs. Wilkinson, we have the following record: (1) Sarah A., born in July, 1865, was graduated from the Hazel Green high school, was for several years assistant teacher in the Lancaster (Wis.) high school, and for two or three terms in Bloomington, Wis. In 1889 she married Joseph A. Williams, now a practicing lawyer at Plain View, Neb., and has three children, Isabella, Anna and Hillis. (2) Thomas, born in August, 1866, resides on a part of the old homestead, where he has erected new and modern buildings. In 1893 he married Ella Beck, of Benton, and has one son Fred, born Aug. 17, 1894. (3) George C. is next in the order of birth. (4) Hannah J., born Oct. 8, 1869, was educated in the Hazel Green high school, and in June, 1894, wedded Edward Williams, of Hazel Green, now residing on Main street, Madison, where he is engaged in the drug business. (5) Joseph E., born Nov. 28, 1871, a promising young man, died in June, 1897. (6) Robert E., born in May, 1875, is engaged in the butchering business in Benton. (7) Eugene A., born in August, 1877, was educated in Brett College, in Iowa; he is now a furniture dealer in that State.

George C. Wilkinson, the subject proper of this review, was educated in the district schools of the neighborhood, and in Whig, Grant county, where he lived with Robert Wilkinson after the death of his mother. Until his father's death he worked on the old home farm, having learned the details of farm work in the hard school of experience. He then took up mining, in which he has been quite successful, making quite a fortune working his own mines, which bear his name. He has given good evidence of his business ability and good common sense in the management of his own affairs, and personally has won for himself the respect of the entire community.

On Feb. 2, 1898, Mr. Wilkinson was married to Miss Margaret A. Teal, born in 1868, daughter of Joseph and Annie Teal, and educated in the Shullsburg and New Diggings schools. Mr. and Mrs. Teal came to Wisconsin from England, and were well known people, esteemed for their many virtues. Mr. Teal died in 1871, leaving three children: Joseph, of New Diggings; Mary, wife of Horatio Bale, of White Oak Springs, Lafayette county; and Margaret, wife of our subject. Since the death of her husband Mrs. Teal has again married, her second husband being Thomas Clegg, by whom she has three children, Fannie (now Mrs. Charles Vickers), Minnie and Thomas, all of New Diggings. Mr. Wilkinson follows in the footsteps of his father in his political faith, voting the straight Republican ticket, and in religious belief both he and his wife are Methodists. The family has always borne an honorable name, to which the present generation bids fair to add new laurels.

FRANK BAIN PHELPS (deceased) was born at Montville, Geauga Co., Ohio, July 21, 1865, and the following November was brought by his parents to Janesville, Wis. His early training was received in the public schools of that city, and he spent one year at Lawrence University, Appleton. He then attended the University of Wisconsin, graduating in 1887. His course in the University was along scientific lines, but he took much interest in newspaper work, and was connected with the student publications. Soon after his graduation he was appointed city editor of the Green Bay Gazette, and displayed such ability in this work that he was called from Green Bay to Hancock, Mich., to take editorial charge of the Hancock Journal. Here his knowledge of civil engineering and the theory of mining proved of great value to him. He became exceptionally well versed in Wisconsin and Michigan mining matters, and his letters to the New York trade journals attracted so much attention that he was offered an editorial position on the Engineering and Mining Journal of New York. While in this position he gained a very thorough knowledge, from a newspaper standpoint, of the coal trade and the metal markets.

Mr. Phelps next joined the staff of the Dow-Jones News Agency, which brought him more directly into contact with the great financial centers, and enabled him to gain a wide experience in business and financial matters.

Afterward he became financial editor of the New York Recorder, a position he held for two years, and until the paper was discontinued. He then joined the staff of the New York Commercial Advertiser, as chief of its Wall street bureau, retaining this position, and displaying remarkable ability in meeting its varied and critical demands, until ill-health necessitated his retirement from all newspaper work, in the winter of 1897. That spring he came to Janesville, and remained here a few months without apparent improvement. He went back to New York, and died there Jan. 7, 1898. He had a short but brilliant career, and his vital powers burned quickly out with a splendor all their own. His life was sincerely led, his purpose high and noble, and his duties well performed.

MILTON MOORE PHELPS: A Memorial. Adopted by the Rock County Bar Association, and filed in Court April 23, 1900.—On the 27th day of September, 1898, Milton Moore Phelps passed into the larger life, after an earthly pilgrimage extending over a little more than fifty-nine years, thirty-three years of which time were passed among us as a resident of our city, and a member of our Bar. All who immediately knew this man, as was the fortune of the writer of this Memorial to know him, knew that in his home, among his friends, and wherever he found persons who were willing to give an unprejudiced and candid hearing to all sides of the question, he was the most gentle, considerate, and loving and sweet-spirited of men. The integrity of his character was his leading quality. None excelled and few equalled him in this respect. No one who knew him ever doubted the rugged honesty of his nature.

He never stooped to trickery, he never resorted to hypocrisy, he was absolutely free from the pretension of deceit. His nature was frank, open, cheery. He was sincerely attached to his friends, and absolutely loyal to them. He was Democratic in his ideals and actions, and entirely free from dogmatism. He was not a genius, and yet he had a well-rounded and evenly-developed intellect. He was not a great lawyer. He was safe and sound and industrious, one who never disgraced his profession, or his brother members at the Bar. He was a man of force, he enjoyed business, and liked to be a producer of things. After all man's title to remembrance by his fellow men must rest upon his virtues rather than upon any vagaries of intellect, sometimes designated genius. We are oftentimes compelled to define and illustrate qualities by comparison. And not only a fair but a good way to judge the qualities men generally denominate virtues is by comparing them with the same qualities in those illustrious individuals whose names and fame grow more luminous as the years go by, and whose characteristic virtues have been preserved to us by the printed estimates of competent friends. And if we shall find that the qualities of our friend whose memory we seek here to perpetuate, and the record of whose virtues we would fain preserve by placing it among the archives of this court, differ only from those in degree rather than quality or kind, we have a right to congratulate ourselves that it has been our privilege to have been associated with our brother professionally and officially for so many years.

We have been often struck in noticing how closely those qualities in our brother correspond with those justly described by his eulogists to the Father of his Country. We make bold to copy a few statements from Sparks' and Lee's eulogies of Washington in order that the similarity may be observed.

"His moral qualities were in perfect harmony with his intellect; duty was the ruling principle of his conduct, and the rare endowments of his understanding were not more constantly tasked to devise the best methods of effecting an object, than they were to guard the sanctity of conscience. No instance can be adduced in which he was actuated by a sinister motive, or endeavored to attain an end by unworthy means. Truth, integrity and justice were deeply rooted in his mind, and nothing could rouse his indignation as soon, or so utterly destroy his confidence, as the discovery of the want of these virtues in any one in whom he had trusted. Weakness, follies, indiscretions, he could forgive; but subterfuge and dishonesty he never forgot, rarely pardoned.

"He was candid and sincere, true to his friends, and faithful to all, neither practicing dissimulation, descending to artifice, nor holding out expectations which he did not intend should be realized.

"As a husband, son and brother, he was tender and affectionate. Without vanity, ostentation or pride, he never spoke of himself or his actions unless required by circumstances which concerned the public interest. If he had one passion more strong than another, it was the love of country. The purity and ardor of his patriotism were commensurate with the greatness of its object. He was second to none in humble and endearing scenes of private life; pious, just, humane, temperate, sincere, uniformly dignified and commanding, his example was edifying to all around him, as were the effects of that example lasting. To his equals he was condescending; to his inferiors kind; and to the dear object of his affections exemplarily tender. Correct throughout, vice shuddered in his presence, and virtue always felt his fostering hand, and the purity of his private character gave effulgence to his public virtues."

Judge Phelps was born Jan. 13, 1839, at Freedom, Portage Co., Ohio, in the Western Reserve, the oldest son of Abram and Marietta Phelps, both of whom survive him. His boyhood and early manhood were spent amid stirring scenes connected with the anti-slavery excitement, which took an acute form in the Western Reserve. The name of his birthplace suggests a love of liberty, so that when the scenes preceding the Rebellion had culminated in the fire on Fort Sumter he was ready to don a uniform and start for the front. In 1861 Mr. Phelps was just finishing his college course at Meadville, Penn., and upon graduating at once enlisted in the Pennsylvania Reserve. And from that time until June, 1863, serving as lieutenant and adjutant, he confronted the enemy's guns, only omitting from that time sixty days, when he was at home recovering from a gun-shot wound. His service in the army was one of conspicuous gallantry. He participated in several important engagements of the war, and his person was six times hit by Rebel bullets. At the second disastrous battle of Bull Run, while the forces confronting in this part of the field in which Mr. Phelps was serving were becoming broken up and disorganized, and at the moment when he had succeeded in rallying a considerable force composed of men from different broken and flying regiments, he partly turned around to lift a fallen comrade, when he himself received a Rebel bullet which passed entirely through his lungs. Though desperately wounded in a manner that would mean death to most men, his excellent constitution and exemplary habits enabled him to rapidly regain sufficient strength so that in a little less than sixty days he was again upon the battlefield, and participated in the battle of Fredericksburg, where, from exposure and lying on wet ground, the old injury was so aggravated that he was reluctantly compelled to take his discharge.

On June 16, 1864, he was married to Henrietta Bain, the daughter of the Rev. John Bain, at Franklin, Venango Co., Penn., and in 1865 they removed to the city of Janesville, and Mr. Phelps entered at once upon a successful practice of law, which practice was continuous, except as interfered with by the performance of his judicial duties. Mr. Phelps during his residence here served his county and city in several different judicial capacities, among them being justice of the peace, public administrator, and at the time of his death he had been for nearly six years judge of the municipal court for Rock county. In the performance of his judicial duties he was ever honest, painstaking, impartial, and faithful. And while he was kindly sympathetic with unfortunates who were brought before him, he ever tried to administer the law so as to deter people from committing offenses, and to protect the public in all personal and property rights. Mr. Phelps had no sisters, and but one brother, and he died in the year 1863 from disease contracted in the army. During their married life there were born to Mr. and Mrs. Phelps four children, two of whom died in infancy, and the youngest of the survivors, Norris Phelps, was drowned when he was fourteen years of age. The last year of Judge Phelps' life was one of peculiar afflictions. In the month of December, 1897, his beloved wife, after a protracted illness, passed to her eternal reward. On the 7th day of January following his only son, Frank, followed his mother, but leaving a widow, Elizabeth C. Phelps, who supplied the place of a dutiful daughter to Mr. Phelps after his wife and son had been taken from him, and her loving kindness and faithful care mitigated the suffering of his last days. And he had the satisfaction of knowing that she would be left to perform in his stead the loving duties to his aged parents which he had fondly expected to be permitted to perform.

The apparent cause of Mr. Phelps' death was the result of colliding with a train while riding a wheel. Those who knew him and his family were inclined to connect that injury with the death of his wife and son. Brave and strong, he had faced death in many ways; on the battlefield, and in behalf of the needy and the weak, he had met his full share of accidental injuries. He seemed almost superior to death from physical causes. His domestic life had been one of felicity, and so strong was his life intrenched with the light of home, wife and children that, when they were taken away, the steady prop of his life was gone. Such was his nature that he would not bend, and could only break.

Up to within a few short months of his death his thoughts, energies, were concentrated upon his family, and they were here and with him. The mind was alert and vigilant, quick to care for them, and, for their sake, for himself. Then all was changed. Their abiding place had been transferred to another and better world. The home scenes that knew him here would know them no more forever. And, while Mr. Phelps would not shrink a duty or evade a responsibility, and would bravely fight the battle of life to the end alone if need be, it is not too much, we think, to say that the calamities which had broken the heart of this brave soul somewhat dimmed the alertness and activity of his consciousness applied to mere earthly or physical conditions, and that it was want of alertness which resulted in the injuries which terminated his earthly career.

And so here to-day we pay our last tribute to the man we all honored, and whose life and character honored us. One by one we followed this loving family to their last resting-place here on earth. We mingled our tears with his, as one by one the jewels of his life were taken from him. So now that love has conquered death, we will rejoice with him in the grand reunion with the loved ones in that land where sorrow and death and separation shall never come.

WILLIAM SMITH,
Chairman of the Committee.

C. H. WANAMAKER, a prominent blacksmith of Platteville, Grant county, and an honored veteran of the Civil war, was born in Southington Center, Trumbull Co., Ohio, April 30, 1846, a son of H. L. and Hannah A. (Chatfield) Wannemaker (as the name was then spelled), and a grandson of Jacob and Elizabeth (Sechler) Wannemacher (which was the original spelling of the name). From Pennsylvania, their native State, Jacob Wannemacher and wife moved to Trumbull county, Ohio, where they died. By occupation he was a shoemaker. His brother, Jonas Wannemacher, came to Grant county, Wis., from Pennsylvania in 1846, and located in Liberty township, where from the wild land he developed a farm. He died in Crawford county, this State. Of his large family the following are still living: Samuel, a resident of Crawford county; Jonas, Timothy and Nelson, all of Colorado; and Emily, Mrs. Dennis, of Grant county, Wisconsin.

H. L. Wannemaker, father of the gentleman whose name introduces this sketch, was born in Berks county, Penn., Sept. 18, 1822, but was reared and educated in Ohio, where he learned the trade of blacksmith. In Trumbull county he was married, in 1843, to Miss Hannah A. Chatfield, a native of Connecticut, and a daughter of John and Eunice (Percy) Chatfield, who were also born in that State. Her father, who was a farmer by occupation, and a veteran of the war of 1812, moved to Ohio at an early day, and in 1854, came to Platteville, Wis., where he died in 1869. His wife's death occurred in Missouri, in 1868. In 1849 H. L. Wannemaker came to Grant county, Wis., and he walked all the way back to Trumbull county, Ohio, to bring his family here the following year. They located in Platteville, where the father worked at his trade until 1853, in which year he went to California, returning in 1857 to resume blacksmithing. During the war of the Rebellion he enlisted, for three years, in Company E, 25th Wis. V. I., and was with Sherman on the march to the sea and in the Carolina campaign. He participated in the grand review at Washington, D. C., and was honorably discharged in 1865. In 1875 he left Platteville and moved to Golden, Colo., where he and his wife still reside. Of the five children born to them, C. H. is the eldest; Walter L., the second, entered the Union army in 1864, and died in Colorado in 1894; Z. H. is a resident of that State; Nellie R. is married, and resides in Golden, Colo.; and Ruby R. is now Mrs. Crowe, of Denver.

From the age of four years C. H. Wannemaker has been a resident of Platteville, where he was educated, and learned the blacksmith's trade with his father. He was also one of the boys in blue during the Civil war, enlisting at Columbus, Ky., in April, 1863, for three years or during the war, and becoming a member of Company E, 25th Wis. V. I.; he was mustered into the United States service at Helena, Ark., and assigned to the 16th. and later to the 17th, Army Corps. He participated in the battle of Resaca, and all of the engagements of the Atlanta campaign. At Decatur, Ga., July 22, 1864, the company lost two more than half its number. Mr. Wanamaker was taken prisoner Nov. 1, of that year, and confined at Cahaba, Ala., for five months before being exchanged. While at Vicksburg, in 1865, he was transferred to Company K, 12th Wis. V. I., and he was honorably discharged in June, 1865, at Madison, Wis., as a prisoner of war. Returning to Platteville, he started work at his trade, and is to-day one of the leading blacksmiths of the city.

On May 10, 1868, in Platteville, Mr. Wanamaker married Miss Eliza Webster, who was born in L'Anse, Mich., in 1850, a daughter of Thomas and Mary Ann (Trebilcock) Webster. The father was a native of Cornwall, England, and on his emigration to America first settled in Pennsylvania, but later moved to the upper peninsula of Michigan, locating at L'Anse prior to 1850. By occupation he was a miner. About 1851 or 1852 he came to Platteville, Wis., where he died in 1889. After the death of his first wife, which occurred in 1855, he married her sister, who still resides in Platteville. Mr. and Mrs. Wanamaker are the parents of five children, namely: Alice, wife of John Webb, of Platteville; Mildred, wife of W. E. Hough, of Janesville, Wis.; T. Webster, a resident of Green Bay; C. L., who has charge of the electric light plant at Stevens Point; and Vera, wife of H. M. Dunn, of Milwaukee.

Mr. Wanamaker is a supporter of the Republican party, and takes an active interest in political affairs. He was one of the organizers and charter members of W. T. Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R., in which he has held office, and he is also a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

JOHN HAYES, one of Muscoda's leading citizens, enjoys the distinction of being among the few survivors of those who participated in the great naval battle between the "Kearsarge" and the "Alabama," he having served as coxswain on the former, and had charge of one of the guns which sent the Confederate craft to the bottom of the English Channel.

Mr. Hayes was born July 20, 1832, in Newfoundland, a subject of Great Britain, and is a son of John and Mary (Walker) Hayes. The family originated in England, but for several generations representatives thereof have made Newfoundland their home. Our subject was one of four children, three sons and one daughter, and lost his mother when only five or six years old, so he scarcely remembers her. Being apprenticed to the trade of cooper, John Hayes served his full time, but soon after shipped on a British merchantman, his inclinations tending toward seafaring life. In 1856 or 1857 he made his last trip on an English vessel, sailing from London to New York. Leaving that service, Mr. Hayes went from New York to Philadelphia, and entered the American naval service, shipping on the United States vessel "Saranac," which was ordered to the Pacific coast. Remaining in the naval service for about two years, he and his mates were relieved, and, returning to New York, Mr. Hayes entered the merchant service, and engaged in coasting along the Atlantic seaboard.

In November, 1861, feeling that his adopted country had need of his services, Mr. Hayes, leaving the merchant service, re-entered the United States navy, and was assigned to the "Ohio," at Charlestown harbor. However, when the "Ohio" was at Boston, the "Kearsarge" was also in that harbor, and a carefully picked crew being selected. Knowing Mr. Hayes' record, the officers of the "Kearsarge" had him transferred from the "Ohio" to their vessel, and he remained one of its crew until 1864. As is well known, the "Kearsarge" was fitted up and sent out expressly for the purpose of destroying the "Alabama," which had been such a menace to the commercial interests of the United States. The vessel belonged to Farragut's command, but possessed a roving commission, and the search was a long and exciting one—through the straits of Gibraltar; along the coast of Europe; thence to the Azores. Finally, while cruising along the coast of Holland, Capt. Winslow, the officer in command, received information that the "Alabama" was lying in the harbor at Cherbourg, France. Acting promptly upon this information, which was sent by the United States consul at Cherbourg, the "Kearsarge" was soon at the end of its long quest. Underestimating the "Kearsarge," the "Alabama" immediately sent a challenge, which was promptly accepted, and on June 19, 1864, the "Kearsarge" steamed out of the harbor, beyond the neutral line, closely followed by the "Alabama." Just as the commanding officer of the latter began to think that the "Kearsarge" was trying to escape, she suddenly turned and approached the enemy, and then was fought one of the most important battles of the sea ever recorded in history. This memorable event is by some historians regarded of more importance than the engagement between the "Merrimac" and the "Monitor." The "Kearsarge" not only overcame the "Alabama," but, as is well known by every student of our history, sank this formidable vessel, and freed the high seas of an enemy which had swept from the nations' highway all merchant ships belonging to the commerce of the United States that it could approach. Indeed, this victory was regarded as being such an important one, with reference to the commerce of the country, that the Chamber of Commerce of New York City contributed a large sum of money to be presented to the officers and crew of the gallant "Kearsarge." Of this sum Mr. Hayes' portion was fifty dollars, accompanied by a beautiful certificate of acknowledgment of the part he took in the battle. Mr. Hayes was captain of a thirty-two-pound gun in this engagement, which he operated very effectively.

After his discharge from the "Kearsarge," Mr. Hayes re-enlisted in the navy, going on the recruiting ship "Ohio," but was soon after selected as one of the crew of the "Wauchussetts," which cruised along the coast of South America. In the spring of 1865, soon after the assassination of President Lincoln, the steamer "Hartford" (Admiral Farragut's former flagship) and the "Wauchussetts" were ordered to China. This was a long and interesting trip, the vessels touching at the Cape of Good Hope, St. Helena, Manila, Hong Kong, and other important points. At Hong Kong Mr. Hayes was transferred from the "Wauchussetts" to the "Hartford." During the trip the captain and first and second officers died, and a commander was selected from the "Hartford." The two vessels returned to Hong Kong, and the "Wauchussetts" was soon afterward ordered home, but Mr. Hayes remained with the "Hartford," and sailed for Japan early in 1868. Just before the "Hartford" started on its homeward voyage Admiral Bell, with several of the crew, took a small boat to go to shore, to attend to some final business, but unfortunately the boat capsized, and the Admiral and several of the crew were drowned, although Mr. Hayes and others, on board the "Hartford," hastened to their rescue. In August the "Hartford" arrived in New York, and the crew was soon after paid off, at the Brooklyn navy yard, thus closing Mr. Hayes' long and eventful service in the United States navy.

After a short stay in Boston Mr. Hayes came West and located in Milwaukee, following his calling on the Great Lakes, but after his marriage he came to Muscoda, and bought land in Richland county. In 1869 Mr. Hayes was married to Celia Johnson, and three children were born of that union: John H., a resident of Richland county; Louisa, wife of David Hardin, a resident of Iowa; and Simon, of Pittsburg, Penn., now engaged in railroad-ing. The latter was a soldier in the late war with Spain, and participated in the siege of Santiago, as a member of Company A, 17th United States Infantry.

On Aug. 10, 1878, Mr. Hayes lost his first wife, and on Dec. 28, 1878, he married Mary Nelson, the lady who now graces his home, and who was a warm friend of the first Mrs. Hayes. She was born in Christiania, Norway. Mr. and Mrs. Hayes have a delightful home, where they dispense hospitality and enjoy the comforts of life. Mr. Hayes is very entertaining, and can talk for hours of the stirring events he has witnessed, and in which he has participated. He is both popular and influential in the community where he has resided so many years. Few men have rendered their country as efficient service, both in war and in peace, as has Mr. Hayes, the subject of this biography.

JOSEPH BLACKSTONE, half-owner and manager of the creamery at Shullsburg, Lafayette county, is one of the foremost citizens and enterprising business men of the town. He was born in December, 1839, in White Oak Springs, same county, where his father was one of the prominent pioneers.

John W. Blackstone, his father, was born in Madison county, N. Y., Oct. 8, 1796, son of Stephen F. and Elizabeth (Baker) Blackstone, both of English descent. He received his early education in the public schools of that county, and later entered Hamilton College, New York, being graduated therefrom in the class of 1819. For three years he studied law, was admitted to the Bar at the end of that time, and commenced practice. Being possessed of an adventurous spirit, however, the glowing tales of the West interfered with his interest in his legal work, and he resolved to personally investigate the wonders of the Northwest. He passed two years in Canada before locating in Wisconsin, and in 1827 reached Lead Mine, going the following year to Mineral Point, where he remained two years, and then moved to New Diggings. In 1835 he purchased a farm near White Oak Springs, long since known as the "Judge Blackstone Farm," and that became his home until his death, which occurred in 1868. He became a prominent factor in the development of that region, and was always looked upon as one of the leading spirits in any enterprise for the good of the community. During the Black Hawk war he held a lieutenant's commission in Capt. Clark's company, under Gen. Henry Dodge, and proved himself an intrepid soldier. In 1838 he became a member of the Territorial Legislature, which convened at Madison in November, of that year, and according to the Blue Book of Wisconsin was made Speaker of the Assembly. In 1833 Mr. Blackstone was married to Miss Catherine Tomlinson, who died in 1866, the mother of seven children: (1) Theodore E., born in New Diggings, in 1834, was educated in the Platteville schools, and studied medicine. He opened a drug store in Shullsburg, but after three years engaged in farming, until his removal to a ranch in Montana, where he died in 1891. He married Miss Mary E. Hardy, of Platteville, who was born in Pottsville, Penn., and they became the parents of nine children, Ernest W., Harry R., John G., David, Mary D., Daisy, Katie, Mintie, and Josie. (2) John W., born Dec. 22, 1835, former editor of the Shullsburg Local, is one of the leading lawyers of the town. (3) Isabel, born at White Oak Springs, died in early womanhood. (4) Joseph is the fourth in order of birth. (5) Augustus for a time farmed the old homestead, but later moved to Shullsburg, where he engaged in the hardware business for some years, and then retired. He married Miss Mary Jane Richardson, of Platteville, and has two children, Adelbert and Bertam, the former of whom is a lawyer at Waukesha, Wis., and the latter a photographer at Platteville. (6) Eugene died in early manhood. (7) Janette, born in White Oak Springs, in 1868 married H. A. Beckwith, who was born in Vermont, and they now live on a farm in White Oak Springs. Eight children have been born to them, Frank, Charles L., Joseph W., Ethel, Harry, Blanche, Maud, and David.

Joseph Blackstone passed his early years on the home farm, enjoying superior advantages in the way of cultured and educated parents, who encouraged him in every way to make the best use of the talents with which nature had endowed him. He secured a good education in the old Platteville Academy. In 1862 he enlisted in Company K, 20th Wis. V. I., was sergeant-major of his regiment for a time, later was elected lieutenant of Company B, and served under Gen. Grant. His first engagement was at Prairie Grove, Ark., which ended disastrously for the young soldier, as he was wounded there, so seriously that he still at times suffers intensely from the effects. The wound healed at the time, however, and he rejoined his regiment, participating in a number of engagements with bushwhackers in Missouri, the siege of Vicksburg, and other battles in that section. His regiment was sent to Brownsville, Texas, for nine months, and thence to the siege of Mobile, Ala., whence after some time they were stationed at Galveston, Tex., and there, on July 14, 1865, mustered out of the United States service.

Upon his return from the war Mr. Blackstone engaged in farming, locating on his fine farm at White Oak Springs, where he erected a fine modern house and large barn, and made many other valuable improvements, proving himself a most progressive agriculturist. In 1885 he purchased real estate in Shullsburg, and there erected a commodious home, finely finished in hard wood, and furnished with every modern convenience.

Since locating in Shullsburg Mr. Blackstone has engaged in the creamery business with his son-in-law, W. H. Look, his business ability manifesting itself in his unvarying success.

In January, 1867, Mr. Blackstone was united in marriage with Miss Emma Pool, daughter of Francis and Elizabeth (Bastian) Pool. She was born in January, 1848, and was educated in the Mount Morris Seminary, in Illinois. To their marriage have come four sons and two daughters: (1) Nettie, born in September, 1867, was graduated in 1884 from the Shullsburg high school. She married V. H. Look, a dry-goods merchant of that city, who was also engaged with his father-in-law in the creamery business, and they have two children, Frederick W. and Florence. (2) Dr. Wilfred R., born in November, 1868, was graduated from the Shullsburg high school, and later entered the Atlanta (Ga.) Dental School, whence he was graduated in 1897; he is now a leading dentist in Shullsburg. In 1900 he wedded Miss Effie Oates, a graduate of the Platteville Normal, and for two years a popular teacher in the Shullsburg high school. (3) Herbert Lee, born in August, 1870, was graduated from the Shullsburg high school, and is now a resident of Butte, Mont., where he holds the position of freight solicitor for the Great Northern Railway Co. He married Miss Freda Baum, of Minneapolis, Minn. (4) Eva M., born in 1873, was graduated in 1892 from the Shullsburg high school. (5) Joseph R., born in 1874, was graduated from the home high school, and for two years engaged in teaching there, at present being a conductor on a railroad in Anaconda, Mont. (6) Samuel L., born in January, 1877, like the rest of the family graduated from the home high school, and is now a telegraph operator in Sibley, Iowa.

In his political affiliations Mr. Blackstone has always been identified with the Republican party, and he has held a number of offices in the gift of his admiring townsmen, among them being that of chairman of White Oak Springs. After the incorporation of Shullsburg as a borough he was elected the first mayor of the town, and also chairman of the board of the city, and for two years was chairman of the county. For a number of years he has been a member of the school board. In religious belief the family are all Congregationalists, and Mrs. Blackstone has ever been found at the front in any Christian work. Socially our subject is a member of the Masonic fraternity, of the Order of the Eastern Star, and Post No. 96. G. A. R. The name of Blackstone is synonymous with enterprise and progress, and the people of the town take it for granted that Mr. Blackstone will always be ready—and certain it is they will always find him so—to do his utmost to advance the moral and material interests of the town, county, or State.

Francis and Elizabeth (Bastian) Pool, parents of Mrs. Blackstone, were both natives of England. They emigrated from England in 1839, being among the old pioneer families of Jo Daviess county, Ill., and later located in White Oak Springs, Wis., remaining there until they erected the home near that of Mr. Blackstone which proved to be their last earthly residence. Both died the same year, 1881. Their children were as follows: (1) Hannibal, of California, married Miss Sophie Adams, and has seven children. (2) Robert enlisted in the 96th Ill. V. I., in the Civil war, and attained the rank of captain; he was seriously wounded in one of the engagements, and was then retired, taking charge, as conductor, of a military train. After the war he returned to Galena, Ill., where for eight years he served as sheriff of Jo Daviess county. He married Miss Amelia Lowe, who bore him three children, Alice, Zera and Robert. He removed to Portland, Oregon, where his death occurred in 1898, from the effects of his old wounds, and his family now reside in Grant's Pass, Oregon. (3) John, now a resident of Grant's Pass, Oregon, is a miner. He wedded a Miss Farr, of Galena. (4) Frank also became a member of the 96th Ill. V. I., and died five months later, at Harrodsburg, Ky. (5) Philippa now makes her home in Shullsburg. (6) Jennie E. died at the age of eighteen, her early death cutting short a life of great promise. (7) Emma is the wife of Mr. Blackstone.

EDWARD P. DOTY, miller and grain dealer of Janesville, Rock county, was born in Janesville Sept. 27, 1857, a son of E. Philo and Abigail M. (Austin) Doty, natives of New York State.

The paternal grandfather of our subject, Zuri Shaddai Doty, was a native of Vermont, who came to Rock county in the early days, settling at Turtle; he afterward removed to Janesville, where he engaged in conducting a sash, door and blind factory. Later he removed to Madison, where he died aged about eighty-one years. His family was a large one, and a number of its representatives reside in Janesville. The Doty family dates back, in America, to one of the "Mayflower" crew. Our subject's maternal grandfather, Ira Austin, was a native of New York, of English descent, and had two children. In the early days he came West, resided in Madison, and died there, advanced in years.

E. Philo Doty was a young man when he migrated to Rock county, settling at Turtle, and after some years' residence in that town removed to Janesville, and engaged in conducting a sash, door and blind factory until he embarked with his brothers in the manufacture of the Doty washing machine. Later this business was merged into the Doty Manufacturing Co. In 1869 E. Philo Doty died, aged nearly forty-three years, but his widow still survives. In religious faith he was a Universalist, and Mrs. Doty an Episcopalian. Five children were born to them, two sons and three daughters, three now living: Alta M., wife of Charles Atwood, of Janesville; Edward P.; and Anna S., wife of Judge Charles L. Fifield, of Janesville.

Edward P. Doty has lived all of his life in Janesville, securing his education in the public schools of that city. When about fifteen he went into business with his brother Henry, milling, but twenty-five years ago embarked in business for himself, and for fifteen years was in partnership with Pliny Norcross; the partnership was dissolved Oct. 15, 1900.

On Jan. 13, 1881, Edward P. Doty married Miss Margaret V. Hullihen, daughter of Dr. James and Sarah (Kramer) Hullihen, and one son and two daughters have been born of this union: Kramer, Josephine and Margaret. Mrs. Doty is a member of Christ Episcopal Church of Janesville. Politically Mr. Doty's affiliations are with the Republican party. Mr. and Mrs. Doty reside on the corner of Conrad and Oakland avenue, where they have lived for the past seven or eight years.

HON. WILLIAM G. WHEELER, a distinguished member of the Bar of Janesville, is a son of Hon. Guy and Ann L. (Snell) Wheeler, both of whom were born in New York. Mrs. Wheeler's family settled in Wisconsin three years before her husband, the respective dates of their location being 1839 and 1842.

In 1844 Guy Wheeler settled on a farm of 240 acres, two and a half miles southeast of Janesville, and on this tract he still resides, honored by the community and beloved by his friends. His family consisted of two sons and two daughters, of whom three are yet living: Marion W. is the wife of A. C. Dow, of Chicago, Ill.; Ralph H. is a successful physician in the same city; and the third is Hon. William G. Wheeler, whose name appears as the subject of this sketch. Cordelia, the second child, died in her fourteenth year. Hon. Guy Wheeler is one of Rock county's most influential citizens, broad-minded, keen-sighted, and public-spirited. He was one of the founders of the county agricultural society, and for many years its secretary. The meeting to organize the township of La Prairie was held at his house, and he was chosen the first town clerk. The township was so named at the instance of his brother Samuel, who is now one of the leading citizens of Rochester, Minn. Guy Wheeler was a member of the Wisconsin Legislature in 1864.

Hon. Guy Wheeler married a daughter of Asa F. Snell, who was the father of ten children. Mr. Snell and his wife were New Yorkers, and settled at Fort Atkinson, Wis., in 1839. He was a prosperous farmer, and was elevated, by the suffrages of his fellow citizens, to various offices of trust, the duties of which he discharged with rare acumen and fidelity. He died at the age of about sixty years.

The paternal grandfather of William G. Wheeler, Justus P. Wheeler, was born in Lanesboro, Mass., and was descended from Welsh ancestry. He was a patriot of pronounced devotion, and served with gallantry throughout the war of 1812. He came West in 1840, settling in what is now known as La Prairie township, Rock Co., Wis. As is his son Guy, so was he, a man keenly alive to every vital interest of the people among whom his lot was cast. His life was a long and useful one, and not devoid of honor. The Rock County Agricultural Society chose him its first president. He was a man of superior classical education, having graduated from Williams College. He held deep and earnest religious convictions, and was a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Janesville, having taken a prominent part in founding the M. E. congregation in that city.

The early life of Hon. William G. Wheeler was much the same as that of other boys of his day and generation who grew up upon Wisconsin farms in the early history of the State. He was born in the township of La Prairie, Rock county, Nov. 11, 1861, and the district schools and the Janesville high school gave him his early education. At the age of twenty years, in 1881, he began the study of law, his preceptors being Messrs. Winans & Fethers. He was admitted to the Bar in 1884, and from Oct. 1 of that year until June 6, 1885, served as deputy in the office of the circuit court clerk. On the date last named he was himself appointed clerk of the circuit court, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of the previous incumbent of the office, A. W. Baldwin. His term expiring in January, 1887, he began the active practice of his profession in the following May, and has been remarkably successful. In 1892 he entered the firm of Dunwiddie & Goldin, the name of the new co-partnership being Dunwiddie, Goldin & Wheeler. Three years later this firm was dissolved by the election of Mr. Goldin as clerk of the circuit court, and on June 19, 1899, the partnership between Messrs. Dunwiddie & Wheeler came to an end through the elevation of the senior member of the firm to the circuit court bench. From 1891 until 1895 Mr. Wheeler filled the office of district attorney, bringing to the discharge of his arduous duties a well-trained legal mind, a ripe experience, and unquestionable integrity. Among many noteworthy prosecutions which he successfully conducted while in this incumbency may be mentioned the cases of the State versus D. G. Cheever and the State versus Matthew R. Ashton. The trial of Ashton, who was charged with the murder of a woman consumed thirty days. The case ranks among the causes celebres of the Northwest, and so skillfully was the web of evidence woven around the guilty man, by the astute and careful district attorney, that a conviction and life sentence were secured. In 1897, and again in 1899, Mr. Wheeler represented his district in the Wisconsin Legislature, and during the last session filled the responsible post of chairman of the committee on Judiciary. During his first term in the Assembly he nominated Hon. John C. Spooner for the United States Senate, and in 1899 was a supporter of Mr. Quarles. On Jan. 11, 1901, he was appointed United States attorney for the Western District of Wisconsin, which position he now holds.

Mr. Wheeler is personally one of Janesville's most popular citizens, cordial, genial and generous. He is, as may be imagined, prominent in both social and political circles, and is a member of Oriental Lodge, No. 22, K. of P., and of the B. P. O. E. He was until recently a member and chairman of the commission to organize a park on the St. Croix river, to be known as the Inter State Park of the Dalles of the St. Croix.

On Nov. 19, 1889, Mr. Wheeler married Miss Jessica M. Jackman, a daughter of Hiram and Harriet M. (Coatsworth) Jackman. Mrs. Wheeler is a communicant of the Episcopal Church.

WILLIAM HENRY TRIPP, a venerable resident of Rock township, Rock county, has come to a serene and beautiful old age, with the memories of a long and useful life behind him. He is a true type of the American farmer: not afraid of hard work, willing to labor and wait, careful and frugal, and yet generous and open-handed. He has lived to enjoy the results of industrious and well-spent years, and to gain and hold the confidence and respect of all who know him.

Mr. Tripp was born in Scranton, Penn., Feb. 18, 1821, and is a son of Stephen and Nancy (Benedict) Tripp, natives of Rhode Island and New York, respectively. Isaac Tripp, his grandfather, was a native of Rhode Island, where his ancestors had lived since 1610, was a farmer, and lived to the age of seventy-three. He served in the Revolutionary war. He was the father of twelve children. The following appeared in a Scranton (Penn.) paper of Dec. 12, 1900:

"It has been ascertained by diligent research by one of the Tripp family that their name originated in the following manner: About the middle of the Thirteenth century a party of Danes overran England and found a lodgment in one of the strong-walled castles for which the country was noted. An English general of the family by the name of Howard, and a few brave followers crossed the moat, scaled the walls of the castle and drove out the Danes. The king asked the general, 'How did you accomplish the herculean task?' The answer was, 'We tripped over the moat, tripped over the wall, tripped up the enemy and drove them out.' Then the king said, 'Thy tripping was a grand and glorious trip,' and he knighted the general forthwith, and said, 'henceforth thy name and the name of thy posterity shall be Tripp through all the coming ages.' And Tripp it was, and is, and will be to the end of time."

Stephen Tripp, our subject's father, moved to Pennsylvania with his father in 1776, the family settling in the Lackawanna Valley; they arrived fifteen days after the promulgation of the Declaration of Independence. There were only two white families in Providence at that time. They were obliged to go to Wilkes-Barre even for salt and other necessities, and the first store in the Valley was kept in the front part of Stephen Tripp's house, by Cox & Carpenter. Mr. Tripp once traded 200 acres in the "Notch" for a set of whiskey stills. He followed farming. His old homestead on the west side of the road on the hill in Hyde Park (Scranton), is still standing; the newest portion was built over eighty-six years ago. There he resided until his death, in 1841, at the age of sixty-five years. He was a man of affairs, and held the office of justice of the peace, and various other local positions. His wife reached the age of eighty-three. They were Baptists in religious faith. Of the ten children born to Mr. and Mrs. Tripp, Horace married (first) Almira Stone, of Abington, and (second) Caroline Kempton; Harriet married Samuel Church; Hannah married Herman Dailey; Martha died in infancy; Samuel married (first) Sally Brown and (second) Polly Hobbs; Martha (2) died in infancy; Nehemiah married Margaret Inman; Polly (Mary) married (first) James Hartley and (second) Isaac Robbins; William Henry is our subject; Fanny married Lewis Armstrong. Only two survive, Polly and William Henry. Mrs. Polly (Tripp) Robbins was born March 11, 1819, in a portion of the old Stephen Tripp homestead built about one hundred years ago. Her first school teacher was Samuel Church, who afterward married her sister, Harriet. In 1861 she married James Hartley, of Glenwood, Penn., who died in 1870, and in 1874 she married Isaac Robbins. She is now living quietly in Scranton, at the home of Charles J. Church, exceedingly well preserved in mind and body.

Joshua Benedict, father of Mrs. Nancy (Benedict) Tripp, and our subject's maternal grandfather, was born in New York, of English descent, and lived to the advanced age of eighty-three. He, also, was a soldier in the Revolution. He was the father of three sons and four daughters.

William Henry Tripp was reared on the farm near Scranton, and farming has been the occupation of his life. It is a noble calling, and if loyally followed may serve to bring out the noblest faculties of a man's soul, and it has been a kindly mistress to this venerable Rock county farmer. He had a farmer boy's advantages in the district school, and, being of a thoughtful and observant disposition, has acquired a very fair knowledge of men and the world as he has gone through. His period of life has covered some of the most important chapters of the world's history, and he fully understands the significance of what he has seen as it was becoming history.

Mr. Tripp was united in marriage, Jan. 14, 1844, to Miss Delilah Thomas, a daughter of John and Eliza (Osborn) Thomas. Three children were born to their union: Theodore F., George B. and Hattie H. Theodore F. enlisted in Company C, 35th Wis. V. I., served at the front two years, and contracted disease from which he died, at home; he was only nineteen when he enlisted, and is remembered as an opened-faced and manly young man. George B. married Ida Clark, and they have had two children, Mary L. and Minnie. Hattie H. married J. B. Porter; they live in the town of Porter, Rock county, and have a family of four sons, J. K., Rockwell, Wallace and Liel. Mrs. Tripp is a Methodist, and is a lady of excellent character and standing. Mr. Tripp belongs to Blue Lodge No. 14, A. F. & A. M., in Janesville; Janesville Chapter No. 5, R. A. M.; and Janesville Commandery, No. 2, K. T., and is highly esteemed among his fraternal associates. He is an ardent Republican, and he raised the first banner bearing the names of McKinley and Roosevelt in the late Presidential campaign, hoisting same within twelve hours after their nomination, in Philadelphia. It was 6x14 feet in dimensions, and floated from a 55-foot flag-staff at his home. Mr. Tripp hoisted a flag at half-mast on the closing day and hour of the Nineteenth century, and had it at the mast-head on the morning of the Twentieth century. Mr. Tripp has held various town offices, was chairman of the town board two terms, and was a member of the General Assembly in 1857, being the youngest member of that body with one exception. He served in the Legislature with the late Senator Philetus Sawyer, and ex-Gov. David H. Waite, of Colorado, who is known as "Bloody Bridle" Waite. At the time of his friend Sawyer's burial, Mr. Tripp was unable to attend the funeral and he hoisted his flag at half-mast. Our subject has served as trustee for the Institution for the Blind twenty-one years, proving himself one of the most capable officials associated with that noble institution, and has been appointed by six different governors of the State. He was a charter member of the Central Wisconsin Bank, was its first vice-president, and a member of its first board of directors. When it became a National bank he retired from the active management.

Mr. Tripp came West in 1851, with his wife and eldest son, then six years old, and bought his present farm, then comprising 200 acres, but now reduced to fifty acres. It is four miles from Janesville, on the Hanover road. On this place he has made his home forty-nine years, and has witnessed the development of what was then a wilderness into a most charming and attractive country.

With the Tripp family is associated the romantic history of Frances Slocum, a distant relative of the subject of this narrative, who was taken captive by the Delaware Indians Nov. 2, 1778, four months after the Wyoming Massacre, when she was only five years old, and was not found until sixty years later. She had married a chief of the Miami Indians, and they came West and lived near what is now Peru, Ind. There she died, and was buried. Her grave is now marked by a very appropriate monument, costing seven hundred dollars, which was unveiled May 17, 1900, in the presence of three thousand people, two of whom were from Wisconsin—Mr. Tripp and Mrs. E. C. Potter (of Whitewater). The unfortunate captive had reared a family of children, and had become an Indian in every sense of the word except her blood. The monument was unveiled by two great-great-granddaughters of Frances Slocum, Victoria and Mabel Ray Bondy.

JESSE S. JONES, dairyman and farmer of Platteville, Grant county, is a prominent representative of the agricultural interests of Wisconsin, and highly esteemed in the community in which he makes his home.

Jesse S. Jones was born in Orange county, N. Y., Dec. 21, 1823, a son of Anthony and Dorothy (Smith) Jones, and grandson of Anthony Jones. Our subject's parents were both born and died in Orange county, N. Y. They had nine children, four still living: Mary A., now Mrs. Jackson, a resident of Orange county, N. Y.; R. D., a well-to-do farmer of New York State; James W., a prominent farmer of Grant county, Wis.; and our subject; five are deceased.

Jesse S. Jones came to Wisconsin in 1847, settled in Iowa county, and followed farming and mining until 1850, when he settled at New California, Grant county, and engaged in the real-estate business. Later he became a merchant, continuing in that line for four or five years, and afterward became extensively interested in the lead mines in Grant and Iowa counties. Under President Buchanan he was appointed postmaster of New California, serving for some years, also served as town clerk for several terms, being the first clerk of Clifton township, served on the county board several years, and then as treasurer of the county. In 1866 Mr. Jones sold his other interests and purchased a farm adjacent to the city of Platteville, on which he erected a large, comfortable home. This property has been so much improved, in every way, since Mr. Jones came into possession of it, that it is now one of the finest in the county. For a number of years Mr. Jones has made a specialty of breeding fancy blooded horses and cattle, and also owns and operates a fully equipped dairy, furnishing the city of Platteville with the best quality of Jersey milk and cream, his herd of Jersey cattle being one of the best in the State. In addition to his Jersey cattle Mr. Jones owns a fine herd of Galloway stock, the magnificent Royal George Mogan, a full-blooded horse known to breeders all over Wisconsin, and the celebrated Pelham Tartar. Handling none but pure blooded stock, Mr. Jones has become famous as a stock dealer, and his horses and cattle always command fancy prices.

On Oct. 9, 1850, Mr. Jones married Miss Elizabeth Kirkpatrick, who was born Oct. 18, 1832, in Iowa county, Wis., daughter of F. C. and Fannie (Sparks) Kirkpatrick, pioneers of Wisconsin, formerly of Georgia. To this union were born four daughters and one son who grew to maturity: Agnes, born in Grant county in 1852, was well educated, and afterward taught in Grant county; she married Lewis P. Shears, and settled in Iowa, where she died in 1883, leaving one son and one daughter—Ernest, of Chicago, and Agnes, adopted daughter of Mr. Stine, of Belmont, Lafayette Co., Wis. Eva, educated at the State Normal, married Dr. George W. Lee, and now resides at Black Earth, Wis.; they have one son, Glen, of Chicago. Dorothy, educated at the State Normal, married H. J. Smiley, a plumber, of New York City, later of Chicago, now of Platteville; they have no family. Elvira, also educated at the State Normal, is the widow of John A. Ruble, of Beloit, and has one son, Jesse J. Ruble, who resides with Jesse S. Jones at his home in Platteville. Jesse S., born in 1866, married Leora Bell, of Platteville, who was born, reared and educated in that city, a daughter of Archie Bell, an attorney, and one of the prominent men of Platteville, now deceased; they have two children, Eva and Benjamin; Jesse S. Jones, Jr., is an ice dealer, and owns his home in Platteville. On Oct. 9, 1900, Mr. and Mrs. Jones celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their married life.

Politically Mr. Jones has always been identified with the Republican party, but since coming to Platteville has taken no active part in politics. In religious matters Mr. and Mrs. Jones are consistent members of the Congregational Church, and greatly interested in the work pertaining thereto. They are both very worthy people, kind-hearted, genial, and pleasant, and are very widely known throughout the entire county.

DEXTER D. MAYNE, superintendent of the city schools of Janesville, Rock county, was born in Beetown, Grant Co., Wis., May 14, 1863, son of Nicholas and Mary (Treloar) Mayne, both of whom were born and bred in Cornwall, England. They were the parents of five sons and three daughters, and five of their children are now living: Mary, wife of Rev. A. S. Newcomb, of Beloit, Wis.; A. Finley, of Omaha, Neb.; H. Watson, of Linn Grove, Iowa; Dexter D.; and Charles M., of Lincoln, Nebraska.

Nicholas Mayne was a clergyman in the Methodist Church, and in later life attached himself to the Congregational body. While still with the Methodists he served as a missionary to the Chippewa Indians in the Bad-Ax country. As a Congregationalist he did the greater portion of his clerical work in Grant county, Wis., and was highly respected, both for his learning and for his profound devotion to his calling. He died in 1891, aged seventy-one years, his wife in 1898, aged seventy-three years. His father died in England in middle life, leaving two sons. Our subject's mother, Mary Treloar, was the youngest of a large family of children—sixteen. Her father, a miller by occupation, died in England at an advanced age. Her mother's maiden name was Tabb.

Dexter D. Mayne was reared in Grant county, attended the local public schools, and was graduated from the Normal School at Platteville in 1883, at which time he was already an experienced and successful teacher. Leaving school, he became principal at Fenimore. For five years he was principal of the high school at Elkhorn, and four years at Fort Atkinson. He is now serving his eighth year as superintendent of the Janesville city schools and principal of the high school. Superintendent Mayne has conducted Teachers Institutes for four seasons in Wisconsin, and was manager of Teachers Summer Schools for three years. He organized the Sectional Teachers Associations for Wisconsin in 1889, and filled the office of president of the Southern Wisconsin Teachers Association for two consecutive terms; served as president of the City Superintendents and Supervising Principals Association for two terms; was director of the National Educational Association for Wisconsin for one year; and was assigned places on the program at its Los Angeles meeting, and on the National Superintendents program at Columbus.

Superintendent Mayne and Miss Nella G. Coman, of Spring Prairie, Wis., daughter of James and Ann (Gray) Coman, were united in marriage Dec. 14, 1887. To this union have been born two sons, James Coman and Mac Hudson. Mr. and Mrs. Mayne belong to the Congregational Church. He is a Mason, belonging to lodge, chapter and commandery, and is affiliated with Oriental Lodge, Knights of Pythias.

JOHN I. MORRIS, a retired farmer of the town of Harrison, Grant county, has been a resident of the county for nearly half a century, and represents an old and solid family of New Jersey and Pennsylvania. He came to Wisconsin when it was largely a wilderness, and has lived to see it become one of the fairest States in a noble Union. The forest and the prairie now afford homes to a multitude of happy and contented people, and the grand generation of which Mr. Morris and a few others are lingering members accomplished the transformation with long and exhausting labor. May their last days be beautiful.

John I. Morris was born in Trumbull county, Ohio, Jan. 22, 1830, a son of Richard and Katie (McFall) Morris. The father was born in New Jersey, and the mother in Trumbull county, Ohio. They were married in Trumbull county, and there lived for some fifteen years, at the expiration of which time they went farther East, and settled on a farm in Mercer county, Penn., living there seventeen years. In 1855 they came West to Grant county, Wis., where John I. had preceded them, and had already been established one year in Harrison township. William Morris, another son, had already secured eighty acres of government land, at fifty cents an acre, and on this land the father and mother settled, and remained during their lives. He died in 1881, and she survived him ten years, dying in 1891. They were good Christian people and members of the Presbyterian Church. He was originally a Whig, and on the formation of the Republican party cast in his lot therewith, and voted its ticket as long as he lived.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris were the parents of nine children, whose record may be briefly given: (1) Lavina Morris, born in Ohio in 1828, is now the widow of Geradius Malone, of Platteville, and has one living daughter, Sarah. (2) John I. Morris was second in the family. (3) William Morris, born in Trumbull county, Ohio, in 1831, married Mary A. Mapes, of Platteville, and now resides on his farm; he has seven children, Homer, Nancy, Roseann, George, Lydia, Lucy, and Bessie. He was a member of Company C, 6th Wis. V. I., and served throughout the Civil war, participating in many important battles and skirmishes sufficiently large to be called battles in any lesser war. (4) Charles Morris, born in Ohio in 1834, was also a soldier in the Civil war, enlisting in the 10th Wis. V. I., which regiment was under Gen. Sherman much of the time, and followed him on the great march from Atlanta to the sea. He never married, and is now residing at the Soldiers' Home, in Milwaukee. (5) Mark and (6) Luke Morris, twins, were born in Ohio in 1837. Mark is unmarried, and lives in Platteville. Luke married Sarah Hubbard, and lived in Platteville a number of years. He is now deceased. Mrs. Luke Morris has three children, Joseph, Burton and Jessie. (7) Thomas Morris, born in Mercer county, Penn., in 1840, came West with his parents, and married Miss Eliza Cummings. They settled on a farm in the town of Harrison, where he died in 1893, leaving a widow and three children on the farm, Eva, Nettie and Ellsworth. (8) Mary J. Morris, born in Mercer county, Penn., in 1844, married Frank Lothine, and they live on a farm in Harrison township, where they are rearing a large family, Everett, Minnie, Henry, Thomas, Lester, John, Olive, Edward, and one whose name is not given. (9) Margaret Morris, born in Pennsylvania in 1850, married David Parish, who was a soldier in a Wisconsin regiment during the Civil war, and was confined fourteen months in Libby prison. He died in Harrison township in 1891, leaving a large family—James, of Platteville; Lucy, now Mrs. Conrad Ricey, of Harrison township; Mamie, Mrs. Henry Connell, of Ellenboro township; William; Ada, Mrs. James Connell; Cora, Mrs. Ben. Connell; Arthur; Jesse; and Logan.

John I. Morris acquired his education very largely in the district schools of Ohio and Pennsylvania, where he spent the earlier years of his life. When he was able to handle the lines he was put to work teaming, and was engaged in hauling goods from Pittsburg into Mercer county. In 1854 he came West to Crawford county, Wis., having married Miss Delia Byers, of Mercer county, in May of that year. The young couple settled on a farm which they secured from the government, and remained in Crawford county three years. In the spring of 1857 they came to Grant county, and started afresh. That year the young wife died, leaving him one son, Andrew, born in Crawford county in April, 1855. Andrew Morris is now a Grant county farmer; he married Miss Wildie Ballard, and is the father of three sons, Ellsworth, Harry, and Earl.

John I. Morris was a soldier in the Civil war, having enrolled in Company C, 6th Wis. V. I., which regiment was attached to the Army of the Potomac, and our subject was in a number of heavy engagements, having many narrow escapes from being killed. On one occasion a Rebel ball broke the stock of his gun, and left his arm crippled for seven days. When the war was ended, and he was set free from the service, Mr. Morris returned to Wisconsin. In March, 1870, our subject married Miss Annie Zigler, of Platteville, daughter of Jacob and Margaret Zigler, both of whom died in Germany. Mrs. Morris was born in Wittenberg, Germany, in 1846, and came to this country in 1867, in company with her sister Margaret. Their brother, George Zigler, had preceded them, coming in 1855, and he bore arms for his adopted country during the war of the Rebellion, serving in the heavy artillery. He married Miss Mary Spies, and is a prosperous farmer of the town of Ellenboro, Grant county. They have three children, Eliza, Albert and Walter. Margaret Zigler married Lawrence Voss, after her arrival in this country, and he died leaving her a widow with three daughters, Emma, Mary and Minnie; Mr. Voss was a soldier in the Civil war. Mrs. Voss subsequently married William Carl, by whom she had two children, Henry and Louisa. He died, and she married Christ Hartlip, to whom she has borne one daughter, Annie; they live in Lancaster. Mrs. Morris has one other sister, Mary, who married August Walter, and lives in Lehigh county, Pennsylvania.

After his second marriage Mr. Morris brought his wife to the old home, which has been their residence to the present time. He is a Republican, and religiously he and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. "Uncle John Morris," as he is familiarly called, is one of the honored old pioneers of Wisconsin. He is a man of sterling qualities, a type of the Christian gentleman, whose whole life has been lived on a generous and helpful plane.

ANDREW J. BRANT was born in Prussia July 9, 1843, son of Joseph and Dorathea Brant, both born in Prussia, where Mrs. Brant died in 1848. Mr. Brant married a second time before leaving for the United States, in 1852.

The family came to New York, and made their way to Rockford, then to Galena by wagon, and from there to Hazel Green, Wis., where Mr. Brant purchased a tract of wild land. He did not live many years after his settlement in Wisconsin. By his first marriage he had six children, four sons and two daughters, the latter dying in infancy. The only child of the second union, Theresa, died in Hazel Green when a young girl. Of the four sons mentioned, (1) Christopher Brant, born in Germany in 1838, completed his education in the Grant county public schools, and married Miss Burghardt, of Mineral Point, where they lived for some years, and where she died, leaving three children, Lizzie F., Henry A. and William. Mr. Brant later married Miss Amelia Beacher, of that city, and to this union one daughter, Veronica, has been born. He is a farmer. For a number of years he was manager for one of the Mineral Point smelting firms. (2) Adam Brant, born in 1841, enlisted during the Civil war in Company E, 9th Wis. V. I., and served until the close of the war; he was in many hard-fought battles, and was once taken prisoner. After the war he came to Wisconsin, and married Miss Mary A. King, settling in Missouri for a time, and he is now living in Oklahoma; he has a family of eight children, Charles, Frank, Godfrey, Joseph, Dora, Mary, Gertrude and Maggie. (3) Andrew J. Brant, the third child, is our subject. (4) Valentine Brant, born in 1845, crossed the Black Hills for his health, and remained there thirteen years. He came back to Wisconsin, and died at the home of his brother Andrew in April, 1883.

Andrew J. Brant was a boy of nine years when his father came to Wisconsin. A district-school education was given him in Hazel Green, and he was a lead miner until the breaking out of the Civil war, enlisting at that time in Company C, 7th Wis. Volunteers, under Capt. Naysmith, of Platteville. The regiment was sent east, and served under McDowell and Pope, in the brigade of Gen. Gibbons, being transferred to Battery B, 4th U. S. Artillery. During the battle of Sulphur Springs our subject lost his right hand, and was the first man to be injured after their transfer. Mr. Brant was taken to the freight car hospital, and was without attention for several days, the Rebels having temporarily broken the communication with Washington. He was sent to Philadelphia, and was detailed to hospital duty until his discharge, in 1864.

Mr. Brant came back to Wisconsin, and was a miner until his marriage, in 1872, to Miss Caroline Raup, who was born in Illinois in 1855. Frank and Caroline Raup, her parents, were born in Germany, and emigrated to Grant county in 1856. Mrs. Brant received her education in the local schools. After their marriage our subject and his wife settled in a home near the one in which they lived until recently, not far from the village of Louisburg, and in 1884 he put up a fine modern home. A short time ago Mr. Brant sold his Wisconsin place and purchased one in Dubuque, Iowa, at No. 861 West 14th street.

Mr. and Mrs. Brant are the parents of four children: (1) Frank J., born Sept. 8, 1875, was educated in the State Normal at Platteville. He married Miss Mary B. Wagner, of East Dubuque, and has one son, Clarence. (2) John A., born in 1879, died in September, 1882. (3) Michael C., born Nov. 7, 1881, was educated in the public schools. (4) Miss Theresa K., born May 24, 1884, was educated in the public schools and St. Clara's Academy, at Sinsinawa, and is at home. Mr. Brant has always been a Republican, was a member of the town board, constable, roadmaster, and a member of the school board. The Brants are all members of the Catholic Church. Mr. Brant's mining experiences have been very successful, and he has, in company with Conrad May, taken from one mine over a million and a half pounds of clear lead.

AUGUSTUS C. MUNGER, an enterprising and popular grocer of Janesville, Rock county, has acquired a handsome competence by his attention to business, his readiness to accommodate, and his strict adherence to sound and conservative business principles.

Mr. Munger was born in Palmyra, Wis., Nov. 19, 1849. His parents, Levi and Martha (Thayer) Munger, natives of New York and Massachusetts, respectively, had a family of five sons and two daughters, four of whom are now living: William Henry, of Palmyra; Augustus C., whose name introduces this article; and Charles W. and Della (Mrs. Andrew Rood), both of Palmyra. The father, who was a farmer, came to Wisconsin in the early 'forties, and located on a farm of 160 acres within three miles of Palmyra, which he speedily made productive. At the time of his death he owned a half section of land where he first settled in the State. He reared his children on this farm, which was their birthplace, and here he died in December, 1895, at the age of seventy-five, after a long and useful career. His widow still survives, and is a resident of Palmyra. She and her husband were members of the Methodist Church, which he served in an official capacity. He was a Republican, and at different times had filled several township offices. His father, Alvero Munger, was born in New York, and in the early days moved to Ohio, where he continued to live, dying there at the age of eighty-five. He had ten children. Eli Thayer, the father of Mortha Thayer, was a native of Massachusetts, but moved to Michigan in its early settlement. He was a farmer, and lived to be eighty years of age; his wife attained the great age of ninety-four. They had twelve children.

Augustus C. Munger lived on the home farm near Palmyra until he reached the age of eighteen years. He secured his education in the district school, and attended the Normal at Whitewater, Wis., until he was ready to teach. After following that profession for seven winters, he embarked in business as the proprietor and manager of a general store at Emerald Grove, where he remained for eight years. In 1883 he came to Janesville and opened a grocery store, to which he has given his close personal attention up to the present time. He has done well, and it would be difficult to find a better class of patrons than those he has secured.

Mr. Munger and Miss Jeanette Ketchpaw, a daughter of George and Lucinda (Parker) Ketchpaw, were married Nov. 2, 1875. She is the mother of four children: Percy L., Charles, Leon D. and Mabel. Percy L. is traveling salesman for L. A. Budlong & Co., Chicago, his territory being Wisconsin and southern Minnesota. Charles is in his father's store as clerk; he was married to Cecelia Gatelev Nov. 8, 1898, and has two sons. Mr. Munger is a Republican, and fraternally is a member of the M. W. A. He lives at No. 6 Clark street, where his home has been for the last ten years.

JUDGE JAMES S. WADDINGTON, well known in Lafayette county, came to Wiota in the fall of 1840. He was born in Chautauqua county, N. Y., Nov. 12, 1831, son of Aaron Waddington, who was a drover, and made the first trip with a drove of cattle from Illinois to Philadelphia about 1839. His mother was Eliza Saxton, a native of New York State, who died when James S. was but four years old.

The early death of the mother resulted in our subject being reared in the family of his great-uncle, John Z. Saxton, of Fredonia, N. Y. In 1840 they came to Wiota, then a village known on the frontier as "Hamilton's Diggings." After two years in Wiota they located in Belvidere, Ill. About 1848 Mr. Saxton moved to Argyle, Lafayette Co., Wis., where his wife, Mary, died, and he subsequently married a Mrs. La Follette, and then moved to a farm in Dane county, where his own death occurred. Though he had no children of his own, he reared and educated twelve, of whom his nephew, James S. Waddington, was the youngest.

After the location of his uncle in Argyle Mr. Waddington returned to Illinois, where he was employed as a clerk for one year. At the end of that time he returned to Wisconsin, and clerked for Asa Saxton, a merchant of Argyle, continuing in that position until, at the age of twenty, he began for himself, buying his employer's stock, and for a time had as his partner John Z. Saxton. He was successfully engaged in business for many years, and finally sold out to L. A. Rossing, who is still at the old stand. Judge Waddington then erected another building, and began banking as an individual. In 1895 his banking firm became J. S. Waddington & Son, and it is one of the most popular business institutions in that part of the county. His long and upright life here, where the people all know his sterling integrity and sound business principles, gave him a firm foundation for his banking enterprise.

Judge Waddington had a brother, L. B., younger than himself, who was reared on a farm in New York State, came West, and taught a term of school in Argyle, and for a time was in partnership with his brother, the Judge. He played an important part in public affairs, having held the offices of treasurer and sheriff; was later employed in the adjutant general's office, at Madison, and held that position when his death occurred, a number of years ago.

Judge Waddington married Miss Helena Lars, and by this marriage became the father of eight children, four sons and four daughters: L. B.; Lillian, wife of Walter Jenks, of Freeport; John S., who died at the age of forty; Mary, Mrs. Young, deceased; Frank A., his father's assistant; Alice; Elmer C., in the grocery business in Argyle; and Nellie, deceased. In politics Judge Waddington has always been a Republican, and was elected to the office of judge; he has studied law, and is a well-informed man, but has never been admitted to the Bar. Fraternally he is a thirty-second-degree Mason, belonging to the Blue Lodge at Argyle. Chapter at Darlington, Commandery at Mineral Point, and Consistory at Milwaukee. He is one of the highly-esteemed citizens of his community, and his sound judgment and wise counsel are often sought by his friends and neighbors, whose faith he has ever attempted to justify.

SAMUEL CLARK VAN GALDER (deceased) is well and favorably remembered by all who are familiar with the history of Rock county and La Prairie township. He came here at a very early day, helped to reclaim the wilderness, and did much to aid in the general development of Rock county. He was a kindly and open-hearted man, upright in his disposition, and honorable in his every action.

Mr. Van Galder was born in Ohio March 22, 1835, a son of Jacob and Rhoda (Wilson) Van Galder. They had eleven children, only one of whom is now living, Oscar, of Janesville. The father ran an ashery in Ohio, and was also a dry-goods merchant in Akron. In early life he learned the cooper's trade. In 1848 he came to Wisconsin, buying a half-section of land in La Prairie township, Rock county, which came into the hands of his children after his death, a few years later. Samuel C. Van Galder received eighty acres in Section 32 of that town, and added to this from time to time until he owned 400 acres at the time of his death. He had worked assiduously on his land, and it was a highly cultivated and productive farm long before his demise. On Aug. 1, 1858, he married Miss Eliza Heald, a daughter of Lewis and Harriet (Olney) Heald, and six sons and two daughters were born to this union: Alice E., Clark F., Louis A., Charles R., Lester G. and Grace E. (twins), and Ernest H. and Irving S. (twins). Alice E. has been twice widowed; by her first husband, Frank Graves, she had one son, Glen, and by her second, John Howard, she had three sons, Harley, Clark and John. Clark F. died aged twenty years and eleven months. Louis A. married Nellie Bostwick, and they have two living children, Edwin and Floyd; they live in O'Brien county, Iowa. Charles R. is a farmer on part of the old homestead farm; he married Miss Viola Crotzenburg, and is the father of two children, Merl and Dorothy. Lester G. died in March, 1899, aged twenty-six years and eleven months; he married Miss Bessie Little. Grace E. died when two years old.

S. C. Vin Gale

Ernest H. was six years and eleven months old when he died. Irving S. and his mother live together on the old home place; he is still unmarried, and carries on the farm.

Samuel C. Van Galder was reared in Ohio, and went with the family to Michigan, coming with his parents to Wisconsin in 1848 and locating in La Prairie township, where he lived until his death, in October, 1894, at the age of fifty-nine years. He was a man of more than ordinary strength of character, and had been called upon to fill several local positions by his fellow townsmen. He was supervisor for a number of years, and also a member of the school board. He was a Republican, and always took an active and intelligent interest in public affairs.

Mrs. Van Galder's parents, Lewis and Harriet (Olney) Heald, were both natives of the State of New York. They had four sons and four daughters, and five of their children are still living: Mrs. Eliza Van Galder; Margaret, wife of William Lewis, of Rockford, Ill.; David, of Beloit; George, of Shopiere, Rock county; and Joseph L. Mr. Heald was a farmer, and he came to Rock county, Wis., with his wife and three children in 1845. He located in La Prairie township, on eighty acres of government land, and devoted his remaining years to its cultivation and improvement, dying in La Prairie township in 1888, at the age of seventy-seven. His widow still survives, aged eighty-two years, her birth having occurred Oct. 9, 1818. Mr. Heald was justice of the peace for many years, and was also on the board of supervisors. His father, Thomas Heald, was a soldier in the war of 1812. Mrs. Heald's father, Thomas Olney, was born in New York, and was an early settler in western Pennsylvania, having his home in Fairview township, Erie county. Mrs. Heald is still strong and healthy, with a bright intellect and a fine memory for one of her years. She has seen the development of Rock county from a wilderness, and in conversation recalls many valuable and interesting memories of that early day.

ARIEL K. BAYLEY, long and favorably known in his section of Grant county in his connection with stock and dairy farming, was born in the town of Massena, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., in 1830, son of Ariel K. and Lucinda (Kezar) Bayley, both natives of the old Empire State. The father was born in 1797, and the mother a few years later.

Our subject's grandfather, Elijah Bayley, was born in 1771, married Amanda Fisher, who was born in 1777, at Rutland, Vt. Elijah Bayley settled at Massena, on the St. Lawrence river, in the town of Massena, St. Lawrence county, where he followed lumbering all his life. His son (1) Ariel K. was the eldest of ten children, of whom are mentioned: (2) Ezekiel Fisher was drowned in the St. Lawrence river when a young man. (3) Betsy, born in 1800, married a Mr. Sheak, and moved West to Davenport, Iowa, where she died, leaving four daughters. (4) Loren was killed on the St. Lawrence river. He left one daughter, who is living in Iowa. (5) Hosea was drowned while rafting on the St. Lawrence. (6) Olive, born in 1814, married A. Palmer, and came West to Platteville, Wis., where they both died years ago, leaving a family of five children. (7) Fisher, born in 1823, came to Platteville, and in company with a Mr. Marsh established the first weekly paper published in that place. In 1849 he sold out his paper and started to cross the Plains, but was taken sick with cholera, and died at St. Charles, Neb. (8) Elijah, born in 1811, came West with a team to Rock Island, Ill., when a young man, and on reaching that point traded his team for some real estate. As a school teacher he received twenty-five dollars a month in that city, and after a year in the school room he went to New Buffalo, Iowa, and was a merchant for a time. Selling out there, he traveled through Texas, selling goods from house to house, accumulating in this way a large quantity of Texas script, for which years after he received dollar for dollar at Washington, D. C. Soon after he moved to Platteville, Wis., then a mining camp, and started a general store in 1836. Mr. Bayley prospered in this last venture, and became very wealthy. He married Caroline Bevins, daughter of Dr. Bevins, of Platteville. She died before her husband, who was killed by a vicious bull on Christmas Day, 1879. Two daughters were born of this marriage, both deceased—Nora, who was the wife of David B. Jones, of Chicago, and Miss Annie, who died at Clifton Springs, N. Y., where she was stopping for the benefit of her health. Leslie, Elijah Bayley's only son, died when a young man.

Ariel K. Bayley, our subject's father, married, in New York, Miss Lucinda Kezar, who died in that State, leaving two children, Ariel K. (whose name introduces this article) and Charles. The latter came West with his uncle, Elijah Bayley, for whom he clerked a number of years in his store at Platteville, Wis. Charles Bayley married a young lady from LaCrosse, where he lived a number of years, and then went to California for the benefit of her health. While there she died, and Mr. Bayley returned to Wisconsin, marrying for his second wife Miss Emma North, of Oshkosh, Wis. Soon after their marriage they settled in Oakland, Cal., where he was killed by the kick of a horse in 1899. No children were born to the first marriage of Charles Bayley, but to his second union were born the following: Leslie, Emma, Annie, and Harvey. Leslie is a gunner on board the United States battleship "Oregon," and was in the harbor of Manila at the time of his father's death.

Ariel K. Bayley, the father of the Lima farmer and dairyman, married for his second wife Miss Cornelia Gear, and they came West to LaCrosse in 1858. Mrs. Bayley died in 1872, and Mr. Bayley made his home with his son at Lima until his death, in 1880. To this second marriage was born one daughter, Henrietta, a native of St. Lawrence county, N. Y., where she is now living; she married William Wright, and they have one daughter.

Ariel K. Bayley, whose career is the subject proper of this writing, was educated in the public schools of St. Lawrence county, N. Y., and while growing up worked with his father, who was a sailor on the lakes and the St. Lawrence river. When he was eighteen years old he shipped from Kingston to Oswego, and from there to Milwaukee and Chicago. The young man made his way through the country to Galena, and walked from there to Platteville, Wis., where his two uncles, Elijah and Fisher Bayley, and his grandmother were living. Here he found work, and plenty of it, first by the month on the farm of Henry Phillips, near Platteville, and then for some years lumbering and steamboating on the Mississippi. While engaged on the river he made his home at Davenport, Iowa.

Mr. Bayley and Miss Hester Burnside, of Davenport, Iowa, formerly of Ohio, were married in 1857, and located at Platteville, Wis., where they lived for three years while he was working for his uncle Elijah. In 1860 Mr.

Bayley purchased the William Buell farm, in the town of Lima, Grant county. The place had received some small improvements, and under Mr. Bayley's energetic management it has been brought into a fine condition, with ample buildings and modern equipments, including a large Pennsylvania barn. Here the home of Mr. Bayley and his family has been established and maintained for more than forty years, and here this estimable couple have reared a family of seven children: (1) Millie, born in October, 1860, married Lee H. Cobb. For some years they lived in Iowa, and in 1900 came back to Grant county to rent and occupy the old homestead of the Bayley family. They have one daughter, Gladys, who was born in Iowa. (2) Carrie, born in Grant county in 1862, married Henry Barrett, and lives in Pocahontas county, Iowa. They have a family of six children, Leslie, Pearl, Francis, Burt, and Ira and Inez (twins). (3) Ernest A., born in 1864, married Augusta Kirkpatrick, and lives on a rented farm in Clifton, Grant county. They are rearing a family of three children, Viola, Lee, and Ariel, the third of the family to bear that name. (4) Pearl, born in 1866, married Miss Mary Miller, of Lima, Grant county, and resides on his farm, which adjoins the old homestead. They have two children, Jennie and Frankie. (5) Luella, born in 1868, married William Munden, and has her home in Pocahontas county, Iowa. She is the mother of five children, Maud, Roy, Carrie, Ora, and Hester. (6) Agnes, born in 1870, is the wife of Lee Dennis, of Lima, Grant county. (7) John, born in 1875, is living at home, and is unmarried. Mr. Bayley's children were all educated in the public schools of Grant county. Agnes had a course at the Normal School at Platteville, and was a teacher in the Grant county schools for a number of years.

In politics Mr. Bayley has been a Republican, and he has been a member of the town board some years. In religion he and his wife were reared in the Congregational Church, with which they have always been associated. Mr. Bayley came to Wisconsin when Platteville was but a hamlet and the surrounding country a wilderness. A vast improvement has been wrought in the Northwest in his lifetime, and he has been in no unimportant sense a factor in the progress toward a higher civilization that has been achieved. He has been a prominent factor in the social and industrial life of the town of Lima for forty years. Although denied the benefit of a liberal education when young, he is a close student of affairs, and is a liberal and broad-minded man. A generous spirit and an upright character have made him hosts of friends.

RALPH LIDDLE, deceased. Among the quiet, refined and educated ladies of Platteville, Grant county, is the representative of a family well and favorably known through parts of Grant county as late as 1895, of which she is now the only surviving member.

The parents of Miss Elizabeth A. Liddle were Ralph and Hannah (Nicholson) Liddle, both natives of England, who came to the United States in 1848 and settled in Big Patch, Wis. There they remained until 1856, when removal was made to Ipswich Station, in Lafayette county. At that place Mr. Liddle purchased a large amount of land and erected comfortable and commodious buildings, living there until the time of his death, which took place in 1877, his wife passing away in 1881. A man of good education, he was called upon to serve in many of the local offices, and filled them most efficiently. In his politics he was a Republican, and he was an active member of the M. E. Church, his former connection, in England, having been with the Episcopal Church. Eight children were born to these parents, but only three grew to maturity. George died on the farm when he was developing into young manhood. John, born in Grant county in June, 1857, grew to manhood, and upon the death of his father undertook the management of the farm, where he remained until his death, July 4, 1895; this was a blow to his only sister, who was thus left quite alone in the world, all her relatives having passed from earth. We have often heard that "death loves a shining mark," and in this case it seemed true, for the death of John Liddle took out of life a noble character, whose influence for good still remains with those who knew his life. Faithful to duty, devoted to his sister, helpful in a thousand ways to those who needed assistance, his was a life that shed blessings wherever he was. From 1894 he had been connected with the Elk Grove M. E. Church, although he had long been an attendant on religious services, and, when it became apparent that his span of life was nearly ended, he was ready to say farewell, his only regret being that his beloved sister must be left alone. Early in life he had become a member of the Order of Odd Fellows, and in his life carried out the fraternal principles inculcated by its teachings.

Miss Liddle was born in the old homestead, received her early education in the district schools of Elk Grove, and later graduated from the Platteville Business College. In 1897 she moved her residence to Platteville, where she lives in partial retirement. Her father had accumulated sufficient means to enable her to choose her life, and she is well known to be liberal, kind and charitable.

JAMES CLINE, a part of whose farm is in the town of Lamont, but whose residence is just across the town line, in Fayette, being situated in Section 16, of that town, is the youngest member of a numerous and well-known family of Lafayette county. His father was George Cline, and his mother's maiden name was Margaret De Mars. John Cline, the grandfather of James, was a native of Germany.

George Cline was born Nov. 20, 1796, in Crawford county, Penn., where he was reared, and he bore arms in the American army during the war of 1812. After his death his widow drew a pension on account of his services in that conflict. George Cline died in Pennsylvania Nov. 8, 1844. He was the father of eleven children, of whom seven were living in January, 1901. Adam D. Cline, one of the sons, belonged to the 33d Wis. V. I., and died in the service; he fell mortally wounded at the siege of Vicksburg, in 1863, and died soon afterward. Fanny died in Darlington, Lafayette Co., Wis., Dec. 17, 1884. All the children who attained adult years became residents of Wisconsin between 1850 and 1852. The eldest of these is (1) John, of Darlington, whose biography will be found elsewhere. (2) Sarah Ann is the wife of Robert Henry, and lives in South Dakota. (3) Noble D. is a resident of Lamont. (4) Mary is the wife of Silas McManners, of Dumont, Iowa. (5) Jacob and (6) George are twins, the former a resident of Burlington, Kans., and the latter of the town of Fayette, Lafayette Co., Wis. (7) James is, as stated above, the youngest member of the family. The brothers John, George and Adam were the first of the family to come from Pennsylvania to Wisconsin, making the journey, then much more formidable than now, in 1850. The others, including the aged mother, came in 1852. Mrs. Cline made her home with her son James until her death, Dec. 7, 1884.

James Cline was born in Crawford county, Penn., Dec. 24, 1836, and was a sturdy lad of sixteen years when he first appeared in Lafayette county, Wis. Here he made his home, and his residence in the county has never been broken. In 1863 he established himself on his present farm, and for nearly forty years has been engaged in its tillage. His wife, formerly Miss Mary Mumford, is also a native of Crawford county, Penn., where she was born in 1858. Her parents, John and Mary (Hazen) Mumford, never came to Wisconsin. Her mother died many years ago, and her father, who wore the Union blue in a Pennsylvania regiment during the Civil war, is still living in Pennsylvania. Mrs. Cline is the only one of her father's family to come to Wisconsin. She is one of three children born to her father's first marriage, all now living: William Mumford, of Corning, Cal.; John Mumford, of Marion, Ind.; and Mrs. Cline. Her father was married a second time, and became by that union the father of three children, Frank, Harry and Luella.

Mr. and Mrs. Cline have two daughters and one son living: Mabel, Bessie and James Blaine. Their eldest child, Myrtle, died in infancy. Mr. Cline has a fine farm, and is regarded as an honorable and substantial man, a reputation his son bids fair to sustain.

D. L. COLSON, who now owns a fine farm in Watterstown township, Grant county, is one of the leading representatives of the agricultural interests of his section of Wisconsin. He was born in Maine in 1827, a son of Samuel and Clarissa (Littlefield) Colson, also natives of Maine.

Jonah Colson, the paternal grandfather of our subject, was born in Maine, where he lived and died. The maternal grandfather, Daniel Littlefield, also spent his life and died in the same State, having been born there. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Colson migrated, in 1856, to Oconto, Wis., and later to Grant county, where the father died, in Lancaster, aged eighty-six; the mother died at Mount Hope, aged seventy-one. Fourteen children were born to these parents: Alvin, who died in Maine; Adalade, now Mrs. Lowell, of Maine; Chrycinda, who lives at Black River Falls, Wis.; Stephen, who died in Maine; D. L., our subject; Melinda, Mrs. John Lowell, of Maine; Abigail, Mrs. Reed, who died in Maine; Elizabeth, Mrs. Bowden, who died in Maine; Granville, who came to Wisconsin, and died aged twenty-one; Sarah, who died in Oconto, aged seventeen; Samuel, deceased in infancy; and others that died in infancy unnamed.

Our subject was reared in his native State, and received a fair education in the public schools of Maine. Coming West when a young man, in 1853, to Oconto, Oconto county, he engaged in the lumber business. Later he removed to Black Earth, and then to Lancaster, Grant county, about 1867. His next change was to Mount Hope, where he opened up a fine farm, which he improved. He then located at Hickory Grove. Finally, in 1898, the farm known as the Wilson property, comprising 487 acres, in Watterstown township, came into the market. Mr. Colson purchased it, and has since made his home in the township, improving the already excellent buildings, adding to the stock and otherwise increasing the value of the property.

In 1868 Mr. Colson was married, in Mount Hope, to Miss Irene Hazen, born in Wisconsin, a daughter of Amos and Louisa Hazen, natives of Chautauqua county, N. Y., who came to Grant county early in the history of the State. Mrs. Hazen died at Mount Hope in 1897; her husband still survives, residing at Mount Hope. To Mr. and Mrs. Colson have been born: Lena (now Mrs. William Ousley, of South Dakota), Ida, George, Vernie, Warren, Asa and Adolph.

Mr. Colson is a Republican in politics, being an important factor in local affairs, and is a man of prominence, not only in the community in which he resides, but throughout Grant county. Prosperous, popular, highly esteemed, he certainly deserves highest mention among the well-to-do farmers of southwestern Wisconsin.

JOHN JONES, one of the most influential and prominent citizens of Patch Grove township, Grant county, dates his residence here from April 21, 1867.

Mr. Jones is a native of England, born in Northamptonshire June 15, 1836, a son of Thomas Jones, who spent his entire life in that country. In the fall of 1853 Mr. Jones left his native land, taking passage to New York. His start to America was quite an eventful one. The sailing-vessel "Kossuth," on which he took passage, was partially wrecked, and, becoming unmanageable, was towed into Queenstown by a passing vessel. Cholera also prevailed on board, and a number of deaths occurred. Mr. Jones left the vessel at Queenstown, before the officials came on board; had he remained he would have been placed in quarantine with the rest on the vessel. From Queenstown he returned home, having forfeited his passage money. In August, 1854, he entered the service of the East India Company, went to Bombay on the clipper "York," thence to Hyderabad, Scinde, where he was stationed for one and a half years, and whence he was removed to Kurrachee, Scinde, being appointed station clerk there. He remained there until the mutiny broke out, when he volunteered to go to Kolapur, S. M. C., where he was also appointed station clerk, and held that office until the English Government annulled the company's charter. Being unwilling to serve the English Government, he was sent to Belgaum to join his regiment, the 2d Bombay European Regiment of Light Infantry, and thence marched with a detachment to Goa, waiting until the ship "Herefordshire" came into the harbor (en route from Bombay to London) and took them on board. Mr. Jones entered the service for twelve years, but in 1859 England gained full control of the company, and different arrangements were made. While in India he learned the Hindoostanee language, and witnessed all the horrors which resulted from the famous mutiny, such scenes as blowing sepoy's from the mouths of guns, etc., etc. Mr. Jones has in his possession a medal conferred upon him by the English Government for his services in India, being entitled to the same by virtue of his service with the East India Company, though the government took control of the company before the expiration of his term.

Mr. Jones arrived in England Jan. 1, 1860, and entered the employ of the London & Northwestern Railroad Co., with which he remained until his emigration to the United States, in 1867. On his arrival in Grant county, Wis., he located at Bradtville, where he made his home for a number of years, and then moved to his present residence, in Patch Grove. For several years he devoted his energies to the occupation of carpentering, but for some time has been engaged in the pension business. He is a wide-awake, energetic business man, and has met with well-merited success in his undertakings.

In England Mr. Jones was married, July 14, 1860, to Sarah Dale, and on his removal to America brought with him his wife and three children, namely: Mary Elizabeth, Charlotte Jane, and Hannah (since dead). One daughter and four sons, all living, were born in this country. Mr. Jones is a gentleman of culture, who is well informed on the leading questions and issues of the day, and is highly esteemed as a worthy and progressive citizen of his adopted county.

GEORGE A. MARSHALL, of Darlington, who has for many years been a prominent member of the legal fraternity of Lafayette county, is a native of the "Old Granite State," and was born at Northumberland, Coos county, Feb. 17, 1836.

The Marshall family is an old and honored one in the annals of New England. The original ancestor came from England in the seventeenth century. The paternal grandfather of our subject was an officer in the Continental army in the Revolutionary war. Among his ancestors on his father's side was Gen. Israel Putnam, and on his mother's, Dr. Benjamin Franklin.

In 1852 the parents of Mr. Marshall sold their farm of 500 acres in New Hampshire and removed to Saint Johnsbury, Vt., and there passed the last years of their lives. They reared a family of nine children, four sons and five daughters.

Mr. Marshall was prepared for college in the academy at Johnson, entered the University of Vermont in 1857, and was graduated in 1861, with a standing of fourth in the largest class which the University had up to that time graduated. He came West the same summer, and studied law at Sheboygan, Wis., where he was admitted to the Bar June 9, 1862. After practicing five years in Galena, Ill., he removed to Darlington, which has since been his home. In politics he has always been a Republican, though never a politician; he was never a candidate for a political office. He has filled the positions of district attorney, county surveyor, and superintendent of schools. Socially our subject is connected with several civic societies. In 1863 he joined the Odd Fellows, and has often been a delegate to the Grand Lodge. He is also a Freemason, and was a charter member of the Darlington lodge of the Knights of Pythias. Mr. Marshall possesses high literary attainments, and has contributed to various papers and magazines articles, which have received special attention on account of their literary merit.

Mrs. Miriam H. Marshall, wife of our subject, was a daughter of Albert Gallatin Cutler, of Highgate, Vt., and a descendant of James Cutler, who came from England in 1634 and settled at Watertown, Mass. Her grandfather, Hodges Cutler, was a soldier in the war for independence, and lived to the age of one hundred years. Both grandfather and father were physicians; a brother, Hiram C. Cutler, having been graduated in medicine at Dartmouth College, came to Wisconsin in 1856, and became one of the most eminent physicians in the State. He died at Mineral Point in 1892. Few men are more sincerely mourned than Dr. Cutler; benevolence and unselfishness were his most prominent characteristics. Mrs. Marshall is a lady of culture and refinement. She was educated at the Ladies' Seminary, of Burlington, Vt., then one of the leading institutions of the kind in the East.

The family of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall includes but two children: Mary Florence and Francis Cutler. The former is a graduate of the Darlington high school, has taken several degrees in the Chautauqua University course, has traveled extensively, is a fine musician, has studied law and assisted her father in his business, and was the first woman to be appointed a notary public in Wisconsin.

Francis Cutler Marshall was graduated from the high school of Darlington, and in 1886 won an appointment to West Point in a competitive examination. He was graduated with honor in 1890, being first captain in the cadet battalion, and was commissioned as second lieutenant in the Eighth Regiment, U. S. Cavalry. He was promoted to the rank of first lieutenant Jan. 5, 1897, in the Sixth Cavalry, saw service in the South in the war with Spain, went with that regiment to China in 1900, and took active part in the expedition for the relief of the legations in Peking. For gallant conduct in action near Tien Tsin, China, Aug. 19, 1900, he was recommended for promotion by Gen. Chaffee; and on Feb. 2, 1901, he was promoted to a captaincy, and assigned to the Fifteenth U. S. Cavalry. On Sept. 5, 1894, Lieut. Marshall was married to Miss Sophia Morton Page, a daughter of Gen. John H. Page.

HON. H. D. YORK, an old and prominent lawyer of Grant county, who has his home in Hazel Green, is widely known as a thoroughly honorable and upright man. Mr. York was born in Chenango, N. Y., March 25, 1823, a son of Jeremiah and Catherine (Pendleton) York, both natives of North Stonington, Conn., the father born in 1802, and the mother the year following. Jeremiah York was the son of Capt. Jeremiah York, a gallant officer of the war of 1812, who lived and died in Connecticut. James York, the remote ancestor, and the founder of the family on these shores, was born in England in 1608.

Jeremiah York, the father of H. D., settled in Chenango county, N. Y., after his marriage, following farming until his death, in April, 1873. Mrs. York died in 1836, leaving three children: (1) Hiram, born April 5, 1821, married and settled in Allegany county, N. Y., where he followed lumbering for many years. During the latter part of his business life he was engaged in banking at Wellsville, where he died. He first married Sarah Johnston, who left two children—Catharine, wife of Clarence L. Parker, of Ithaca, N. Y.; and Marv, Mrs. E. F. Joyce, of St. Augustine, Fla. Mr. York married again, Harriet Palmer becoming his wife. She died in 1887, leaving three children—Sarah, now the wife of D. O. Batterson, present bank inspector of the State of New York; Fannie, wife of John L. Langdon, who resides on the Hudson; and Edward, an architect in New York City. (2) H. D. is the subject proper of these lines. (3) Catherine, the only sister of our subject, was born in Oxford, N. Y., in 1826, and is the wife of Sanford P. Stillman, of Rhode Island, who is living a retired life. They have three children, Dwight R., Fred A., and Howard Y. Howard lives in New York, Dwight and Fred in Rhode Island.

Hon. H. D. York was educated in the district schools and at the old academy in Oxford, N. Y., and grew to manhood on his father's farm. When a young man he was a teacher two years in his native State, and two years in Pennsylvania. On the first day of October, 1843, Mr. York arrived in Grant county, Wis., coming via Buffalo to Milwaukee, and from there to Platteville and Hazel Green. Here he began life as a lead miner, and also taught school. In 1845 he was made manager for the extensive farming and mining operations of Mrs. Abigail Curtis, and held this responsible trust for several years. Mr. York and Miss Mary E. Tyler were married in 1854. Mrs. York was born in Summit county, Ohio, daughter of Augustus and Elizabeth (Hanchett) Tyler, both of whom were natives of New York. In 1846 they came West, and settled in Hazel Green, where the father was a hotel-keeper and a farmer for the remainder of his life. During his last years he owned and conducted a hotel in Platteville. Mr. Tyler died in 1875; his aged wife, after spending fifteen years in Oregon and California, returned to Grant county in 1900, and is now living with Mrs. York. Mr. and Mrs. Tyler had nine children, of whom we have record of the following: (1) Mary, the wife of Mr. York, was the eldest in the family. Born in Ohio in 1834, she obtained her education largely in the public schools of Grant county, where for several terms she was a teacher. (2) Flora A. is the wife of C. H. Nye, of Lancaster, present superintendent of schools for Grant county. (3) Kate, born in Michigan, is now the wife of J. L. Nye, a photographer of Platteville. (4) George, born in Hazel Green, is now a resident of Salt Lake City. (5) Martha is now Mrs. Job Garretson, of California.

After his marriage Mr. York went into the drug business in Hazel Green, continuing therein for some eighteen years. During that time he purchased a farm one mile north of Hazel Green, where he resided eight years. In 1877, disposing of his interests in the drug store and farm, he moved back into the village, to a very pleasant and convenient home which he had occupied some twenty years before. Mr. York still retains the small farm that he purchased a half century ago, and while engaged in the law practice finds time to look after its needs. Mr. York took up the practice of law quite late in life, but found, from personal association and acquaintance with his professional brethren, warm friends with helping hands ready to assist along uncertain lines till the road became more familiar.

To Mr. and Mrs. York have been born one son and one daughter: (1) Dwight S., born in Hazel Green, in November, 1855, was a student in the State Normal at Platteville. In 1888 he married Mrs. Edith (Fisher) Mills, a native of New York, reared in Lancaster, Wis., and they reside in Milwaukee, where he is engaged in business. They have two children in their family, Mira E. and Harry H. (2) Ruth A., born in 1861, is a graduate of the State Normal at Platteville, and for a number of years has been a very successful teacher in the public schools of Evanston, Ill. Both Mr. and Mrs. York have ancestral lines that run back to the American Revolution and the war of 1812, and have reason to be proud of their forefathers.

Mr. York was elected to the General Assembly in 1850, and in 1853, and again in 1858, serving three terms with honor and distinction. He has from time to time been elected to local offices in the town of Hazel Green. As town superintendent of schools of Hazel Green he laid out, under statutory requirement, the first school districts of his town.

THOMAS NORTH. Among the pioneers of Wisconsin, who during the 'forties peopled the forests of this then inhospitable region, were many who by their migration laid the foundation for future success. The hardships undergone were severe, the rewards commensurate to those possessing patience, fortitude and strength.

The North family of Edgerton, Rock county, was founded in Wisconsin in 1847. In that year Thomas North, Sr., the father of our subject, was an English farmer, who was approaching the half century mark in years, without having attained that financial success which brings comfort and ease. A tide of English emigration had set in toward the distant wilderness of America, and Thomas North joined it. He was the son of William North, a farmer, and had married Ellen Hopkins, who died in England about 1832, leaving three children, two of whom, Thomas, our subject, and William, of Cottage Grove, Wis., are living. For his second wife the father married Jane Biggin, by whom there were no children. After his migration to America, in 1847, Mr. North settled in Albion township, Dane Co., Wis., where with his two sons, Thomas and William, he bought eighty acres of land. Their industry won, and the holdings grew, first by the purchase of 126 acres, and later by the addition of another tract, of 176 acres. Here the father and two sons farmed in common for some years, then divided the property. The father in religious faith was a devout Episcopal Methodist, and for a number of years was a local preacher. In politics he was a Republican, and in Albion township he was assessor for several years. He was a highly respected citizen, and died in 1868, aged nearly seventy-one years.

Thomas North, our subject, was born in Derbyshire, England, Oct. 28, 1828, was reared a farmer's boy, and received a common-school education. Coming to America with his father in 1847, he shared generously in the toil essential to success in the new land, and when a division of the property was made came into possession of a tract of 160 acres in Albion township, Dane county, and Sumner township, Jefferson county. This he farmed, and by purchase subsequently increased to a well-tilled and valuable farm of 255 acres. Mr. North lived in Albion township until 1864, then removed to Sumner township, Jefferson county, where he resided until 1894. In that year he retired from active farming, erecting the handsome home in Edgerton which he now occupies.

Mr. North married July 4, 1852. Miss Sarah Brailsford, daughter of Joseph and Mary (Biggin) Brailsford. Mrs. North came to America with her parents in 1845, when a girl of ten years. Her father was an Englishman, but prior to his emigration to America had spent eleven years on the estate of Baron Rothschild, in France, and there three of his children were born, Mary, Hannah and Sarah, the last named on Oct. 23, 1834. After his emigration to America, in 1845, Joseph Brailsford located in Albion township, Dane county. Here his wife died in 1856, aged fifty-two years, and for his second wife he married Miss Margaret Pepper. Later he removed to Tyn-dall, S. Dak., where he lived, a farmer, to the age of about eighty-two years. Of his seven children by the first marriage, two, Mary and Ann, survive. The four children by the second marriage are all living: John, James, George and Henry.

To Thomas and Sarah (Brailsford) North were born ten children, five sons and five daughters, as follows: (1) George Henry died in infancy. (2) Mary Jane married Samuel Wileman, and died in 1894, leaving six children, Emily Jane and Thomas, Sarah, Charles, Arthur, and Edith. (3) Sarah Ellen died aged four months. (4) Thomas W., a Methodist Episcopal minister, now stationed at Milton, Wis., married Josie Wales, and they have four children, Beulah, Hazel, Vincent and Laura. (5) Charles Edwin, who studied medicine, died in Chicago, Ill., aged twenty-four years. (6) Sarah Ann, wife of James Wileman, of Edgerton, has two children, Lilly and Louie. (7) David Willard, a resident of Edgerton, married Sarah Elizabeth Nelson, and has three children, Theodora, Jessica and Herschel. (8) Ellen Melissa married Rev. Lucius Augustus Whitcomb, a Free Methodist minister, who was principal of the Evansville Seminary for several years, and now resides in Evanston, Ill.; they have five children, Ethel, Grace, Pearl, Lawrence and Willard. (9) Emily Elizabeth married Archibald Templeton, and is living at Madison, Wis.; they have one child, Hugh Longville. (10) Fred Arthur married Lilly McCarthy, and has two children, Charles and Thomas Wilford; they live at the home farm in Sumner township.

Mr. North is a prominent member of the Albion Prairie M. E. Church, in which he is class-leader, trustee and Sunday-school teacher. His wife, who passed away Oct. 14, 1900, also united with that church; her remains rest in Albion Prairie cemetery. Politically Mr. North is a Prohibitionist. For a year he served as supervisor of Sumner township, but has not aspired to office. He is a conscientious Christian, a patriotic citizen, a sympathetic friend and neighbor, and the many most estimable traits of himself and family have given them the affection and high regard of a wide acquaintanceship.

PETER J. MOUAT is editor and publisher of the Janesville Recorder, which paper he has controlled for more than a decade, bringing to its management sound practical business sense. Both his parents, Jeremiah Mouat and Robina (Halcrow), were natives of the Shetland island, Mainland, settling in America in 1855. The father was for many years a merchant in his native land, also following the sea as a fisherman, with its always uncertain results and sometimes great hazards. Both he and his wife were staunch Presbyterians, as well becomes those of Scottish birth and ancestry. They were the parents of ten children, four sons and six daughters, two of whom are deceased. Those yet living are Laurence; Peter J.; Thomas J.; John J.; Robina, who married Malcolm Harper, of Magnolia township, Rock county; Margaret C. and Elizabeth A., who are unmarried and live in Chicago; and Jessie H., a teacher in the schools of Minneapolis. On coming to America Jeremiah Mouat settled on a farm in Rock county, Wis., afterward residing in the city of Janesville until his death, in 1887, at the age of seventy-nine years. His widow still survives, at the age of eighty-five, her home being in Chicago.

Peter J. Marshall

Peter J. Mouat was born in the Shetland home June 15, 1854, being scarcely a year old when his parents crossed the ocean. The first sixteen years of his life were passed upon the farm, and he obtained a good fundamental English education in the schools of Rock county and Janesville graded schools. It was not until the winter of 1874-75 that he really began to battle with the vicissitudes of life, beginning his business career as a shipping clerk in the wholesale grocery and tea house of Roe Brothers, in Chicago. Not finding his position and surroundings wholly to his liking, he returned to Janesville in the spring of 1875, was clerk and bookkeeper for five years, and for the next five years was manager of the Janesville Vinegar and Pickling Works. During this period he bought the Publishers Commercial Union, a mercantile agency for reporting the commercial standing of newspaper advertisers. The venture was original and new, proved successful, and in 1886 Mr. Mouat disposed of it to a Chicago stock company, in which he held an official position for a year, being himself located at Chicago. In the spring of 1888, however, he once more found his way to Janesville, and for twelve months held the position of assistant postmaster. Not long after resigning this office he became connected with the Recorder Printing Co., as manager, and subsequently became owner of a majority of the company's stock. At present he is both publisher and editor, and under his judicious business management the plant has become a valuable one. He is a Democrat in politics, and his paper ably and strenuously supports Democratic doctrines and policies. In the councils of his party his voice is potent and his influence pronounced. For two years he was a member of its State central committee, while he has long held the position of chairman of the Democratic city committee of Janesville. Personally he has never sought office, yet his well-known interest in educational matters, joined to his conceded well-recognized qualifications for the position, has led to his filling a seat on the board of education for many years, serving as president of that body one year. He has also filled the office of vice-president of the Janesville Business Men's Association, and is at present vice-president of the Rock County Loan, Building & Savings Association, and one of the directors. Mr. Mouat is a genial gentleman, popular with all. He is a member of the Janesville Country Club, the Sinissippi Golf Club, and the Caledonian Society; also belongs to Oriental Lodge, No. 22, K. of P.; the Press Club of Chicago, and the Wisconsin Press Association.

On Dec. 24, 1879, Mr. Mouat married Miss Charlotte E. Wilkie, whose native State is New Jersey. Their union has been blessed with three daughters, Lillian Sturges, Margaret Frances and Charlotte Gertrude. Mrs. Mouat is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

WILLIAM D. ROBERTS, deceased. Although no longer of earth, William D. Roberts is not forgotten. His life of Christian charity and continued generosity and kindness cast an influence over the community in which he passed many busy years, and his memory is affectionately cherished. Although no loud praises have been sung, in public places, many homes have been made happier, many discouraged and drooping fellow countrymen have been cheered and comforted by the unostentatious piety of this good man.

William D. Roberts was born in North Wales in 1807, and grew to manhood in his native region, not coming to America until 1832, after which he was almost immediately employed in the coal mines near Pottsville, Penn. The next year he married Jane, the estimable daughter of William H. and Anna Jones, both of whom were born in Wales, and had come to the United States in 1830. Some years later they removed to Iowa county, Wis., where he purchased land and made his permanent home, our subject following a few years after. When Mr. Roberts and his wife began their farming life in Wisconsin, they faced the same difficulties which very many of their neighbors found awaiting them. toil, deprivation and limited resources, but both were ambitious, and by the exercise of economy and industry overcame all disadvantages, so that at the time of his death, in 1890, our subject was able to leave his bereaved widow every comfort of life. His estate comprised 160 acres in Belmont township, Lafayette county, which he had placed under cultivation and had well stocked, and sixty acres in Iowa county.

The Roberts family was not a large one, and has now no representative. Mrs. Roberts has three surviving sisters, Mrs. John Thomas and Mrs. Owen Hughes, both of Lafayette county, Wis., and Mrs. Ann Edwards, of Chicago. So esteemed is this estimable lady in the neighborhood that her friends make up for any want of kindred.

Mr. Roberts during life was attached to the Republican party, and was active in all measures looking to good local government. Both he and his wife were known for their charities, his generosity making possible the building of two churches in Iowa county. A Calvinist in belief, he was still tolerant of the opinions of others, being so just a man in the opinion of his neighbors that he was very often called upon to settle disputed points among the citizens in his community.

JAMES MULROONEY, who is numbered among the early settlers of Wisconsin, is a native of the Emerald Isle, having been born in 1818, about twenty-five miles from Dublin, a son of William and Honora Mulrooney, who never came to America, but lived and died in Ireland. In this family there were five sons—John, James, William, Thomas and Patrick—and one daughter.

After attaining to years of manhood James Mulrooney married Mary McGary, in 1847, and a few days thereafter the young couple embarked from Ireland for America, on a sailing-vessel, landing after a long and stormy passage at Quebec; they were on the water seven weeks and three days. After a few weeks spent in Quebec Mr. and Mrs. Mulrooney started for Whitehall, N. Y. Their means being almost exhausted, Mr. Mulrooney worked at whatever he could find until he obtained employment on the Whitehall & Saratoga Railroad, for which he worked many years. In a few years he was sent by the company to Castleton, Vt., which was the eastern terminal town of the road, and there he remained three years, making his term of service with this road eight years altogether. Having been a faithful employe, the railroad company would have gladly retained him for a longer period, but Mr. Mulrooney had saved some money, and wished to invest it in Western land; therefore he and his wife started for Wisconsin. By hard work they managed to reach Grant county with one thousand dollars in gold (which Mr. Mulrooney had concealed in a belt around his body) and ten dollars in bills of the kind then known as "wild cat" money. Locating in Mount Hope township, Mr. Mulrooney invested in land, first purchasing 160 acres, to which he added, from time to time, until he became one of the large land owners of Mount Hope township. Clearing of land, a half century ago, required much hard and persistent work, for farmers of that day possessed none of the modern appliances. The only way to remove trees was to dig about the roots until they were exposed: then cut them off with an axe, hitch oxen to the branches of the tree, and pull the roots out of the ground. James Mulrooney brought two yoke of cattle with him, as did a neighbor, and by working together these two men were able to accomplish more than by clearing their land alone. Many interesting stories of the hardships of those early days, and the difficulties labored under, are told by Mr. Mulrooney. At one time he was sadly in need of a plow, and journeyed to Lancaster to purchase one, but upon arrival discovered it was impossible to get what he wanted, and he continued to Platteville, where a man named Potter dealt in plows. However, Mr. Potter had so many orders on hand that he could not let our subject have one at once, but told him if he would stay until Saturday he would furnish him with a sixteen-inch plow. As an extra inducement, Mr. Potter offered the hospitality of his own home to Mr. Mulrooney, which was accepted, and, it being Monday, the latter settled down to enjoy his stay in town. On Thursday there was a circus in town, which attracted the attention of many, and resulted in benefit to Mr. Mulrooney. Mr. Potter had by this time obtained an eighteen-inch plow, which had been promised to a man with the condition that he call for it by twelve o'clock. Being attracted by that circus, however, the man failed to keep his appointment, and Mr.

Mulrooney secured the plow, which he took, although it was a little heavier than he had wished. By working together, turn about, Mr. Mulrooney and his neighbor succeeded in clearing about twenty acres on each farm, and then our subject continued the work on his own farm until it was one of the best cultivated in that locality.

After working hard and faithfully to assist her husband in his struggle for success, Mrs. Mulrooney died, in March, 1861, mourned by her husband and children. On April 12, 1899, Mr. Mulrooney was again called upon to suffer the loss of a wife, the partner of his second marriage, whose maiden name was Bridget Flaherty, passing away on that date. She was a most excellent woman, and her death is deeply felt, especially by her husband, who greatly misses her loving companionship. Nine children were born to Mr. Mulrooney by his first marriage, and three by the second, but the majority of them have passed away. The surviving children are: Elizabeth, wife of James Cull; and Miss Mary, his youngest daughter, who with his little adopted son, John, cares for their father at his home in Fennimore.

Although he has now passed his four-score milestone, Mr. Mulrooney is still hale and hearty, enjoying the esteem of all who know him, and reaping the fruits of his years of toil, and he and all his family are consistent members of the Catholic Church.

ANDREW EASTMAN, a retired pioneer and a hero of the Black Hawk war, who has his residence in Lancaster, Grant county, was born in Ohio March 10, 1818, a son of Moses and Elizabeth (Courtwright) Eastman, the former of whom was a native of the State of New York, and the latter of New Jersey.

In June, 1821, Moses Eastman migrated with his family from Ohio to Indiana, and two or three years later removed to Illinois. In 1827 he came to Grant county, Wis., spent one winter at a place then called Hardscrabble, and the following spring crossed the county line into Lafayette county, and settled on land purchased from the government. This land he converted into a valuable farm, which became the permanent homestead of the family, and on which he spent the remainder of his life, dying in 1863, at the age of seventy-six years. His widow survived a number of years, and died at the age of eighty-four. They were the parents of six sons and eight daughters, several of whom died young.

Andrew Eastman was about nine years of age when brought to Wisconsin by his parents, and he was reared among the wild scenes of frontier life. Although but fourteen years old at the breaking out of the Black Hawk war he volunteered as a soldier, was equipped with a musket, and now draws a pension for his services, being perhaps the youngest ex-soldier on Uncle Sam's pension roll. He still remembers the condition in which Grant county existed nearly three-quarters of a century ago, when, attracted by the rich mines of the southern part, and at Mineral Point and Galena, Ill., the early pioneers had begun settlement, for the country, even in close proximity to the mines, was but sparsely inhabited. Many of these pioneers would engage in mining for a short time, and would then enter the cheap government lands and devote their time and energy to the clearing off of the timber, and to carving out homes for themselves from the wilderness. Most of these honest, robust and courageous settlers have passed away, and their places are now occupied by descendants who enjoy all the luxuries of modern times.

On Jan. 15, 1840, Mr. Eastman married Miss Louisa Maria Goodrich, who still lives to share with him the competency their mutual labor has won. She was born in Delaware county, N. Y., Sept. 3, 1825, a daughter of Hiram and Elmira (Burdick) Goodrich, who in 1829 migrated from New York to Wayne county, Penn., and thence to Indiana. There the family suffered greatly from sickness. Mrs. Eastman's grandfather Burdick had died in New York, and the grandmother accompanied her daughter Elmira and her son-in-law Hiram to Pennsylvania and Indiana, dying in the latter State, as also did a brother of Mrs. Eastman. Owing to the sickness prevailing in the Hoosier State Mr. Goodrich moved his family to Linn county, Iowa, and it was there Andrew Eastman found and married the daughter, Louisa Maria, since which time this couple have lived in Lafayette and Grant counties—a period of over sixty years. Mr. and Mrs. Goodrich also came to Wisconsin shortly after the marriage of their daughter, locating in Lafayette county, where Mrs. Goodrich passed away. Mr. Goodrich later returned to New York State, there remarried, and went to California, but died on the day of his arrival in the Golden State.

The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Eastman has been blessed with eleven children, all of whom attained mature years excepting the eldest, a daughter who died when three years old; Lucius Albert, the eldest son, was killed in the second battle of Bull Run, in 1862; another son, Lemuel Davidson, also a soldier in the Union army, died in hospital in Springfield, Mo., the same year; the other eight still survive, and are named as follows: Andrew Jackson, Eva D. (Mrs. Dean), Francis Marion, Oliver Campbell, Henry Ellsworth, Louisa Elizabeth (Mrs. Beverly Pritchard), Esther Ann (Mrs. George Patton), and Luella May (Mrs. John Reukauf).

Mr. and Mrs. Eastman have for thirty years been members of the Methodist Church, and lived strictly up to its teachings. The duty that devolved upon them in rearing their large family has been faithfully performed, as well as every duty to society. They are still enjoying a fair degree of health, and are passing their declining days in comfort at their home in Lancaster, venerated and beloved by all who know them.

GUSTAVUS STONE, a retired manufacturer of Beloit, Rock Co., Wis., has been a resident of that city for more than fifty years, and in that long period of time has been closely identified with the industrial growth of the city to a marked degree. He is a man of much character and unusual ability, and in every enterprise to which he has set his hand he has manifested all the marks of a genuine man. He occupies a pleasant home at No. 205 West D street.

Mr. Stone was born in the town of Canton, Norfolk Co., Mass., Aug. 27, 1821, a son of Jonathan and Eliza (Upham) Stone, both natives of Massachusetts. They had two sons and two daughters, and three of their children are now living: Eleanor, wife of Charles H. Parker, of Beloit; Gustavus; and Horace, of St. Louis. Jonathan Stone, who was a physician, came to Belvidere, Ill., in 1839, practiced his profession for some years, and then became absorbed in business enterprises of various kinds. He engaged in farming, ran a sawmill, operated a stone quarry and lime kiln, all on his own premises, and died there in 1862, at the age of seventy-seven.

His first wife, the mother of Gustavus Stone, died at an early age. Both she and her husband were Unitarians. Many years afterward Dr. Stone was married to Ann P. Blackman, and they had three children, all of whom are now dead. The widow is still living. He was a Whig and became a Republican on the formation of the party. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. He was such a rigid temperance man that he cut down the apple trees in his orchard that the fruit might not be made into cider. Daniel Stone, his father, was a native of Framingham, Mass., of English descent, and was also a physician. He lived to a good old age. His wife died when eighty-eight years old. They were the parents of eleven children. Amos Upham, the father of Eliza Upham, was a native of Massachusetts, of English descent, and is remembered as a man of more than usual character and standing. He was a tavern-keeper, and lived to old age.

Gustavus Stone was reared in Massachusetts until he was about eighteen years old. He attended the public school, and a private school, and after his removal to the West, in 1839, was a student in an academy at Belvidere, Ill. Mr. Stone was a teacher of a private school in Kentucky, not far from Louisville, for a year, and then he returned to Belvidere, and lived on his father's farm some ten years. He made his first appearance in Beloit on the last day of the year 1849, and for some twelve months worked by the day in the machine shop of Barker & Love. At the expiration of this period of time Mr. Stone and his brother-in-law, C. H. Parker, formed a partnership for the purpose of manufacturing field hoes. They leased the Barker & Love factory, on the east side of the race, and constructed all the machinery their undertaking required, such as trip-hammers, press, dies, forms, furnaces, grindstone arbors, forges, emery wheels, etc., although their entire capital did not exceed $100 at that time. They did a good business, and were on the highway to prosperity, and in 1854 began the manufacture of grain sickles and mowing-machine knives, obtaining large contracts for these goods from reaping and mowing machine manufacturers in various States, East and West. In this same year Messrs. Love & Orton manufactured fifty reapers and sent out men to sell them, but with poor success. Then each member of the company went out, and returned very much discouraged at the gloomy outlook, with the harvest near at hand. Mr. Orton came to Mr. Stone with tears in his eyes and said: "Stone, I am a ruined man if you can't save me; for I have everything in the world I own invested in these reapers; and I believe you are the man to help us out." Mr. Stone agreed to make the effort, and did sell nearly their entire stock before the commencement of the harvest. With this stimulus and experience, Mr. Stone decided that Parker & Stone had better engage in the manufacture of reaping machines; and so told Mr. Parker. And his reply was, "I am afraid you will ruin us for life." But the attempt was made, and in the month of April Mr. Stone contracted with different mechanics for doing the work, bought stock on credit to be paid for on a specified time, and all arrangements were made for the completion of the reapers. Mr. Stone went out among the farmers, and sold nearly all of them for cash, payable on delivery. This enabled them to settle their indebtedness before maturity, the largest amount being to Fisher, Bundy & Cheeny; and when the money was presented Mr. Fisher made this remark: "Stone, what does all this mean? We were never treated so before; the debt is not due." All of their other indebtedness was settled in a similar manner, which gained for Parker & Stone the utmost confidence of the public for their integrity, and gave them unbounded credit.

Some time after this departure their factory burned, bringing a severe loss upon the progressive firm. They rebuilt, however, on a larger scale, a structure now owned by the Besley Co., and the building north of the old iron works, and part of the grounds occupied by the Beloit Lumber Co., are part of the site of their extensive buildings. In the latter part of 1860 the foundry was destroyed by fire, with a large loss of valuable patterns and machinery. Parker & Stone, nothing daunted by this heavy loss, rebuilt, and continued business until 1878, when they suspended operations, and were succeeded by L. H. Parker and Fred Dennett, who about two years later moved the plant to Milwaukee. Through the efforts of Parker & Stone was given to the farming community the twine binder, one of the greatest labor-saving machines the world has ever known, and it is in the history and development of the Appleby Twine Binder that Mr. Stone's inventive genius is most conspicuously seen. The Marsh Harvester had supplanted the self-raking reaper, and was itself displaced by the wire binder, to which many serious objections were raised by farmers, threshers and millers. These objections were entirely overcome by the inventors and perfecters of the twine binders, which took the place of the wire binder. About 1872 John F. Appleby called at the office of Parker & Stone, and submitted a model for binding grain with twine. A contract was speedily entered into, whereby Parker & Stone were to furnish capital, etc., for the perfecting of Mr. Appleby's idea, a feature of which had to be abandoned, and Mr. Stone's idea substituted therefor. With this change and various experiments, covering a period of about six years, the twine binder became, in 1878, a success, and from Parker & Stone the McCormick, Deering and other harvesting machine companies purchased the shop right. But to Mr. Stone alone is due the credit for the "stick-to-itiveness" which perfected and left to the farming community the greatest labor-saving machine of the country—the twine binder. At the time Parker & Stone entered into the agreement to develop the twine binder the business of manufacturing reapers was on the wane all over the country, they being superseded by wire binders and other machinery, which required less manual labor to harvest the grain, and did the work more rapidly, and with greater economy—a combination of causes that cut off the demand for reapers. The Beloit Reaper, about this time at the height of its greatest success, was one of the most popular machines in the Northwestern States, having many excellent features, unobtainable in other reapers, which were the inventions of Mr. Stone, and for which he obtained letters patent.

In 1853 Mr. Stone married Miss Sarah A. Bartlett, daughter of Tristram and Hannah (Pulsifer) Bartlett, of Newburyport, Mass. Mr. and Mrs. Stone are the parents of six children, Ella Frances, Waldo B., Emma H., Edgar H., Clarence M. and Alonzo. The last named died at the age of fourteen months. Ella Frances married Harry L. Sherman, of Beloit, and has three children, Horace H., Elsie, and Lytle. Waldo B. married Miss Minnie Bartlett, and is an attorney in Chicago.

Emma H. married Manning T. Hackley, of Chicago; they have two children, Levant and Bartlett. Edgar H. married Lorena Gustin; he is a solicitor. Clarence M. is a traveling man, and lives in Chicago; he married Ella Pigney, of South Dakota, and has three children, Doris, Marshall and Lloyd.

Gustavus Stone united with the Masonic fraternity over thirty years ago, and belongs to Beloit Commandery. Over fifty years ago he joined the Odd Fellows, and was affiliated with them many years. He has been a Republican since the formation of the party, and represented the Third ward in the city council for two or three years, but was compelled to resign on account of the pressure of business. He never sought any public position, but was urged and entreated in the early '70s. by many of the prominent men of the city, to run for mayor, they claiming him to be the strongest and most popular man in the city, but he declined all solicitations.

Mrs. Stone's father was born at Newburyport, Mass., and her mother in New Hampshire, of English ancestry. They had nine children, and only a son and daughter are now living. John Bartlett, of Rockford, Ill., and Mrs. Stone. Her paternal grandfather was a soldier in the war of 1812. He was a cabinet maker by trade, and later in life became a farmer. He lost his life when over eighty years of age, by being thrown from a horse. Mrs. Stone's maternal grandfather, Major Joseph Pulsifer, was a soldier in the war of 1812. His wife belonged to a wealthy family; she lived to be over eighty years of age.

HENRY BARNES, a retired farmer of Shullsburg, Lafayette county, was born in Leicestershire, England, Nov. 7, 1823, a son of Thomas and Ann (Hossen) Barnes, and a grandson of John Barnes, all natives of the "tight little isle." Thomas Barnes and wife were the parents of ten children, all now deceased except our subject: John, Mary, Susan, William, Ann, Elizabeth, Sarah, Eliza, Lucy and Henry.

Henry Barnes received his education in the neighboring schools of his native town and earned his livelihood at various employments until he was twenty-seven years of age, when, in 1850, he boarded a sailing-vessel for New York. He came to Wisconsin the same year, and engaged in mining for some time. He then purchased a tract of wild land from the government, and determined to take up farming as his life work. At first he erected a small house, which a number of years later was replaced by a commodious dwelling, with all modern improvements. He cleared this farm, and made all needed improvements as the years passed by, until he had one of the finest farms in the county, 200 acres in extent, making his home thereon for over forty years. In 1890 he rented this place, and, purchasing a home in the town of Shullsburg, moved there to pass the balance of his life at ease. His property has all been acquired through his own efforts, and he now, in the evening of his life, finds himself possessed of an abundant competence, and is ranked among the substantial citizens of his town.

In September, 1852, Mr. Barnes was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Parr, a daughter of William and Sarah (Norton) Parr, who were natives of Leicestershire, England. Five children of William Parr came to America: Sarah, wife of John Roddam, of Shullsburg; Mary, wife of Michael Boddy, of Illinois; William, who now resides in British Columbia; Edward, who first located in California, and now makes his home in British Columbia; and Elizabeth, Mrs. Barnes. Mrs. Elizabeth (Parr) Barnes was born in 1821, and grew to womanhood in England, where she obtained a good education, and was for a time engaged successfully in Sunday teaching there. In 1851 she came to Wisconsin, where her culture and refinement have drawn around her a choice circle of friends. Three children have blessed the union of Mr. and Mrs. Barnes: Sarah A., born in Shullsburg in 1859, married James Mills, who died in 1880, and in 1883 she married William Mills, a farmer; she has two sons, Henry and Walter, by her first marriage. Mary E., born in 1861, married Thomas Brown, who now manages the Barnes homestead, and has eight children, Marie (born in 1877, who now makes her home with her grandparents in Shullsburg, and lightens the burdens of their increasing years with her loving ministrations), Annie, Henry, Grant, Mary, Myrtle, Sherman, and an infant, unnamed. Lucy, born in 1864, died at the age of twenty-five.

The Republican party has always found in Mr. Barnes an unfaltering adherent and he never fails to keep thoroughly posted on party work. Both Mr. and Mrs. Barnes have been attendants of the Methodist Episcopal Church for many years. Mrs. Barnes being particularly interested in the Sabbath-school, in which she was for many years a teacher.

DELFORD B. BRUNSON, of Fennimore, is a representative of one of the well-known pioneer families of Grant county. He is a son of Ira W. Brunson, whose name was identified with the history of the county from the time of his entrance until his death, Nov. 15, 1884, at the age of eighty years.

Ira W. Brunson was born at Sing Sing, N. Y., May 3, 1805. His father, Asa W. Brunson, a stone mason, lost his life in the Hudson river by drowning, the accident occurring while he was operating a ferry across the river. The widow removed with her family to Danbury, Conn., and there Ira W., at the age of fifteen, became an apprentice to the trade of hat making with John Foot, living with him until he was nineteen. His mother died in 1824, and the young man left home and worked at his trade in various places, bringing up at Utica, N. Y., where he attended school for six months. In 1827 Mr. Brunson became a resident of Columbus, Ohio, where he worked at his trade for several years. In 1835 he gave up hat making, and in the spring of the following year, accompanied by his brother Alfred and Henry Patch, left Columbus, and floated down the Ohio river and up the Mississippi on a keel-boat to Prairie du Chien. Here Mr. Brunson spent some time, going back to Ohio late in the year to close up his business, and move to Wisconsin. He left Columbus on his way to the West in 1836. The journey was a wild and perilous one, and was attended by many difficulties. At Fort Wayne the snow was fifteen inches deep, and at South Bend the ground was bare. At Michigan City it was once more deep snow, and at Chicago bare ground. He crossed the Rock river at Rockford, on the ice. From Freeport to Mineral Point the way was very difficult. As night fell he asked for lodging at a farmhouse, and was directed to a mill three miles away. He found an abandoned saw-mill, and no house was to be seen anywhere. He spent that night in the woods, and turning his horse loose to browse on the grass that reached above the snow he made a path between two trees, and spent hours in walking up and down. Becoming drowsy, he sat down and rested his head on his saddle. He took a chew of tobacco, which he swallowed. This roused him so that he resumed his weary march, and at last the sun rose. With his compass he found his bearings, and about eleven o'clock he found the mill and the house to which he had been directed the night before, but had missed in the gathering shadows. He was taken in and cared for by the hospitable lady of the house. Fed and refreshed, he resumed his journey, and reached Mineral Point at last, thoroughly worn out, but glad and thankful that his long journey was completed.

Mr. Brunson went into the mercantile business at Cassville, in company with Mr. Sellers, in 1836, but shortly after removed to Lancaster, where he opened the first store in the city. In 1837 he was elected collector of taxes for Grant county, serving until 1840, when he took a farm in the town of Mt. Hope, Grant county, residing there until his death. He was three times married, first time, in 1829, to Margaret Benton, of Bladen, Ohio, daughter of Samuel and Aurelia Benton. She died in 1833. In 1840 he was married, in Crawford county, Wis., to Miss Henrietta Foster, a daughter of Henry and Julia Foster. In 1847 he was married to Miss Almina Benton, a sister of his first wife, who died in October, 1896. Two children were born to the first marriage: Mary Young, widow of William Humphrey, of Patch Grove; and Alfred, a resident of Sibley, Iowa. To the second marriage were born Benjamin F., of Kenton, Ohio; Emily M., widow of William Bailey, of Bloomington, Grant county; and Ida E., who became the wife of Eugene Anger, and died in October, 1896. By the third marriage were born Aurelia F., wife of Andrew Abram, of the town of Mt. Hope, Grant county; Delford B., of Fennimore; Almina, a teacher in Milwaukee; and Jennie, wife of Frank Roach, of Fennimore. The father was a man of more than average ability, and had decided views on the issues of the day. He improved a naturally bright mind by reading and observation, and was one of the best informed men in his community, was well versed in the law, and had a fine memory. He was honored by many local offices, though he never sought public position, and was once a candidate for the State Senate. His party, however, was so far in the minority that he could not pull through. He was a genial and courteous gentleman, and had a generous disposition. Mr. Brunson was a Methodist, and fraternally a prominent Mason. He was devoted to the order, and was accustomed to attend its sessions up to a very advanced age.

Delford B. Brunson, of Fennimore, is the youngest son of his parents, and their only son now living in Grant county. He was born on the Mt. Hope homestead Nov. 15, 1858, and there remained for thirty years. In 1888 he located in the village of Mt. Hope, and for five years was engaged in the buying and shipping of live stock. In 1894 he moved to Fennimore, where he is still engaged in the same business. Mr. Brunson has been twice married, Miss Effie Fox becoming his first wife. She was a daughter of Isaac B. Fox, of Mt. Hope, and died Aug. 14, 1895. His present wife was Miss Lisetta Biedermann. Two children were the fruit of the first marriage, Jennie and Clair. There is a daughter, Frances, by his second marriage. Mr. Brunson is one of the leading business men of Fennimore. He is a staunch supporter of the Republican party, and was elected to the Legislature in November, 1900.

JAMES MILLS, M. S., M. D., a prominent and successful physician and surgeon of Janesville, is a native of Rock county, and was born on the 25th day of July, 1852. His father, Peter Mills, one of the early settlers of the county, was born in Perthshire, Scotland, Feb. 7, 1818. He was reared in his native land, and there learned the miller's trade. He was the son of Peter Mills, born in Abernethy in 1761. On the 7th day of November, 1841, he was united in marriage with Miss Jane Peacock. In 1849 he emigrated with his family to America, locating in Rock Prairie, in Rock county, Wis., where he engaged in farming. His children were four in number: Mary, the eldest, born May 3, 1843, is the wife of Alexander McGregor; Peter, born Jan. 18, 1846, enlisted during the Civil war as a member of the 13th Wis. V. I., Feb. 17, 1862, and died at Fort Henry, Tenn., Dec. 16, 1862; Margaret, born Nov. 27, 1850, died in infancy; James, subject of this sketch, is the youngest. The latter was but four days old when his father died, on the farm in Rock Prairie, July 29, 1852, from cholera, at the age of thirty-four years. Though his decease occurred thus early in life, he was naturally of a robust constitution, possessing great strength and powers of endurance. He was well educated, refined, industrious and highly esteemed. His wife, after the death of her husband, succeeded, by hard work and careful management, in carrying on the farm and in providing for her family in a thoroughly Christian home. In 1858 she married John Henry, and they resided on the old homestead, where a daughter, Margaret Jane, was born to them March 10, 1863. The last named is the wife of Robert J. Hadden, and their home is on the old farm. The Doctor's mother died Feb. 2, 1891, at the age of sixty-nine years. She was a devout Christian, and an active member of the United Presbyterian Church of Rock Prairie. She possessed those sterling qualities which characterize her race, and was beloved by all who knew her for her many kind deeds. John Henry departed this life March 17, 1891.

Dr. Mills grew to manhood on the old homestead in Johnstown. He worked on the farm with unceasing industry, the only relaxation being his attendance at the district school during the winter months. In 1869 he entered Milton College, where he attended several terms. His ambition did not slumber, and, finding himself partly dependent upon his own energies to secure an education, he began farming for himself during the summer, attending the college during the winter. In 1875 he taught school in the old school house where he first attended. He still pursued his college course, and for several terms was one of the assistant teachers. Milton College graduated him in 1879, and conferred upon him the degree of Master of Science in 1890. Immediately after leaving this institution he began his medical studies in the office of Dr. Henry Palmer (now deceased), of Janesville, and in 1880 he entered the Chicago Medical College, now the Medical Department of the Northwestern University, by which college he was graduated in 1883. During his last year there he was appointed assistant surgeon of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway Co., which is a strong proof of the ability he possessed as a student, and which afforded him a wide experience in surgical practice. This position he held for one year.

A few days after receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine he received his appointment of assistant physician in the Insane Hospital at Elgin, Ill., where he remained two years. His practice there afforded him valuable opportunity for acquiring knowledge concerning the treatment of the insane. Desiring to still further extend his medical researches, and to widen his experience before entering upon general practice, he resigned his position and went to Scotland, taking a course in the Edinburgh Medical University. On the completion of his course he received a diploma from the Royal Maternity and Simpson Memorial Hospital. Here his advantages for gaining skill in the attendance upon patients, at their bedside and in the operating room, were extensive. Going thence to London, he spent several months making observations in surgery at St. Thomas and King's College Hospital, under Sir James Lister and other eminent surgeons; also in Soho Square Hospital, devoted to the treatment of the diseases of women; in Brompton Hospital, applying remedies for diseases of the chest; and in Sir Morrell McKenzie's Hospital. He enjoyed exceptional advantages in this school, where he learned the methods used by many of the most noted and eminent physicians and surgeons in Europe, and where he gained instruction that has since proved of inestimable value in his practice. Leaving London, the Doctor spent some time in Paris, pursuing the same course, and visiting the principal hospitals. In 1885, prior to his leaving Scotland, he became a member of the Edinburgh Obstetrical Society, a long-established and famous organization.

In the month of August, 1885, Dr. Mills returned from the old countries, and began at once the practice of his profession in Janesville, where he has since resided. Both as a physician and a surgeon he has attained an enviable reputation; his energy and superior ability soon placed him in the foremost rank of his profession. He has a large and lucrative patronage, derived chiefly from the better class of people in both the city and the country. He is a thorough scholar and a perfect gentleman, and has the unquestioned respect and good-will of the community. Everything he undertakes bears the unmistakable impress of energy and sound judgment. Well-equipped as the Doctor is, careful and painstaking as has been his preparation for the work of a successful physician, it is not to be wondered at that he is considered an authority among his fellow practitioners. His bearing is such as to inspire confidence in his patients; and his pleasant manner such as to win friends wherever he goes.

After continuing his practice without interruption for ten years at Janesville the Doctor again went abroad, in 1895, for further study, taking his family with him. After remaining in Edinburgh for a short time he went to Dublin, taking a practical course in midwifery in the famous old Dublin Maternity Hospital. He then proceeded to London, and revisited many of its hospitals. Leaving that city, he reached Berlin, Germany, where he at once entered the Medical Department of the University of Berlin, taking special courses for six months in Gynecology and the diseases of women under Prof. A. Martin; in surgery under Prof. Von Bergman; on Internal Medicine under Prof. D. G. Klemperer and others. Returning to New York City after a year's study abroad, he took there a course in the Post Graduate School. The Doctor is a member of the Wisconsin State Medical Society; American Medical Association; and ex-president of the Central Wisconsin Medical Society; and president of the Rock County Medical Society. He is a well-known contributor to medical journals. On Feb. 13, 1888, the Rock County Caledonian Society was organized, and the Doctor was chosen its president, which office he held continuously for eight years. He is now acting as secretary of the society. Socially he is a member of the Knights of Pythias, Odd Fellows, Masons, and other societies, and is secretary of the Palmer Memorial Hospital. In politics he casts his vote on the Republican side. His ardent and sincere love for the soldiers of the Civil war prompted him, in 1897, to raise a flag. A great concourse of people gathered on the lawn and street in front of the Doctor's residence in Janesville. W. H. Sargent Post and the Janesville Light Infantry were present, and assisted in the ceremonies. The flag was raised in honor of the Grand Army of the Republic, and as a memorial to Peter Mills, the brother of Dr. Mills, who died at Fort Henry, Tenn., and James Peacock, an uncle, who was killed at Gainesville, Georgia.

Dr. Mills was married to Emma F. Chamberlain, at the home of her parents in La Prairie, Rock county, May 12, 1886. She was the only child of James A. and Jane (Humphrey) Chamberlain, and was born Jan. 2, 1860. She attended the home district school and Milton College, from which she was graduated in 1878, and for several terms was a teacher in the country schools. Mrs. Mills has always manifested an interest in literary and art studies, and is a most amiable and accomplished woman. Her father was the son of James and Maria (Jackson) Chamberlain. He was born March 2, 1833, in Hartford, Conn., and with the family moved to the town of Bradford, Rock county, when but five years old. The father of this son came West in 1837, and built a log cabin upon his claim in Bradford, and here suffered in that year many privations and lonesome hours in a thinly settled country. He was a carpenter and builder, which trade he learned in England, his native country, where he was born March 13, 1791, in Hampshire. He emigrated to America in 1819, remaining in New York State four years, then moved to Connecticut and in 1837, after fourteen years spent there as a contractor and builder, he removed to the Territory of Wisconsin, and took up the life of a farmer. He was delegate to the first convention, at Madison, for the framing of the State Constitution. He built the first courthouse in Janesville: the first bridge across Rock river, in Rock county, at that city; the first bridges at Beloit and Roscoe; and the first school houses in the towns of La Prairie and Turtle. He was noted for his excellent habits, for his care of his family and for his upright, honorable dealings with his fellow citizens. He died at the age of eighty-three, from an accident. He left four children and his wife, Maria (Jackson) Chamberlain, who survived him only two years.

James A. Chamberlain, the father of Mrs. Mills, grew to manhood upon the farm in La Prairie, and when he was married, in 1856, he brought his wife there, and they spent over forty years together upon the same farm. Her health failed in 1898, and they left the old homestead and moved to Janesville. She died Jan. 15, 1899, at the age of sixty years. Through her mother Mrs. Mills was a descendant of Frederick A. and Eliza (Yates) Humphrey, both of whom were born in the State of New York, where they lived until they moved to Shopiere, Rock county, in 1847. Here they spent the greater part of their lives, and here both died in the spring of 1896—she at the advanced age of ninety, and he at ninety-five. He was also a contractor and builder. Eliza Yates was a direct descendant of Col. Peter Yates, of Revolutionary days.

Dr. and Mrs. Mills have two children: Wallace C., born in Janesville April 16, 1889; and James Stewart, born in Berlin, Germany, Nov. 22, 1894. The Doctor and Mrs. Mills are members of the Presbyterian Church, and he is one of its elders. They have a beautiful home, an ornament to the city.

VOLNEY ATWOOD, president of the Oak Hill Cemetery Association, is one of the substantial and representative men of Janesville, and has played an important part in the material growth of his community.

Volney Atwood was born in Cambridge, Vt., Feb. 28, 1812, a son of Levi and Lucretia (Waterman) Atwood. The history of the paternal grandfather of our subject is not known, but the maternal grandfather was Aruna Waterman, a native of Connecticut, who in 1801 removed to Vermont and took up a large tract of land; he died there when over eighty years of age, the father of a large family. The father of our subject, Levi Atwood, who was a farmer, died in Vermont in 1812, when Volney was not quite ten months old, and the mother survived him many years. Mr. and Mrs. Levi Atwood had three sons: Victor, Norman and Volney. Victor was a business man in St. Albans, Vt., for sixty years, and Norman was a farmer in Cambridge, Vt., but both are now deceased.

Volney Atwood was reared in Vermont, his mother removing to Johnson, that State, about four years after her husband's death. Here our subject remained until he was eighteen, when he returned to the farm at Cambridge, and pursued the calling of a farmer until 1837. When opportunity offered he attended the public schools of his neighborhood, and made the best of his opportunities. In 1837 he came West to Wisconsin, settling in Janesville township, Rock county, where he took up a tract of 320 acres. After improving this land Mr. Atwood sold it, and engaged in keeping a tavern. During 1845 and 1846 he served his county very acceptably as sheriff, and afterward engaged in general merchandising for many years. Later, however, he embarked in the hardware business, confining himself exclusively to this branch of trade until 1887, when he practically retired, although since he was made president of the Oak Hill Cemetery Association he has personally attended to all its affairs. Having always been a loyal Republican Mr. Atwood has several times been called upon to represent his community in town and county office, serving as supervisor in the early days, when a number of the towns were represented together; also as alderman for two years; register of deeds one term: and, as before stated, as sheriff. At one time Mr. Atwood was interested in the cottonmill at Janesville, having assisted in its organization and establishment. Another industry which owes much of its present prosperity to his executive ability and business acumen is the Janesville shoe factory. Mr. Atwood was one of the promoters who induced the Chicago & Northwestern railroad to come to Janesville, and although the town benefited his loss in the matter was considerable. There is scarcely any line of business in Janesville which has not felt the impetus of Mr. Atwood's enterprise, and among these is the coal and wood business, in which he engaged at one time with a Mr. Lawrence, under the firm name of Lawrence & Atwood, their business being the second of its kind in that locality.

On June 30, 1847, Mr. Atwood married Miss Catherine A. Holmes, daughter of William and Rachel (Day) Holmes, and they have had six children: Volney, Charles, Mary Lucretia, Harriet Augusta and Helen Adelaide (twins) and Anna E. Volney died when a little over two years old, and the twins when eighteen months old. Charles married Miss Alta M. Doty, and they have had eight children: Volney D., Abbie A., Mary Lea, Harry C., Charles Starr, William Williston, Leo and Edward Philo; they live in Janesville, where he is engaged in the ice business. Mary Lucretia married Edward Vernon Whiton, now deceased, and had four children, Edward Vernon, Lucretia, Annette T. and Victor A. Miss Anna E. resides with her parents, and is a very pleasant lady.

Mrs. Atwood, who is the oldest resident of Janesville in length of residence, was born in Newark, Licking Co., Ohio, Aug. 9, 1819, and her parents were natives of Pennsylvania. They moved to Ohio, settling in Marion county, where they resided twelve years; then removed to La Porte county, Ind., and resided there until 1836. In March of that year they went to Rock county, Wis., and settled in Rock township, where Mr. Holmes purchased land from the government at $1.25 an acre, obtaining an entire section in one body, and 160 acres in another, all of which is now included in Janesville; also sixty acres of timber land. While in Marion county, Ohio, Mr. Holmes was a judge of the court for a number of years, and was known as Judge Holmes, although engaged in farming. After a long and useful life Mr. Holmes died, in the spring of 1861, aged eighty-one years. The father of Mr. Holmes, James Holmes, a native of England, came to America with two brothers. Mrs. Atwood's maternal grandfather was George Day, a native of Scotland, who lived to a ripe old age.

Mrs. Atwood is a consistent member of the Episcopal Church, and is an earnest worker in the several organizations connected with it. Mr. Atwood is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and has been for fifty years, filling every chair in the lodge. Having always been public-spirited, he has generously contributed of his time and means toward all improvements, and still takes a warm interest in public affairs, the advancement of the city in prosperity, the success of the party whose principles he advocates, and the general welfare of the community being matters of vital importance to him.

HENRY PATCH, deceased. Prominent among the citizens of Grant county who were actively identified with its early development and prosperity was the gentleman whose name introduces this sketch. He was born in Danbury, Conn., April 10, 1803, a son of Elijah and Susana (Morgan) Patch, the former of English, the latter of Scottish descent. The father was born Oct. 29, 1769, and died Nov. 27, 1804, while the mother was born Feb. 23, 1780, and died in October, 1820. In the family were eight children, five sons and three daughters, all of whom have passed away, namely: John T., Prosper, Henry, Mary A., Ezra, Elijah, Rebecca, and Abigail.

Henry Patch was reared in his native place, and in early manhood married Miss Emily C. Brunson, a sister of the well-known pioneers of Grant county, Wis., Ira and Alfred Brunson. Soon after their marriage they moved to Columbus, Ohio, where Mr. Patch was engaged in farming until the fall of 1836, when, accompanied by the Brunson brothers, above mentioned, he came to Grant county. For a short time he lived in Section 32, in what is now Patch Grove township, but in the spring of 1837 located on land he had pre-empted, there making his permanent home. His was the fifth family in what is now Patch Grove township. In his house was conducted the first school of that township, and the first post-office, he serving as postmaster; the office was given the name of Patch Grove in his honor, and later the township and village took the same name.

Mr. Patch became one of the most prominent and influential men of Grant county, and being public-spirited and progressive was called upon to fill various local offices, the duties of which he always faithfully and conscientiously discharged. He also ably represented his district in the lower branch of the State Legislature. He was a man of more than average ability, and always took a leading part in promoting those enterprises that were for the best interests of the community. Generous and sympathetic by nature, no one was ever turned from his door without assistance, and no man in the county was more highly esteemed or more sincerely respected than Henry Patch. He died in the village of Patch Grove, Jan. 2, 1857, and in his death the community realized that it had lost one of its most valued and useful citizens. As a business man he had steadily prospered, and became possessed of a large amount of land, both by pre-emption and by purchase.

The wife who had accompanied Mr. Patch from her New England home to what was then the wilds of the West departed this life March 14, 1856, and he was again married, July 24, 1858, his second union being with Mrs. Louisa Nelson McConnell, whose maiden name was Dunbar. She died June 20, 1900. By the first marriage there were eight children, four sons and four daughters, but only three are now (1901) living, Mrs. Cornelia W. Anderson, Reed Patch and Mrs. Emma Gilpatrick. Those deceased were Harriet, William H., Henry W., Thomas B. and Almira. Of the three children born to the second union only Mrs. Jennie Lewis, born in 1861, is living, Jessie and Ada L. having passed away.

STEPHEN J. BAKER, of Evansville, Rock county, holds the responsible position of foreman of the Baker Manufacturing Co., in that city, and is one of the leading men of the community. He understands his business thoroughly, and is a straightforward and manly character.

Mr. Baker was born in Stephenson county, Ill., Feb. 13, 1840, and is a son of John T. and Jemima (Robinson) Baker, both natives of Ohio. They were the parents of seven sons and three daughters, and six of their children are now living, David, Edward, Francis, Stephen J., Allen, and Caroline (who is the wife of John Davenport, of San Rafael, Cal.). John T. Baker was a farmer, and one of the pioneer settlers of Rock county, coming to Wisconsin in 1840, and settling in the town of Union, where he improved a farm, and reared a family to be honorable men and women. He spent the last few years of his life in Evansville, dying in 1876, at the age of seventy years. His wife, the mother of Stephen J., died in the town of Union in the fall of 1851, aged thirty-nine years. John T. Baker was a man of prominence in his time, and served as town clerk, treasurer, and in other offices in the town and district during his active years. His father, Daniel Baker, was a native of West Virginia, and died in Ohio at the age of sixty-five years.

Stephen J. Baker was reared on the farm, and gained moral character and vital force from the close touch of nature and the quiet life he lived. He attended the district school, and was a young man of patriotic thought and feeling at the breaking out of the Civil war. He enlisted in Company D, 13th Wis. V. I., and followed the flag of the Union for three long and bloody years; he was on patrol duty much of the time. He was at Decatur, Ala., where his regiment was under fire four days while Gen. Hood was crossing the Tennessee at Mussels' Shoals. The 13th had a share in many expeditions, and captured many Rebel prisoners, making a good record, and the old veterans recall with pride the scenes and perils now long past. When the war was over Mr. Baker learned the blacksmith's trade, which was his occupation for a number of years. Later he went into the employ of the Evansville Manufacturing Co., principally engaged in the production of tacks, and in 1888 he became foreman of the Baker Manufacturing Co., a position he still fills. The concern is a large one, and produces many different articles largely in demand in an agricultural country, such as windmills, pumps, grinders, wood saws, and other goods in the same line.

On Oct. 6, 1868, Stephen J. Baker married Miss Flora C. Allen, daughter of Heman M. and Caroline (Anderson) Allen, and they had one child, deceased in infancy. Mrs. Baker passed away in 1874. Mr. Baker remarried March 2, 1875, Miss Clare Sherman becoming his wife, and they have an attractive home on Liberty street, Evansville. They have two children, Clarence S., born Feb. 3, 1876, and Flora Ethel, born April 14, 1881. Clarence chose a position as fireman on the Madison division of the Northwestern railroad. Ethel is fitting herself to teach school. Mr. Baker is a member of Union Lodge, No. 32, A. F. & A. M., and Chapter No. 35, R. A. M., at Evansville. He is a Republican, and was alderman of the Second ward in Evansville two terms. He has been a resident of Rock county sixty years.

Mrs. Clare (Sherman) Baker, wife of Stephen J. Baker, was born May 27, 1852, near Menasha, Wis., later moving to Evansville, Wis. Her parents, Erin and Mariam B. (Stevens) Sherman, had three children: Elisha, who died in infancy; Eva E., Mrs. Albert Snashall, of Evansville, and Clare, Mrs. Baker. Her father, Erin Sherman, was born in Le Roy, Genesee Co., N. Y., in 1820. He was a contractor and builder in his native place. Later, coming West, he settled in Milwaukee, where he owned a dry-goods store, and was proprietor of the same for several years, afterward moving onto a maple sugar farm near Menasha. At the time of the gold fever, in 1857, he, with several companions, went to the gold fields of California. In 1846 Mr. Sherman was married to Mariam B. Stevens, who was the daughter of Joseph and Phoebe (Eastman) Stevens, and was born in Concord, N. H., June 7, 1828, coming West with her mother and brothers when thirteen years of age. She died in Evansville, Wis., March 4, 1875. She joined the United Brethren Church, of which she was a member in good standing until her death. Erin Sherman's father, Thomas Sherman, was born in the State of New York. He and his wife, Sallie (Van Gilder) Sherman, were the parents of nine children, seven sons—Thomas, Benjamin, William, Walter, Erin, Elisha and Lucius—and two daughters—Clarissa and Susan. All were born in Le Roy. Joseph Stevens, father of Mrs. Mariam B. (Stevens) Sherman, was born in Andover, Essex Co., Mass., in 1784, and was engaged in the lumber business, owning and operating a sawmill. He died in Concord, N. H., of typhus fever. He and his wife, Phoebe E. Stevens, were the parents of seven children, Joseph, Phoebe, William, Serena, John, Thomas and Mariam. Mrs. Phoebe (Eastman) Stevens was born in Londonderry, Rockingham Co., N. H., in 1785. After the death of her husband she was advised by his cousin, Charles Stevens, who lived in Janesville, Wis., to come West with her family. She did so, and bought government land situated north of the city of Janesville, where she lived several years. Two of her sons, Thomas and William, settled on farms in the town of Porter, near Fulton. John settled in Janesville, where he kept an hotel for a number of years. Serena married and went to Michigan. Later Mrs. Stevens moved to the town of Porter, where she spent the remainder of her life. She died in 1878, at the home of her son Thomas. William Eastman, father of Phoebe (Eastman) Stevens, was born in Concord, N. H., in 1757. He served in the Revolutionary war under Capt. Livermar and Col. Campbell, and was granted a pension for three years' actual service. The Eastman family were all quite patriotic.

WILLIAM ELGAR, a well-to-do and prominent citizen of Platteville, Grant county, and ex-postmaster at that place, is one of the adopted sons of America, for he was born in London, England, in 1829. His parents, William and Ann (Hambrook) Elgar, were natives of Kent, England, and the mother died in 1841, in London. The father, who was a business man in England, came to the United States in 1851, settling in Grant county, Wis., where he followed farming for some time. He died in Platteville in 1875. His children were William; John, a resident of Wisconsin; Viroqua; Stephen, who died in Platteville in 1891; Elizabeth, Mrs. William Cowduroy, who died in the same place in 1879; and Anne, Mrs. Kolb, a resident of Platteville.

The early life of William Elgar was passed in his native land, and he attended school in London. In 1851 he sailed for the New World, and after a voyage of twelve weeks landed in New York. After spending a short time in Mineral Point, Wis., he came to Grant county, where he has since made his home. For some years he was successfully engaged in mercantile business in Platteville, but on being appointed postmaster, in February, 1886, he disposed of his store. He held the office for four years, discharging its duties in a most creditable and satisfactory manner, and was succeeded by M. P. Rindlaub.

Mr. Elgar was married in Platteville to Miss Frances Kolb, a native of Chester county, Penn., and to them were born three children, namely: William, now a merchant of Rewey, Wis.; Laura, Mrs. McArthur, whose husband is a lumber dealer of Minneapolis, Minn.; and George, who is married and resides in Madison, Wisconsin.

Mr. Elgar was one of the founders of the Episcopal Church of Platteville, of which he has since been a prominent and influential member, having always taken a very active part in its work. He served as the first treasurer and clerk of the church, and has filled the former office over thirty years. Fraternally he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. A man of strong individuality and indubitable probity, one who has attained a due measure of success in life, and whose influence has always been on the side of right and order, this worthy citizen of Platteville assuredly deserves representation in this volume.

TERRENCE CARRIER is a very popular and successful hardware merchant in the city of Boscobel, and has filled the office of sheriff of Grant county with marked ability. He became a resident of the county in 1855, at which date he located in Muscoda, and engaged in farming. In 1858 he moved to Boscobel, and resumed his trade of wagon maker, which he followed for some years. Failing health obliged him to seek a change of occupation, and he became a hotel man, being landlord of the leading hotel in the city for some ten years. In 1872 Mr. Carrier was elected sheriff of Grant county, and served his term of office with general satisfaction, as the result of the manner in which he conducted its business. In 1874 he returned to Boscobel, and entered into the hardware business, in which he is still engaged.

Terrence Carrier was born in Cambridge, Vt., Dec. 5, 1827, a son of Patrick and Bridget (O'Neil) Carrier, both natives of County Monaghan, Ireland. The parents were reared and married in their native county, and came to the United States in 1826, settling in Vermont.

Patrick Carrier was a linen weaver in Ireland, but became a farmer in this country. In 1837 they moved West, to the town of Tallmadge, Summit Co., Ohio, and in the spring of 1849 came to Wisconsin, settling on a farm at Watertown, where the remainder of their days was spent. He died at the age of eighty-three, and she when seventy-five. They had a family of seven children, of whom Alice, the eldest, married Michael Reynolds, and lives in Vermont. Terrence lives in Boscobel. Mary died at the age of seventeen. Nancy married John McLaughlin, and lives at Watertown, Wis. Amelia has been twice married, her first husband being Francis McHugh, and her second Luke Byrne, of Watertown, Wis. James resides in Grant county. John lives in California.

Terrence Carrier removed with his parents to Ohio, and in 1848 made a journey of exploration into Wisconsin. Being thoroughly satisfied with the outlook, he carried back such a report to Ohio that the following year the entire family came West. In 1852 he was married to Miss Amelia Powers, who was born at Gardner, Maine, a daughter of James and Julia (Clay) Powers, and at the time of her marriage was residing in Janesville, Wis. To this union three children were born, Mary being the eldest; she married William E. Howe. Martha Jane married Michael McSpaden, of Boscobel. Alice is the widow of Fred Mortimer, and has her home in Boscobel. Mr. Carrier is a Republican, and was formerly a Whig. He has held various local and county offices, has served on the county board, and has acted as president of the village, and has been generally regarded as a man of more than usual ability and character. Mr. Carrier owns a fine farm of 450 acres near Boscobel, and also owns the business in which he is engaged.

CHARLES BLAKELY is the earliest settler of Darlington, Lafayette county, no other citizen of the place having been here at the time of his location—April, 1851, in what was then a wilderness.

Mr. Blakely is a native of Ohio, although descended from New England ancestry, his father, Russell Blakely, having been born in Vermont, and his mother, Permelia (Gale), being from the same State. They removed to Ohio, and some time afterward removed to Canada, but in 1851 they located in Lafayette county, Wis. Our subject was one of their family of eleven children, and is the only surviving son; he has but two sisters, one of whom resides in New Orleans, and the other in Canada.

In 1848 our subject left Canada and went to Rockford, Ill., but returned to Canada in the autumn of the same year. In the following spring he returned to Rockford, went thence to Beloit, where he learned the trade of blacksmith, and has been engaged in that business ever since. In 1851 he settled in Darlington, having taken the contract for doing the iron work on the first mill at that place, then in process of construction, and established the first blacksmith shop in the place, still continuing work.

In Beloit our subject was married to Miss Martha Graham, a native of Canada, and four children have been born of this union, Permelia, Eleanor, Charles and Elizabeth; Charles is city clerk of Darlington. Since the very beginning of the place Mr. Blakely has resided here, and has lived to see, with interest, this beautiful city arise out of the wilderness, its schools, churches, business blocks and fine residences standing where he found only depths of forest. All his life he has been one of the most esteemed of its citizens, and his recollections are most instructive and entertaining.

MORGAN J. VAN MATRE, who resides with his sister, Mrs. Mary Dobbs, in Section 34, Lamont township, Lafayette county, represents a pioneer family of southwestern Wisconsin.

James Van Matre, the father of our subject, came to the mining regions in 1827, with several brothers, and they were well known in the neighborhood of Shullsburg and at other points. James Van Matre was born at Cynthiana, Ky., and was descended from a hardy race of pioneers, the grandfather of our subject having been Morgan Van Matre, an associate of Daniel Boone in the early Indian wars in Kentucky. James Van Matre went to Ohio in his youth, and there married Sidney Kelley, a native of Warren county, that State, where he and his brother engaged in mining for a considerable time, finally coming to Wisconsin, and settling in what is now Wiota township, Lafayette county. When the township was organized, in 1849, he was made a member of the first board of supervisors, and he continued his residence there until the close of his life, his wife surviving him for a number of years. A family of fourteen children was born to them, of whom survive: Morgan J.; Mary, Mrs. Dobbs, both residents of Lamont township; Jefferson, a resident of the State of Iowa; John, a resident of Springfield, Mo.; and James and Andrew, residents of Wayne township.

Our subject was born in Ohio Aug. 18, 1818, being now one of the oldest men, both in age and time of residence, in his part of the county. He married Mary Jane Wood, who died many years ago, leaving two children: Washington Irving, born in 1844, a resident of Wiota township; and Sidney Hannah, the wife of Joseph Lovelace. Mrs. Dobbs, sister of our subject, came to Lamont township in 1845. She has been twice married, her first husband, Elijah E. Swank, dying in 1862; her second husband, George Dobbs, died August 16, 1897.

WILLIAM R. DIXON, of Fennimore, is numbered among the older settlers of Grant county, his residence in the county dating from Nov. 16, 1846.

Mr. Dixon was born in Kanawha county, in what is now West Virginia, April 17, 1817, son of Peter Dixon. His grandfather, George Dixon, served as a scout in the Revolution under Gen. Washington for some six years. He was a flag bearer at the surrender of Lord Cornwallis. His father was born in Scotland, and when a boy was stolen and brought to America. William R. Dixon well remembers his grandfather, and recalls many incidents of the war of independence as related by him. The maiden name of Mr. Dixon's mother was Lucinda Long, and her father, Isaac Long, also served in the Revolution. Both our subject's grandfathers died in 1844, at the age of eighty-four.

Peter Dixon was one of a family of nine children. He was an officer in the war of 1812, and four of his brothers were also soldiers in that same war, two of them dying in the army. Mr. Dixon was the father of seventeen children, all of whom, with but one exception, lived to maturity. He was twice married, and his first wife, who died in 1825, was the mother of William R., who, so far as known, is her only surviving child. Six children of the second union are now living. The father died in 1863.

The Dixon family were opposed to slavery, and helped many a negro to freedom. They moved into Ohio when William R. was a boy, and for years were actively connected with the "underground railroad." In 1831 the grandfather, George Dixon, and all his surviving sons, moved into Warren county, Ind., where all the older members of the family died. In 1846 William R. Dixon came to Grant county, and on Dec. 16, following year, he married Miss Emily Mitchell, who was born near Knoxville, Tenn., and reared in Missouri, whither her parents removed early in her life. They died in that State while she was still a girl, and she came to Grant county, making her home with her sister. Here Mr. Dixon met and married her. They were the second couple married in the town of Fennimore.

Mr. Dixon had little idea of remaining when he came to Grant county, and was about to return to Indiana when he was asked to take a school. He was willing, and a subscription school was opened in what were known as the Switzer and Walker settlements. Many of the children who attended came from a long distance. There was no school house, but a log cabin was put up on Section 7—a typical frontier school house; there were no glass windows, but open spaces were left between the logs and covered with greased paper. Cold draughts blew through the building in the winter. The seats were slabs brought from Prairie du Chien. Holes were bored for the legs. This school house did not fit in with present-day notions, but it answered for the times, and here in 1846 and 1847 Mr. Dixon taught the first school in the town. He was to receive ten dollars a month, and board around, but money was scarce, and he never secured the full amount of his wages. He had about twenty scholars, and he taught the same school the two following winters. School commissioners had been elected, but they gave little or no attention to school matters, and Mr. Dixon taught his first term without a certificate. In 1847 he was elected school commissioner, and he was really the first commissioner to give any attention to the public schools. In early life he was also tax collector, and served on the town board for two years. He was both assessor and collector in 1871 and 1872.

When Mrs. Dixon began keeping house on Section 30, in the spring of 1848, the surrounding country was wild and unbroken. There Mr. Dixon improved a farm, and afterward exchanged it for one north of the village, which he cultivated for twenty years. Then he sold it, and bought a farm of 320 acres, which he occupied until, in the spring of 1899, he sold it to his son Ora. That year he and his son removed to Fennimore. Now, at the age of eighty-three years, William R. Dixon is remarkably well for his venerable age. He has done his share in the development of this region. He is a Republican politically, and a Methodist in religion.

Mr. Dixon lost his first wife in 1855, and he married in April, 1859, Miss Harriet Johnson, who died in 1864. He was the father of four children by his first marriage, two of whom are now living: Mrs. Ellen Bunerman, of Cylinder, Iowa; and Ora A., of Fennimore. George and Mary L. are deceased. Emily (the wife of Clark Streeter, of Iowa county) and Walter are the children of the second union.

William R. Dixon and his brother George W. are the only members of their father's family who came to Wisconsin. George settled in the town of Fennimore, where he married, and he died in 1863, leaving a wife and two children. The widow and one daughter have passed away. The other daughter is the widow of Abe Howe, and lives in Fennimore.

ORA A. DIXON, the eldest son of William R., was born June 20, 1850, and has always lived in the immediate vicinity of his parents' home. He bought the old homestead, which he has recently sold, and now resides in Fennimore. On Nov. 4, 1876, he married Miss Eliza Switzer, whose birth occurred in Fennimore July 30, 1854, a daughter of John Switzer, an old pioneer of the county. To this union four children have been born, and three of them are living: Cora Gertrude is the wife of William Monteith, of Clark county, Wis.; William R. is a young man, and is studying electrical engineering; Katie is at home; Electa Pearl died in infancy.

CHARLES ALFRED BACON, M. A., occupies the position of Professor of the French Language and Literature in Beloit College, and also serves as librarian of that institution. He is one of the energetic men in the Faculty, and holds a prominent place in the public esteem as thoroughly versed in his special field, and at the same time broadly informed, and an inspiring presence wherever encountered. He comes of a scholarly line, and is himself devoted to the interests of true learning, with an eye of kindly regard for a studious youth, and a disposition to help every budding genius unfold its wings.

Prof. Bacon was born in Brattleboro, Vt., in 1860, and is a son of Rev. William F. and Mary W. (Beal) Bacon, both natives of Massachusetts. Their children are as follows: Prof. Charles A.; Prof. George, vice-principal of the Beloit Academy; Rev. William A., a Congregational minister at Shelburne Falls, Mass.; Theodore H., a teacher in Danbury, Conn.; Arthur A., an instructor in physics in Dartmouth College; and Julia A., at Medford, Mass. The father was a teacher when a young man, and in later life became a clergyman. He is living at Medford, Mass., at the present time. His father, Isaac P. Bacon, was a native of Bedford, Mass., born in a home that had been the birthplace of eight generations of the family. The ancestors of the Bacon family came from the North of Ireland, and located at Bedford in 1642. Michael Bacon was the founder of the family in this country. Isaac P. Bacon had two children, a son and a daughter. He was a carriage builder, and a prominent character in his day, and for many years was chairman of the board of selectmen, but declined to go to the Legislature. He died in Bedford.

Capt. George Beal, the father of Mary W., was born in Hingham, Mass., of English descent, and it is recorded of him that he brought the first steam vessel into Boston harbor; it was the old steamboat "Lincoln," and he had superintended its construction in Philadelphia. He spent the greater portion of his adult life on the water, and was well known in Boston. He reached the age of seventy-eight. He was a veteran of the war of 1812. Capt. Beal was the father of nine children.

Prof. Charles A. Bacon spent his youth and earlier manhood in Massachusetts, graduating from Dartmouth College in 1883. He immediately began a career as a teacher which has been singularly successful. His first engagement was at the Classical Academy at Hallowell, Maine, where he taught one year. The young teacher passed from there to the high school at Wakefield, Mass., where he filled a year's engagement. In 1885 he came to Beloit to take the chair of astronomy in Beloit College, and was engaged in that department until a recent date. In 1899 he became the occupant of the chair noted above, a position for which he is well fitted by wide study and reading, and by special work done in Europe in 1888 and 1890. In 1888 the college library was put into his charge, and he has displayed much zeal in its management to accomplish the best results. He is regarded as one of the pillars of Beloit College.

Prof. Bacon and Mrs. Alice G. Sheldon were united in marriage July 5, 1893, and they have a pleasant home at No. 641 Church street. Mrs. Bacon was the widow of Preston Sheldon, M. D., and the daughter of Rev. Henry M. and Frances (Foster) Grout, of Concord, Mass. She had two children by her former marriage, Paul G. and Rex. The Professor and his talented wife are members of the Congregational Church. He is a Republican in politics.

HENRY SMITH, who is numbered among the leading business men of Stitzer, town of Liberty, Grant county, is a good representative of the German-American element in the country.

Mr. Smith was born in 1837, a son of Adam Smith, also a native of Germany. In 1855 the latter immigrated to America with his family, and the same year located in Grant county, Wis., on a farm in the town of Little Grant, where they resided for nine years; they then removed to the town of Liberty, and settled on a small farm near the present village of Stitzer. Here Adam Smith died, in 1873, his wife surviving him for five years, when she too passed away. The subject of this sketch was one of a family of three children, two sons and one daughter. Of these, Henry is the eldest. John died several years ago. The daughter, Elizabeth, is the wife of Ferdinand Hintze.

Henry Smith was about eighteen when he first came to Grant county, where he has since made his home, a period of over forty-five years. Reared to the occupation of farming, he has devoted a number of his years to that pursuit, and borne his part in the development and improvement of Liberty. Always interested in agricultural pursuits, Mr. Smith still owns a fine farm and pleasant home. Soon after the arrival of the railroad here, in 1880, realizing the opportunity offered by this improvement, Mr. Smith engaged in mercantile business, and now also owns and successfully operates a meat market. At first he was associated with Herman Bergheger, but later dissolved that partnership, and now conducts the business alone.

Henry Smith married Miss Mary Ann Garner, daughter of Daniel Garner, of Pennsylvania, and four sons and five daughters have been born of this union.

One reason why Mr. Smith is so deeply interested in the railroad at Liberty is on account of his association with it, for in 1856-57 he assisted in the construction, near Bridgeport, of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, the first that entered Grant county. During the time of his association therewith Mr. Smith worked under Joseph Nathan, one of Grant county's well-known citizens. In political affiliations Mr. Smith is a Republican, and has held several local offices, serving most acceptably. Although he never enjoyed any educational advantages outside his native country, he is well informed and capable, and, by his industry, honesty and thrift, has firmly established himself among the prominent merchants and representative men of his locality.

HENRY TARRANT was born in Berkshire, England, May 23, 1833, son of George and Mary Ann (Chandler) Tarrant. The father was overseer for a large land owner in England, and a gardener by occupation. He had married the daughter of an English maltster, William Chandler, who lived to a good old age; he had four children. George Tarrant, Sr., grandfather of our subject, died in England in middle life, leaving a family of six or seven children.

In 1850 George Tarrant, the father of our subject, emigrated to America and located at Janesville, Wis. There he purchased land, and had expected to engage in floral culture, but three months after his arrival he died, aged forty-six years. His widow survived many years, passing away in 1897, aged eighty-one years. They were Episcopalians in early life, and later Methodists. Six of their children lived to maturity, four sons and two daughters, as follows: Henry, our subject; George, of Durand, Wis.; Sarah, wife of W. H. Howard, of La Prairie; Charles, of Janesville; Fannie, wife of James Beswick, of Rock township; and William, of Custer, South Dakota.

Henry Tarrant, our subject, had lived fourteen years in Berkshire and three years in London, England, prior to coming to America. He had attended the common schools, and in London served as a messenger boy. Coming to America in 1850 with his parents, he went, after his father's death, to Vernon county, Wis., and there, near Viroqua, entered 120 acres of land. He remained there only two years, and in 1854 returned to Janesville, where for a year he operated a sawmill. Mr. Tarrant then bought eighty acres of land in Section 31, La Prairie township, and settled down to the active and, to him, the successful life of a farmer. His present home of 320 acres, comprising the north half of Section 28, La Prairie township, he purchased in 1878, and here he has resided ever since, operating and improving his broad acres, and ranking high among the agriculturists of Rock county.

Mr. Tarrant married, Dec. 26, 1857, Miss Margaret Jane Arnold, daughter of John and Laura (Kemmerer) Arnold, natives of Pennsylvania, and the parents of thirteen children, of whom eleven grew to maturity. Seven of these are now living: Freeman, of Brodhead, Wis.; William, of Bristow, Iowa; Emanuel, of Plymouth township, Rock county; Margaret J., wife of Henry Tarrant; Sarah E., wife of Joseph Van Buskirk, of Blairsburg, Iowa; Christiana, widow of Richard Van Buskirk, of Allison, Butler Co., Iowa; and John, twin brother of Christiana. John Arnold was a farmer, and migrated to Wisconsin in 1843, settling in Rock township, Rock county. Two years later he removed to Plymouth township, took up a farm from the government, and lived there until his death, June 13, 1871, at the age of sixty-six years. He was most highly respected for his integrity and high character. His wife died Jan. 15, 1878, in her seventieth year.

To Mr. and Mrs. Tarrant have been born ten children, seven sons and three daughters, as follows: (1) Ella R. married Edward Kelly, and lives at Elma, Iowa. They have two children living, Harland and Clare C. (2) Clara Jane died aged thirty-eight years. (3) Elmer C. married May Eddy, and is a liveryman of Janesville. They have one son, Leland. (4) Irving H., a Milwaukee druggist, for his first wife married May Sherman, now deceased, by whom he had one child, Stanley S. For his second wife he married Selena Stephens, by whom he has one child, Loraine. (5) Willis M. died in infancy. (6) Arthur died in infancy. (7) Lester M. died in infancy. (8) Willard M., who lives on the home farm, married Cora Eddy, and has three children, Lyle H., Beulah May and Floyd. (9) Ray G. married Bertha Howard, now deceased, and they had one child, Russell. (10) Ethel G. lives at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Tarrant are prominent members of the M. E. Church, of which he is steward. Politically he is a Republican. Mr. Tarrant was twice elected to the State Assembly, serving continuously from 1889 to 1893; filled a vacancy as county treasurer for seven months; and has been called upon repeatedly to fill local offices. For eleven years he has been supervisor, town clerk sixteen years, and chairman of the county board of supervisors two years. For many years he has served as school clerk and director. He is one of the most progressive and influential citizens of La Prairie township.

RUFUS B. SHEFFER is, so far as is known, the oldest living native-born son of Wisconsin in the State, where his parents were among the very first settlers. He was born in New Diggings township, Lafayette county, Nov. 16, 1830, son of Peter and Elizabeth (Bean) Sheffer.

Peter Sheffer was born in Henderson county, Ky., in 1798, son of Pennsylvania Germans. His wife, Elizabeth (Bean), was born at St. Charles, Mo., daughter of Ahab Bean, a native of Tennessee, who located in Benton in 1827, and died there at the age of eighty-four. In 1827 Peter Sheffer came to Wisconsin from Kentucky, and two years later married Elizabeth Bean. Her family were the first to ever reach Galena, Ill., by boat. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Sheffer settled in New Diggings township, and he followed mining as a means of earning a livelihood. They made their home there continuously, with the exception of five years passed in Missouri, a part of which time Mr. Sheffer worked in the mines in Wisconsin, leaving his family in the West. During the Black Hawk war he was a volunteer under Capt. Dodge. His death occurred in 1872, that of his wife in 1852, and they left nine children, of whom Rufus B. is the eldest. Of the others, Alzina is the widow of Andrew Lindsey, of Cuba City, Wis.; Mary, wife of Sebra Beeman, of Kansas; Hester, wife of a Mr. Holder, of Denver, Colo.; Emily, wife of Charles A. Doan, of St. Joseph, Mo.; Henry, of Los Gatos, Cal.; James A., of North Dakota; and George P., of New Diggings, representative in the Legislature from his district in 1896. The last named was a member of Company C, 33d Wis. V. I., in the Civil war. He married, and has three children, John W., Charles H. and Bell.

Rufus B. Sheffer would have had a poor chance indeed for an education had the family not moved to Missouri during his boyhood. There were no schools in Wisconsin at that time near enough for him to attend, and an education would have been almost an impossibility had the family not spent that five years West, where he had the advantage of subscription schools—an advantage of which he eagerly availed himself. His principal work in his boyhood days was on his father's farm. With the outbreak of the Civil war he shouldered his musket and marched to the front, a member of Company E, 43d Wis. V. I., and served in the Western Army until the close of the war; while in Tennessee he was in the engagement at Johnsonville, on the Tennessee river. After his return from war he settled in the town of New Diggings, and there lived until 1884, when he sold that land and moved to his present farm, known as a part of Abraham Looney's old homestead. This farm consists of eighty acres, all finely cultivated, and with good improvements.

During his army service, in 1864, Mr. Sheffer wedded Miss Matilda A. Sheffer, born near Henderson, Ky., in 1844, daughter of David and Eliza C. Sheffer, representatives of one of the old Kentucky families who passed their lives there. Besides Mrs. Matilda A. Sheffer there are four other children of David Sheffer still living: Thomas; John; Lucy, now Mrs. John Jones, of Kentucky; and Robert, of Pine Bluff, Ark. To Mr. and Mrs. Rufus B. Sheffer five children have been born, of whom the following is the record: Robert S., a farmer of New Diggings, born in January, 1865, married Elizabeth Peasley, and has two children, Ural and Zula B.; Albert Frederick, a farmer and miner of New Diggings, born Sept. 20, 1866, married Miss Mary Ellen Corr, and has one daughter, Mary; David E., a farmer of New Diggings, born in May, 1868, married Miss Annie Lowe, of Lafayette county, and has two children, Gladys and Clyde V.; Lilly Josephine; and Lizzie B., born in August, 1879, a graduate of the Lead Mine school, class of 1899, is at home.

Rufus B. Sheffer has always been a Republican. His father before him was a staunch Whig, and while both took an active part in public affairs there have been no evidences of any official aspirations. In religious belief the family were raised in the Methodist Church, and have been active in Christian work. Socially Rufus B. Sheffer is a member of the I. O. O. F., Lead Mine Lodge, No. 168.

HON. CORNELIUS MORTIMER TREAT. A splendid specimen of what for some years has been called the "old school" of gentlemen may be found in the personality of Mr. Treat, for many years a prominent citizen of Clinton, Rock county. He embodies those traits of dignity, broad-mindedness and kind-heartedness which command universal esteem and respect. Mr. Treat is self-educated, in the sense that his school days were limited to a few terms' attendance at the district schools of his youth, but the broader education of worldly experience has been his, supplemented by application to books by his own fireside. The thoroughness of the education thus attained is amply attested by his long and successful career as county superintendent of schools, and by his entire life work. Mr. Treat was born in Angelica, Allegany Co., N. Y., April 25, 1817, son of Amaziah and Sallie (Colvin) Treat, natives of Massachusetts and Vermont, respectively.

Cornelius Treat, his grandfather, was a native of Massachusetts, of English and Scottish descent, and for seven years was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, being present at the surrender of Gen. Burgoyne. He participated once in an expedition against the Indians, and had a thrilling and narrow escape from death. Joining Capt. Woodward's Company of Rangers, in New York State, he marched with them to Fort Schuyler, where Utica now stands, and thence proceeded in a northwesterly direction in search of hostile Indians. They numbered sixty-two men, rank and file, and were guided by a faithful Indian who forewarned them of danger. Heedless, the captain advanced, until finally, surrounded by the savages in greatly superior numbers, they were ambushed and the entire party killed except Mr. Treat, who fled and secreted himself in a fallen tree that was partly split open. Into this log he crawled, feet foremost, with his rifle at command, intending to sell his life as dearly as possible. The Indians in pursuit stood upon the fallen tree and there conversed, then continued onward in their search without discovering him. He lay there all night, and in the morning started for Fort Schuyler, which he reached twenty-four hours later. Cornelius Treat followed farming in New York State, and for many years was a justice of the peace. He reared a large family, and lived to the age of eighty years. The maternal grandfather of our subject, Rufus Colvin, was a native of Vermont, of Scottish and English extraction. He followed farming, reared a large family, and died in Monroe county, N. Y., only a half-mile distant from the home of our subject's paternal grandfather.

Amaziah Treat, the father of our subject, was born in 1784. He served in the war of 1812, and was at Fort Erie when it was blown up. He was a farmer and millwright, and in 1818 removed from Angelica, N. Y., to southern Illinois, where he died of malarial fever the following year, aged thirty-five. His wife survived him many years. She removed from New York to Ohio, and thence, in 1847, to Wisconsin, locating in the town of Turtle, Rock county, where she died when over seventy years of age. In religious faith she was a devout member of the Baptist Church. To Amaziah and Sallie Treat were born four children, three daughters and one son, of whom two are now living: Cornelius M., our subject; and Adeline, wife of Joel Miner, of Turtle township, Rock county.

Cornelius M. Treat, our subject, when three years old was taken by his widowed mother to Monroe county, N. Y., where he was reared on the farm, receiving his education in the district schools. When nineteen years old, in 1836, he removed with his mother to a farm near New London, Huron Co., Ohio, where for nine years he taught school in winters and worked on the farm in summers, also making brick for two seasons.

On Aug. 29, 1841, at Ruggles, Ohio, Mr. Treat married Miss Phebe Alvira Curtis, daughter of Charles and Jemima (Treat) Curtis. In 1847 Mr. Treat removed with his family and mother to Rock county, Wis., making the journey by team, and consuming sixteen days on the trip, which can now be made by rail in eleven hours. Mr. Treat purchased eighty acres of land in Turtle township, which he improved and occupied. In 1849 he leased a hotel at Belvidere, Ill., which he kept between three and four years, removing in 1853 to Janesville, Rock Co., Wis., where he bought property, and operated for three years an express between Janesville and Belvidere, at the latter place connecting for Chicago with the newly-built Galena & Chicago Union railroad (now the Northwestern). Mr. Treat hauled many loads of goods between the termini of his express route, the round trip requiring three days. In 1856 he sold out this business, and purchased in Turtle township a farm of 100 acres, to which he removed from Janesville. Here for eight years he farmed in summer, teaching school in winter. He was for nine years town superintendent of schools, and county superintendent for eight years; while serving in the latter capacity he examined both the present State supply and his immediate predecessor for a certificate to teach.

On Dec. 24, 1868, Mr. Treat removed with his family to the village of Clinton, having erected his present attractive home, his wife planting the seeds for some of the large trees which now adorn the lawn. Since coming to Clinton Mr. Treat has engaged in the fire insurance business. To Mr. and Mrs. Treat were born two children, Emily Diadama and Curtis Mortimer. Emily Diadama married Oscar C. Gates, who is now deceased: she has three children, Cyrus Mortimer, Allee and Volney Curtis. Curtis M. married Miss Jennie Farrington, and they have two children, Lillian Gertrude and Leona Farrington; they reside at Buffalo, N. Y., where he is secretary of the Merchants Exchange, the fore-runner of the Pan-American Exposition.

Politically our subject is independent. He served as a member of the State Assembly in 1862-63. Mr. Treat is a prominent Mason, a member of Good Samaritan Lodge, No. 135, F. & A. M., Beloit Chapter, No. 9, R. A. M., and Beloit Commandery, No. 6, K. T. In all his successes his amiable and good wife has done her part, and they deserve mutual credit for the sunshine which they have scattered about them in the pathway of life. This aged couple have won the kindest regard and the deep affection of all who know them, by their charitable works and many good deeds.

MRS. ORSON M. RICHARDS. One of the well-known and honored names of Grant county was that of Orson M. Richards, who passed out of life in March, 1887, and his estimable widow resides in Elmo, Grant county, where she is much esteemed.

Mrs. Richards was born in Clinton county, Ill., March 14, 1832, a daughter of James and Narcissa (Gingles) Jones, the former of whom was born in Washington county, Va., in 1796, and the latter in North Carolina, in 1806. They were married in Illinois, and came to Galena early in 1822, Mr. Jones going out from there as one of the Home Guards in the Black Hawk war. By profession he was an editor, and managed and edited the well-known "Miner's Journal," the first paper printed in Galena, Ill., up to the time of his death, in 1834. He left a wife and five children to mourn his demise: Isabella was the wife of William Reves, of Missouri; Henry married and settled in Tennessee, where he died when only twenty-six; Emily died in Galena, when a girl of thirteen; Oswald died in Lafayette county when a young man; Mrs. Richards being the only survivor.

Our subject grew to beautiful womanhood in Galena, where she was educated, and in 1851 married Orson M. Richards, of Grant county, Wis., who was born in Morgan county, Ill., Jan. 31, 1831. With his parents he came to Wisconsin, settling at Elk Grove, Lafayette county, and later moving to Big Patch, Grant county. Soon after marriage Mr. Richards purchased the farm in Elk Grove where they lived at the time of his death. Mr. Richards was a man well and favorably known in this section for his many excellent traits of character, and in his death the township lost one of its most progressive and energetic men. For many years he had been actively identified with the Republican party, and all his life bore the reputation of one whose word was as good as his bond. Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Richards: (1) Walter, born in Grant county, in 1852, lives in Madison, in declining health. (2) Isabella was born in Lafayette county in 1855, and is the wife of W. D. Millman, who resides on his farm in Lafayette county; they have two children, Lora and Benny. (3) Mary, born in Lafayette county in 1860, was educated in the Platteville Normal School. (4) Grant, born in September, 1862, began the study of law in 1884, under James Murphy, continuing for two years, and was admitted to the Bar at Wichita, Kan., in 1886; on account of ill health he changed to newspaper work, editing the Newton Daily Republican until 1889, and displayed talents of a high order. Mr. Richards was married in 1889 to Miss Frances Scribner, of Newton, Kan., and they moved to Santa Rosa, Cal., where he died in 1898. During his residence in California he was the brilliant editor of the Santa Rosa Republican, gaining the favor of a large body of patrons. His death took out of life a bright and scholarly young man, and he was most sincerely mourned by a large circle of friends. His widow survives. (5) Rachel was born in 1865, died in 1889, leaving a vacant place in the home circle which can never be filled. (6) Milton, born in Lafayette county in August, 1867, was appointed station agent for the Chicago & Northwestern Railway at Elmo, Grant county, in 1888, and acceptably filled that position until his death, in 1897, this sad event being a heavy blow to his deeply bereaved mother. (7) Eva, born in September, 1871, grew up in Lafayette county, was educated in the schools of Wisconsin, and is now filling the position of agent and telegraph operator at Elmo station, on the Northwestern railroad.

Mrs. Richards has reared her family in the Presbyterian Church, and they are most highly esteemed. As politicians, Mr. Richards and his sons were of the Republican faith, active and energetic in work for the party. Mrs. Richards and the family are among the best citizens of Grant county. She is a lady of refinement and culture, whom sorrow has visited only to leave her a nobler woman.

CONRAD NAPP (deceased) was an early settler in Grant county, having come here in 1846. He was born in Werlau, Prussia, Oct. 15, 1829, a member of a family of nine children, six sons and three daughters. The father of these, also named Conrad, brought his family to the United States in the year named above, and settled on an improved farm at Hurricane, in Lancaster township, Grant Co., Wis. There the parents passed the remainder of their lives, the mother passing away Nov. 27, 1872, and the father March 3, 1885. The surviving members of the family are Jasper and Anton. Mrs. Sophia Gelbach died Jan. 24, 1900; Philip died in April, 1900; Mrs. Mary Ann Pabst, William, Charles, Mrs. Catherine Hain and Conrad are also deceased.

Conrad Napp remained with his parents until his marriage, Feb. 28, 1849, to Miss Ann Elizabeth Bruick, a daughter of Philip and Christiana Bruick, and born in the same town in Prussia in which her husband had his birth. She came to the United States in 1848, in company with her parents, whose family comprised Catherine, who afterward became Mrs. Henry Hall and died several years ago; Ann Elizabeth, Mrs. Napp; and Christiana, who became Mrs. Will Belscamper, and died in February, 1883.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Napp settled on forty acres of timber land near Hurricane. This tract Mr. Napp partially cleared up, but he also gave a great deal of his attention to lead mining. About six years later he sold his place and rented his father's farm, on which he lived three years, and then bought a farm in the township of Waterloo. Three years later he lost his house by fire, and soon afterward sold the land, purchasing a farm two miles from Lancaster, owned by John Schreiner. Here he again lost his house by fire, but rebuilt, and traded the place for a farm in Fennimore township, adjoining a tract of eighty acres which he had purchased some time previously. His farm now comprised 240 acres. Later he added another tract, of eighty acres. When Mr. Napp became well advanced in years he sold his entire estate, of 320 acres, to his eldest son, but 120 acres are still in the possession of the family. In 1885 Mr. Napp retired to a pleasant home in Lancaster, where his widow and her daughter Mattie still reside, and where he passed away Aug. 31, 1893. He was greatly respected as a citizen, and a Christian gentleman, he and wife having been members of the Presbyterian Church for many years. When he was called away Grant county suffered a severe loss, as he had ever been a most public-spirited man, and ready at all times to contribute of his means to the promotion of the welfare of his township and county.

Mr. Napp, at his death, left his widow with nine children, viz.: Elizabeth, Mary Margaret, Conrad, Charles Philip, Caroline, Emma, John Calvin, David and Mattie. Mrs. Napp, as was her husband, is held in the highest esteem by all who knew her, or who knew him.

ISAAC TINDELL. Among the respected citizens of Beetown township, Grant county, no one deserves more esteem than Isaac Tindell, the subject of this sketch, who is an honored veteran of the Civil war. Mr. Tindell is a native of Tennessee, having been born in Knoxville, that State, in 1834, and coming in the family migration to Illinois, and thence to Wisconsin, where settlement was made at Montfort. The father returned to Illinois where he died in 1864, the mother passing away a few years ago, at the age of seventy-five years. Since 1852 our subject has been a resident of Beetown township, where he is well known and highly regarded. On July 19, 1853, at Dubuque, Iowa, Mr. Tindell was married to Miss Maria Polkinghorn, who died Feb. 10, 1900. Eleven children were born of the union, six now living, four sons and two daughters.

On the organization of the 43d Wis. V. I., our subject enlisted for service in the Civil war, in August, 1864. The service of this regiment was principally in Tennessee, and our subject was for a considerable time on detached duty, being at one season in the engineer corps. Although seeing hard and continuous service, Mr. Tindell escaped serious illness or wound, but suffered a sunstroke, at Nashville, and has never recovered entirely from this affliction, being able to do little manual labor. He enjoys the esteem of his old neighbors and friends, for his duty was bravely done when he had the strength. Like many others of the old veterans, he sees the shadows beginning to creep nearer, although he can not realize the blank which will be felt by the younger generation, when the last "old soldier" shall have stolen away to the great camp of the Hereafter.

James Bennett, his father, was born about 1807, in Cornwall, England, where he was reared a miner, and where he married Mary Record. In 1837 the family, then consisting of the parents and four children, three sons and one daughter, came from England to Wisconsin, journeying directly to Mineral Point, where the father engaged in mining. At that time Indians and wild animals were numerous, and in all respects the country was a hardly discovered wilderness, the only white citizens being the few miners. The wife and mother, unused to such pioneer life, besought her husband to return to England. Mr. Pilling, to whom Mr. Bennett sold his mineral, was, on account of the stringency of money, unable to pay cash for the same, and so turned over to Mr. Bennett a quarter section of land, which became the family homestead, and where our subject still lives. This is but an illustration of the chance or Providence that determines one's lot; had Mr. Bennett secured cash for his ore, he would have taken his people back to England, and everything would have been vastly different. The land was heavily timbered, but in due time James Bennett, the son, succeeded in clearing it up and reducing it to the condition of a model Wisconsin farm.

James Bennett, Sr., was an industrious and hard-working man, of exceedingly powerful physique, and possessed an iron constitution. As an illustration of his powers of endurance it is remembered that at one time, having purchased a lead mine, shortly after he had located on the farm, he was accustomed to walk to his work in the morning, and home again at night, making a daily tramp of sixteen miles, besides doing a long day of hard work. That the mine developed well, and richly rewarded his intense exertions, would seem only a fair dealing of fortune. For some years he lived in Mineral Point, that he and his family might be near the mine, and then, returning to the farm, erected the stone house where he and his wife passed their last days, and where his descendants are still living. Of the four children of this honest and worthy couple who came with them from England, it is possible that James Bennett is the only one now living. John, the eldest, was killed by foul air at Galena, when about nineteen years old. Mary Ann married Charles Cox, and after his death became the wife of Zacharias Warren; she died in April, 1881. William went to California with his father, soon after the discovery of gold in that region; after returning to Wisconsin he journeyed into the West, and his whereabouts to-day are entirely unknown. Mrs. Catherine Jane Burg, of Mineral Point, another daughter, was born in Mineral Point. James Bennett, Jr., whose name opens this sketch, was born in England in 1832, and came to America with his parents, and he has had his home where he now lives since the first venture of the parents into agricultural life. Going to California in 1854, he returned in 1859, after an eventful and varied experience in the land of gold. James Bennett, Jr., married Hannah Jeffery, a native of England, who died Feb. 1, 1881, the mother of six children: William G., whose farm adjoins that of his father; Nellie, the wife of Benjamin Mitchell, of Willow Springs; Robert, also a resident of Willow Springs; Byron, living at the family homestead; and Phillipia and James, both of Willow Springs.

BYRON BENNETT, who lives on the family homestead, and on whom its management and work now very largely fall, was born at his present home March 1, 1871, and has always lived at home, from an early age relieving his father from much care and worry. Byron Bennett was married to Miss Mary Ellen King, a daughter of William John and Mary Ann (Ferreil) King, and to this union have come two children: Henry R., born Oct. 10, 1897; and Hannah Irene, born April 29, 1900.

WILLIAM M. ELDREDGE belongs to the present generation of business men of Janesville, whose native intelligence, sound common sense, good judgment, and enlightened public spirit, have done so much toward the up-building and improvement of the city. He was born at Clinton, Oneida Co., N. Y., Nov. 1, 1848, son of Barnabas B. and Louisa M. (Hutchins) Eldredge. The original home of the family was in Wales, whence emigrated his great-great-grandfather, who settled on the rock-girt peninsula of Cape Cod. The story of his ancestry is most interesting, and for its recital in detail the reader is referred to the biographical sketch of his father, B. B. Eldredge, which may be found elsewhere in this volume.

Our subject was but a child when his parents made their home in Janesville, bringing him with them. He attended the public schools in that place, and later for a year the Liberal Institute, at Clinton, Oneida Co., N. Y., of which school his father was an alumnus. For some two years after returning home he was content to hold a clerical position in various stores. His next experience was as an assistant to the distinguished civil engineer, Capt. Edward Ruger, with whom he was associated five or six years. He next studied pharmacy, and was one of the first twenty-five applicants to whom the State Board of Pharmacy (in the year of its official existence) granted certificates on June 1, 1882. For some sixteen or seventeen years he was identified with the drug business, but he is now a successful real-estate agent, of quick perception, flawless memory and unflinching tact.

Mr. Eldredge married Sarah C. Pease, and has one daughter, Louise H., wife of John Barlass, of Janesville, Wis. His wife's father, John J. R. Pease, married Cornelia M. Ruger. Mrs. Eldredge has been confirmed in the Episcopal Church. In private life Mr. Eldredge is universally popular. Generous and genial, he readily makes friends, whom he retains through his high sense of moral obligation. He is a Republican in politics. Socially he is a member of Janesville Lodge, No. 55, A. F. & A. M.; and of Janesville Chapter, No. 5, R. A. M. His home is at No. 65 Prospect avenue.

SAMUEL BRUCE BUCKMASTER, M. D., is one of the best-known physicians of the Northwest. His learning and character command the confidence of the public, and he is rapidly acquiring a National reputation in certain important departments of medical science.

Dr. Buckmaster was born in Lima, Ohio, April 26, 1853, and is now at the full prime of his manly powers. He has had an extensive and varied experience, and is an alert and vigorous man. He is a son of Samuel R. and Mary (Tracy) Buckmaster, both natives of Pennsylvania, who were the parents of five sons and two daughters, four of whom are now living: Joshua, at San Francisco; Ella, Mrs. Thompson, of Chicago; Dr. Samuel B.; and Harry E., of Chicago. Samuel R. Buckmaster was a manufacturer in Ohio, whither his parents moved when he was only six months old, settling in Holmes county, and living there some years. There he grew to manhood, and there he was married. About 1835 he located at Lima, Ohio, and engaged in the manufacture of furniture. He was a prominent man in his day, and served as sheriff of the county for several terms. At the breaking out of the Civil war he organized Company B, 1st Ohio Cavalry, was appointed captain of that company, and served a year or more, when he was severely injured by his horse falling upon him. He left the service a chronic invalid, and died from his injury in 1878, at the age of sixty-five. His wife died in 1865, when about fifty years old. One of his sons, Jasper N., ran away from home and enlisted as a drummer boy at the age of fourteen, and being a brilliant boy rose rapidly in the service, receiving commission as a captain before he was eighteen; he died of injuries received in the war. Dr. Buckmaster had two other brothers in the war, George and Joshua, and two brothers-in-law, who were taken prisoners and confined at Andersonville.

Joshua Buckmaster, the grandfather of Dr. Samuel B., was a native of Maryland, of English descent, and moved into eastern Ohio while it was yet a wilderness. He had a family of several sons and daughters. He moved to Lima later in life, and died near Toledo when eighty-six years old. He was a man of sterling character. He served in the war of 1812, being a volunteer with Perry in his battle at Put-in-Bay, and his father was a veteran of the Revolutionary war. The Buckmasters are an old New England family, and the name is familiar in Colonial records since 1638, the year they came from England to settle at Sudbury, Mass. Mrs. Mary (Tracy) Buckmaster lost her father when she was a small girl. He was a native of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Samuel B. Buckmaster was reared in Lima, Ohio, until he reached the age of twelve years, when his mother died, and he went to live with his brother George, in Toledo, Iowa, only spending a year with him, however. He attended high school at Peru, Ind., and business college at Toledo, Ohio, taught school one term, and then became bookkeeper for the Ford-Hamlet bending works, at Tippecanoe City, Ohio. When eighteen years old he went to Yreka City, Cal., and taught school three years in that place. Returning East, he was a bookkeeper in Chicago four years. While in California he was near the lava beds where the celebrated Modoc war occurred; he went in as a volunteer, and helped care for the bodies of Gen. Canby and the other peace commissioners who had perished at the hands of Capt. Jack and his band of bloodthirsty savages. On his return East our subject began the study of medicine at Janesville, with Dr. Henry Palmer, surgeon-general of Wisconsin. He was graduated from the Medical Department of the University of Virginia in 1879, and the next fall took a special course in the University of the City of New York and at Bellevue Hospital. In the spring of 1880 he received the appointment of third assistant physician at the State Hospital for the Insane, at Madison, Wis., and a year later was made second assistant. Another year and he was promoted to be first assistant, and in July, 1884, when thirty-one years old, he was the unanimous choice of the State board of supervision of Wisconsin institutions for the position of superintendent of the State Hospital. He made a record rarely surpassed for efficiency in every department of his labor, and in five years became widely known. In December, 1889, he resigned his position that he might give his children proper educational advantages—the hospital being too far from the city—and located in Chicago, in which city he was engaged in practice several years.

While superintendent of the hospital Dr. Buckmaster was credited with making many improvements in caring for the insane. He was the first superintendent in the West to adopt the non-restraint system; and in recognition of his work in this line was elected vice-president for Wisconsin of the Medico-Legal Society of the United States. His portrait was published in the group of twelve eminent alienists given as a premium by the "Medico-Legal Journal."

While in Chicago Dr. Buckmaster was elected adjunct professor of physiology in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and later held the position of professor of medical and surgical electricity in the same institution. He also became professor of physiology and president of the West Side Dispensary, which treats nearly 25,000 patients yearly. He has read numerous valuable and instructive papers before various medical bodies, and is a frequent contributor to medical publications; belongs to several medical societies, and is a member of the Loyal Legion of ex-Officers of the United States Army and Navy, his certificate of admission into the Loyal Legion bearing the name of President Rutherford B. Hayes. Membership in this order passes from father to son, and he holds it because his father was an officer in the Union service, and died, as noted above, from injuries received while in service.

Dr. Buckmaster did not find the climate of Chicago congenial to either his family or himself, and he accordingly bought an interest in the sanitarium at Hudson, Wis., of which popular resort he was superintendent for three years, when he disposed of his interest there, accepting a similar position in the Oakwood Sanitarium, at Lake Geneva, Wis. His health giving out, on account of the close confinement necessitated by his work, he disposed of his interests there, and spent a couple of months in Minnesota recuperating. While there he visited Dr. Hart, who was an Indian agent, and, an outbreak occurring, he nearly lost his life. Dr. Buckmaster came to Janesville Dec. 1, 1898, with the intention of making his permanent home in the city. Here his wife's people live, and here he has many friends. He has practiced from the day of his arrival here, and now commands a patronage second to no physician in the State.

The Doctor was married to Miss Minnie Holdredge May 9, 1882. She is a daughter of Samuel and Mary (Lee) Holdredge, and a lady of many accomplishments, being a graduate of the Boston College of Oratory, and was instructor in elocution at the Lawrence University, Appleton, Wis. Her great-grandfather was a Revolutionary soldier, and made a speech at Cooper Institute when one hundred and ten years old, speaking to ten thousand people; he lived six years after that remarkable event. Dr. and Mrs. Buckmaster have three daughters: Mary E., Ada A. and Agnes T. She is a member of the Congregational Church, and is in every way a worthy associate of so learned and popular a character as her husband. The Doctor is a Republican in political sentiment.

FRANK ROWE, a retired miner, now living at Platteville, Grant county, has been an industrious and hard-working man, and with no friend save his own indomitable spirit and strong right arm he has gained a competency and commanded the esteem of all with whom he has come in contact.

Mr. Rowe was born in Cornwall, England, Oct. 1, 1833, son of Frank and Fannie (Kitto) Rowe, who were born and married in England. The elder Rowe came to Platteville in 1847, when Wisconsin was just assuming Statehood, and engaged in mining and farming. He purchased real estate near the old fair grounds, where he built a brick house, which is still standing, in a good state of preservation. He also owned a farm two and a half miles from town, on which he and his wife spent their lives. He died in 1880, when eighty-two years old, and his wife passed away two years later, at the age of eighty-four. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and were never absent from religious services except on account of sickness or some other weighty cause. They had a family of eight children, of whom our subject was the eldest. Lavinia married William Waters, and died six months after her marriage. Catherine came from England, and married William Waters. Ellen married Cornelius James, and died leaving four daughters. Emily (twin of Ellen) married Richard James, of Mineral Point, and is the mother of four children. William was born in England, married a lady of Sioux City, Iowa, and is a harness merchant in that State. James is a retired farmer at Le Mars, Iowa; he has two children, Charles and Nellie. Lavinia, the youngest of the family, was born in Platteville, and makes her home with her brother, the subject of this sketch.

Frank Rowe came to Platteville when about thirteen years of age. He was educated in the public schools of England, and never attended school in this country. After coming to Wisconsin with his parents he engaged in mining until 1852, in which year he went to California, crossing the Plains with an ox-team. The Indians made their journey exceedingly perilous. They went through Salt Lake, where the Mormons were fully established, and their entire trip was both interesting and dangerous. Mr. Rowe remained in the mines for a period of five years, and came back to his Wisconsin home in 1857, continuing mining until 1860. That year Mr. Rowe and Miss Kittie Wilcox were married. Mrs. Rowe is the daughter of Thomas and Mary Wilcox, of Cornwall, England, and was born in that country March 2, 1842. Her parents moved to Wales, where the father died in 1854, and from that country Mrs. Wilcox came to Wisconsin with her children, of whom Mrs. Rowe is the youngest. She was educated in the public schools in England and in Grant county, Wis. Her brothers were old-time Californians. James is a retired miner at Red Jacket, Mich. Thomas (deceased) married Mary Morgans, of Wales, and they had two sons and two daughters. Ann (deceased) married William Nichols, and they had four children who grew to maturity, Martha, William, John and Frank. Mary (deceased) married Stephen Higgs, by whom she had three children, Martha, Stephen and Mary; she later became the wife of Edward Dunstone, of Blackhawk, Colo., by whom she had two children, Thomas and Annie. Susan (deceased) married William Osborne, by whom she had two children, Thomas and Emily; by her second husband, William Johns, she had three children, William, Henry and Mary. Elizabeth (deceased) married James Pascoe, and had three children, Elizabeth, William and James. Mrs. Wilcox, the mother, died in 1865, in New York.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Rowe settled at Hancock, Mich., where he worked in the mines a year or more. They lived for a short time at Dover, N. J., and at Staten Island, N. Y., at which place he was a superintendent of mines for a company of New York capitalists, and was engaged in that capacity some three years. In 1867 the young couple came back to Platteville, where they engaged in the millinery trade, which they have carried on for over thirty years. They purchased a home on Oak street, which they now rent. In 1899 they purchased the new Albertson home, on Southworth avenue, one of the finest homes in Platteville. It is finished in hard wood, and contains every modern improvement. They own considerable real estate in the town of West Superior, Wis. Mrs. Rowe has made her millinery business very prosperous, and is highly successful. She has many friends, and a wide circle of constant patrons. Our subject and his wife are attendants at the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is an independent voter, and does his own thinking.

HORATIO PLUM IRISH, a highly respected farmer of Lancaster township, Grant county, and a veteran of the war of the Rebellion, was born in Hamburg, Erie Co., N. Y., Nov. 26, 1838, and is descended from New England ancestry.

Stephen B. Irish, father of Horatio P., was a native of Vermont, born near Rutland Oct. 2, 1795, and was a son of Daniel L. Irish, also a native of the Green Mountain State, and a hero of the Revolutionary war. Stephen B. was a soldier in the war of 1812, and, as Horatio P. was a veteran in the Civil war, it is evident that the family possesses unalloyed patriotism and gallant military ardor and mettle. Daniel L. Irish and family migrated from Vermont to Erie county, N. Y., when Stephen B. was about twelve years old, and there passed the remainder of their days. Stephen B. and a brother, Sylvester, were the only two of a numerous family to come to the west, Sylvester residing for some time in Grant county, Wis., and then departing for Minnesota, while Stephen B. remained here.

Stephen B. Irish grew to manhood in the wilds of western New York, and there married Abigail Dustin, a native of New Hampshire, a daughter of Timothy and Prudence Dustin, and a descendant of Hannah Dustin, one of the most famous women in the early history of the Colony of New Hampshire, who, it will be remembered by the student of Colonial history, was captured by hostile Indians, and a number of her family slain. One night she succeeded, by means of the noiseless tomahawk, in killing her sleeping savage captors and in making her escape. The Dustin family was also related to the Lovejoy family, one member of which, who was among the earliest of Abolitionists, was foully murdered by pro-slavery adversaries.

In 1844 Stephen B. Irish brought his family, consisting of his wife and seven children, to the State of Wisconsin, coming from Buffalo, N. Y., via the lakes to Milwaukee, and thence by wagon to Hurricane, Grant county; he arrived on the 14th day of September, of that year. Mr. Irish here entered eighty acres of government land, purchased eighty additional acres, and at once began to convert the wilderness in which he had settled into a productive farm. Here his wife died Feb. 8, 1876, and his own death occurred Nov. 4, 1879, after he had passed the age of eighty-four years. He was held in the highest esteem by his fellow citizens, as he was endowed with an intelligence far above the average. He was possessed of an extremely retentive memory, was a constant student of the Bible, and was well versed in history and in general literature. He was of a kindly disposition, and was cheerful and hopeful in his views of life. He was a member of the Free-Will Baptist Church, but was not entirely creed-bound, as he was somewhat liberal in his religious views and opinions.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen B. Irish were the parents of a numerous family of children, of whom four at least died young, in the State of New York, viz.: Dustin, Ambrose, Prudence, and John. Of the seven who came to Grant county with the parents, three still survive: Lucinda, widow of Elijah Hampton, now living in California; Sarah M., widow of William Small, of Merrill, Iowa; and Horatio P., who is the youngest of the family. Of the four who died in Grant county, Ezekiel passed away Oct. 2, 1845; Timothy in 1846, at the age of ten years; Caleb L., March 27, 1858, in his thirty-ninth year; and Lyman D., Jan. 11, 1876, at the age of fifty-one years, from the effects of fatigue and exposure endured while serving in Company C, 2d Wisconsin Cavalry, in the war of the Rebellion.

Horatio Plum Irish, the only surviving male representative of his father's family, was about six years old when brought to Grant county, and was reared to manhood on the home farm. On April 5, 1860, he married Miss Maria A. Morrell, daughter of Ruel and Eliza (Cooley) Morrell, whose biography is given elsewhere. In December, 1861, Mr. Irish, fired with patriotic fervor, enlisted in Company C, 2d Wisconsin Volunteer Cavalry (the same in which his brother, Lyman D., enlisted), but was soon afterward seized with erysipelas, which prevented his going to the front and resulted in his discharge. But Mr. Irish was not to be foiled in his desire to serve his country, and on convalescing re-enlisted, in the same command, with which he served in all its marches and engagements, chiefly in the Southern States bordering on the Mississippi river. He was on active duty continuously, with the exception of sixteen days spent in hospital, until the close of hostilities, in April, 1865, when his regiment was sent to Texas; as a part of the force detailed to keep a watch over the movements of the French army in Mexico under Maximilian. In the winter of 1865 Mr. Irish was honorably discharged, and reached his home Dec. 16. His health has not been robust since his army experience, and he has therefore followed farming as a vocation and means of recuperation up to the present time, although he is a carpenter and builder by trade.

The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Irish has been blessed with two children: Henry, born April 1, 1862, married Julia F. Magonegil; Abbie M., born Dec. 8, 1867, is now the wife of James U. Smith.

Mr. Irish is a Republican in his political affiliations, but has never been a seeker after party favors. Mrs. Irish is a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Aside from his personal merits, the valiant services of Mr. Irish as a soldier, and his long line of American ancestry, have won for him the esteem of his fellow citizens, and he and family stand among the best residents of Grant county.

ADDISON HANDY. Prominent among the early settlers of Grant county is this well-known farmer of Wyalusing township, whose home is in Section 9, and who dates his residence here from Nov. 21, 1855. He was born in the town of Stockton, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., May 30, 1832, a son of Samuel and Rosetta (Clark) Handy, also natives of the Empire State, while the former was of Irish and Scottish descent, the latter of Scottish and French extraction. The paternal grandfather, Obed Handy, was also born in New York.

About 1834 Samuel Handy, accompanied by his family, moved to Branch county, Mich., where the wife and mother died four years later. Soon after her death the family returned to New York, and Addison grew to manhood in the town of Pomfret, Chautauqua county, near the village of Fredonia. In 1853 the family again came West, this time locating in Freeport, Ill., but a year later took up their residence on Blake's Prairie, Grant Co., Wis., which county has been regarded as their home ever since. The father passed away April 16, 1888, at the age of seventy-eight years, his last days being spent at the homes of his children. He had two sons and one daughter, all of whom grew to mature years; Addison and Juliette, widow of William Barr, survive; Mr. Barr was a soldier in the war of the Rebellion, and died at Glen Haven, Grant county, Jan. 17, 1865. Jefferson Handy, the only brother of Addison, died in March, 1886.

On Dec. 13, 1853, Addison Handy was united in marriage, at Jamestown, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., to Miss Sylvia V. McKnight, who was born April 27, 1835, in the same town as her husband, a daughter of David and Jemima (Ellis) McKnight, natives of Massachusetts and Connecticut, respectively. For many years her parents made their home in Chautauqua county, N. Y., where the father, who was born Jan. 6, 1789, died in April, 1863, and the mother, who was born Sept. 9, 1791, died in September, 1862. In their family were seven children, four of whom are now (1901) living: Mrs. Priscilla Little, Mrs. Sally Malory, Mrs. Melvina Younger and Mrs. Sylvia V. Handy. Those deceased were Mrs. Jemima Carr, David W. and William. Mr. and Mrs. Handy have three children: Fred, born Aug. 27, 1855; Frank, born Jan. 11, 1857; and William Eugene, born Feb. 8, 1860. The eldest and youngest are residents of Grant county, Wis., while Frank is now in Iowa.

For almost half a century Mr. and Mrs. Handy have resided in the immediate vicinity of their present home in Wyalusing township. He possesses a remarkably strong constitution, and has ever led an honorable and industrious life. In their declining years he and his worthy wife are enjoying the fruits of their former toil in peace and contentment, respected and esteemed by all who know them. In public affairs Mr. Handy has taken no deep interest. In early life he affiliated with the Democratic party, being a Democrat by inheritance, but since Abraham Lincoln's second election has voted with the Republican party.

REUBEN S. MORSE. This influential citizen of Beetown is one of Grant county's early educators, and has gained distinction not only in civil life, but as a veteran of the Civil war. He comes of Revolutionary stock, his grandfather having served in the patriot army of 1776. He is a native of Maine, as was his father, who was the youngest of seven brothers, and whose baptismal name was Moses. Reuben S. Morse is one of two surviving members of his father's family. Mary J. is the wife of Richmond B. Pierce, of Cassville township, Grant county. Edwin Russell, politician and editor, died at Springfield, Ill., Aug. 6, 1900.

Reuben S. Morse was born June 3, 1835, and was a lad of ten years when his parents removed from Maine to West Cambridge, Mass. Later the family had its home in Lexington, in the same State, a spot the mention of which makes the pulse of every true American beat faster. In 1855 young Reuben determined to seek fortune in the Northwest, and coming to Grant county, Wis., he settled in Waterloo. For several years he devoted himself to teaching, conducting schools at various localities for thirty-five terms. He first came to Beetown township in 1859, and in 1861 located in the village of that name. His early training was in the Whig school of politics, and it is no cause for surprise that upon the formation of the Republican party he at once affiliated with that organization, casting his first Presidential vote for John C. Fremont, in 1856. The outbreak of the Rebellion fired his youthful blood and stirred his patriotic impulses to their depths. In August, 1862, he enlisted in Company I, 20th Wis. V. I., but in the following April was discharged for disability, at Springfield, Mo., and returned home. His health having been partially restored, he re-enlisted, in 1864, this time in Company B, of the 43d Wisconsin Regiment. His service was in Kentucky and Tennessee, and was chiefly on detached duty, his strength being unequal to arduous service in the field. He acted as orderly sergeant, and was ever prompt to respond to every call made upon him. He received his final discharge at Nashville, on June 24, 1865. Mr. Morse keeps alive his recollection of his life as a soldier through his membership in Tom Cox Post, G. A. R., of Lancaster. Since his return home he has been prominent in public affairs, and has been honored alike by his fellow citizens and by the National Government through elevation to various posts of high trust and grave responsibility. For nine years he served as clerk of the township, and for eleven years following 1874 he held the office of postmaster. He also enumerated the township for the United States censuses of 1890 and 1900. He has ever taken a deep and active interest in educational matters, and has given his own children the best opportunities within his command. His life has been one of activity and industry. Free from self-seeking, he has been ever ready to perform every public duty to which he was called, and his fidelity to every trust, both private and public, has gained for him the confidence and respect of the community whose welfare he has aided in promoting for more than forty years.

Mr. Morse has been twice married. His first wife was Emma Jane Waddle, who died within a year after their marriage, and his second union was with Nancy A. Burgess. Of his children, three died in childhood, while one son, Frank, was called away in 1895, at the age of twenty-six. Those who are yet living are as follows: Dr. Edwin Morse, a prominent physician of Appleton, Wis.; Mary F., the wife of John Peterson; Charles N., a resident of Montana, who served in the First Montana Regiment during the Spanish-American war, and did duty in the Philippines; Emma I., Mrs. Dr. Albert Rector; and Miss Effie V., who is an accomplished musician and a teacher of music.

WILLIAM McGRANAHAN, who resides in Lamont, Lafayette county, on Section 23, Town 3, Range 4, East, has been for many years one of the more notable and universally respected citizens of that town, where he is honored and esteemed not only for a life of industry and integrity, but also for his neighborly spirit and kindly interest in his fellow townsmen.

Mr. McGranahan came to the Territory of Wisconsin in 1843, and has never since removed his home from the confines of the State. His residence thus covers a period of fifty-eight years, and to-day he is one of the very oldest citizens of Lafayette county. He was born in Mercer county, Penn., March 22, 1817, the same month that James Monroe became President, hence he has lived under the administrations of all the Presidents of the United States except those of the first four. Smith McGranahan, his father, was a native of Westmoreland county, same state. John McGranahan, the latter's father, and the grandfather of William, was a native of the North of Ireland. He bore an honorable part in the war of the Revolution. Smith McGranahan and his wife lived in Pennsylvania all their days. She bore the maiden name of Mary Andrews.

William McGranahan was one of twelve children, but many of them have passed away. He was reared and educated in his native place, and at the age of fifteen years began learning the blacksmith trade. In the fall of 1842 he left his native State to come West. He spent the winter in Illinois, and the following spring moved into Lafayette county, Wis., where his home has been up to the present writing. For many years he lived in the village of Fayette, where he had a blacksmith shop, and in 1858 he settled on the farm where he is found to-day in a green and hearty old age. On this place but little improvement had been made, and its transformation into one of the model farms of the county is due to his tremendous energy and ceaseless industry. This place has been the home of himself and family for forty-three years.

Mr. McGranahan was married in the town of Fayette, near his present home, in 1849, to Miss Margaret Shockley, a daughter of John Shockley, one of the earlier settlers of the county. He and his wife are the parents of five sons and three daughters, all of whom are residents of Lafayette county, namely: Thomas B., Smith, John, David, Charles, Nancy (who is the wife of Samuel Paxton), Clara (who is the wife of J. W. Hunt), and Rose (who is at home).

Mr. McGranahan has long been one of the representative farmers of the county, and has held various local offices. In 1859 he represented his district in the General Assembly, where his record was thoroughly honorable and creditable in every way. He is well-known throughout Lafayette county, and in former times, when engaged in the more active duties of life, was himself acquainted with the greater number of the leading men of the county. Mr. McGranahan has always been a Democrat, and the first President he voted for was Martin Van Buren. In 1844 he was prevented from voting for President by the fact that Wisconsin was as yet a Territory. Our subject has always been held in high esteem by his fellow townsmen. Considering their advanced age both Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan are in the enjoyment of very good health. They have passed through formidable hardships and endured severe privations, but their faculties are still unimpaired, and their interest in the welfare of their children and friends is not lessened by the flight of years.

DAVID YOUMANS, one of the old settlers of Rock county, and a highly esteemed farmer-citizen of Janesville township, resides in Section 30, upon a well-cultivated farm.

David Youmans was born in Orange county, N. Y., Dec. 6, 1839, son of Nehemiah and Margaret (Kelley) Youmans, natives of New York. The paternal grandfather of our subject, David Youmans, died in middle life: he had a large family. The grandfather on the mother's side was a native of Ireland, but came to America, settling at Newburgh, N. Y. The family of this gentleman was a very large one, and he lived to see his children and their children grow up about him, and died at the age of eighty years. Nehemiah Youmans was a blacksmith by trade. He died in Orange county, N. Y., in 1852, aged about forty years. In 1849 his wife died, aged thirty-six years; both attended the Presbyterian Church. To this couple were born six children, four now living: Annie, wife of Peter Colgan, of New Haven, Conn.; David; and Mary and Sarah, both unmarried, and residents of New Haven, Conn.; George, who was a soldier in the Civil war, died in Andersonville prison.

David Youmans, our subject, lived in Orange county, N. Y., until ten years of age, attending the district school at Searsburg. In 1850 he came West to Wisconsin, in company with George Cleland and wife, via the great lakes to Milwaukee, and thence to Center township, Rock county, by wagon. Here they took up government land, and David Youmans lived with Mr. and Mrs. Cleland until he grew to mature years. Later he supplemented his early education by a course at a commercial college at Madison. In 1875 Mr. Youmans purchased his present farm of about seventy-five acres, which he has brought into a high state of cultivation.

On Jan. 21, 1874, David Youmans married Miss Nancy Thorburn, who was born Dec. 28, 1843, in Delaware county, N. Y., daughter of George and Margaret (Glendenning) Thorburn, and two children were born to this union: George C., who lives at home, and Ella, who died in 1888, when a little over eleven years of age. Mrs. Youmans passed away Dec. 11, 1883; she was a consistent member of and worker in the Congregational Church. Mr. Youmans belongs to Footville Lodge, No. 137, F. & A. M. Politically his affiliations are with the Democratic party, and he has held the office of district trustee for twenty-two years. There is no man in Janesville township who is more representative of the best agricultural interests of the State than is Mr. Youmans, understanding, as he does, so thoroughly, farming upon modern methods, with latest improved appliances.

JAMES H. BLISS has been a hard-working and upright man all his life, and whatever he has undertaken has been wrought with painstaking fidelity. At the very beginning of his young manhood he gave long and faithful service to the preservation of the National Union; and, while he played a humble part in the great war for liberty, it was the modest and heroic devotion to duty on his part and of millions like him that made this the golden age of the Republic. He is now somewhat advanced in life, but is still hale and hearty, and bears himself like a strong and vigorous man.

Mr. Bliss was born in Jefferson county, N. Y., Oct. 29, 1838, a son of James and Julia (Coffin) Bliss, both native to the State of New York. They were the parents of four children, two of whom are now living: James H. and Horace R., of Chicago. One of the deceased was named Julius. The father, who was a carpenter and cabinet maker, came to Roscoe, Ill., in the fall of 1853. Four years later he moved to Beloit, Wis., and engaged in cabinet making, and some years later he moved to Janesville and secured a position in the Northwestern shops, where he worked until a short time before his death, in 1871, at the age of fifty-six years. His wife survived him many years, and passed away in 1887. She was a Methodist. He was a soldier in the Union army, having enlisted as a member of Company E, 3d Wis. V. C., under command of Col. Bristow. The worst injury he received in the service was in a battle in Missouri. His father was born in England, and coming to this country settled in New York, where he died. Isaac Coffin, the father of Julia Coffin, was native to the soil of New York. He had four sons and four daughters.

James H. Bliss was reared to manhood in New York, where he attended the public schools, and acquired a substantial and useful education. At the breaking out of the Civil war he was quick to respond to the call for soldiers, and, enlisting in Company F, 13th Wis. V. I., served four years and three months, proving himself a loyal and gallant defender of the flag. He was a private the greater part of the time, but before the completion of his enlistment was appointed sergeant. When he had done with war and its horrors he returned to civil life, and for a time was engaged in building bridges. He had a freight transfer wagon in Janesville, and did a teaming business in that city for fifteen years, in 1875 buying the farm of ninety-three acres on which he is now living. Three years later he left the city, and, locating his family on this farm, has since devoted himself to its cultivation. Though not large, it has proved exceedingly productive.

Mr. Bliss and Miss Lois Gleave, a daughter of James and Alice (Houghton) Gleave, were married Aug. 9, 1868. They had four children: Philip R., Orville J., Jay H., and Alice O. Philip R. married Lulu E. Deronso, and lives in Oregon; they have one daughter, Alice. None of the other children are married. Orville J. is an electrician in Chicago. Jay H. is studying pharmacy in Janesville. Mrs. Bliss died May 17, 1898, at the age of fifty-four years. She was a Methodist, and a lady of many admirable qualities. Mr. Bliss is a Mason, belonging to Western Star Lodge, No. 14, A. F. & A. M., and Janesville Chapter, No. 5, R. A. M., and he is also a member of W. H. Sargent Post, No. 20, G. A. R. Politically he is a Republican. He is an honest, hard-working man, loving quiet, and devoted to the farm on which he lives and the work before him.

HON. HARRY CHAPMAN MARTIN.

Among the many distinguished citizens of Lafayette county, who are known well and favorably through the State, is Harry Chapman Martin, the subject of this biography, who is also one of the leading members of the Bar in Wisconsin.

Mr. Martin is a native of Wisconsin, residing in his birthplace, the pleasant little city of Darlington, where he first saw the light Dec. 15, 1854. His parents were A. C. and Adelia J. (Chapman) Martin, the former of whom was born March 18, 1827, in Orleans county, Vt., and married Adelia J. Chapman, a native of Boston, Mass., who had removed with her parents to New Hampshire in childhood. In 1854 A. C. Martin removed with his wife to Darlington, where for many years he was a successful business man, but he now lives retired, a highly respected citizen. Of the family born to Mr. and Mrs. Martin, our subject is the only survivor.

Harry Chapman Martin, our subject, received his early education in the public schools of his native town, later engaged in teaching for one year, and then entered the Wisconsin State University, from which he graduated in the class of 1879. Returning to Darlington, he immediately entered upon the study of law, progressing so rapidly that he was admitted to the Bar in 1881, and soon after his admission he was appointed county superintendent of schools. So efficiently did Mr. Martin perform the duties of his office, and so entirely did he gain the confidence of the public, that for six years he was kept in that responsible position, leaving it when other honors were proffered.

In 1887 Mr. Martin was elected mayor of the city of Darlington, and re-elected in 1888, his management of municipal affairs calling forth favorable notice through the State. For several years he served as city attorney, and in 1892 was elected district attorney of Lafayette county. An ardent and active Republican, he gave four years of service on the State Central Committee, and was elected to the assembly branch of the Legislature of Wisconsin in 1895, to fill a vacancy occasioned by the death of James Freeman. This mark of esteem and confidence being emphasized in 1898 by his election to the State Senate. Mr. Martin represents the 17th Senatorial District, which comprises the counties of Lafayette and Green, and a part of Rock. Should life and vigor be vouchsafed to our subject, no one of his many friends doubts that he has but commenced his successful public career, and they do not hesitate to predict for him the highest honor in the gift of the American people.

The wife of Senator Martin was formerly Miss Catherine E. Dodge, a daughter of Ammi Dodge, an early settler of Lafayette county, and one daughter, Anna, has been born to them.

CHARLES B. CHAMPION, whose death, on April 4, 1893, removed from Lafayette county one of the central figures in the business world, as well as one of the most prominent, substantial and highly respected citizens, was born in St. Louis, Mo., July 1, 1829, son of Robert and Elizabeth (Cobb) Champion.

Robert Champion was a native of Vermont, and his wife of Alabama. Their marriage occurred in the latter State, where he was following his trade of hatter. In 1827 he came to Wisconsin, where he purchased a large tract of government land for mining purposes, at that time owning all the ground on which the town of New Diggings now stands, as well as a large body outside the village. This he sold or leased for mining purposes, and was very successful in his own mine operations, becoming one of the expert miners, as well as operators, in this section. The noted "Champion Mine" was named for him. While descending one of the deep shafts, in 1874, he fell, and received injuries which caused his death three months later. He left a wife and six children to mourn for him. The wife died in 1890. The children were as follows: Mary, born in 1827, married Henry Van Osden, of Missouri, first residing in Darlington, then in Sedalia, where he died, and where his wife and family still reside. Charles B. is our subject. Eliza, born in New Diggings, married Edward Snyder, of Harrisburg, Penn., where he is engaged in the real-estate business; they have four children, Julia, Viola, Lulu, and Robert. Emaline married H. K. White, of Ohio, who died at Lake Geneva, Wis., leaving his wife, but no family. Ellen was graduated from the Platteville Normal, and married Charles Hafkeymer, of St. Louis, where they lived some years, then moving to Chicago, where she died in 1872, leaving one son, Leslie, who lives in Chicago. Julia married R. H. Weyman, of Chicago, and has two daughters, Florence and Mildred.

Charles B. Champion, the second in order of birth in the above mentioned family, was educated in the old Rock school of Platteville, and in the school at Mount Morris, Ill., where he received a fine classical education. As the only son he interested himself in his father's mines, and soon acquired a practical knowledge of the entire subject. In 1865 he settled in Darlington, Wis., and engaged in mercantile business, but in 1872 he located in New Diggings again, and became part owner and manager of his father's mines. His accurate knowledge of the business, and his sensible way of handling those in his employ, made him a most capable director, and he ever maintained the high respect of his employes. Some years before his death it became evident that consumption had fastened its evil hold upon him, but he bravely and uncomplainingly bore the hard trial to the last.

In May, 1865, Mr. Champion was married to Miss Ellen Townsend, daughter of Absalom and Julia (Wells) Townsend, a pioneer couple of Lafayette county. Two children were born to this union: Julia became a student at Sinsinawa Mound College, and died in 1887; Birdie C. was educated in Mount St. Joseph College, of Dubuque, Iowa, where she received a fine musical and classical education, and is now one of the social favorites at her home. Mr. Champion took a deep interest in politics, always voting the Republican ticket, but had neither time nor inclination for official positions. The family are Presbyterians in religious connection, and liberal supporters of all church work. Fraternally Mr. Townsend was an active member of the Masons, and his funeral services were conducted with all the rites and ceremonies of that order, and his remains laid to rest in the Masonic cemetery.

ABSALOM TOWNSEND, father of Mrs. Champion, was born in Steuben county, N. Y., in December, 1811. In 1844 he settled at Shullsburg, Wis., where he owned a large body of land, and engaged there in farming and mining, becoming one of the wealthiest citizens in that locality. His death occurred in 1879. He was twice married: his first wife, Miss Mary A. Ross, was born in Indiana and died at Wilcox Springs, Wis., leaving four children, two of whom are living: Addison, of Shullsburg; and Virginia, wife of John Benton, of Chicago. For his second wife Mr. Townsend wedded Miss Julia Wells, at Freeport, Ill., in 1844. She was born in January, 1829, and died in 1877 leaving two sons and one daughter: Edwin, born in 1845, married Miss Mary Cavanaugh, of Shullsburg (where he is engaged in business), and has five children, Laura, Julia, May, Frank and Georgie; Walter married Miss Ella Cottle of Lafayette county, and resides in Shullsburg, where he is engaged as a fancy stock dealer; Ellen, Mrs. Champion, was educated in the Shullsburg high school and in St. Clair Convent, at Benton, Wis. She is very intelligent, and is a capable business woman, carefully managing her late husband's estate, and is prominent socially, cordially liked by all who know her. The Townsend family were all members of the Presbyterian Church, and in their political views the men of the family were all Republicans. Fraternally Mr. Townsend was active in the work of the Masonic fraternity.

JAMES C. ROBBINS, a stock dealer and grain buyer of Belmont, and former sheriff of Lafayette county, belongs to the number of those brave souls who are not willing to admit the approach of age so long as the eye is not dimmed nor the natural force abated. He is on the wintry side of sixty, and is still energetic and hustling, eager for business and ready for a deal at any time. He is a man of character and standing, and has led a busy life usefully and well.

Mr. Robbins was born in Chautauqua county, N. Y., in 1838, a son of Melzar and Aurelia (Sprague) Robbins, natives of Connecticut and New York, respectively. They came West to Jo Daviess county, Ill., in 1841, and engaged in farming for the rest of their lives. They were honest and God-fearing people, of the best of habits and the kindest disposition. They reared a large family of children, seven of whom are still living: Celestia, widow of William Bell, is now living in Iowa. William, born in New York, became a soldier in Company E, 96th Ill. V. I., was wounded at Chickamauga, and discharged from the service; he married and settled in Illinois, where he reared a family, and he and his wife are now deceased; the children are living in Colorado. Clara, born in Illinois, married H. D. Easley, and settled near Apple River, in her native State, where she died, leaving three children. Joseph B., born in Illinois, was a soldier in the Civil war; he married, and is now a resident of St. Paul, Minn., extensively interested in mines, being one of the principal owners of the Robbins copper mines. Cornelia, born in Illinois, is the wife of Hugh Williams, of Freeport. George was born in Illinois, where he married, and settled on the home farm near Apple River: he is still living there, and has a family of two children. Frank and Maggie. Ella married Lewis Hinckley, moved to Colorado, and died in that State. Charles, unmarried, is a resident of Illinois. Etta, Mrs. Martin Tanner, of Waterloo, Iowa, is the mother of two children.

James C. Robbins spent his childhood and early youth in Illinois, where he received the benefit of a common-school education, and was well prepared for the realities of life. He was a young man at the outbreak of the Civil war, and soon became a soldier in the Union army, enlisting in Company B, 45th Ill. V. I. Displaying much ability in the discharge of his military duties, he rose in rank, and presently was commissioned by President Lincoln a captain in the Louisiana Volunteer Artillery, being mustered into the 5th United States Heavy Artillery (colored). He participated in some of the most important battles of the war, and made a record of which he is justly proud, assisting in the capture of Fort Henry and Fort Donelson, was at the siege of Vicksburg, and seriously wounded at Shiloh. He had a tedious recovery, and when able for duty reported at the front, and served until Nov. 20, 1864, when the gallant soldier and officer resigned on account of physical disability.

In 1860 Mr. Robbins married Miss Sarah Frost, who was born in Vermont in 1841, daughter of Josiah and Lydia Frost. Her parents removed to Illinois while she was still a young girl, and in that State she was educated and married. The young couple settled in Illinois, and Mrs. Robbins remained near her people during the long and terrible years when her husband was at the front. She died soon after his return from the battlefields of the South, passing away in 1866, and leaving two sons, J. W. and Herbert J. J. W. was born at Apple River in 1862, was educated in the Platteville (Wis.) Normal, and is a railroad man, living in Chicago; he has been in the employment of the Illinois Central railroad much of his life. Herbert J. was born in Illinois in 1865, was educated in the Platteville Normal, and is also a railroad man. He married, and has his home in Chicago. He and his wife have one daughter, Katie, a charming young girl.

In 1869 Mr. Robbins married Miss Emily Buss, a daughter of Daniel and Charlotte Buss, who came from England. At the time of her marriage she was residing in Belmont, where Mr. Robbins had already established himself in the grain and stock business. To this union there were born five children: Lewis F. was born in Belmont in 1871. Laura was born in Iowa in 1873, was educated in the high school at Belmont, in 1897 married Dr. George Walters, and now resides in Wesley, Iowa; she has one son, Cassius. Frank M., born in Belmont in 1875, is now in business in Fairbank, Iowa. Frank and Lewis both served in the Spanish-American war. Miss Cora, born in Belmont, is living with her parents; she was educated in the Belmont high school. Charles D., born in Belmont in 1883, is a student in the local high school.

In 1868 Mr. Robbins came to Belmont and established himself in the grain and stock business. In 1892 he disposed of his grain trade, and since that time has devoted himself to live stock, shipping principally to the Chicago markets. He has owned large tracts of Belmont business and residence property, and in 1898 he erected his present home, a fine modern building, on Liberty street. Mr. Robbins has made extensive investments in mineral lands in Lafayette county, and is the owner of the "Lucky Three" mine in the town of Kendall. Politically he has always been a Republican, and was elected sheriff of Lafayette county in 1884, discharging the duties of that important office with credit to himself and satisfaction to the county. He has been justice of the peace in Belmont twelve years, is now a member of the county board, and has been school director and treasurer several terms. He is a man of character and standing in his community. Socially he is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, Sherman Post, Platteville, Wis.; a charter member of the Blue Lodge of Masons at Apple River, Ill.; and is connected with the Modern Woodmen of America, No. 1117, in which various associations he has proved a companionable and genial gentleman. He takes a leading part in the affairs of his own community, and is regarded as one of the solid business men and foremost citizens of Belmont.

CHARLES R. BRIDGMAN. The family from which our honored and respected subject, Charles R. Bridgman, descends can be traced unbrokenly back to the time of King Charles I., of England.

One of the representatives of the Bridgman family came to New England but twenty years after the landing of the Pilgrims. This family did not belong to Puritan stock, but, on the other hand, were Royalists, friends of the unhappy King Charles I., one of the ancestors, Sir Orlando Bridgman, presiding at the trial of the Regicides, after the Restoration, and the coming to the throne of Charles II. The name has frequent and honorable mention in English history, and the family has furnished many persons of note, not only in England, but in this country as well. Rev. Elijah Coleman Bridgman was the first American missionary sent to China, going to that country in 1829, and he performed the herculean task of translating the Bible into the Chinese language, his being the standard translation at this time. His only son was stoned to death by an infuriated mob. Among others of the family who did missionary work in China was James G., who went there in 1843, and was killed in 1850. Rev. Henry Martin, his wife and four children have been doing missionary work in India since 1860. In military matters the family have been well represented; Col.

Frank Bridgman, a brother-in-law to Gen. McDowell, is now on the retired list, and resides at Washington, D. C. Capt. William Ross Bridgman, who died at Tacoma, Wash., grew up in the navy, held every rank up to captain, and was commander of the battleship "Baltimore" from the date of his commission, Jan. 10, 1892, until the date of his death, Sept. 14, 1894. In the war of the Revolution the family was liberally represented, the great-grandfather of our subject having fought under Gen. Montgomery in the famous but unfortunate expedition to Quebec at the beginning of the war for independence, and continuing in the service until the close of hostilities. Members of the Bridgman family were also conspicuous in the second American war, that of 1812, and no important event in the history of our country, where the citizen comes into prominence, has taken place in which the family of which our subject is a member has not been represented. It is an interesting fact that the celebrated Laura Bridgman, one of the most remarkable women of her time, whose death occurred in 1878, was a cousin to the father of our subject.

John J. Bridgman was born in the State of New Hampshire Nov. 5, 1815. When he was but a child his parents moved to the Western Reserve, in the State of Ohio, and his wife, when a child, was taken to the same part of the State by her mother, her father dying in New York. There the children grew to maturity, married, and in 1848 migrated westward, finally settling in Lafayette county, Wis. For many years Mr. Bridgman resided in the town of Fayette, and now, at the age of eighty-six, lives with his son at Lamont. His wife passed away in 1898, aged eighty-five. The parents of John J. Bridgman also came to Lafayette county, when quite well advanced in life, and lost their lives by drowning while attempting to ford the Pecatonica river, this sad event occurring Feb. 13, 1867.

Charles R. Bridgman, the immediate subject of this sketch, was the eldest of a family of eight members, the others being Hiram M.; Mrs. Elizabeth C. Cook, of Charles City, Iowa; Henry, who died in 1854; James S., of Lamont, Wis.; Mrs. Julia A. McConnell, of Spencer, Iowa; Mrs. Hannah R. McCarty, of Lamont; and William M., of Charles City, Iowa, now deceased.

Our subject was born in Ashtabula county,

Ohio, Dec. 8, 1838, a son of John J. and Rhoda (Cone) Bridgman, the former a native of New Hampshire, the latter of Cazenovia, N. Y. When about ten years of age Charles was brought to Lafayette county, Wis., and lived in the town of Fayette for some four years, going thence to Wiota, where he has resided the greater part of his life. When the Civil war broke out Mr. Bridgman had already reached man's estate, and he was not long in making up his mind as to his duty, the blood of his ancestors urging him on to warlike deeds. On Aug. 11, 1862, Mr. Bridgman was enrolled as a member of Co. E, 31st Wis. V. I., entering as a private, and at the end of his first year of service being advanced to the position of second lieutenant, in which rank he remained until the close of the war, although a large part of the time he was in command of his company. The 31st Regiment served at different points along the Mississippi river until the fall of Vicksburg, when the regiment was transferred to the Army of the Cumberland, and became a part of the 3d Brigade, 1st Division, 20th Army Corps, with which it was identified until the close of the war. Mr. Bridgman took part in all of the important battles of the famous Atlanta campaign, and after the capture of that city the regiment was employed for a time as a portion of the garrison. This regiment made itself felt in all the prominent events in the March to the Sea, at the battles of Averysboro and Bentonville, in the latter struggle losing sixty men in killed, wounded and missing. After the grand review in Washington the regiment was sent to Louisville, Ky., and on June 20, 1865, was mustered out, being disbanded at Madison, Wis., on July 8, when the bronzed and scarred men returned to their homes, with memories which time will never efface, and followed with the thanks of a grateful country.

Our subject returned to his old home in Wiota, and on Nov. 5, of the same year, was united in marriage to his present most estimable wife, who was then Miss Ellen A. Williams. She was born in Orleans county, N. Y., a daughter of Rev. Benjamin W. Williams, and was brought West by her parents when an infant. This union has been blessed with six children: Halcyon Bertha died on April 15, 1876, at the age of seven; Wilbur H. is editor of the Stanley Republican, Stanley, Wis.; John C. is a student of Rush Medical College, Chicago; Benjamin W. is principal of the high school at Oakfield, Wis.; Ellen Carlotta is assistant principal of the high school at Menasha, Wis.; Rhoda S. is at home.

For many years Mr. Bridgman successfully carried on farming and stock raising, owning one of the finest farms in the township of Lamont, and making a specialty of fine stock. For a long time he was a justice of the peace, and he filled all of the local offices, but he retired from the active duties of life for many years, when he removed to Darlington. In politics he is a staunch Republican, coming from an Abolitionist ancestry, his grandfather, when a resident of Ohio, being an official of the great "underground railroad," and assisting many an escaping negro to the land of freedom. Mr. Bridgman's health was much broken in the army, which fact becomes more and more apparent as the years go by. Socially he is connected with Harvey Post, No. 45, G. A. R., Department of Wisconsin, and is a Royal Arch Mason. He is a worthy representative of the sturdy ancestors who, with James Bridgman, left Winchester, County of Hants, England, in 1640, and settled at Springfield, Massachusetts.

EDMUND F. WOODS, M. D., has led a life of activity, hard study, travel and research, and, although he is still only forty-six years old, he has been the recipient of many honors, and is possessed of a handsome fortune. His professional practice is large and lucrative, and he is a member of numerous medical societies, as well as a Mason of the thirty-second degree. The story of his life is a most interesting one.

Dr. Woods was born Oct. 6, 1854, in the village of Alborough, in the County of Norfolk, England. His father, John Woods, died the same year in which Edmund F., his only child, was born. His mother, whose maiden name was Martha Woods, is a daughter of the late Robert Woods, of Covington, Ky., who lived to attain the well-nigh phenomenal age of ninety-eight years. He was a well-known manufacturer of collars in England, and emigrated to America in 1860, taking up his residence at Covington, where he led the life of a retired gentleman. Mrs. John Woods, the mother of the distinguished physician and surgeon whose career forms the subject of this short biographical sketch, crossed the ocean in August, 1860, bringing her son, then a boy of six years, with her. Without tarrying in New York (the port of her arrival) she proceeded at once to Covington, Ky., afterward removing to Darlington, Lafayette Co., Wis., where she met and married Jonathan Fitchett. In the spring of 1895 they removed to Janesville, Wis., which city is still their home.

E. F. Woods, M. R.

Dr. Woods began the education to which he has devoted many of the best years of his life in the common school at Darlington. For several years he was employed as clerk in a hardware store, and in 1877 he went to Leadville, Colo., where he was engaged in handling miners' supplies on behalf of H. N. Webb & Co. To this vocation he brought such good business tact, joined to sound judgment, industry and thrift, that in the course of a year he was able to accumulate enough to well-nigh pay the expense attendant upon a course in the Medical College of Indiana, at Indianapolis, from which he graduated in the spring of 1882. For seven years he was engaged in practice at Darlington, and in the autumn of 1889, feeling that an additional course of study would be of advantage to him, he entered the Atlanta (Ga.) Medical College, from which he received his second diploma. This course he supplemented by attendance at the Post-Graduate College of New York City, after which he devoted some time to travel. On June 23, 1890, he was married to Miss Margaret B., a daughter of Stephen S. and M. Elizabeth (Lord) Allen, of Darlington. After their marriage they visited Europe, going to many cities in England and on the Continent, and while in London Dr. Woods attended lectures at the University Hospital.

On Jan. 1, 1891, the Doctor located in Janesville, and there practiced with marked success until the spring of 1897, when, accompanied by his wife, he once more went abroad, his objective point being the gathering place of the International Medical Association, Moscow, Russia. Before returning home they visited Italy, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Holland, Sweden and France, traveling in all about 18,000 miles. They returned to Janesville about the first of November, and since then the Doctor has been wholly devoted to his professional duties. Both as a general practitioner and as a surgeon he stands high among medical men, while his patients, one and all, regard him with admiration, confidence and love. He is a member of the American Medical Association, of the Wisconsin State and the Central Wisconsin Associations, and of the Rock County Medical Society. Since 1895 he has held the position of district surgeon to the Chicago & Northwestern Railway Co. Politically he is a Republican, and in religious faith follows that of his ancestors, who were members of the Church of England. Mrs. Woods is a Congregationalist.

Reference has been made to the high rank held by Dr. Woods in the Masonic Order. His immediate affiliations are with Western Star Lodge, No. 14, A. F. & A. M.; Janesville Chapter, No. 5, R. A. M.; Janesville Commandery, No. 2, K. T.; and Milwaukee Consistory. He is also an Odd Fellow, and a member of the Knights of Pythias. He is of a genial and generous disposition, of tried fidelity to his friends, and has charity for the failings of all. His home is one of the most handsome in Janesville, and is noted for its refined and liberal hospitality.

WILLIAM R. ELLIS, one of the well-known and highly-respected citizens of Clifton township, Grant county, and a veteran of the war of the Rebellion, he having served his country bravely in the great struggle when brother was pitted against brother and our fair land drenched in blood, was born in Virginia Dec. 15, 1833, a son of Washington and Elizabeth (Blankenship) Ellis, both also natives of Virginia.

In the fall of 1847 the parents and several children, of whom our subject was the eldest, migrated to Wisconsin, settling in the town of Ellenboro, Grant county, where they remained some years—during which time several children were born, the family numbering nine—and where the mother died. The father survived her, and died in the town of Potosi.

Our subject remained at home until of age, when he began work for himself, and he has always been engaged in farming. In time he purchased a fine farm in Clifton township, which he has greatly improved, and upon which he now resides. On Jan. 12, 1859, Mr. Ellis married Miss Elizabeth A. Cox, a daughter of John and Agnes Cox. Mrs. Ellis was born in Pennsylvania July 11, 1844, and was taken to Iowa by her mother when but three years old, the father having migrated to that State previously. He died in Iowa, and Mrs. Cox married Washington Ellis, the father of our subject; she is still living. Thirteen children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Ellis, nine of whom are still living.

On Aug. 20, 1862, Mr. Ellis enlisted in Company H, 25th Wis. V. I., and was honorably discharged in July, 1865. He participated in many of the leading battles of the war which took place in the West, the regiment having been stationed in Minnesota and other Western States. During his term of service his health became so shattered that he has never recovered from the effects of his gallant career in the army. As the years advance Mr. Ellis realizes how great the service rendered by the old soldiers was, even though they did come out of the conflict without loss of any members. Wrecked health is fully as serious a matter, and for the past ten years our subject has had to take very good care of himself, and refrain from active participation in the work of the farm. In politics Mr. Ellis has always been a staunch Republican, and he and his estimable wife are consistent members of the Christian Church. They are kind-hearted people, ever ready to lend a helping hand to those in misfortune, and endeavor to show forth in their lives the faith they are so earnestly following.

MATTHEW VAN ALLEN has for over fifty years lived in Rock county, Wis., and in that long period of time has grown from early manhood to a serene and ripe old age.

Mr. Van Allen was born in Kinderhook, Columbia Co., N. Y., May 3, 1824, son of Lucas and Lydia (Luddington) Van Allen, both also natives of that county. They had one son and two daughters: Matthew; Sarah, wife of Wilbur Goodrich, of Emerald Grove, Rock county; and Catherine, who died at Emerald Grove. The father, who was a farmer by occupation, came to Wisconsin in 1849, locating at Emerald Grove, in Bradford township, where he and his son together bought 140 acres of wild land, which they improved, and thereon made the family homestead. There Lucas Van Allen lived until his death, in 1882, at the age of eighty-two years. His first wife died in New York; she was a Baptist. Hannah Chapin became his second wife, and after her death he married Bathia Vosberg, who is also deceased. Lucas Van Allen was a Congregationalist. His father was a native of

New York, and of Holland-Dutch descent, was a farmer, and died in New York when advanced in years. He had seven children. Samuel Luddington, the maternal grandfather of Matthew Van Allen, was a prominent and well-to-do farmer of Columbia county, N. Y., was of English descent, and died when very old. He had a large family.

Matthew Van Allen was seven years old when his parents moved from Columbia county to Genesee county, N. Y., and there he grew to manhood, receiving his schooling in the village schools of LeRoy. He has always followed agriculture as the main business of his life, and has farmed in Rock county since 1849, settling first in Emerald Grove, where he remained until 1853. That year he sold his interests in Emerald Grove and bought seventy-five acres of farm land in La Prairie township and five acres of timber in Harmony township. He has bought more land from time to time, and now owns a fine farm of 217 acres, highly improved, and provided with all the appliances for the most modern farming. Here he continues to make his home.

On Sept. 14, 1852, was celebrated the wedding of Mr. Van Allen and Miss Elizabeth Ransom, daughter of Asa and Hannah (Green) Ransom, both natives of the State of New York. Three children have been born to this union, Eber, Edwin T. and Kittie. Eber is a farmer, and lives in La Prairie township, occupying a part of the old farm and working all of it; he married Mary Jones, and is the father of three children, Edwin T., Elroy E. and Matthew Arthur. Edwin T., the second son of Matthew Van Allen, died when only fourteen months old. Kittie is still single, and lives at home. Mr. and Mrs. Van Allen are members of the Methodist Church, and are highly respected in every walk of life. He is a Republican, but has never been an office-seeker, being content to do his daily duties as strength is given him.

Mrs. Van Allen's father died in New York when she was only three months old, and her mother died in her native State after Mrs. Van Allen came West. Her grandfather, Thomas Ransom, was a veteran of the Revolution, and so was her maternal grandfather, Isaac Green. The Ransoms and Greens were both New England families. Mrs. Van Allen's father dealt extensively in land, and became a well-to-do agriculturist. His family consisted of four daughters and two sons, Mrs. Van Allen being the youngest, her birth occurring Jan. 28, 1828.

JOHN R. BOOTH, the very efficient police justice of the city of Beloit, Rock county, has become widely known as a man of ability and decided judicial temper. He is active and influential in public affairs, and enjoys a personal reputation that is beyond reproach.

Mr. Booth was born in Montgomery county, N. Y., June 30, 1827, a son of John and Ellen (Robertson) Booth, natives of England and Scotland, respectively. They had seven children born to them, two now living, John R. and Belle, the latter a resident of Fonda, N. Y. The father was a woolen manufacturer, and was in business at Fonda, N. Y., the last years of his life. He died there when aged about sixty-five. The mother long survived him, and reached the age of eighty-three. They were members of the Reformed Church, in which he held official position. His father was a woolen manufacturer in England, where he lived and died; he had his business in Yorkshire, and was a man of affairs. John Robertson, the father of Mrs. Ellen Booth, was born in Scotland, and came to this country to locate in Fulton county, N. Y., where he died between fifty and sixty years ago at a good old age. He had five or six children.

John R. Booth lived at home until he attained his majority. He obtained a good education, attending the public school and the local academy, a school of high grade. During his vacation seasons he worked in the woolen mills until, by the time he was a man, he had a thorough understanding of every detail of the business. He owned and operated a woolen mill on his own account for some years, and in 1854, coming West to Jo Daviess county, Ill., became the agent of the railroad company at Warren, a position that he held for some half dozen years. He was living in Galena at the outbreak of the Civil war, and he secured transportation for the first company of soldiers sent out from the county to aid in the suppression of the Rebellion. He lived in Galena until 1865, then spent a year in Warren, and in 1866 came to Beloit, and has made that city his home to the present time, with the exception of some five or six years when he was in Iowa. In Beloit Mr. Booth was in the sash and door business for several years, and then became senior partner in the firm of Booth, Hinman & Co., proprietors of a large paper house. The firm did an extensive business, and Mr. Booth continued therewith until 1880, when he sold out and removed to Iowa, remaining there several years. In 1889 he returned to Beloit, and that city has been his home to the present time.

In 1890 Mr. Booth was elected police justice, and he has filled that position to the present time, with the exception of a part of one term, to the very great satisfaction of the general public. He is a man of broad views, and while he is sympathetic toward the unfortunate and criminal who come before him, he remembers the violated law, and knows well how to temper justice with mercy. He has occupied his present office quarters since 1892.

Mr. Booth and Miss Sarah Hicks were married Oct. 23, 1854. Mrs. Booth was a daughter of Isaac and Isabella (Robinson) Hicks, and became the mother of four children: Isaac, who died when twenty-six years of age; and three who died in early childhood. The mother died in 1873. She was a Congregationalist, and a lady of fine character. In 1874 Mr. Booth married Miss Minerva Leonard, a daughter of H. K. and Minerva (Jocelyn) Leonard. They have one daughter, Mary J. Mrs. Booth is a member of the Second Congregational Church, as is her daughter, who is a graduate of Beloit College. Judge Booth, as he is familiarly called, is a member of Morning Star Lodge, No. 10, A. F. & A. M.; Beloit Chapter, No. 9, R. A. M.; and Beloit Commandery, No. 6, K. T., being recorder of the commandery, and secretary of the other two Masonic bodies. He is a Republican, was alderman from the Third ward for three years, and has been on the county board. He has a pleasant home at No. 623 Bluff street. Our subject is held in the utmost respect by all who know him.

PETER VOIGT. This prominent early settler of Grant county is one of the leading German-American citizens of Cassville. He was born in Prussia in 1836, a son of Theodore and Agnes (Turnich) Voigt, also natives of Germany, where the father died. In 1852 the widowed mother, with her eight children, came to the United States, sailing from Antwerp. They came to Gothenburg, Iowa, by way of Milwaukee, and after residing there for a time moved to Cassville, Wis., where the mother died in 1872. The children were Margaret, who died in Glen Haven, Grant county; Mary, who wedded Dr. Hambitzer, of British Hollow, Grant county, where her death occurred; Clara, Mrs. Wiese, a resident of Cassville; Celia, Mrs. Simmerman, of Dubuque, Iowa; Gertrude, Mrs. Kuchenberg, of Cassville; Hubbard, who served through the Civil war in the same company as his brother Peter, and subsequently died in Kansas; and Peter, subject of this review.

It was in 1853 that Peter Voigt took up his residence in Grant county, where he secured 120 acres of government land, making several trips to the land office at Mineral Point for that purpose. In his farming operations he prospered, and became one of the most successful agriculturists of his community. Feeling that his adopted country needed his services during the war of the Rebellion, Mr. Voigt enlisted, at Glen Haven, Aug. 14, 1862, in Company D, 33d Wis. V. I., for three years or during the war, and was mustered in at Camp Utley, Wis. He participated in the siege of Vicksburg, where he lay in the trenches for forty-two days, and later took part in the engagement at Natchez, after which he returned to Vicksburg. He was in the Meridian and Red River expeditions up to the engagement at Opelamas, and subsequently took part in the battle at Tupelo, Miss., after which he went with his command up the White River, taking part in the engagements at Clarendon, Duvall's Bluff, and other points along that stream. They followed Price through Missouri, and were in the engagements at Cape Girardeau, Jefferson City and Warrensburg. Capturing 1,100 prisoners, they took them to St. Louis, and from there went to Nashville, and later to Lawrenceburg, Clifton, Savannah and Eastpoint, participating in the engagements at these places. After spending the winter of 1864-65 at Eastpoint they went to Corinth, and from there to New Orleans, and subsequently took part in the battles of Mobile, Spanish Fort, and Tuskegee. The war having ended, Mr. Voigt was honorably discharged at Vicksburg, Miss., in August, 1865, and returned to his home in Cassville on the 14th of that month.

In 1866 our subject was united in marriage with Miss Gertie Breuer, also a native of Germany, and a daughter of Peter Breuer, who came to America in 1857. After his marriage

Mr. Voigt engaged in farming and mining for some years, but is now engaged in lime burning. To him and his wife have been born four children, namely: Margaret, Mrs. Manning, a resident of LaCrosse, Wis.; Clara, Mrs. Teasdale, of Cassville; Rosa; and Peter.

Mr. Voigt was a charter member of the Grand Army Post at Beetown, but is now connected with the one at Cassville, of which he was commander in 1899. He affiliates with the Republican party, and takes an active and commendable interest in political affairs. He is a loyal and devoted citizen, true to the interests of his adopted country, and is highly respected and esteemed wherever known.

JOHN J. LYKE, now living retired in Janesville, Rock county, where he has a neat and pleasant home at No. 260 South Main street, has led a career of singular probity, and by industry and honesty has accumulated a considerable fortune, and achieved a large success in life.

Mr. Lyke was born in Montgomery county, N. Y., July 28, 1823, only child of John and Nancy (Near) Lyke, both natives of New York. The father, who was a farmer, died in Steuben county, that State. In 1856 the widow came West with her son, and made her home with him until her death, in 1863. She and her husband were Lutherans in religion. His father, John Lyke, came from Germany, and settled in New York before the Revolution, locating in Dutchess county. He afterward moved to Montgomery county, where he died at an advanced age. He was a farmer, and had five or six children. Her father, Zachariah Near, who was a farmer, was of Mohawk-Dutch descent, and lived to about ninety years of age. He was the father of four children.

John J. Lyke was reared in the town of Palatine, Montgomery Co., N. Y., on a farm, attended district school, and worked out by the year until after he came West. Here he did farming on shares for six years, and then bought a farm of eighty acres in La Prairie township, section 7, which he still owns. He brought it to a high state of perfection, and made his home there until 1887, when he moved to Janesville. For some years he owned a second and adjoining eighty acres, but sold it after a time.

On Feb. 2, 1854, Mr. Lyke married Miss Catherine Ann England, who was born April

Mrs. C. A. Lyke

John J. Lyke

20. 1828, daughter of Benjamin and Jane (Vantwerpt) England, and they have had four children, Benjamin Clark, Mary J., Rachel Ann and Alice Catherine. Benjamin C. married Margaret Austin, now deceased, and they had six children, John, Alice, William, Robert, Benjamin and Alexander; he is a farmer. Mary J. is single, and lives at home. Rachel Ann married William A. Read, and has her home in La Prairie; they have one son, Arthur Victor. Alice Catherine married Webster C. Hugunin; they live in Rock township, Rock Co., Wis., and have two children, Hattie and Ira. Mr. and Mrs. Lyke are members of the Congregational Church. He is a Republican, has been supervisor two years, and school treasurer of La Prairie township seventeen years. Mr. Lyke has always been a hard-working man, and has lived an upright life. He contemplates with satisfaction that he was never sued, and has never had occasion to sue any one. He has treated the world squarely, and it in turn has used him well.

The parents of Mrs. Lyke, Montgomery county (N. Y.) people, had six children, Mrs. Lyke being the only one now living. Her father was a farmer, and died in New York in 1849, when about fifty-seven years old. Her mother died at the old homestead a number of years later. Mrs. Lyke's paternal grandfather, Benjamin England, was born and educated in Germany, and was a farmer in his early life. Coming to America, he served through the Revolutionary war as a minister; he belonged to the Lutheran denomination. He lived many years after the war, continuing to serve his Master. He married Jane Godnew, and had five children. Mrs. Lyke's maternal grandfather, John Vantwerpt, was born in Holland, came to this country when young, became a farmer, and died in New York State when quite old. Throughout the Revolution he served as a home guard and the incidents connected therewith which remained strongest in his memory were those of the famous period of starvation which occurred when the soldiers were under a traitor commander. His wife, Rachel (Vanantwerp), became blind, and died in old age.

MRS. JUDITH JANE GILMORE, one of the old and highly-esteemed residents of Smelser township, living in Georgetown, Grant county, is the widow of Lysander Gilmore, who died in 1855. Mrs. Gilmore was born in Missouri Sept. 13, 1821, daughter of William and Eliza (Bryant) Bowmer, both of whom were born in Kentucky.

WILLIAM BOWMER came to Wisconsin in 1827, and worked in the lead mines of Big Patch, in the township of Smelser, for one year. He then returned to Missouri and brought his family, settling in Smelser township, Grant county, in 1828. Here he pre-empted land from the government, and settled down to mining and agricultural life.

As a miner and farmer he was successful, but decided to change his residence, in 1881 selling his farm and moving into the township of Paris, where he lived until his death, in March, 1886. During the war of 1812 he faithfully served as a soldier under Gen. Jackson, and was at the battle of New Orleans; he received a pension. The mother of Mrs. Gilmore died in 1832, leaving five children. Of the family born to Mr. and Mrs. Bowmer, John, born in Kentucky in 1819, came to Grant county, served in the Black Hawk war; he married Betsey Ann Patterson, who came from New York in 1836; he now resides in Oregon, where he is a prominent man. Anna, born in Missouri in 1820, was burned to death while boiling down sugar at her father's camp in Grant county. Judith Jane, Mrs. Gilmore, is our subject. William, born in Missouri in 1823, migrated to California in 1850, and died there. Armilda died when a child. Eliza, born in Grant county in 1830, married Harvey Kenaston, and resides at Long Pine, Neb., with one daughter, Ada. Michael, born in Grant county in 1832, died in childhood.

Our subject, Judith Jane Gilmore, was educated in the private schools of Galena and Elk Grove. In 1836 she was married to Lysander Gilmore, formerly of Chautauqua county, N. Y., who was born in 1811, a son of Hon. James Gilmore, one of the old pioneer settlers at Jamestown, Wis. The children born to this union were: Hiram, born in Wisconsin in 1837, married Miss Mary McCue, and resides at Farley, Iowa; Edwin died at the age of eleven; Julia, born in 1842, died at the age of eighteen; Emily, born in May, 1844, married Spaulding Works, and resides in Idaho, the mother of three children, Drusie, Lillie and Ivy; Janet, born in 1846, died in childhood; James, born in 1848, died young; Melissa, born in 1853, is the widow of Charles Nash, and resides in Colorado; and Alvira, born in 1855, married Thomas Longbotham, of Platteville, Wisconsin.

After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Gilmore settled on land he purchased from the government during the administration of President Martin Van Buren, and Mrs. Gilmore still has in her possession the parchment deed for this land, which is located near the line of Smelser and Jamestown. Mr. Gilmore engaged in mining and farming, in which he was most successful. In politics he was originally a Whig, later a Republican, and filled many of the county and township offices, being a justice of the peace for a number of years before his death. Mrs. Gilmore has been connected with the Christian Church for many years, and in that denomination still finds her religious home.

Mrs. Gilmore is everywhere known as a lady of kind and Christian character. She was one of the first white children brought to Smelser, Grant county, and passed through many hardships in the early days of Wisconsin, and relates many interesting tales of the time when the Black Hawk Indians held the settlers for many days confined in the blockhouses. She has administered to the wants of the sick through this section whenever sent for, and no record of the county would be complete without her honored name.

HUGH CAMPBELL. Among the well-known old settlers of Lafayette county is Hugh Campbell, of Darlington, the subject of this sketch, who arrived here April 1, 1849. His birth took place in County Donegal, Ireland, in July, 1823, and on March 17, 1831, he removed with his parents to Glasgow, Scotland. Although he was born in Ireland, his ancestors were from Argyll, Scotland, and took part in the wars and revolutions that characterized the early history of that country.

Mr. Campbell was one of twelve children born to his parents, his two older brothers dying in childhood, and many of the family passing away since. On July 29, 1842, Mr. Campbell arrived at the port of New York, having crossed the Atlantic in the good ship "Warnsworth." He went to Philadelphia and Pittsburg, where he spent some time before journeying through Delaware and Maryland, as well as Kentucky, being interested in the work in the coal mines in the different States, for he was a miner, and carried on that business for a number of years. In the meantime Mr. Campbell had sent for his father's family, they joining him while he was in Pittsburg. He brought them with him to Lafayette county, and showed his parents filial care until they died, his father living to be 100 years old, and his mother to the great age of 105, and their remains lie in the Catholic cemetery in Shullsburg. One brother of our subject, Thomas, died in Gratiot, Wis.; Frank became sheriff of Lafayette county for two terms, and was elected to the State Senate; Morris was at one time treasurer of Lafayette county; John and Peter are deceased; James is a resident of Shullsburg; Mrs. Bridget Rice lives in Gratiot; as also does Mrs. Julia Campbell.

Our subject, now advanced in years, at one time was one of the most prominent citizens of the county. Locating in the town of Gratiot in 1852, he began farming. In 1856 he was the Democratic candidate for sheriff, but that year the Republican party, for the first time, had entered the county with a National ticket, and had become a majority. In 1858 he was again his party's candidate, and was elected, his Republican opponent being Philip Earnest, and his term of service was for two years. The laws of the State then not allowing a candidate to succeed himself, he was not nominated in 1860, but was again elected in 1862. During his first term the county seat was at Shullsburg, but by the time of his second election it had been moved to Darlington, and thus Mr. Campbell became a resident thereof.

The first wife of our subject was Miss Sarah Flanagan, whom he married in Pittsburg Oct. 22, 1852; her death occurred Jan. 19, 1873. On Jan. 8, 1880, Mr. Campbell wedded Miss Mary Ann O'Toole, who was born at White Oak Springs, a daughter of John and Ann (McFadden) O'Toole, who still live on the old homestead. Mr. O'Toole was born in Ireland in 1822, and became a resident of Wisconsin in 1844, locating in the town of New Diggings, at that time in Grant county. There he engaged in mining for two years, and then removed to the farm in White Oak Springs, where he still resides. In 1848 he married his present wife, who is a native of Ireland also. Mr. O'Toole is a well-known citizen, and has held various town offices.

The family and connection possess the ability and energy of their race, and combine with those attributes others which make them prominent and valuable citizens, as well as pleasant and agreeable people.

Our subject has reached his seventy-eighth year, yet is vigorous in mind and body, and it is the wish of his many friends that his life may be prolonged as was that of his honored parents.

F. W. KLINKHAMMER, one of the successful and prominent farmers of Cassville township, Grant county, chairman of the township board, and a man of influence in the community, was born in the Rhine Province, Germany, in 1839, a son of Wynand and M. Ann (Klinkhammer) Klinkhammer, natives of Germany, who never left the Fatherland. A brother of our subject, Peter, came to Albany, N. Y., in 1852, and in 1854 migrated to Glen Haven township, Grant county.

Our subject was reared and educated in Germany, after which he served for four years in the German army, and was in the war between the German Confederation and Denmark in 1864. He was one of the stormers of Fort Dueppel, on April 18, 1864; this was a very bloody battle, in which thousands were killed in about two hours. Our subject was the only non-commissioned officer left in his company after the battle. Mr. Klinkhammer started for America in 1865, sailing from Antwerp June 1, on the ill-fated vessel "William Nelson," which burned on the 26th of June, 1865, in mid-ocean, and 447 lives were lost. The captain and sailors took the lifeboats and left the vessel, never turning their hands to save anybody or do anything. When the heat became unbearable Mr. Klinkhammer jumped into the ocean and swam toward the nearest boat, which he reached after an hour's free-handed swimming. He caught hold of the rim of the boat, but the second mate struck his hands off. Then he looked around, and seeing two inch boards, ten feet long and ten inches wide, took one under each arm, laid on his back, and so swam toward another boat, into which he was taken about sundown; he left the burning vessel between 8 and 9 o'clock Monday morning. The sailing-vessel "Merckur," a Dutch ship, found them on Wednesday morning and brought them to Havre, France, landing there July 10, 1865. Nothing dismayed, our subject again started for the goal of his desires, taking passage the second time July 18, 1865, in a steamer, and landing, after seventeen days, in New York, whence he went direct to Glen Haven, Wis. Here he remained one year, then went to Cassville township, purchased land, opened it up, and now has one of the finest pieces of farming property in the town of Cassville, comprising 320 acres. From 1895 to 1898 Mr. Klinkhammer resided in Cassville, and at the latter date returned to his farm, where he has since lived.

In 1867 our subject was married, in Cassville, to Miss Mary Ahrens, born in St. Louis, a daughter of Ignatz and Catherine (Peine) Ahrens, natives of Germany. Of the children born to our subject and wife five are living: Clara; Anna, now Mrs. Knapp, of Beetown township; Susan, who graduated from the University of Wisconsin in June, 1900; Lena; and Agnes. They have also an adopted son, John Klinkhammer, a very estimable young man, now eighteen years old.

Mr. Klinkhammer has been on the township board for about twenty years, and chairman since 1897; also a director of the Bloomington Farmers' Insurance Co., which position he has held for eighteen years. Mr. Klinkhammer has been enabled to develop his land to the best advantage, and is a man well known and highly respected throughout the community.

GEORGE W. RUSSELL, a well-known resident of the town of Gratiot, is a prominent representative of a numerous family that has played a large part in the practical development of Lafayette county.

Dr. George Washington Russell, the progenitor of this family, was born in Litchfield county, Conn., Sept. 21, 1800, and was descended from early Colonial ancestry. When he was quite young his father migrated to Bradford county, Penn., and his mother carried him thither on horseback. Young George returned to his native State, however, and attended school in Hartford. He remained in Connecticut, variously engaged, until August, 1820, when he returned to his Pennsylvania home, and engaged in farming in the town of Windham, Bradford county. Five years later he went to Waterloo, N. Y., where he made his home for four years, and then returned to Windham and took up the study of medicine. He possessed a versatile mind, and soon became proficient in the science of medicine, practicing successfully for many years. He was destined, however, to play an important part in the development of the country. As early as 1833 he was enrolled in the volunteer militia of Pennsylvania, in the capacity of adjutant, and later as major. He sold his farming interests in Windham and removed to Ulster, same county, and in 1850 he became interested in obtaining land warrants for the soldiers of the war of 1812, also engaging to some extent as a pension agent. He began to purchase these land warrants, and in the latter part of 1850 he had obtained possession of a large amount of land. His possessions in Wisconsin alone aggregated about one thousand acres, and he owned much more in the State of Iowa. In March, 1857, he located in the town of Gratiot, Lafayette Co., Wis. He practically retired from the practice of medicine after locating in the West, and devoted himself entirely to the improvement of his land, clearing a fine farm and erecting a beautiful home, where he lived until his death, Nov. 2, 1870. On June 27, 1826, he married Susan Bear, only child of John Bear, of Waterloo, N. Y., and she survived her husband but a few years, dying Oct. 2, 1878. She was born in Seneca county, N. Y., June 30, 1806. Dr. and Mrs. Russell were the parents of eleven children, those surviving at this writing (January, 1901) being: John Bear, born May 1, 1827; George W., born Sept. 28, 1828; Mary Jane, wife of John Randall, born Feb. 15, 1830; Harriet, widow of S. B. Dunbar, born March 16, 1832; Angeline, widow of W. W. Tuttle; Amanda, born Sept. 28, 1834, wife of George C. West, of Bradford county, Penn.; Louisa, born Nov. 5, 1837, wife of M. S. Wright; Read, born April 4, 1839; Sarah Catherine, born Nov. 4, 1841, at Ulster, Penn.; Lewis C., born March 13, 1844.

George W. Russell was the second in the order of birth in the above mentioned family. With his brother John he came to Lafayette county in 1856, and his first efforts in improving land were on a farm in what is now Blanchard township, a portion of his father's estate. He remained there about three years, and then became a resident of Gratiot township, where he has since resided. He has been one of the most extensive farmers and stock raisers in the county, and has done much toward developing the natural resources of the country. He has assisted in laying out and building some fifteen miles of road, and has cleared and grubbed over two hundred acres of land, breaking over a section for himself. His large landed possessions are cultivated by tenants. Mr. Russell has always been a friend of progress, and has taken a deep interest in the public schools; he helped to build and maintain sixteen "little red school houses," and thoroughly believes in compulsory education. In political belief he is a strong Prohibitionist, in religion a Universalist.

On May 24, 1865, Mr. Russell was united in marriage with Miss Mary Jane Dawson, daughter of Jonathan and Jane (Hale) Dawson, natives of England, and early settlers of Shullsburg, Lafayette county. Mrs. Russell was born near Scales Mound Dec. 2, 1842. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Russell: Grant R.; Alvin R.; Georgina, wife of Ashton Thompson; Della, who married Ashton Thompson, and died at the age of twenty-two years; and Belva Lockwood, who died at the age of six months. The family hold an honored place in the social life of the town, where they are all highly esteemed.

GEORGE STEWART, of Lancaster, Grant county, a retired farmer, was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1822, came to America when fourteen years old, and has been a resident of Grant county since 1856.

Thomas Stewart, father of George, married Anna Melrose, who died when her son was a mere child. The father, however, survived until he was eighty-eight years old, and died in Scotland in 1874. George Stewart, father of Thomas, and after whom George, our subject, was named, took charge of the latter at his mother's death, and cared for him until he came to America. The grandfather married Catherine Butler, five of whose uncles fought in the famous battle of Culloden, in which they all lost their lives. The grandfather was called away when eighty-seven years old.

George Stewart, whose name opens this biographical review, came to America in company with several others in the brig "Feronia," Capt. Grant, of Glasgow, landing in Montreal, Canada, after a voyage of eight weeks. From Montreal the young man proceeded by steamer to Kingston, and thence to Hamilton, where the companions separated, all of them save Mr. Stewart returning soon afterward to Scotland, without having intimated their intentions to Mr. Stewart, who was thus left alone among strangers. However, he soon secured employment with a wealthy Scotchman named Crooks, who lived near Hamilton, and assisted about the house at a compensation of $6 per month. Mr. Stewart next went to Toronto, where he worked in a brickyard two years, then returned to Hamilton, and remained in that vicinity three years, thence going to Rochester, Monroe Co., N. Y., and to York, Livingston Co., same State, where many of his countrymen resided. He passed nine years in York and vicinity, and during the latter part of this period worked for J. C. Holloway, with whom he came to Grant county, Wis. Here he worked on Mr. Holloway's large farm for seven years, and by this time had saved a few hundred dollars and purchased an eighty-acre tract of land about two miles south of Lancaster, in Boyce Prairie. This land he occupied seven years, then sold and bought a 400-acre farm of Lewis Holloway, for which he paid $16,000; subsequently he bought twenty acres within the corporation limits of Lancaster. After residing on his large farm for fourteen years Mr. Stewart sold to great advantage to Shrack Mitchell, and purchased what was known as the Farnsworth farm, on which he lived five years, at the end of that time disposing of it and retiring from active responsibility as a farmer. He repurchased ten acres of the twenty-acre tract he had previously sold in Lancaster, and here erected his elegant mansion, although he has disposed of a portion of the ten acres.

Mr. Stewart was married, in Rochester, N. Y., to Miss Eliza Morrow, a native of Ireland, and to this union have been born five daughters and one son, namely: Jane, wife of John Stevens, of Lancaster; Robert, who lives near Mason City, Iowa; Nellie, wife of Darius Walker, also residing near Mason City; Catherine, wife of Harrison R. King; Mary, who is married to Frank Healey, of Iowa; and Lucy, still at the parental home.

Mr. Stewart has made his own way through the world bravely, being possessed of sound sense and judgment and all the characteristics inherent to the natives of Scotland—indefatigable perseverance, indomitable courage, quick observation, untiring industry and economical habits. He has found time to cross the Atlantic ocean several times since he first reached the Western continent, visiting, among other places, the city of his birth.

In politics Mr. Stewart is independent of party ties, and votes in accordance with his personal views touching the issue before the public, but generally for the men whom he thinks best qualified to fill local positions of either responsibility or trust. In religion he and family are Methodists, and are worthy and devout members of that church; socially their standing is elevated and desirable, if not enviable.

WALTER D. THOMAS, A. M., professor of Greek at Milton College, is a native of New Jersey, born in Shiloh, Cumberland county, July 1, 1855, a son of Amos W. and Abigail S. (Ayers) Thomas, both also natives of New Jersey. James B. Thomas, his paternal grandfather, was a native of Pennsylvania, and of Welsh ancestry. Clayton Ayers, his maternal grandfather, was a native of New Jersey, of English extraction, and a farmer by occupation. He lived to the age of about eighty.

Our subject was one of seven children, five sons and two daughters, of whom five survive: Albert Jones, of Ely, Minn.; Prof. Walter Davis, our subject; Lewis Titsworth, of St. Paul, Minn.; Nettie, of Milton; and Edward Ayers, of Shiloh, N. J. The father was for many years a farmer of Shiloh, N. J., and in 1898 came to Milton, where he died in September, 1900, at the age of seventy-eight. The mother died at Shiloh, N. J., in August, 1893, aged sixty-eight years. Both were members of the Seventh-day Baptist Church.

Prof. Walter Davis Thomas was reared on the farm in Shiloh, and there attended the district schools, and later Union Academy, at Shiloh. In 1879 he entered Milton College, as a student, graduating in 1884. He was immediately afterward elected an instructor of the College, where he has remained ever since, now filling the chair of the Greek Language.

On Dec. 4, 1889, Prof. Thomas married Miss Celia Belle Oviatt, daughter of Dr. William Henry and Theresa Fidelia (Collins) Oviatt. Dr. Oviatt was a native of McKean county, Penn., son of William Sweet Oviatt, a native of New York, a farmer and justice of the peace, who reared a large family, and died at the age of nearly eighty years. Dr. Oviatt married the daughter of Dr. John Collins, a physician, who was a native of New York State. Dr. Oviatt died at Milton Junction in 1899, aged fifty-nine years. Of his six children, two sons and four daughters, three are now living: Celia Belle, wife of our subject; Kittie, wife of Frank Gesler, of Bangor, Wis.; and William C., of Milton Junction.

Prof. and Mrs. Thomas are members of the Seventh-day Baptist Church, of which he is serving as clerk. In politics he is a Prohibitionist. His attractive home at Milton he built in 1888.

JOSEPH SPARKS, a retired miner and farmer, is now passing the closing years of a well-spent and useful life in well-deserved peace and comfort.

Mr. Sparks was born in Carlisle, County of Cumberland, England, May 4, 1827, son of John and Ann (Phillips) Sparks, both born in England, he in March, 1786, and she July 19, 1791. In 1836 they came to this country, and made their home for a short time in Chicago. The same fall they moved to Galena, Ill., where Mr. Sparks followed mining until he purchased 200 acres of government land in Jo Daviess county, Ill., along the Wisconsin line. There he made his permanent home. He died in 1854, and his widow in October, 1877. Both were members of the Episcopal Church. A family of seven children was born to them in England: (1) John, born in January, 1819, obtained his education in the English schools, and was a farmer and miner in this country. In 1851 he migrated to California, where he died July 4, 1870, leaving a widow and two children, who still reside in that State. (2) Elizabeth, born in 1820, married Michael Calvert, and died in Fair Play, Grant county, May 16, 1882, leaving ten children, all grown up. (3) Sarah, born in 1823, married William Armstrong, of Jamestown, and died leaving two daughters, Ann and Emma. (4) Thomas, born in 1825, went to California in 1849, when a young man, in company with his brother Joseph, and they were very successful in the gold mines, taking $8,000 from one mine in six months. They returned to Wisconsin in 1850. Thomas married Miss Maria Rick, and they settled in Hazel Green, on a farm, where she died. Mr. Sparks then married her sister, Louisa. After this marriage he moved to Clay county, Kan., for the purpose of engaging in farming in that region. Mrs. Sparks died ten years after their arrival in that country, Mr. Sparks four days after her. He left six children, one now living in New Mexico. (5) Joseph is our subject. (6) Mary, born in 1830, married Benjamin Straw, and resides in Hazel Green. (7) George, born in 1833, married Miss Annie Jeffrey, of Jamestown, and is now living in Jackson county, Minn., with four children, Marvin, James, George and Clyde.

Joseph Sparks obtained his education partly in England and partly in Illinois, and when he was a young man went to California, as noted above. He had three yoke of cattle, and left Dubuque in April, 1849, reaching Grass Valley in August. Theirs was the first wagon to cross the Valley. On Deer creek they began their mining operations, and found large quantities of gold, Joseph discovering what was afterward known as the Dubuque Ravine Mines. After a year of mining the two brothers came back to Wisconsin, intending to go back to hold their mines, but did not return in time, and this great mine was lost.

In 1853 Joseph Sparks married Miss Mary A. Tomlinson, daughter of William and Eliza Tomlinson, natives of England, and emigrants to this country in 1842. Mr. Tomlinson settled at New Diggings, Lafayette county, where he died in 1850. The widow married John Watson, and died in 1889. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Tomlinson, three of whom are still living: John is a resident of Alden, Iowa; Elizabeth is the wife of W. A. Wilkinson, of Alden, Iowa; William was a soldier in the Civil war, was with Gen. Sherman on his march to the sea, and was killed in one of the last skirmishes in North Carolina; Mary A., Mrs. Sparks, was born at Manchester, England, in May, 1837. After his marriage Mr. Sparks bought a farm in Jamestown, which was highly improved, and where he lived for over forty years; it was sold in 1896. Mr. and Mrs. Sparks are living in Fair Play, Grant county, and he is now retired from active labor. During all these years Mr. Sparks has had lead mining interests which have richly rewarded his labors.

To Mr. and Mrs. Sparks were born ten children, six of whom are now living. Two died in childhood. (1) John W., born in 1836, was drowned in 1875, in the Mississippi river. (2) Eliza A., born in December, 1858, married C. E. Buell, and is now living in Webster City, Iowa, where he is engaged in the real-estate business. They have four children, Laura B. (Mrs. George M. Teed, of Webster City, Iowa), Herbert J., James A., and Walter. (3) Walter P., born in June, 1863, was engaged in the furniture business. He was taken sick, and died at Webster City, Iowa, in June, 1897. (4) Mary A., born in May, 1865, married M. R. Blank, of Stillwater, Minn., and has one son, Harrison J. (5) Franklin T., born in January, 1868, married Miss Nellie Watson, of Williams, Iowa, and has two children, Hazel and Arline. They live at Bancroft, Iowa, where he is a very prominent man, and was elected mayor of that city in 1900; he is an active Republican. He is a furniture man, and stands high in business circles. (6) Florence E., born in 1870, is the wife of Edward Keys, of Stillwater, Minn., and is the mother of two sons, Edward and James A. (7) Arthur J., born in January, 1873, married Miss Lena Larson, and resides on a farm purchased by his father in Jackson county, Minn. He has one son, Stacey H. (8) Clinton A., born in April, 1875, is unmarried, and lives on the farm in Minnesota, with his brother Arthur.

In 1897 Mr. Sparks purchased a large place near Lakefield, Minn., where his sons run a fancy stock farm. A Republican since the organization of the party, he has held the office of treasurer of Jamestown, and has been on the town board for three years. The family support the Methodist Church.

JOSIAH THOMAS, a retired merchant of Hazel Green, Grant county, who is now enjoying a richly-earned leisure and rest, was born in Cornwall, England, July 23, 1835.

John and Jenefer (Vine) Thomas, his parents, were both natives of Cornwall, where they were born in 1810. In 1842 they came to Lafayette county, Wis., and there he engaged in lead mining, later on buying a farm, to the cultivation of which he devoted himself when he gave up mining. In 1851 he went to California, and met with considerable success as a gold miner. Coming back to Wisconsin, he died on his farm in 1853. Mr. Thomas was a local preacher of the Primitive Methodist Church, and for a number of years filled local pulpits. The worthy wife who shared his adversities in early life lived to old age, and died in 1875. They had three children: (1) Mary, born in England in 1831, married George Bennett, and went to California, where she died in 1860, leaving a family. (2) Elizabeth, born in England in 1833, is now the widow of William Bennett, and lives in Vinegar Hill, Ill., where Mr. Bennett had extensive mercantile interests. Two sons were born to them, John T. and William G., the former in business in Galena, Ill., the latter at Waterloo, Iowa. (3) Josiah is our subject.

Josiah Thomas grew up in Lafayette county, Wis., where he received a public-school education. When he was twelve years old he began working in the mines, and in 1852 he went to California, where he worked in the gold fields, meeting with good results for his labors. After spending some years in that State he returned to Lafayette county, and assumed charge of the homestead farm, which he conducted until 1863. That year he went to Colorado, and spent two years in the gold mines of Colorado and Montana.

In 1854 Mr. Thomas married Miss Jane Hocking, who was born in England, a daughter of John and Elizabeth Hocking, who came West in 1846, and settled in Jo Daviess county, Ill., where Mrs. Thomas completed her education and was reared to womanhood.

Mr. Thomas established himself as a merchant in Hazel Green in 1865, and for over twenty-six years was a well-known and upright business man of that village. During this time he also engaged quite extensively in real-estate dealing, especially in the village, where he owns some of the most valuable property. Mr. Thomas was appointed postmaster during Hayes' administration, in 1877, and filled the position until 1881. He has been a somewhat prominent character in local politics, and has held several local positions of more or less importance, having been a member of both town and school boards, as well as holding other offices necessary for the transaction of local affairs. Formerly he was a justice of the peace, serving in that office a number of years. In 1893 he sold out his mercantile interests, and retired from active business labors. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas have four daughters living out of a family of ten children: (1) Laura A., born in Lafayette county in December, 1857, was educated in the high school at Hazel Green, and worked in the store with her father until her marriage, in 1886, to Joseph Harvey, of Council Hill, Ill. Mr. and Mrs. Harvey live in Central City, Colo., where he is engaged in the real-estate business. (2) Minnie, born in 1861, assisted her father in the store and as clerk in the post office up to the time of her marriage, in 1888, to J. B. Roy, a hardware merchant at Darlington, Wis. He is now retired from business. (3) Evangeline L., born in 1859, was educated in Hazel Green, where she married Frank P. Trewartha, and they live in that village with their two children, Evangeline and Glenn F. (4) Jennie, born in Hazel Green in 1877, had a high-school education, and is living at home. John H. Thomas, born in 1856, was engaged with his father in the store until his death, July 25, 1887. He married Miss Minnie Jackson, of Hazel Green, where they were living at the time of his death, by drowning in the Mississippi river. Mrs. Thomas was left a widow with one child, Hazel, and is now living in Chicago. The other children of our subject's family died young.

Mr. Thomas was a Republican until 1883, when he associated himself with the Prohibition party, and has acted with it to the present time. Mrs. Thomas is a member of the Congregational Church, and her husband is a liberal contributor to its support. A member of the lodge of the Masonic fraternity in Hazel Green, he is the oldest Mason in the town. For many years Mr. Thomas was a leading merchant, and he is held in the highest esteem by the people of his town. Beginning at the bottom, he worked to the top of the business ladder, richly deserving the success that has come to him.

DAVID JEFFRIS. The Jeffris family had its early seat in the North of Ireland, but moved to England early in the seventeenth century, and early in the eighteenth to America. Mr. Jeffris' mother was a native of Maryland, but his father and grandfather were natives of Virginia, taking an active part in the history of that Commonwealth. His grandfather, Thomas Jeffris, fought under Washington in the Revolutionary war for five years, enlisting when but sixteen years of age, was made sergeant, and received 300 acres of land from the government in recognition of his services, this land being located in southwestern Virginia. Moving westward after tarrying some years in east Tennessee, he finally settled in Hardin county, Ky., where he became a well-to-do planter, dying after having passed life's meridian, the father of nine children.

William Jeffris, the father of David Jeffris, removed to Illinois in 1830, settling in what is now Coles county, then within the limits of Clark county, which at that time embraced the present county of Cook, reaching as far north as the southern border of Lake Michigan. He was a man of prominence, respected and influential, a Whig in politics, and a Baptist in religious faith. He married Susan Keller, whose father, George Keller, emigrated from Germany to Maryland early in life. From that State he removed to Kentucky, and thence, in 1830, to Coles county, Ill., where he was a farmer. He had a large family. He passed away at the age of nearly fourscore years. William Jeffris died at his home in Charleston, Ill., at the age of seventy-four, his wife in 1831, while yet in young womanhood. The issue of their marriage was five sons and five daughters, only two of whom are now living: David, our subject; and Susan, widow of H. K. Nowlin.

David Jeffris was born in Grayson county, Ky., Aug. 6, 1821, and was but nine years old when his parents moved to Illinois. He grew up in Charleston, and enjoyed the somewhat limited educational advantages afforded by the district schools of seventy years ago. He aided his father in farming and lumbering, and at the age of twenty-two accompanied Col. Anderson, a cattle drover, from Macoupin county, Ill., to Janesville, Rock Co., Wis., as an assistant. They reached the Wisconsin town June 8, 1846, and Mr. Jeffris has resided in Rock county ever since. For six years he was a drover, but in 1851 he settled down to the life of a farmer. His first purchase of land consisted of 200 acres in the township of Janesville, four miles west of the present city. Subsequently he bought 240 acres adjoining, which he afterward sold. In 1867 he removed to Janesville, where he embarked in the lumber business, of which he had gained some knowledge in boyhood through association with his father. He also became an extensive building contractor, having erected 419 structures in Janesville and vicinity, the list including churches, hotels, stores, business blocks and dwelling. For thirty years he led an exceedingly busy life, devoting his best energies to the conduct of his large undertakings, no detail of his business escaping his personal supervision. In its management he united sagacity with industry, sound judgment with perseverance. In 1896, having accumulated a handsome fortune, he retired from active business, and since that time has been employed chiefly in the management of his estate and the oversight of his numerous important financial interests. He is far-seeing and broad-minded, and has done much toward the advancement of the city's commercial interests. He aided in organizing, and is one of the directors of, the Janesville Machine Co., which gives employment to 250 men, and was one of the founders of the Merchants & Mechanics Savings Bank, of which he was president for several years. He is also a shareholder in various other important financial, commercial and manufacturing enterprises. He is a Republican in politics, and, while naturally averse to holding office, has consented to accept official preferment at his party's earnest request.

Mr. Jeffris was married to Miss Grace Alice Mouat Nov. 14, 1850. Both her parents, Malcolm and Margaret (Youngclouse) Mouat, were born in the Shetland Isles, and it was in that quaint, picturesque corner of the British empire that she herself was born, June 12, 1831. Mr. Jeffris is a member of the Congregational Church, of which he has been a trustee for many years, and to which Mrs. Jeffris also belonged, having been a member for more than fifty-two years. They had nine children, one of whom died unnamed, the others being Susan Alice, Thomas M. (deceased), Margaret (deceased), William S., Helen Jane (deceased), Malcolm George, David K. and Fred J. Thomas M. resided at Huron, S. Dak., where he owned a ranch, besides having carried on business as a lumberman and dealt extensively in real estate. He was a man of wide influence in his adopted State, and did much for its welfare. He died April 4, 1900, at his father's home. In 1889 he married Harriet Hall, and they had three children, Ruth B., Bruce M. and Robert M. Margaret, the second daughter of Mr. Jeffris, died when seven and a half months old, and Helen Jane in her eighth year. William S. is president of the Merchants & Mechanics Savings Bank of Janesville; he married Jeannette Baldwin, and is the father of one son and two daughters, Kenneth B., Katharine L. and Margaret H. Malcolm G., the third son, is a member of the firm of Fethers, Jeffris & Mouat, practicing attorneys in Janesville; he married Nancy Roys, and their three children are named Malcolm R., Helen and Rufus R. David K. is also a resident of Janesville, and is engaged in the lumber business; he married Della Hanchett, and they, too, are the parents of three children, Donald H., Jean E. and Grace M. Fred J., the fifth son, is associated with his brother David K. in the lumber business; he is unmarried. The mother of this family died Aug. 28, 1900.

THOMAS J. LLOYD, a wealthy retired farmer, who occupies a cozy home on Pleasant street, two doors west of Oak Hill avenue, in the city of Janesville, has been intimately associated with the agricultural interests of southern Wisconsin for many years. He has had a varied and eventful career, has worked assiduously, been provident and saving, and has made a history that might well be read by every young man as he faces his life work, it has such lessons of thrift and industry, honesty and integrity.

Mr. Lloyd was born in Radnor, Wales, Nov. 4, 1837, and is a son of Thomas and Ann (Worthing) Lloyd, both natives of England, who were the parents of six children, four now living: Thomas J.; William, of South Dakota; John W., of Janesville; and Edward, of Plainfield, Iowa. The father was a hotel-keeper and contractor early in life. He emigrated to America in 1839, settled in Waterville, Oneida Co., N. Y., and engaged in farming. He came to Wisconsin about 1847, located in Walworth county, and followed farming until within a few years of his death, at Big Foot Prairie, near Delavan. His wife died in about 1884, at the age of sixty-seven years, and shortly after that he broke up house-keeping and went to live with his daughter, in Plainfield, Iowa, where he died in 1896, when eighty-nine years and ten months old. He and his wife were Baptists, and he had held various town offices. His father died in England when Thomas was only two years old. History is silent as to the facts of his career, but it is known that he was a British soldier in the war of 1812, and that he died early in life. The father of Ann Worthing was of English birth, and died in middle life, in his native country.

Thomas J. Lloyd was about two years old when his parents brought him to this country, and he lived in Walworth county from 1847 to 1887, when he moved to Janesville, in which city he has made his home to the present time. This is but a brief statement of a very interesting career. Mr. Lloyd when a boy attended school in Waterville, N. Y., until he was ten years old, and then at Douglas Corners, in Walworth county, Wis., where he completed the high-school course, acquiring a very sound and practical education. His first business venture was the purchase of forty acres at what was known as Big Foot Prairie. He improved this thoroughly, and brought it into fine condition, and then added to it the adjoining forty acres, and still later an adjacent forty acres, thus making a very nice farm. When he was quite sure of himself, and dared to undertake it, he bought a second farm, of 178 acres, and had now become one of the important land owners of Walworth county. Later in life he sold these two farms at a handsome profit, and became quite a real-estate dealer in choice farm property, buying and selling both farm and city property. He continued farming until he came to Janesville, when he engaged in the boot and shoe business for several years. At the present time he devotes himself to the care of his extensive investments in that city and Rockford, Illinois.

Mr. Lloyd and Miss Martha C. Boorman, a daughter of John and Mary (Reader) Boorman, were married May 20, 1864. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd have had four children, Chester C., Laura L., Mary Leona, and one child that died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd are members of the Baptist Church. He is a Republican. Our subject was a soldier in the Civil war, enlisting in 1861 in Company K, 2d Wisconsin Volunteer Cavalry, and serving one year, when he was discharged on account of serious sickness. The three living children of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd are all very nicely settled in life. Chester C. married Miss Hattie Bennett, and lives in Rockford, Ill., where he is a boot and shoe dealer. During the summer he runs a steamboat. He has two sons, Clair and Forest. Laura L. married Mark Dunlap, and she and her husband live with her parents; they have one son, Lester

Lloyd. Mary Leona married William Morris, and lives at No. 108 South High street, Janesville.

Mrs. Lloyd's parents were natives of England, came to this country in 1832, located in Chautauqua county, N. Y., where they lived some years, and were among the first settlers of Walworth county, coming into Wisconsin about 1838. They were the parents of three sons and four daughters, and three of their children are now living: Esther, wife of Luther Adams, of Walworth, Wis.; Martha C., wife of Thomas J. Lloyd; and Melissa, wife of John Lloyd, of Janesville. Mrs. Lloyd's grandfather, John Boorman, was born in England, and died there when over eighty years old. He was a farmer, and had a large family. Mrs. Lloyd's maternal grandfather, Thomas Reader, was born and reared in England, and came to this country in about 1854. He stopped in New York for a time, but finally came to Wisconsin, and died when over seventy. He had fourteen children. He was a soldier in the Revolution, on the British side.

JOHN SIDE, postmaster at Lead Mine, Lafayette county, and local preacher of the Primitive Methodist Western Conference, is a native of the County of Cumberland, England, born in April, 1825, son of George and Bell (Brown) Side, both of whom passed their entire lives in the County of Cumberland, the former following mining as an occupation. Of the six children in their family but two came to America, John and William, the latter coming in 1859, accompanied by his wife and family. He settled in Iowa, and there died in 1897; his family are still residents of that State.

John Side grew to manhood in England, and received a fair education in the public schools. After the death of his father he came to America, landing in this country in 1847. He made the voyage on the sailing-vessel "Monarch," which brought him to New York, and thence by way of the Erie canal he reached Buffalo, where he boarded a lake vessel for Chicago. From the last-named place he started by team for New Diggings, Lafayette county, there to engage in lead and zinc mining, which has been his life work, and he continued industriously at work until but a few years ago, when he retired, and is now resting on the fruits of his early toil. In 1863 he erected his present home in the village of Lead Mine, and equipped it with all the conveniences and comforts obtainable at the time. Politically he is a Republican, and when the office at Lead Mine was established, in 1884, he was appointed postmaster, which position he has continued to hold. He has also held a number of local offices in the gift of the people, among them being those of chairman and member of the town board, and, for over twenty years, the office of justice of the peace. In religious belief both he and his wife are members of the Primitive Methodist Church, Mr. Side having become a member of that denomination over forty years ago, or shortly after his permanent location here. His interest in all good and religious work is keen, and for years he has filled the pulpit as a local minister, leading an upright, honorable life—an example well worthy of emulation.

Mr. Side has been three times married, first in 1849, when Miss Jane Barnes became his bride. She died in 1862, leaving three children: William, a miner of Etna, Wis., is married and has three children, Alvin, Jennie and Joseph; George D., of Leadville, Colo., is married and has one son, George; Mary M. is the wife of John Cottingham, of Benton. For his second wife Mr. Side wedded Miss Lizzie Harker, a native of England, and daughter of Joseph and Mary Harker, who located in Lafayette county and died in New Diggings township. Mrs. Lizzie (Harker) Side died in April, 1878, leaving a family of three children, two of whom died in childhood; Maggie, born in 1865, married Thomas Miller, of Benton, a partner of John Cottingham in the milling business, and they have one son, Otho. Mr. Side's last marriage was to Mrs. Mary J. Rowe, who was born in England in 1848, daughter of Ralph and Catherine Miller, who early came from England and located in Wisconsin, where he died in 1880; Mrs. Miller is yet living here. Mrs. Side was educated in New Diggings, and in that town married William Rowe, who was killed in the mines in 1880, and left his wife with four children: Lizzie married Thomas Martin, of Iowa, and has one daughter, Phoebe; John, of New Diggings, married Nettie Smith; Roy is a miner of Cuba, Wis.; Kittie is at home.

During the Civil war Mr. Side enlisted, becoming a private in Company C, 50th Wis. V. I., and by faithful performance of duty rose to the rank of sergeant. His regiment was assigned to the Western Army.

ELIAS PILLING (deceased) was one of the pioneers of the town of Willow Springs, Lafayette county, and at his decease left the record of an honest, upright man. His birth occurred in 1798, in England, where he attained his maturity and married Elizabeth Haigh, immigrating to the United States in 1827, with his wife and three children.

The first location of the Pilling family was at Potosi, Mo., where they resided until 1832. They then removed to Galena, remaining there but a short time, however, and coming to Willow Springs, where they made a permanent residence. Mr. Pilling was one of the earliest settlers of Willow Springs. He immediately began the work of smelting lead, for John Parkinson and John Brown, the methods of carrying on this work being of the most primitive character at that time, the modern methods never having been dreamed of, even in the largest establishments. One year later Mr. Pilling bought out the interest of Mr. Parkinson in these works, following which he and Mr. Brown erected a store, which was successfully conducted in connection with their smelting plant. Some time later a blast furnace was erected in the same town, on Otter creek, near the eastern boundary of what is now the town of Willow Springs. This furnace was a move in the direction of improvement in the method of smelting; it was built by Frank Gregoire and Joshua Bailey. In about 1837 Mr. Pilling bought the interest of Mr. Bailey, a year later becoming the sole proprietor of the blast furnace, which he operated until 1849. His four sons were interested with their father in the smelting business, but when the California gold fever broke out they caught the infection, and joined the scores of others who made their way across the Plains. On this account, and also because of scarcity of mineral, the furnace was now closed, and Mr. Pilling never re-opened the works.

Our subject had entered several hundred acres of land, much of which he had placed under cultivation, his homestead being in Section 15, and he lived there many years. Two years prior to his death, however, he left the home to his two sons, John and George, although he resided in the neighborhood until the time of his death, Oct. 25, 1873. Mrs. Pilling had passed away July 9, 1871. She was a devoted Christian mother and neighbor. The Sunday-school of Willow Springs is an existing testimonial to the energy and pious character of this estimable woman, she being its originator, and through life one of its most active workers.

Elias Pilling and his wife became the parents of eleven children, eight sons and three daughters, those surviving being two sons and three daughters: Dr. Abraham Pilling, of Burlington, Iowa; Mrs. Nancy Monehan, of Darlington, Wis.; Mrs. Frances Jane Warren, of Tucson, Ariz.; Mrs. Mary H. Sheldon, of Willow Springs; and Dr. Henry H. Pilling, of Tucson, Ariz. Joseph, John, George, Isaac, Elias and Robert have all passed away, though all of them lived to be advanced in years.

Mr. Pilling was a typical pioneer, honest and upright in all his dealings, liberal and ever ready to assist those in need of help, and enjoyed the esteem and respect of his fellow citizens. Both he and his estimable wife are still remembered as worthy people whose acquaintance was desirable, and whose death was regarded in the light of a neighborhood calamity.

DAVID KELLER JEFFRIS is one of Janesville's leading business men, and one of the best-known lumbermen in the State of Wisconsin. He is the son of David Jeffris, whose biography appears upon another page of this work, where may be found a detailed sketch of the family's history.

Our subject was born in Janesville township May 28, 1867, and has inherited the business acumen and tireless energy of his father. He was educated in the common schools of Janesville. His first business experience was obtained in his father's lumberyards, and in 1887 he embarked in trade upon his own account. At that time he was but twenty years old, and his subsequent success in life might be regarded as phenomenal by those who should fail to take into account his admirable mental endowment and quick, ready grasp of the problems of every-day life. In 1890 he sold out his original plant, and in that year erected mills in what is known as Jeffris, a village having sprung up around them. Since that time his business enterprises have steadily increased in number. His brother Frederick is associated with him as a partner, and the firm owns and operates a large factory in Janesville, for the manufacture of sash, doors and blinds and window screens, employing between 250 and 300 men. They also own saw-mills at Jeffris, Wis. Mr. Jeffris is also an extensive owner of real estate, and holds large tracts of valuable pine lands in the northern part of the State, besides being a director in various moneyed corporations in the city of his residence. He is a man of generous impulses and social instincts, loving the companionship of his friends and being both loved and honored by them in return. He is a member of Janesville Lodge, No. 55, A. F. & A. M., as well as of the K. of P. and the B. P. O. E. He also belongs to that widely reputed social organization of lumbermen known as the "Hoo Hoos," whose good fellowship and love of mirth are known throughout the Northwest. Being of Scotch descent on the maternal side, he has been eligible for election in the Caledonian Society, of which he is one of the most esteemed members. Politically he is a Republican.

Mr. Jeffris was married Jan. 2, 1889, his bride being Miss Della Hanchett, a daughter of Gerando M. and Anna (Spaulding) Hanchett. Their three children are named Donald H., Jean E. and Grace M. Mrs. Jeffris is a member of the Congregational Church.

WILLIAM H. APPLEBY. This gentleman, who is now serving his second term as sheriff of Rock county, has been for many years identified in an official capacity with the enforcement of the criminal law. His parents and grandparents were natives of London, England, but he himself was born Oct. 15, 1861, in the town of Avon, Rock county. Both his father and paternal grandfather, who were weavers by trade, emigrated to America in 1848, settling first in Elgin, Ill. The grandfather, John Appleby, went from that place to Iowa, where both he and his wife died, aged seventy-seven and seventy-six years, respectively. They were the parents of two sons, John Thomas and Alfred, the elder of whom is the father of William H. Appleby. He resided in Elgin for four or five years, and then removed to Janesville, where he is still living. He married Elizabeth Landredgen, the daughter of a retired

W. H. Appleby

London merchant. She died in 1863. Both were members of the Church of England. Three sons and two daughters were born to them, of whom William H. is the youngest. The others are: Elizabeth, the wife of Alfred Graves, of Evansville, Wis.; John Thomas, a retired farmer, of Parker, S. Dak.; Caroline, now Mrs. Henry Graves, of Dewitt, Iowa; and George M., chief of police in the city of Beloit, Rock county.

William H. Appleby received a good elementary English education in the common schools. After reaching early manhood he removed to Beloit, where for a considerable period he served on the police force, filling the office of superintendent for six years. In 1894 the citizens of Rock county elected him sheriff, for a term of two years. At the expiration of that period he was made chief of police of Janesville, and in 1898 was re-elected sheriff. The grave duties of this high position he still continues to discharge, with a courage and efficiency which command universal admiration and respect. His personal popularity is widespread, and his friends are legion. He is genial, frank, courteous and generous, and fond of social pleasures. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, being connected with Mining Star Lodge, No. 10, A. F. & A. M.; Beloit Chapter, No. 8, R. A. M.; and Beloit Commandery, No. 6, K. T. He is also a member of the Uniformed Rank, K. P., of the Modern Woodmen of America, and of the A. O. U. W. Politically he is a Republican.

On March 7, 1886, Mr. Appleby was married to Miss Pauline, a daughter of F. R. Vincent. They have one child, Floy.

RODGER HORNER. Industry and thrift are the price that honorable men pay for success, and this has been amply paid by the gentleman with whose name this article begins, and who lives in the town of Harrison, Grant county. His business life has been devoted to mining and farming, and he may be written down as one of the solid and representative men of both these callings in his part of the State.

Mr. Horner was born in Toronto, Canada, in March, 1835, a son of Matthew and Jane Horner, natives of Yorkshire, England. They were married in their native country in 1825, and some ten years later came to Canada. In 1840 they moved to Jo Daviess county, Ill., where they lived seven years. At the expiration of this time they found a location in British Hollow, Grant Co., Wis., where he followed lead mining and smelting until 1854. That year he bought the Joseph Reiter farm, in the town of Harrison, Grant Co., Wis., which was afterward their home as long as they lived. Mr. Horner died in January, 1880, and his wife in September, same year. They had a family of twelve children: Rachel was buried at sea. Margaret died when a child, at British Hollow. James died in Grant county, when a young man. Matthew died at the home of his parents, in 1858. Mary died when a young woman at her parents' home. William was killed in the mines of California, leaving a wife and daughter, Emma, now Mrs. J. P. Bonnett, of Harrison. Rachel, born in Illinois, married Morris Cavanaugh, and is now deceased. Jane is Mrs. Norman Clark, of Harrison. Jonathan married Lizzie Bradley, and lives at British Hollow. Elizabeth, Mrs. J. Reiter, is on the old Horner homestead, in Harrison. Rodger died in infancy, and his name was given to the youngest child of the family, our subject.

Rodger Horner received a common-school education. He became a soldier of the Union army during the Civil war, enlisting in Company H, 44th Wis. V. I., which regiment was attached to the Army of the Tennessee, and Mr. Horner followed the flag until the close of the war. He was in hospital some months, and made an honorable record as a soldier and a gentleman while at the front. In 1859 Mr. Horner crossed the Plains, and was in California until the summer of 1864, when he came back to Wisconsin, and entered the service. After the war he went to California a second time, and remained in the West until 1871. There he married Miss Marietta Butler, who was born in Harrison, Wis., a daughter of Daniel and Anna (Coates) Butler; Mr. Butler died at East Dubuque, Iowa. Mrs. Butler at Georgetown, Grant Co., Wis. Mr. Butler was an old-time Californian, and a soldier in the Civil war from Wisconsin. Mrs. Horner was visiting her brother in California at the time of her marriage, and they remained in that State two years longer. Their eldest child was the first child born in Bodie, Cal. In 1873 Mr. and Mrs. Horner settled on his present farm in the town of Harrison, where they are now living. They have put up a good home, and cleared up the farm, and he has spent many years mining in the county. In 1879 he made a third trip to California, leaving his wife and five children on the farm, and returned in 1880. Mr. and Mrs. Horner have had nine children: Matthew D., who lives at home; William H.; Elijah R.; Sarah A., who was a student of the Platteville Normal, and has been a teacher for some six years; Nora, also a student at the Normal, who has been one of the successful teachers of the county for some years; Maud S., a student of the same Normal, who has been a teacher for five terms in the schools of the county; Minnie May, who was educated in the high school and the Normal; Rodger is the youngest living of the family; and the youngest of all, Jonathan, died when an infant. Mr. and Mrs. Horner also took an orphan child to raise, Mrs. Horner's niece, Annie Wynne, now Mrs. Will Champion, of Hazel Green, Wis. Mr. Horner's daughters are all bright, capable young ladies, very highly regarded in the community.

Mr. Horner is an independent Republican, and has held the office of school treasurer and roadmaster. Mrs. Horner and the family attend church in the neighborhood, and take a lively interest in all good movements and measures. They are highly regarded, and are spoken of as among the cultured and refined people of the county.

THOMAS S. NOLAN, a member of the Bar of Rock county, and connected with the firm of Sutherland & Nolan, practicing attorneys at Janesville, is himself a native of Wisconsin, born of Irish parents.

Simon Nolan, his father, was born in the old country, emigrated to America while a young man, and about 1854 came West, locating at Janesville, where he resided until his death, in 1858. He married Margaret Coss, whose birthplace was in Queen's County, Ireland. She survived her husband, and after his death married a second time, her husband being Thomas Poey, and the fruit of that union being one daughter, Mary A., now Mrs. George E. Lynch, of Milwaukee. Two children were born to the first marriage, Thomas S. and Catherine M., the latter now the wife of Dr. Walter E. Fernald, at present (September, 1900) the efficient superintendent of the School for Feeble Minded, at Boston.

Thomas S. Nolan was born at Janesville

Oct. 11, 1856. His attendance at the public schools was supplemented by a course of instruction at the Ridgeway (Ontario) Academy, and he began the study of law in the office of Edward Bates, a well-known attorney of York, Neb. Before commencing the reading of Blackstone he was employed first as assistant clerk and afterward as clerk in the office of the Nebraska State Penitentiary. His course of professional reading was completed at Janesville. He was admitted to practice in 1879. In 1881 he aided in the incorporation of the Recorder Printing Co., and for two years was editor of the Recorder, then a Republican newspaper. During 1880-81 he held the office of police justice, and is now serving his second term as a member of the board of fire and police commissioners. He is an active worker in the cause of the Republican party, and is at present chairman of the county central committee. He is a member of Western Star Lodge, No. 14, A. F. & A. M., and of Janesville Chapter, No. 5, R. A. M.; and also belongs to Oriental Lodge, No. 22, K. of P., in which he held the office of chancellor commander for two terms. He is a member of the Hamilton Club, of Chicago, and was one of the organizers of the Twilight Club, being one of its active and influential members.

Mr. Nolan was married Feb. 22, 1883, to Miss Jessie M. Murdock, a daughter of Edwin D. and Adelia M. (Hoyt) Murdock, and one daughter was born to them, Vera E.

JOHN SCHREINER, a prosperous business man of Lancaster, Grant county, was born in Hessen-Darmstadt, Germany, in 1835, and was but nine years of age when bereft of his father, Nicholas Schreiner, after which sad occurrence he worked his way through life alone. When eighteen years old, in 1853, he came to America, Grant county, Wis., being his point of destination. He here found employment by the month as a farm hand, and this continued to be his occupation until 1864, when with his savings he purchased an interest in the firm of Jacob Nathan & Son, the well-known merchants of Lancaster. In 1868 the firm name was changed to Nathan, Schreiner & Co., and in 1880 Mr. Schreiner bought out his partners and conducted the business alone until 1884, since which date the firm name has been John Schreiner & Sons—Frank and Edward being the present partners of their father. Another son, Adolph, was a member of the firm from the time of its formation until his death, in 1889.

John Schreiner married Miss Sophia Nathan, a native of Prussia, and a daughter of Jacob Nathan, alluded to in the foregoing paragraph. To this union have been born seven children, of whom six are still living: Ellen, Mrs. Simonson, of Seattle, Wash.; Elizabeth, Mrs. Moulton, of Two Harbors, Minn.; Emma, at home; Frank; Edward H.; and Herbert E.

Besides the mercantile business carried on in Lancaster John Schreiner & Sons have a still more extensive establishment at Two Harbors, Minn., which is in charge of the son, Edward H., and the son-in-law, Mr. Moulton. Adolph, the deceased son, had charge of this business until fatally attacked by typhoid fever, and was a most excellent business man, as well as a model citizen.

John Schreiner began life a poor boy, but as he possessed good business qualities and moral habits, as well as sound judgment, he has risen to prominence and affluence, and consequently in the good opinion of his fellow-citizens. When the State Bank of Grant County was organized, in 1889, the directors elected him president, which office he has held ever since. Politically he is a Republican, and fraternally an Odd Fellow.

REV. OLE PAULSON, the esteemed pastor of the Norwegian Lutheran Church at Blanchardville, Lafayette county, was born in Norway April 26, 1832, and accompanied his father's family to America in 1850. For a time they made their home in Winneshiek county, Iowa, removing thence to Carver county, Minn., where the parents passed the remainder of their lives.

The opening days of the war of the Rebellion found Rev. Ole Paulson a student in the Scandinavian Lutheran Augustana Seminary and College, at Chicago, Ill., and like many another student in the schools and colleges of the North he left his books and shouldered a musket in defense of the Union. In August, 1862, he became a member of Company H., 9th Minn. V. I., with the rank of second lieutenant, William R. Baxter being captain of the company. That year occurred the famous uprising of the Sioux Indians, and the 9th, with other volunteer regiments, was sent to chastise the red men and prevent further depredations. Mr. Paulson took part in Gen. Sibley's expedition in Minnesota and Dakota during the summer of 1863, and was in several battles with the savages. When the Indians were finally driven beyond the Missouri river, and the Indian war closed, the regiment returned to Fort Snelling, and thence in the fall of 1863 proceeded to St. Louis, where it was occupied doing guard duty the following winter, from there going to Rolla, Mo. During this time the men were sent out on detached duty, and the entire regiment considerably divided. In the spring of 1864 they were again united, and proceeded to Little Rock, Ark., as Col. Wilkinson, who commanded the regiment, was ambitious to join in Gen. Sturgis' well known expedition against the Rebel Gen. Forrest, and was successful in realizing his ambition. The result of this was the somewhat famous battle of Guntown, in which the army under Sturgis was badly defeated, the expedition having been badly planned, and the battle fought at great disadvantage to the Union forces. The 9th lost heavily, Company H losing its captain and thirty men taken prisoners and placed in the noted stockade at Andersonville, Ga., where many of them perished from starvation. The next important event in which the 9th participated was at Tupelo, near Memphis, where Col. Wilkinson was killed. They also took part in the battle of Nashville and the taking of Spanish Fort. The health of Rev. Mr. Paulson was much broken before the close of the war, and after receiving his discharge, in the summer of 1864, he returned to Minnesota, being for some time too ill to resume his duties at college. When he did recover he found that the college in the meantime had been removed from Chicago to Paxton, Ill. He was graduated in 1868, and since that time has been engaged in the ministry. For six years he was pastor at Minneapolis, being the first Scandinavian Lutheran pastor in that city. After the Minneapolis charge he passed twelve years as pastor of the church at Willmar, Minn., and since Nov. 20, 1885, has been in charge at Blanchardville, besides which he administers to three other congregations, namely: Argyle, Adams and York, the one at Adams being the largest. These parishes taken collectively number about 1,200 people.

Our subject is a hard worker, and has organized some large congregations. He preaches and practices the doctrines of the universal brotherhood of man, and is greatly beloved by his parishioners, who feel that in him, indeed, they have a firm and a conscientious spiritual adviser. He has also done a large amount of literary work, being a frequent contributor to the Folkebladet, and having written some hymns of unquestioned excellence. One of his greatest desires is to see the spread of the practice of total abstinence.

In 1857 Rev. Mr. Paulson was united in marriage with Miss Inger Loberg, a native of Norway, and their family consists of three sons and four daughters: Alpha Theodora, Martin Luther, Helga Otilde, Lydia Regina, Paul Gerhard, Olaf Ingvald, and Aagot Herbertha, all living. Petra Augusta and Johannes died in their infancy.

PROF. BENJAMIN DWIGHT ALLEN, Choirmaster and Professor of Music in Beloit College, is the personal friend of many bright and capable people who have gone out of that institution to make their way in every walk and calling of life. He is one of the venerable figures upon the streets and in the homes of which the city of Beloit is justly proud, and the uplifting and inspiring power of his long and useful career has been beyond computation. He has a pleasing and attractive personality, a warm and genial manner.

Prof. Allen was born in Sturbridge, Mass., Feb. 16, 1831, a son of Alvan and Lucy (Salisbury) Allen, both natives of that State. They had two sons, Albert Salisbury and Benjamin Dwight, the former of whom died in Worcester, Mass., in 1895, and Prof. Allen is the only representative of the family now living. The father was a merchant when a young man, and later became city marshal of Worcester. He developed an extensive business as a contractor in the stage business between Boston, Hartford, Norwich and other points, and in middle life took to the business of selling pianos and other musical instruments. He died at Worcester in 1859, at the age of sixty-two years. His widow survived until 1888, when she passed away at the age of eighty-eight. They were both Congregationalists. Alvan Allen was a colonel in the State militia. His father, Elisha Allen, was born in Massachusetts, and was a farmer all his life, dying in middle age. He had a large family. The family belongs to the Medford branch of the Allens, and its history in America runs back to the early part of the seventeenth century. The maternal grandfather of Prof. Allen, Benjamin Salisbury, born in either Massachusetts or Rhode Island, is supposed to have been a tailor, and lived to be over eighty years of age. He belonged to the Rhode Island family of this name.

Prof. Allen spent the first four years of his life at Sturbridge, and was then taken by his parents to Worcester, where he grew to manhood under exceptionally fine opportunities for the acquisition of a solid and substantial education. He passed through the public school, had private tutors, and was thoroughly grounded and broadly trained, as much so as he would have been at college. Prof. Fisher, then a young man, and now of Yale, was his instructor in literary themes, as was also H. G. O. Blake, who became widely known at a later period as the editor of Thoreau's writings. While studying general themes, Prof. Allen was also engaged in teaching instrumental music. He early foreshadowed his career in life, and made preparation for it under such competent instructors as Timm, of New York, and Satter and Dresel, of Boston. He began his career as a teacher of high-class music in Worcester. He was a member of the staff of the New England Conservatory of Music, in Boston, one of the professors of the Boston University, and member of the Harvard Musical Association, and for thirty-seven years was organist of the Union Church and one of the directors of the music festivals of Worcester. Prof. Allen was intimately associated with Carl Zerrahn for more than a quarter of a century, and his memories of the scenes and incidents of the music world of New England fifty years ago are interesting in the extreme.

Prof. Allen and Miss Eliza White were married Aug. 18, 1857. Mrs. Allen was a daughter of James and Eliza (Healy) White, and a descendant of Peregrine White, of Pilgrim fame. Five children were born of this union, Mabel, James, Eliza Salisbury, Charlotte Joy, and Benjamin Lincoln Wayland. Mabel married Rev. W. W. Sleeper, and after their marriage they spent five years in Bulgaria. Mr. Sleeper is now pastor of the Second Congregational Church in Beloit. They have had six children, four of whom are now living, James Taylor, William Allen, Helen Joy and Frank McDonald. James Allen had a varied career. He was graduated from the high school, was a student at Amherst College, and then became connected with the Worcester Evening Gazette, remaining in the office of that paper some ten or twelve years. He was sent to Zanzibar, Africa, as agent for the great New York trading house of Arnold, Cheney & Co., and came back from the other side of the world to go into the banking business at Worcester, under the firm name of Winslow & Allen. He died in 1898. Eliza S. died in early childhood. Charlotte Joy married Charles H. Farnsworth, who is now instructor in music at Columbia College, New York. Benjamin died in infancy. On Aug. 18, 1894, on the anniversary of her marriage, Mrs. Allen died in Beloit, while on a visit to her daughter, and was buried in Worcester, Mass. She had reached the age of fifty-nine years, and belonged to the Congregational Church, as also does her husband. After her death Prof. Allen removed to Beloit, in order to make his home with his daughter, coming here in the fall of 1894, and took the professorship of music in the college. He is still active in the performance of its duties, and is a member of the guild of organists of the United States. He is a Republican in political sentiment. Prof. Allen has had some students of music who afterward became very prominent, among them being Eugene Thayer; Henshaw Dana, the composer; Marie Stone McDonald, of the Bostonian Opera Company; her sister, Bessie Barton, who has won recognition as a singer abroad; and another sister, Agnes, who is famous as a singer. Howard Parkhurst, organist of the Madison Square Church, New York City, and George C. Gow, director of music in Vassar College, were also pupils of the Professor. Many others might be mentioned. He has been a hard-working and enthusiastic teacher of music, and the fire of art in his soul has kindled in many another soul the divine passion of music.

JAMES KILPATRICK. Among the agriculturalists of Grant county who have attained success from a financial point of view, and have now laid aside all business cares to enjoy a well-earned rest, is this well-known and prominent resident of Platteville. He was born in Ireland Jan. 19, 1825, and the same year was brought to this country by his parents, Andrew and Elizabeth (Stuart) Kilpatrick, natives of the North of Ireland, and of Scottish descent. The family located in Philadelphia, Penn., where the father worked as a laborer and weaver for about ten years, but in 1835 moved to Galena, Ill., and he opened up a farm in Jo Daviess county, devoting the remainder of his active business life to agricultural pursuits. There he died in 1896, having long survived his wife, who departed this life in 1870. Of the five children born to them, James is the eldest; Mrs. Eliza Wright died in Jo Daviess county, Ill., March 2, 1881; Andrew Stuart, a farmer of the same county, died in 1896; Ellen is living near Hanover, Ill.; and Robert is an extensive farmer, residing on the old homestead in Jo Daviess county.

In Philadelphia James Kilpatrick was reared until ten years of age, and then accompanied the family on their removal to Galena, Ill., where he grew to manhood. For some time he was engaged in teaming and staging between that city and Chicago, and in 1856 moved to Lafayette county, Wis., where he followed farming until coming to Platteville, in June, 1892, since which time he has lived retired.

In response to the President's call for troops, at the beginning of the Civil war, Mr. Kilpatrick enlisted in Lafayette county, in 1861, for three years or during the war, becoming a member of Company E, 11th Wis. V. I., which was assigned to the Army of the West, and was mustered in at Madison. For some time the regiment was stationed at Pilot Knob, Mo. Mr. Kilpatrick's command participated in the battles of Champion Hills, Black River Bridge, Vicksburg, and Jackson, Miss., and was then transferred to the Department of the Gulf, with which it took part in the battles of Bayou Teche and Vermilion Bayou, the siege of Mobile, Fort Blakely and Spanish Fort. Our subject was not in all these engagements, however. For three or four weeks he was confined in the regimental hospital below Helena, Ark., and for four weeks in the Sisters' hospital at St. Louis, after which he was sent to the post hospital at Ironton, Mo., where he was honorably discharged Feb. 17, 1863, on the surgeon's certificate of disability. Returning to his home in Lafayette county, Wis., he resumed farming as soon as able, owning and operating a good farm in Kendall township.

At Galena, Ill., in 1847. Mr. Kilpatrick was united in marriage with Miss Esther Bennett, also a native of Ireland, and to them were born five children: John Andrew, a resident of Cass county, Iowa, married Maria Jane Westroke, and they have fourteen children; Martha E., Mrs. Ludlow, died in Lafayette county, Wis., June 22, 1888, leaving five sons; Thomas James, living on the home farm, married Aggie Stockdale, and has six children; Francis William, a resident of Leeds City, N. Dak., married Kittie McGowan, now deceased; and William B. married Bessie Reskill, who died in 1888, while his death occurred in Lafayette county, Wis., the following year.

On June 7, 1892, Mr. Kilpatrick married Mrs. Alice A. (Cattermole) Griffin, his present wife, who was born in the County of Suffolk, England, a daughter of John and Charlotte (Ablett) Cattermole, natives of the same place. For forty years her father followed the baker's trade in England, and then emigrated to America, over fifty years ago, locating in Elk Grove, Lafayette Co., Wis., where he opened up and improved a farm, preempting a part of the land. He became one of the leading citizens of that community, and served as postmaster at Elk Grove. He died in Platteville in 1887, and his wife passed away in 1885. In religious belief he was a Methodist. Their family numbered seven children: Alice A., now Mrs. Kilpatrick; Alfred A., who enlisted at Platteville in Company F, 10th Wis. V. I., during the Civil war, and was ill when he returned home, dying in Elk Grove in 1873; Aggie A., now Mrs. E. T. Mears, of Independence, Kans.; Agnes A., who married and died in Wisconsin, leaving six children; Anna A., who married J. B. Stockdale, of Belmont, Wis., and died in 1873; Emma, wife of William Sherburn, of Oklahoma; and Cynthia, who married William Owens, and died in 1873. For her first husband Mrs. Kilpatrick married D. Griffin, a lock and gun smith, who lived for a time in Elk Grove, and then moved to Platteville, where he died in 1888.

Religiously both Mr. and Mrs. Kilpatrick are earnest and consistent members of the Congregational Church, and socially he is connected with W. T. Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R., of Platteville, and Belmont Lodge, No. 282,

I. O. O. F. While a resident of Kendall township, Lafayette county, he served as justice of the peace six years, and was also a member of the board of supervisors, discharging his official duties in a most creditable and satisfactory manner. His loyalty as a citizen and his devotion to his country's interests have ever been among his marked characteristics, and the community is fortunate that numbers him among her citizens.

OLIVER F. KEENE, an old and well-known citizen of Lancaster, Grant county, and a valuable ex-soldier of the war of the Rebellion, was born in Vigo county, Ind., July 4, 1830, and was about four years old when brought to Wisconsin by his parents, Samuel B. and Lydia A. (Shattuck) Keene.

Samuel B. Keene was a native of Homer, Cortland Co., N. Y., born in 1796, son of Zehulon Keene, a soldier of the war of the Revolution. The Keene family came originally from Wales to America, in the early colonial days. Samuel B. Keene left his native State when about twenty-four years old, located in Vigo county, Ind., and there married Lydia A. Shattuck, a native of Oneida county, N. Y., who was taken to Indiana when young by her father, Dr. Eliphalet Shattuck. Samuel B. Keene brought his family from Indiana to Wisconsin in 1834, and located near the site of the present village of Darlington, for a year occupying the fort that had been erected in 1832 for defense against the Indians during the Black Hawk insurrection. The following year the family removed to Elk Grove, and two years later, in 1837, came to Lancaster township, Grant county, Mr. Keene here purchasing a tract of wild land which he converted into an excellent farm, although he was a blacksmith by trade. He continued to improve his farm and to work at his trade until he was called away, in December, 1879. For three years, during his earlier residence here, he was engaged in hauling goods between Galena, Ill., and Mineral Point, Wis., and lead on the return trip. At the death of his wife he was left with five children, four sons and one daughter, whom he reared with great care; the eldest was but fourteen years old at the time of Mrs. Keene's death, and Oliver F. was only about ten. Mr. Keene was a remarkably industrious man, and no person was ever known to speak an ill word of "Uncle Sam," as he was familiarly called.

Of the five children alluded to, two only now survive, Oliver F. and Rev. A. C. Keene, the latter a Baptist missionary clergyman, now residing in South Dakota. The three that have passed away were Delia Ann, the eldest of the family, who was the wife of Nelson Kise; Eliphalet, the eldest son; and Hon. H. S., a member of the State Legislature, a lawyer of prominence, and for three years a member of the Wisconsin Battery in the war of the Rebellion, who died in July, 1898, in Seattle, Wash., where his surviving family still reside. Two other children passed away ere the death of the mother.

Oliver F. Keene well remembers the appearance of the country when he arrived in Grant county, to which the family came overland with one team of horses and four yoke of oxen, and where he, like all the rest, endured the hardships and deprivations of pioneer life.

On June 24, 1858, Mr. Keene married Miss Jane A. Shappelle, a daughter of Andrew and Sarah Shappelle, the former of whom was born in Illinois, of French parentage; and the latter, born in New York State, was taken to Illinois when a child. Mrs. Keene was born near Galena, Ill., April 3, 1836. In 1839 her father bought land in Potosi township, Grant Co., Wis., transformed the wild place into a fertile farm, and here he and wife passed the remainder of their lives, being buried on their own premises. They were the parents of four sons and three daughters, of whom Mrs. Keene is the eldest and Mrs. Margaret W. Royster the youngest. Of the seven, three only now survive: Mrs. Keene, Mrs. Royster and Charles A. The latter served four years in the war of the Rebellion.

Oliver F. Keene and his father were working together at blacksmithing in Hurricane Corners when the Civil war broke out, and a little over two years later Oliver F. enlisted, Aug. 11, 1863, in Company H, 25th Wis. V. I., and with his regiment was ordered to the frontier to subdue the refractory Indians. But Mr. Keene contracted a severe cold, which culminated in rheumatism, and as a result he was transferred to the Invalid Corps, with which he served until honorably discharged, for disability, in April, 1865. He has never fully recovered from the disorder that seized him during his army service, and after the war he engaged in agricultural pursuits, working when able to do so. He and wife are now living in quiet at their pleasant home in Lancaster, where they enjoy the respect and companionship of a host of friends. They have reared a family of thirteen children, eight sons and five daughters: Samuel A., Maggie A. (Mrs. Wayne), Sarah Lydia (Mrs. Campbell), Mary (Mrs. Warmes), C. Frank, George L., William H., John S., Joseph A., Ollie J. (Mrs. Sock), Albert E., Pearl Wright, and Ethel S. Six of the sons and four daughters are married, and are most worthy members of the communities in which they live.

Oliver F. Keene is a member of the G. A. R. He has always been a public-spirited and progressive citizen, and also as hard-working and industrious at his trade and at farming as his infirmities have permitted, and he well deserves the high esteem in which he is universally held.

HENRY SIMMONS is passing the closing years of a long and honorable agricultural career in the village of Hazel Green, Grant county, now living retired from all active cares and labors.

Mr. Simmons was born in Cornwall, England, March 8, 1826, son of Joseph and Mary (Goninan) Simmons, both born in Cornwall, the father in 1795, and the mother in 1805. They were married in 1823. Mr. Simmons was employed as a miner before coming to this country, in 1848. All the members of his family accompanied him with the exception of Henry, who came the preceding year. Joseph Simmons brought his people to Hazel Green and engaged in mining for a number of years, finally purchasing a farm in the western part of the town, where he died in 1858. Mrs. Simmons survived until 1873. They were members of the Methodist Church at Hazel Green, and both were consistent Christian people. Seven children were born to them: (1) Mary married William Dent, and settled at Georgetown, where she died, leaving five children, Joseph (deceased), William (of Missouri), Thomas (of Georgetown), George (of Cuba City), and Charles (deceased). (2) Henry is the eldest son of the family. (3) Jane, born in England, married William Moss, and is now dead. (4) Joseph, born in England, married Miss Charlotte Lukey, of Hazel Green, and is now living a retired life at Waverly, Iowa. (5) Grace, born in England, married James Richards, of Hazel Green, and is now dead.

She left a family, six of whom reside at Le-Mars, Iowa, and one, Elizabeth, at Hazel Green. (6) John, born in England, married Miss Jemima Bullock, of Hazel Green, and now resides in Waverly, Iowa, where he is leading a retired life. (7) Sarah A., born in Grant county, is the youngest of the family. She married Daniel Garenger, is the mother of one son and two daughters, and now lives at Waverly, Iowa.

Henry Simmons was a student in the district school at his English home, and when he was twelve years old began working in the Cornwall mines. In 1847 he came to the United States by way of Quebec, making the ocean voyage in a sailing-vessel, touching at Montreal, Kingston, Oswego, and Buffalo, and coming by way of the lakes to Milwaukee and Chicago. The remainder of the journey was made across country, and on reaching Hazel Green he found work in the lead mines. In 1849 he married Miss Julia Rowe, who was born in 1828 in England, where her parents, James and Julia Rowe, lived and died.

Mr. Simmons purchased what was known as the Enoch Robinson property in Hazel Green, and to the original tract has added extensive purchases until he now owns over two hundred acres of fine farm land. Good buildings have been erected, and extensive improvements made, so that now few farms in southwestern Wisconsin may be preferred to his for thorough cultivation, good equipment or comfortable home. Mrs. Simmons died in 1889, leaving four children. There were nine in the family, four of whom died in infancy. (7) James died when eleven years old. (1) Elizabeth, born in 1850, married Samuel NeCollins, and has two children; they live at their farm home in the town of Hazel Green. Her daughter Mamie, born in 1883, is now the wife of Joseph Egelhof, and is living with her parents. Samuel C., the son, resides at home. (3) William H. Simmons, born in September, 1853, married Miss Mary J. NeCollins, of Hazel Green, and lives on his father's old homestead. They have a family of five—William H., born in 1886; Benjamin H., in 1889; Joseph E., in 1891; James R., in 1893; and Jennie Estella, in 1895. (4) Joseph Simmons, born in July, 1855, married Miss Martha Sincok, of Illinois, and now resides in Hazel Green. Two of their children died in infancy, Julia A. and Edward H. (6) John Simmons, born in 1857, married Miss Ella Bartell, and now lives in Hampton, Iowa, where he is rearing his two children, Julia Vine and Henry M.

Mr. Simmons belongs to the Methodist Church, where he has worshipped over forty years. Always interested in church work, he has served as trustee and steward, and has given liberally to the erection of several church buildings. In politics he has been a Republican. Some seven years ago he was stricken with a kidney trouble, and for six years he has been confined to the house.

A. C. VANDERWATER ELSTON is numbered among the most prominent citizens of Muscoda, Grant county, and has attained his eminence through his ability, business acumen, and energy, being now one of the leading merchants, banker and postmaster of that place and an ex-member of the State Legislature.

Mr. Vanderwater Elston is a native of the Empire State, having been born at Unionville, Orange Co., N. Y., Sept. 9, 1845, a son of S. B. and Hannah (Meyers) Elston, also natives of New York, of German ancestry. The parents migrated with their three children, one of whom was the subject of this sketch, to Muscoda, Wis., in 1855, and purchased the "Wisconsin House," a hotel at that place. Not finding it suitable to his requirements, Mr. Elston rebuilt it, and conducted the hotel very successfully for fifteen years, after which he sold out and purchased a farm in Eagle, Richland county, this State, on which he resided until his death, Nov. 11, 1878. He gained the respect of all who knew him. He and his estimable wife were consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and politically Mr. Elston was first an anti-slavery Whig and later a Republican. His wife survived him until June, 1896, and both will be tenderly remembered by their large circle of friends, not only in Richland county, but throughout the State. The eldest child of Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Elston is Albert D., of Chicago; the subject of this sketch was the second; Emma, wife of Fred W. Smith, was the third (she died at the age of twenty-two); after locating in Wisconsin two daughters were added to the family circle, Ida, now Mrs. W. S. Manning, of Soldiers' Grove, Wis.; and Eva, wife of Edward Bobb, of Thorp, Clark Co., Wisconsin.

A. C. Vanderwater Elston was about ten years old when brought to Muscoda by his parents, and is therefore one of the old residents, and well known to everyone. In addition to an academic course he studied at Bryant & Stratton's Commercial College, Chicago, and began his business career as a clerk in the store of McDonald & Graham, at Muscoda, in 1862. Four years later he entered into partnership with Jacob Bremmer, continuing this relation for one year. His next venture was in 1867, when he formed a partnership with Peter McIntyre, under the firm name of McIntyre & Elston, which style was continued for ten years, when Mr. McIntyre retired; his son succeeded him, and the house became known as Elston & McIntyre. They are merchants and bankers, having embarked in the latter branch of their business in October, 1884, and now conduct their affairs under the name of McIntyre, Elston & Co. Mr. Elston is also postmaster at Muscoda, having been appointed in 1897. He was elected to the State Legislature on the Republican ticket in 1889, and served his constituents most acceptably.

On Dec. 16, 1867, Mr. Elston was married to Miss Julania Lane, of Platteville, Grant Co., Wis., a daughter of Henry C. Lane, who settled in Platteville in 1837, was one of the pioneer blacksmiths of the town, and later one of its leading hardware merchants. Mr. and Mrs. Elston have had two children; their daughter died in 1899. The son, Henry L. Elston, is an electrician and manufacturer of telephones, is his father's assistant in the post-office, and is a very worthy young man.

As merchant, banker, government official and representative of the people, Mr. Elston has displayed ability of a high order, and a steadfastness of purpose that works toward the attainment of best results. His friends are legion, and his domestic and social relations are as pleasant as his business connections are successful.

REV. THOMAS DE WITT PEAKE.
A. M., D. D., for several years the eloquent and devoted pastor of the First Methodist Church, of Beloit, is one of the most influential and efficient representatives of his church and the gospel to be found in southern Wisconsin, a region of strong churches and mighty preachers.

Dr. Peake was born near Princeton, Butler Co., Ohio, March 19, 1843, and is a son of William Burton and Cynthia (Flenner) Peake, both natives of Ohio. They had a family of four sons and seven daughters, and eight of their children are now living: Angeline, a widow, who first wedded Alexander T. Lick, a prominent lawyer in Indiana, who was killed in the war of the Rebellion, and later married John Chidester, now deceased; Joseph S., of Flora, Ill.; Mary, wife of Bishop Halleck Floyd, of Dublin, Ind.; Rev. T. DeWitt, our subject; Carrie, wife of James Major, a hotel-keeper at Flora, Ill.; Calastine, widow of James Manker, of Clay City, Ill.; Rev. Rudolph, a minister of the Advent faith in Kansas; and Louisa, wife of Rev. C. A. Beckett, of Olney, Illinois.

William B. Peake was a farmer. He moved from Butler county, Ohio, into Shelby county, Ind., about 1852, and lived there some twelve years, removing from Indiana to Flora, Ill., at the expiration of that period, and still continued farming for some years. When old age forbade his farther sowing and reaping, Mr. Peake made his home in Flora, where he died at the age of eighty-four, full of years and of honor. His wife died several years previously, when about sixty-eight years of age. Both were Methodists, and Mr. Peake was a minister at one time. He was a talented man, and did good to his day and generation. His father was Joseph Peake, a native of Virginia, a farmer, and of English descent. He had six or seven children, and died in Butler county, Ohio, when sixty years old. David Flenner, the father of Mrs. William B. Peake, was a native of Pennsylvania, of German descent. He was a farmer, reared a large family, and died in Butler county, Ohio, in old age.

Rev. Dr. Peake was reared on the farm, and spent the first seventeen years of his life under the parental roof. He attended the local schools and Hartsville University, Indiana, where he received a classical education, with a view to entering the ministry. He taught school in Ohio several years, and during his period of teaching was attracted very strongly toward the law. But later, on strong conscientious grounds, he returned to his first ambitions, and became a preacher. He had his first charge in Highland county, Ohio, a field of labor known as the Newmarket circuit, and rode circuits for several years, his appointments frequently calling for three sermons on Sunday and a journey of twenty-five miles or more. He was stationed at Milford, Yellow Springs, Portsmouth, and Pomeroy, Ohio, and from the last place was transferred to the Wisconsin Conference, and assigned to the Court Street Methodist Episcopal Church, Janesville; he held that important charge three years. He was at Merrill four years, at Beaver Dam three years, and four years ago came from that city to Beloit, holding his work here four years with increasing success and satisfaction.

Dr. Peake and Miss Lida Vail, a daughter of Moses and Elizabeth (Vail) Vail, were united in marriage April 20, 1870. Mrs. Peake is in every way a worthy companion and associate of her gifted husband. Eight children have come to bless their union, Elmore Elliott, Quesnal DeWitt, Harriett Neff, Prue Ferren, Frederick Robertson, Noon Talford, Carrie Pearne and Edward Payson. Elmore Elliott is a literary man, his contributions appearing in the leading magazines of the country, and author of "The Darlings," one of the popular novels of the day, published in 1900. Quesnal DeWitt is a newspaper man at Green Bay, Wis.; he married Isora Hansen, and they have one child, Elmore Elliott. Harriett married Burt S. Barber, of Beaver Dam, Wis., where she died when twenty-two years old. Prue Ferren died when an infant six weeks old. Frederick R. died at Portsmouth, Ohio, an infant of fifteen months. Noon Talford died at New Carlisle, Ohio, when sixteen months old. Carrie Pearne is living with her parents; she is a very gifted woman and a fine singer. Edward Payson died at Merrill, Wis., when six years old. Mr. Peake is a Mason of the thirty-second degree. His Blue Lodge is in Milford, Ohio, his Chapter at New Carlisle, and his Consistory at Cincinnati. Both the Doctor and his wife belong to the Beloit Lodge of the Order of the Eastern Star.

During the war Dr. Peake was a revenue officer of the government at Shelbyville, Ind. When he was in Ohio he was appointed by the judge of the circuit court a member of the board of inspection for the examination of public buildings. He had two brothers in the Union army, and was himself connected with the 67th Ind. V. I., but saw no field service of any account.

Dr. Peake is a writer of much force and power. He has published a book on "Sanctification," and one on the "Symbolism of Solomon's Temple," a book on the teachings of Masonry. Many of his sermons have been printed and widely read. Dr. Peake is an eloquent and popular speaker, and his style is peculiar to himself. He is a close reasoner and a hard worker, and wherever he has been he has left behind him an enviable reputation as a loyal and devoted pastor.

ALOYS GRIMM is one of the important factors in the business circles of Cassville, Grant county, and his life is an exemplification of the term "the dignity of labor." He has utilized the possibilities that America offers to her citizens, and though he came to this country in limited circumstances has steadily and perseveringly worked his way upward, leaving the ranks of the many to stand among the successful few.

A native of Germany, Mr. Grimm was born in Coblenz, Rhine Province, June 16, 1839, a son of Valentine and Henrietta (Fuerstenhaupt) Grimm, the former also a native of Coblenz, the latter of Naumburg, Saxony. The father was a municipal officer in Coblenz, where both he and the mother died. In their family were ten children, eight sons and two daughters, namely: Hermann, whose sketch appears on another page of this volume; Valentine, who came to America in 1854, and became a cigar manufacturer of St. Louis, Mo., where he died; Hugo, who came to this country at the same time, and also located in St. Louis, where he engaged in the manufacture of cigars until his death; Aloys; Joseph, a resident of Bloomington, Ill.; William, a resident of Coblenz, and an official of the Prussian government, serving as superintendent of river and harbor work; Gustoph, who died in St. Louis in 1895; Ann M., a resident of Germany; Philip C., a member of the firm of Grimm Brothers, of Cassville, Wis.; and Helen, a resident of Coblenz, Prussia.

In his native city Aloys Grimm was reared and educated, and in his seventeenth year decided to try his fortune in America. On landing in this country he came at once to Cassville, Wis., where he arrived May 9, 1856. For a number of years he followed the carpenter's trade, and later engaged in bridge building until 1870. Two years later he embarked in the drug business, near the store of Klindt, Geiger & Co., and in May, 1876, moved to his present place of business. He carries a full and complete stock of drugs, paints, etc., and is doing a large and profitable business.

Mr. Grimm was married, in Cassville, in 1865, to Miss Agnes Thormyer, a native of Cincinnati, Ohio, and a daughter of Albert and Mary Thormyer, who at an early day located in Cincinnati, and from that place removed to Louisville, Ky. While there Mr. Thormyer enlisted in the Union army, in 1865, and was in the service until the war ended. Subsequently he engaged in farming near Indianapolis, Ind., where his death occurred.

To Mr. and Mrs. Grimm have been born seven children, as follows: Lena, now the wife of D. G. Sheesman, of Washington, D. C.; Anna, wife of G. O. Bean, agent at St. Paul for the Great Western Railroad Co.; Agnes, wife of Henry A. Robinson, a druggist of Durand, Ill.; Adolph, who is married and engaged in the drug business in Dubuque, Iowa; Philip C., a merchant at the Sac and Fox Agency, in Oklahoma; Aloys, a book-keeper for Conklin & Hoffman, at the same Agency; and Frank H., who is pursuing a course in pharmacy at Highland Park College.

As a Democrat Mr. Grimm has ever taken quite an active and prominent part in local politics, has served as town treasurer for nineteen consecutive years, and school treasurer sixteen years, resigning at the end of that time. He was postmaster at Cassville during President Cleveland's first term, and one year during President Grant's administration, and is now an efficient member of the school board. His official duties have always been discharged with the utmost promptness and fidelity, and his well-spent and honorable life commands the respect and confidence of all who know him. Socially Mr. Grimm is a worthy member of Cassville Lodge, No. 235, F. & A. M., of which he is senior warden; of Chapter No. 27, R. A. M., of Lancaster; of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and of the Modern Woodmen of America.

JACOB R. HETTMAN, who has been agent, for many years, of the Chicago & North-Western Railroad at Woodman, Grant county, is numbered among the veteran soldiers of the war of the Rebellion. He was born at Baden, Germany, July 25, 1843, a son of Frederick Hettman, who immigrated with his family to America in 1846, and their first home in the New World was in Erie county, N. Y. In June, 1856, ten years later, they came to Wisconsin, locating at Norwalk, Monroe county, where the father died in 1865; the mother survived until May 24, 1900, reaching the age of ninety-three years.

Jacob R. Hettman was one of a family of eleven children, six sons and five daughters, ten of whom came to America, the other one having died prior to their immigration. Three sons and three daughters still survive: Charles F., a resident of Columbus, Ohio; Elizabeth, who lives in New Jersey; Catherine, a resident of Minnesota; Jacob R.; Christopher G., of the State of Wisconsin; and Caroline (with whom the mother resided), at Norwalk. Frederick, who was a resident of Minnesota, died March 31, 1901. Three of the brothers served their country in the war of the Rebellion, Charles being a member of the 164th Regiment, N. Y. V. I., and Frederick of the 3d Wisconsin Cavalry.

Jacob R. Hettman enlisted, in December, 1863, at Sparta, in Company G, 19th Wis. V. I., and was mustered into the service soon after, at La Crosse. The 19th was one of Wisconsin's fine regiments, serving in the Army of the Potomac, and taking part in the terrible battles of Grant's command during 1864-65, including the siege of Petersburg. It was the first regiment that entered Richmond after the evacuation; in June, 1865, the regiment was ordered to Fredericksburg, thence to Warrenton, and back to Richmond, where it was mustered out of the service in August, 1865.

At the close of his army service Mr. Hettman returned to Norwalk, Wis., and engaged in farming, but in 1872 he removed to Fayette county, Iowa. Two years later he returned to Norwalk, and engaged in the grain business; in 1880 went to Afton, Rock Co., Wis., as agent for the Chicago & North-Western Railroad, and in December, 1888, was stationed at Woodman, where he has since remained, having now been in the service of this road continuously, for twenty years.

After his return from the seat of war Mr. Hettman married Miss Minnie Meyer, a daughter of Charles Meyer, and five daughters and two sons have been born of this union.

During his long service in the Civil war Mr. Hettman gave good proof of his courage and gallantry, but as years go by he is conscious that he contributed more than he then realized, for, like many of his fellow soldiers, he has never fully recovered from the effects of the forced marches, sleepless nights, poor food, exposure, and the thousand and one ills of a soldier's life. Although not seriously injured at the time, he was obliged to remain in hospital from June until December, 1864, and the insufficiency of the medical staff and appliances contributed to his present condition. He is a member of H. D. Crane Post, G. A. R., of Beloit, Wisconsin.

In politics Mr. Hettman is an ardent Republican, having cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln, and takes great interest in party matters. Socially he is a member of the K. of P., Janesville Lodge. Genial, accommodating and efficient, he enjoys the esteem and respect of his fellow townsmen, and is a good representative of the solid men of Wisconsin.

ROBERT WILLIAM SCOTT, the affable and courteous superintendent of Oak Hill Cemetery, Janesville, Rock county, has a thorough comprehension of landscape art, and has produced some exceedingly beautiful scenic effects in the field of his work. He has made Oak Hill Cemetery a notable and attractive city of the dead, worthy of the admiration of all who have come to feel that the last resting place of this poor mortality should be adorned with all that can speak of faith and hope and life forever.

Mr. Scott was born in Glasgow, Scotland, March 15, 1844, and remained in his native country until he had reached the age of fourteen years, when he came to Toronto, Canada. There he had relatives, with whom he made his abode for some years. In 1863 he came into the United States, and in the following February enlisted in the Union army, being mustered into service as a member of Company F, 35th Wis. V. I., and participating in the stirring scenes and events that marked the closing year of the Civil war. He was in the Mobile campaign, helped to capture Spanish Fort, and after the collapse of the Confederacy did duty in Texas until his discharge from the service, April 15, 1865. Coming back to Wisconsin, he found employment with the Northwestern Railway Co., and was in their service several years. On Aug. 5, 1868, he was appointed to his present position, which he has filled continuously since that date. Then the cemetery consisted of only twenty acres, and the improvements were of the most meager character, the whole grounds having the appearance of a forest. The grounds now consist of fifty-eight acres, all improved beyond criticism, and maintained in the most perfect order. Mr. Scott has several assistants. After he had been with the association eighteen years his present residence, located on the grounds, was built for him. It is a handsome and convenient house, and an attractive home. The cemetery is just outside the city limits, and is reached by street cars running to its gates every thirty minutes. In 1899 a chapel was erected at the cemetery for the use of patrons, at a cost of $2,500—a convenient and tasteful structure.

Mr. Scott owns a farm of 113 acres, adjoining the cemetery, which is yearly becoming more valuable on account of its proximity to the flourishing city near which it is located. On June 7, 1866, he married Miss Mary Jane Godden, a daughter of Robert and Rebecca (Bond) Godden. She was born in England June 8, 1844, and came to this country with her family in 1859, settling near Janesville, where her father engaged in farming. Mr. and Mrs. Scott have had ten children, of whom four, Willie, Charles, Archibald D. and Martha, are deceased. Two of them died in a single night from scarlet fever. The living are: James W. is married; he is now a drug clerk in Janesville. Walter R., a druggist at Puyallup, Wash., is married, and has three children. Isabel is the wife of Frank Pierce, of Janesville, Wis., and has one child. Marion E., Gertrude F., and Luella M. are at home. Mr. and Mrs. Scott are members of the First Presbyterian Church, and are highly respected, not only in their church associations, but in their social relations as well. He usually votes the Republican ticket, but is not blindly partisan in his political relations, seeking always by his ballot to promote the best government of the people by aiming to bring men and principles together.

Mr. Scott's father died in Scotland in 1847, leaving a widow and one child. She subsequently married William Nixon, by whom she had three children. He also died in Scotland. She came to the United States, and lived for some years with her son, the subject of this article, dying in Philadelphia, Penn., where the three children by her second husband—William, John and Sarah—reside.

FAITHFUL WILLIAM CHAPMAN.

Among the many esteemed and valuable citizens of Darlington, Lafayette county, is Faithful William Chapman, the subject of this sketch, who has made that place his home, and there has centered the interests of his life. Mr. Chapman was born at Cambridge, England, Dec. 29, 1823, a son of William and Hannah (Fisher) Chapman, the former of whom was born in Bedfordshire, and the latter in Huntingdonshire. Both passed all their lives in their old English home. Mr. and Mrs. William Chapman were the parents of six children, four of whom survive: Mrs. Mary Perkins Watt, still a resident of England; Faithful W., our subject; William, who resides in England; and Jane, who lives with our subject, in Darlington. The father was a skillful carpenter and builder, and did much work in the city of London. His two sons learned the same trade under their father's instruction, and became as skilled as he.

Our subject was married to Rachel Weston, a native of Westerham, in Kent, England, in August, 1845, three years later coming to America. With his wife and one child Mr. Chapman landed Dec. 23, 1848, at New Orleans, where they remained until April, 1850, when they came up the Mississippi river to Galena, and from there to Shullsburg. On the boat on the Mississippi river Mr. Chapman became acquainted with a traveler named Absalom Townsend, who was returning from a successful sojourn in the mines of California, and by the time the families had reached Shullsburg our subject had been persuaded to return with his new friend and try to make a fortune for himself.

The company left Shullsburg on May 23, 1850, crossed the Missouri river at Omaha, and were on the way 110 days ere they reached their destination. Mr. Chapman was offered $16 per day to work at his trade on the first day of his arrival. Two years passed before he was ready to return to his home in Shullsburg, which he reached on April 10, 1852. Upon his return he found little building going on, and then engaged in lead mining, but later returned to his trade, and some of the buildings he erected in Shullsburg are the Brewster house, and the residences of Henry Stevens and Samuel Rickert. For some ten years our subject remained in Shullsburg, and then engaged in farming at what was then known as Stump Grove, near the line between the towns of Shullsburg and Darlington. Increasing his first purchase of land, he finally owned some 200 acres, and became a well-known farmer and stock raiser in Lafayette county. Until 1890 he continued to remain on the farm, in that year removing to Darlington, and he has recently sold the homestead to his son-in-law, who now occupies it. Mr. Chapman is an example of what honest, persevering effort can accomplish, and richly deserves the esteem and confidence with which he is regarded by his fellow citizens.

Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Chapman: Clare, wife of Frank Rowe, who lives on the homestead; James Faithful, of Dawson, Iowa; Faithful William, of Darlington; Mrs. Nettie Parson, of Denver, Colo.; and William Albert, of Darlington; the others dying in infancy. Mrs. Chapman passed away Feb. 19, 1863, after having been an invalid for a long time, but leaving a sad vacancy in the household. The pleasant home of our subject in Darlington is capably managed by his estimable sister.

REV. WILLIAM WESLEY WOODSIDE,

the beloved pastor of the First M. E. Church of Janesville, was born in Bucyrus, Ohio, April 20, 1854, a son of William and Susan (Heller) Woodside, natives of Pennsylvania.

The paternal grandfather of our subject, James Woodside, was born in Ireland, but came to America when a young man, and settled in Pennsylvania, near Harrisburg, where he engaged in farming. He participated in the war of 1812. When an old man he removed to Bucyrus, Ohio, where he resided with his daughter, and died when over eighty years of age. The family he and his wife reared was a very large one, and all were highly esteemed. The maternal grandfather of Rev. Mr. Woodside, Jacob Heller, was a native of Germany, who immigrated to America when still a young man, settled in Pennsylvania, engaged in farming, reared a large family, and became very prominent, dying in the State of his adoption at an advanced age.

The father of our subject was a farmer, and about 1877 went to Kansas, where he located on a farm near Larned, that State, and lived there a number of years, finally returning to Bucyrus, Ohio, where he died in 1898, aged eighty-four. During his life he had been a justice of the peace, and quite prominent. Both he and his wife, who died in 1871, were consistent, devout and active members of the M. E. Church. Eleven children were born to them, three sons and eight daughters, four of whom are now living: Rachel, wife of D. L. McMichael, of Bucyrus, Ohio; Sarah, wife of H. D. Markle, of Elkhart, Ind.; Rev. William W.; and James J., of St. John, Kans. One son, Isaiah, served during the last year of the Civil war, participating in twelve battles; he is now deceased.

Rev. William W. Woodside lived at Bucyrus until thirteen years old, at which time his parents removed to St. Joseph county, Ind., near South Bend, where he grew to manhood. After completing the studies taught in the common schools of Ohio and Indiana our subject attended Oberlin College, Fort Wayne University (now Bishop Taylor University), and also the Normal School at Valparaiso, Ind. After attending Oberlin Mr. Woodside taught school in St. Joseph county, Ind., for eight or nine terms, working his way in college. Wishing to complete his education, Mr. Woodside went to Kansas in 1877. However, he at once entered the ministry of the M. E. Church, in the South Kansas Conference, and preached in that State for about nine years. At the end of that time Mr. Woodside came to Wisconsin, and was stationed at Kaukauna, Milwaukee, Edgerton, and Elkhorn, coming to Janesville in 1898, as pastor of the First M. E. Church, where he has since remained, endearing himself to his people, and adding many members to his flock.

On May 2, 1880, Mr. Woodside married Miss Anna Drew, a daughter of Mark and Julia M. (Bellows) Drew, and one son, Forest H., was born of this union. Mrs. Woodside died in 1885, deeply mourned. On Sept. 2, 1886, Mr. Woodside married Miss Frances E. Drew, a sister of his first wife. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Woodside, Peter Drew, was a native of England; while her maternal grandparents were Caleb Strong Bellows and Esther Mansell, natives of Walpole, N. H., and Stencil, England, respectively. Mr. and Mrs. Bellows had ten children who grew to mature years. Mr. Bellows was a colonel in the militia in Canada; also postmaster of West Meath nine or ten years; and held various minor offices, enjoying the respect and esteem of all. The father of Mrs. Woodside, Mark Drew, was a native of Vermont, the mother of Canada. Mr. Drew operated a tannery and shoe factory at West Meath, Canada, later went to Ohio, and thence to Wisconsin, locating at Eureka. In December, 1899, Father Drew died, over eighty-three years of age. His wife still survives, living with her daughter, Mrs. Woodside. They were very worthy people, and Mr. Drew was a very devout and consistent member of the M. E. Church.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Woodside are earnest, Christian workers, who have the welfare of their people at heart, and are very successful in their endeavors to set an example of high-minded living, and win souls to the cause. Politically Mr. Woodside is a Prohibitionist, and is an earnest advocate of the principles of that party.

HENRY MILL, now residing in Blanchardville, has found in Lafayette county a comfortable home for over half a century, and bears the distinction of being one of the comparatively few survivors of the war with Mexico.

Mr. Mill was born in Germany in 1823, and in 1846 emigrated to the United States. He landed in this country just before the opening of hostilities, and, being possessed of a somewhat daring spirit, resolved to enter the service of his but lately adopted country. Accordingly he enlisted, at New York, becoming a member of Company D, 2d Regiment, United States Artillery, and went at once with his regiment to Matamoras, where he joined the army of Gen. Winfield Scott, and participated in all the famous battles from Vera Cruz to the city of Mexico, inclusive. He served in Mexico for two years, or until the close of the war. His term of enlistment had been for five years; but two years having expired when peace was declared, more work was found for the army looking after the Indians on the border, who were very troublesome. Mr. Mill's regiment was ordered to New Mexico, where they were engaged in Indian warfare the next three years. Before Mr. Mill had entered the army he had become engaged to Miss Margaret Bayer, and when he was returned to New York, at the close of the Mexican war, he was married, and took his bride with him to New Mexico, where they remained until the end of his enlistment. Mr. Mill's health was badly shattered by his army experience, and just two months before the time for his discharge he was granted a furlough for the remainder of his term. He and his wife went to Fort Leavenworth, Kans., where he received an honorable discharge, which to-day is carefully guarded as one of the family treasures, of which Mr. Mill is most justly proud.

A comrade in the army had told Mr. Mill of the glories of Lafayette county, Wis., and when he was ready to take up the pursuits of peaceful life he came to this county and engaged in farming. He did not, however, confine his labors exclusively to agriculture. He built the "Ryan Hotel," in Blanchardville, and generally led an active life until feebleness, aggravated by age and his hard life in the army, compelled him to retire. He and his wife have always held the high respect of the community, and Mr. Mill has ever been found on the side of progress, showing in a marked degree his love for the country he served so well. One daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Mill, Katherine, now Mrs. Gould, of Blanchardville.

WILLIAM ROWLANDS holds an enviable position among the older farmers of the town of Belmont, Lafayette county, both by reason of his advanced years and his reputation as a man of character and industry.

Mr. Rowlands was born Dec. 5, 1827, a son of William and Jane (Perry) Rowlands, all born in North Wales. Our subject and his brother John came to America in 1849, and the parents in 1854. The brothers crossed the ocean in a sailing-vessel, landing in New York, in which city they made but a brief stop, journeying west to Waukesha, Wis., where they found work on a neighboring farm for some two years. In 1850 William Rowlands came to Dodgeville, Iowa Co., Wis., and was employed on a farm by Frank Dunn, where he was presently joined by his parents, who emigrated to Wisconsin in 1854. The father bought land in the town of Belmont, and there made his home until his death, in 1868. His widow survived many years, and died in 1891, at the advanced age of ninety-six years. They were the parents of six children: (1) William is our subject. (2) John, born in Wales in 1830, is a farmer near Dodgeville; he is the father of two daughters, Elizabeth and Anna. (3) Richard, born in Wales in 1833, never married. He has prospered since coming to Wisconsin, and is now living retired in Dodgeville. (4) Anna, born in Wales, is the widow of Samuel Jones, and is the mother of six children. (5) Jane, born in Wales, came to Wisconsin with her parents, and married Orrin Morris, they settling in Minnesota, where her husband died. She came back to Platteville, and died in 1874, leaving one daughter, Jane, who is a Mrs. O'Brian, of Minnesota. (6) Ellen married Thomas Thomas, and remained in Wales, where she died in 1900, leaving seven children, four of whom are still living in the old country. The others came to Wisconsin.

William Rowlands obtained his education in the public schools of his native community. He was married in 1870 to Miss Anna Roberts, who was born in Wales in 1838, and came to Wisconsin with her brother Robert in 1870. He settled in the State of Iowa, where he died lately. In 1887 Mr. and Mrs. Rowlands moved to Union county, S. Dak., where they lived three years. For five years they lived in Lake county, same State, where Mrs. Rowlands died in 1892, leaving him with three children. Soon after her demise he returned to the old homestead in Belmont, where he has since remained. Children were born to their union as follows: (1) Katie, born in Belmont in July, 1871, was married in 1900 to Robert Williams, in South Dakota, and is now residing at Miner, that State. (2) Richard, born in March, 1874, was educated in the schools of Lafayette county, Wis., is unmarried, and lives at home with his father, taking the general management of the farm. (3) Rice Lloyd died when two years old. (4) Hannah, born in April, 1879, was well educated, and is a bright and capable young woman; she is housekeeper for father and brother.

In politics Mr. Rowlands is a Democrat, and has been roadmaster for a number of years. He began life in his adopted country with but little means, and made his way by hard work.

By wise investments he has come to be an extensive land owner in Lafayette and Iowa counties.

DAVID H. POLLOCK. This name will be readily recognized by any one at all familiar with the business personnel of the city of Beloit, Rock county, as that of one of its popular and successful druggists and book dealers. Mr. Pollock is a cultivated and genial gentleman, of fine character and excellent characteristics. He has a good patronage, and is rated with the best people of the city.

David H. Pollock was born at Whitewater, Wis., Feb. 23, 1860, and is a son of Arthur and Lydia (Nagle) Pollock, both natives of Ireland. They had five children, of whom all but one are now living: William J.; David H.; Sarah, wife of W. M. Van Lone, of Beloit; Mary B., deceased; and Effie A., wife of George Beedle, of Beloit. Arthur Pollock was bred a farmer, and came to the United States about 1845, when he was twenty-one years old. He found a location at Canandaigua, N. Y., where he remained some seven or eight years, and then moved West to Wisconsin, settling on the farm in Jefferson county where he died, Oct. 1, 1894, of typhoid fever, when seventy years old. His widow is still living, and makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. Van Lone, in Beloit. He was a prominent church worker, and early in life was a Presbyterian, his wife a member of the Episcopal Church. Later they both united with the Methodists. His father, William Pollock, was a farmer in Ireland. He had four sons and two daughters. Coming to this country to make his home with his children, he died in Jefferson county at the age of seventy-nine. The father of Lydia Nagle was an Irish farmer, who lived and died in his native country.

David H. Pollock grew to manhood on his father's farm in Jefferson county. He was given unusual educational advantages, including a course at the State Normal at Whitewater, and for ten years followed the profession of teaching in Jefferson, Green, Waupaca and Walworth counties, with most creditable results. He became noted as an educator of much ability, and had he chosen to remain in the school room would doubtless have had a successful career. But the inclinations of Mr. Pollock led him toward a commercial life, and he selected pharmacy as a field suited to his desires. He acquired a practical knowledge of the business by clerking in drug stores at Janesville and Whitewater, and, when he felt himself prepared to make the venture, came to Beloit and bought out the old and well-established drug house of F. S. Fenton, conducting same under the firm name of D. H. Pollock & Co. This was in 1888, and here he has remained to the present time, retaining the old patronage and winning many new friends. He carries a full line of druggists' supplies and sundries, books, bicycles and paints. Our subject is secretary and treasurer of the Beloit Telephone Co., and is a competent and successful business man.

Mr. Pollock has been twice married, his wives being sisters, and daughters of O. A. and Zella (Hulse) Wheeler. Myrtie E. became his wife Sept. 19, 1888, and died April 7, 1890. On Jan. 13, 1892, Mr. Pollock and Miss Bertha A. were married. She died Dec. 23, 1899. Both were fine musicians, teachers of the piano, and much interested in all matters that concerned the general progress of the community. They were great church workers, and took much thought about the successful operations of the literary clubs with which they were associated. Their great-great-grandfather Cheney's name is on Bunker Hill Monument, and the Wheeler and Cheney families belong to old New England.

Mr. Pollock is a member of the Knights of Pythias, the Knights of the Globe, and the Modern Woodmen of America. He is a Republican, has been twice elected to the city council from the Fourth ward, and is now serving in that position. Religiously he is a member and trustee of the Second Congregational Church of Beloit.

ARIAL RODDICK was born in the house which is now his home Aug. 30, 1862, a son of John and Sarah (Batchelor) Roddick. The father was born in Wales in 1811, and the mother was born in Somersetshire, England, in November, 1814. They obtained their schooling in their native land.

John Roddick came to Philadelphia in 1832, and there worked at his trade some three years, at the end of that time moving to Pittsburg, where he married in 1836. Mrs. Roddick is still living in the old home in Ellenboro, with her son Aerial, who with his wife leaves nothing undone to make her declining days peaceful and happy. Mrs. Roddick has witnessed great changes in Grant county. She and her husband both belonged to the Campbellite Church. After their marriage they lived in Pittsburg for about three years, while Mr. Roddick worked on a steamboat plying between Pittsburg and Louisville, Ky. They came West to Wisconsin as early as 1838, and spent two years in Elk Grove, until he purchased the present farm from the government, and he was the third settler in this locality, there being one settler in the village of Ellenboro and one in Harrison. A log cabin furnished a home for the family until the present stone house was built, in 1859. To the original eighty acres a second eighty was presently added, and the enlarged farm brought into good shape. The improvements wrought on this place were all made by Mr. Roddick and his family. He died in February, 1889, leaving a widow and six children out of the family of ten born to them. George, Reuben and Emma died in childhood. William, born on the present family home Jan. 5, 1852, died in 1885; he married Miss Mary A. Graves, who died in April, 1900, and they left two children, Mabel and William. Of the living, (1) Fernando was born in Grant county Dec. 12, 1839, and enlisted in the Union army during the Rebellion, serving in the Army of the Potomac. He married Lida Gillette, of Fennimore, and now resides on his farm, adjoining the old paternal estate. They have a family of six children, Sarah, Joseph, Edith, Samuel, Daniel, and Lewis. (2) Thomas, born in the town of Harrison in August, 1842, served in the Civil war in the 6th and 7th Wis. V. I., and participated in many of the most severe engagements of that sanguinary struggle. He saw many hardships, and was badly wounded several times. Soon after the war he married Miss Sarah Pike, who died soon after marriage, and later he married Vashti Bellwood, of Platteville. They are living on his farm in Ellenboro, and are the parents of five children, Clara, George, Lester, Nora and Eva. (3) Elizabeth A., born in March, 1846, married George Atkinson, who was born in England. Settling on a farm in Ellenboro, they have kept their home there to the present time, and are the parents of six children, George, Sarah, Allen, Walter, Mary and Jessie. Sarah married Benjamin Cornwell, and died leaving two children, Ida and Liela. Allen is married and has two children, Jessie and Naomi. (4) Malissa, born May 14, 1849, is the wife of Lewis Pollander, and resides in the town of Harrison. They have a family of five children, Joseph, Lizzie, Genevieve (now the wife of Duane Hull, of Lima, and the mother of two children, Velma and Archie Duane), William and Sena. (5) John, born in February, 1855, married Miss Emma Dean, and now lives on a farm in Ellenboro, where they are rearing a family of four sons, George, Archie, Ora and Lloyd. (6) Arial is the gentleman whose name introduces this article.

Arial Roddick had the benefit of a district-school education, and has always remained on the old homestead, where he was manager for some years prior to the death of his father. In February, 1884, he married Miss Lucinda A. Hudson, daughter of Hiram and Roxy (Ray) Hudson, a family long established in this country. They are now living in the town of Potosi. Mrs. Roddick was born in July, 1864, and received her education in the home schools. After his marriage Mr. Roddick settled on the old Roddick estate, and devoted himself to the building up of this fine property. He and his wife have had one son, Harold Verne, who died when two years old. The Roddicks are among the most highly esteemed residents of Grant county, and Mrs. Roddick deserves equal praise with her husband for her industry and energy, which have aided him greatly. In politics Mr. Roddick is a Republican. He is on the town board. Fraternally he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America.

Mr. Roddick is a born inventor and a natural mechanic. Though never taught a trade, he has invented several ingenious machines, the most striking being a corn husker and shredder that will husk from forty to fifty bushels per hour, and prepare the fodder for use.

MELFORD PRATT SMITH, of Fennimore, has been a prominent farmer in Grant county for nearly half a century, and in that time has made himself felt as a man of decided force of character and genuine integrity. He came here in 1853, and during his long residence in the county has proved himself a valuable citizen of the community, an honorable man, and a skillful and progressive farmer. He is now leading a retired life in the city of Fennimore.

Mr. Smith was born in Wayne county, Penn., March 19, 1829, son of Jacob and Sophia (Wheeler) Smith. His father was born east of the Green Mountains, in Vermont, in 1802, and his grandfather was a clergyman of the Methodist Church, and lived in New England all his life. Jacob Smith was the youngest son in a family of twelve children, six sons and six daughters, all of whom were given Bible names, as was the fashion of the times. The sons were called Simeon, Reuben, Daniel, Abram, Isaac and Jacob. The names of the daughters cannot now be obtained, as that generation has passed from earth. In 1824 Jacob Smith married Sophia Wheeler, who was born in Massachusetts, her birth occurring the same year as her husband's. She was a daughter of Simeon and Polly (Noble) Wheeler. Her mother was a daughter of Capt. Charles Noble, a Revolutionary soldier, who died before the close of the Revolution, from disease contracted in the service. Melford Pratt Smith therefore is a great-grandson of a Revolutionary soldier. The Noble family was long prominent in Massachusetts. Four brothers came from England in early Colonial times, and from them are descended the greater part of the Nobles in the United States.

In 1826 Jacob Smith, with his wife and only child, removed to Wayne county, Penn., and in 1853 the parents, with their family, then consisting of six children, came to Grant county, Wis., and settled on a farm in the town of Fennimore. Within six years after their arrival five of the family had passed away. The parents and three of their children, Algernon, and Celestia and Cecilia (twins), had succumbed to sickness, and gone on "to join the great majority." The children reached maturity before they died. The mother's death occurred in 1857, and the father's the following year. There are now living of this family Esther (the wife of O. N. Smith, of Eau Claire, Wis.), Melford P., and Alfca (of Iowa).

Melford P. Smith obtained a good education in the common schools of his county, rather better than was the habit of the times. He taught two terms of school during the winter after coming to Grant county, and was regarded as a capable instructor. He was married, a few weeks before leaving Pennsylvania, to Miss Ada M. Adams, who was born in Luzerne county, Penn., April 19, 1831. Her parents came to Wisconsin, and died many years ago. Mr. Smith bought State and government land in Section 32, of the town of Fennimore, and here he settled, and made a valuable farm, which he still owns. He resided on it until the fall of 1898, when he and his venerable spouse moved to their pleasant home in the city of Fennimore.

Mr. Smith has long been one of the representative men of his section. He was town treasurer ten years, assessor for six years, and town clerk for eighteen years. He held the office of justice of the peace for a long period, and during the greater part of his active life held some local office.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith have had three children: Ira, born in 1855, married Viola Shearer, a daughter of John A. Shearer, an early settler of the county. Charles, born in 1858, is a lawyer and lives in Viroqua. Ida, born in 1864, is the wife of Ambrose Peterson, and lives at Hillsdale, Mich. There are two grandchildren in the family: Irl, the son of Ira, born in 1890, and Kenneth, the son of Charles, born in 1892. Mr. Smith has always taken a deep interest in the moral and educational progress of the community. His children have had good educational privileges. Charles was graduated at the Platteville Normal in 1881, and for three years was principal of the Viroqua schools. He was a successful teacher, but, determining to become a lawyer, entered the office of Judge Wyman, read law under his instruction for one year, and then entered the law school at Albany, N. Y., from which he graduated in 1886. He immediately entered into practice at Viroqua, and has remained there up to the present time. Melford Pratt Smith is a man of extensive reading and wide information. He is a Republican, and in religious connection both he and his wife are members of the Congregational Church at Lancaster.

RUFUS I. CUTTS has been intimately associated with the agricultural interests of Harmony township and that portion of Rock county for the greater part of his life, and may fairly and justly be written down as one of the leading farmers of Rock county. He owns a farm in Section 6, Harmony township, and has made it in every way profitable and attractive by industry, thrift and careful management.

Mr. Cutts was born in Sullivan county, N. H., Dec. 14, 1831, and is a son of Nathan and Mary (Burnham) Cutts, both natives of that State. Five children were born to them, two of whom are now living: Alonzo K., of Janesville; and Rufus I. Nathan Cutts, who was a farmer, came to Wisconsin in 1844, locating in the town of Fulton, Rock county, where he lived three years, and then moving into Harmony township and purchasing a farm of 178 acres. This proved to be his home for life, for he lived upon it until his death, in 1864, when he was about sixty-five years old. His widow survived many years, and was about eighty-two years old when she died. They were members of the Free-Will Baptist Church, and were in every way good people and fine neighbors. Nathan Cutts, his father, was a farmer in New Hampshire, where he was born. He was killed in the East by an accident, and left a large family. Mrs. Mary (Burnham) Cutts' father was born in New Hampshire, of English descent, and was a sailor. He died in the East, leaving a small family.

Rufus I. Cutts was twelve years old when his parents came to Rock county, and here his life has since been spent. On his father's death he came into possession of the old homestead by purchasing the interest of the other heirs. He attended the district school, obtained a fair business education, and began life for himself by helping his parents pay for the home place, as he was given eighty acres of it when he set up a home. He now owns one hundred acres, and has started his sons farming. On Sept. 22, 1858, he was married to Miss Sarah G. Daggett, a daughter of Henry and Meribah (Jackson) Daggett. Mr. and Mrs. Cutts have had three sons and three daughters, Henry, Acil, Effie, Meribah, Fred and Elnora. Henry died in early childhood. Acil married Catherine Kahoe, and lives in Harmony township; they have six children, Lawrence, Asa, Earl, Howard, Christi and Bertie. Effie married David Alverson, and lives on the old place; they have three children, Claris, Letha and Anna. Meribah is at home. Fred married Miss Lottie Wells, and lives in Harmony township; they have six children, Lester, Lelah, Gladys, Gertie, Helen and Rufus. Elnora died in early childhood.

Mrs. Cutts' parents were natives of the State of Maine, and came by the lakes to Milwaukee in 1846, making a home in Winnebago county, Ill., where her father died in 1881, at the age of eighty-six years. Her mother died in 1875, at the age of eighty-two. They were Free-Will Baptists. He enlisted in the American army during the war of 1812, though he was never in battle. When a young man he was a school teacher, but became a farmer in the West. His father, Edward Daggett, was a native of Maine, of English descent, and died in the East. Mrs. Cutts was twelve years old when she came to Wisconsin with her parents, and she has lived in Rock county for over forty-two years. Her grandmother, Elizabeth Grindell, lived to be one hundred and four years old.

Mr. Cutts is a Republican. He has lived in Rock county for over fifty-six years, and during that long period has attended steadily to his business, proved a kind friend and a good neighbor, and now in his old age has well-earned rest and peace.

JOHN H. JONES, one of the highly esteemed and substantial residents of Belmont township, has made his home in Lafayette county since 1869, and has been identified with the growth and development of his neighborhood. The birth of our subject occurred in Tioga county, Penn., Sept. 9, 1840.

John W. and Elizabeth (Hughes) Jones, his parents, were both born in Anglesey, Wales, the former in 1813, the latter in 1810. They had the advantage of being instructed in both Welsh and English. Mrs. Jones was a daughter of Griffith and Ellen Hughes, both of whom died in Wales, Mrs. Jones making the journey to America alone, arriving in 1830. Mr. Jones came later, and both located in Tioga county, Penn., where a number of their countrymen reside. There they met and married. For some ten years Mr. Jones worked in the coal mines of Pennsylvania. In 1844, with wife and three children, he removed to Dodgeville, Iowa Co., Wis., and was employed for the following four or five years in the lead mines in that locality. With him had come his father, who located near Mifflin, Iowa county, where he died in 1879, leaving a family of two sons and five daughters, of whom are mentioned: John W., the father of our subject; Hugh, who married Anna Hughes, of Mifflin, and settled on his father's farm, where he died, his wife and family still living in Iowa county; Anna, who married Edward Edwards, a jeweler of Mineral Point, who moved to Chicago, where he died, his wife being still a resident of that city; the others of the family remaining in Pennsylvania until a later date.

John W. Jones, after leaving Dodgeville, purchased a tract of 160 acres near Mifflin, where he erected a log cabin and improved the land, this being the home of the family until the death of Mrs. Jones, in 1887. Soon after Mr. Jones and his son William began the erection of a new house on the old site, and there he resided until his decease, in 1892, leaving six children to mourn the loss of a good father. Of his family, John H. is our subject. Anne is deceased. William, born in 1844, was educated in the district schools of Iowa county, later enjoyed a term at the old academy in Platteville, and taught school several terms; he married Elizabeth Jones, who was born in New York State March 17, 1859, a daughter of William Jones, of Iowa county, formerly of Utica, N. Y., and died in 1891, while residing in Mineral Point; the children of this marriage were Jane and Elizabeth. Ellen, born in 1846, married John J. Jones, and resided on the old Jones homestead in Iowa county, where he died. Griffith H., born in 1849, married Sarah James, of Lafayette county, and they reside on the old homestead in Iowa county; their children are Anna, Ella and Alvin. Jane, born in 1851, married John Lloyd Jones, and died in Dodgeville in 1887; their children are Thomas, John, and Mary. Owen, born in 1854, married Emma Thompson, and died at Mineral Point, leaving one son, Owen, of Iowa county.

Our subject, John H. Jones, was educated in the district schools of Iowa county. He remained at home until he was about twenty-two, when he crossed the Plains to the mines of Nevada, remaining there for three years, and coming home by way of California. In 1865 he was married to Mary A. Jones, an educated young lady, daughter of John P. and Catherine Jones, of Schuylkill county, Penn. The father of Mrs. John H. Jones died in Pennsylvania, and her mother married Owen Hughes, who came West and located in Lafayette county. Although Mrs. Jones was born in the Keystone State, she obtained her education in the schools of Wisconsin.

After marriage our subject settled at Coal Valley, Ill., where he worked in the coal mines for one year, and then moved to Iowa county, in 1869 purchasing his present farm. At that time the land was wild, and much labor has been required to bring it to its present fine state of cultivation, but Mr. Jones possessed the determination to make here a permanent home and insure the prosperity of his family, and he has succeeded. In addition to this comfortable place, with its commodious buildings, fences and orchards, Mr. Jones also owns a farm of forty acres in Iowa county, which is valuable land.

Children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Jones as follows: William R., born in 1866, resides at home. John is deceased. Elizabeth, born in 1874, married Thomas P. Thomas, and they reside on a part of our subject's homestead; they have one daughter, Anna. Miriam, born in 1879, married Charles Kinsman, of Iowa county, his death occurring in 1900, after but one year of marriage; their son is named Charles R.

Our subject has always been identified with the Republican party, and has efficiently filled many of the local offices. Both he and his wife are constant in their attendance at the Presbyterian Church, of which she is a consistent member, and to which he is a liberal contributor. Mr. Jones is one of the good, substantial citizens who form the foundation stones of the county's prosperity, sensible, honest, energetic, and willing to advance any interest which his judgment assures him is for the real benefit of the community.

HON. SOLOMON C. CARR, of the town of Milton, Rock county, is an old and highly respected member of the farming community of that portion of Rock county. He is a son of Peleg S. and Deborah (Goodrich) Carr, the father born in Stephentown, Rensselaer Co., N. Y., and the mother a native of the same neighborhood. They came to this State in 1839, and settled in Milton township, Rock county, where he died in September, 1846. His widow survived many years, and passed away in September, 1874. They were the parents of ten children, and Solomon C. was the sixth child of the family.

Solomon C. Carr was born in Rensselaer county, N. Y., Dec. 19, 1830, and came with his parents to Milton Junction, which has been his home to the present time. He has lived on the same farm sixty-two years. He has been an extensive traveler both in this country and Europe. On Dec. 31, 1851, he married Miss Isabella Mackie, who was born in Belvidere, N. J., Aug. 4, 1830, and they had four children: William S., Isabella M., Florence S., and Kittie E. William S. is a conductor on the Wisconsin Central railroad. Isabella M. is the wife of W. C. King, of Springfield, Mass. Florence S. resides at Springfield, Mass. Kittie E. is the wife of C. E. Marquart, of the town of Milton. Mrs. Carr died April 11, 1900, leaving behind her tender memories as a good wife and mother.

Mr. Carr has been twice elected to the State Legislature, first in 1865, and again in 1874. He was master of the State Grange, of Wisconsin for a period of ten years, was chairman of the executive committee for twelve years, and State lecturer for six years, still serving in the latter position. Mr. Carr has held different town offices, and has always been associated with the Republican party. While in the Legislature in 1874 he worked for the passage of the Potter law, a measure decidedly in the interest of the people.

REV. FREDERICK DOBSON, a retired minister and farmer of the town of Platteville, Grant county, has had a long life, in which he has been a man of honor and character, filled with the lofty ambition of doing good, and helping men onward to the Kingdom of God, and has come to his old age commanding the respect and confidence of all who know him.

Mr. Dobson was born in the County of Durham, England, Aug. 14, 1822, a son of John and Emma (Gaskin) Dobson, who were born and reared in England. They had a family of eight children, and Frederick was the youngest. Thomas, the eldest son, went to New Mexico when a young man, and spent some few years in that country; returning home to England, he was taken sick on the voyage, and died on the high seas. Joseph, born in England, came first to the coal mines of Pittsburg, on the Ohio river, and two years later to Wisconsin, and settled at New Diggings, where he followed mining for some years. He later settled on a farm. He married Grace Parkin, of England, and they have four children, Joseph, Emma, Sarah, and John. Ann (deceased) married George Willis, and always lived in England. John died in England, when a young man. William is still living in England, where he has for many years held the position of foreman in the iron stone mines. Henry came to Wisconsin in 1857, and worked in the powder mills of Platteville; he is now living at Rockville, Grant county, where he is leading a retired life. He was first married in England and has a large family—Thomas, Sarah, Henry (by his first wife), John, William, George and Mary (children of his second wife). James lived and died in England.

Frederick Dobson during his boyhood received the benefit of the training afforded by the English schools, and was mainly engaged in mining while at home. In 1842 he crossed the ocean, in a sailing-vessel, and the voyage was tedious and protracted, seven weeks being required by the slow-moving vessel to reach the harbor of New York. He came West to Illinois by way of Buffalo and the Great Lakes, and when he reached this State engaged in mining. He was then appointed a preacher in the Primitive Methodist Church, having for his circuit New Diggings, Platteville, and other points. He was the first preacher of his denominational connection in Platteville, and he has frequently preached in the New Church; he has labored as a local preacher for over sixty years.

Mr. Dobson and Miss Ellen Snowden were married in 1844. Mrs. Dobson was the daughter of Henry and Ann Snowden, early settlers in Grant county, and was born in England in November, 1823. She grew to womanhood in Platteville, which was the home of her parents until their death. Mr. Dobson purchased a farm one mile south of Platteville, where he lived until 1862, selling that year and moving to a farm in Iowa county, where he lived until 1895. That year he bought the old Mitchell homestead, one mile east of Platteville, where he is now living a quiet and retired life. His excellent wife died in 1891. She united with her husband's church early in life, and lived as a devout Christian woman should live. She was the mother of children as follows: John H., born in Platteville in 1845, married Miss Julia Kirkpatrick, and lived in Lima, where she died in 1891, leaving four children, Frank, Annie, Charles and John. Emma, born in 1847, married Albert Beers; they settled in Lima, where she died in March, 1890, leaving five children, Emma May (born in 1881), Eva (1883), Frederick (1885), Willie (1886), and Clara (1889), Willie, Clara and May being inmates of the home of their grandfather. Miss Elizabeth, born in 1849, is at home. William, born in 1851, died the same year. Mary, born in 1852, is now the wife of Willard Moon, and lives at Boscobel; they have had four children, George, Jesse, Ida and Minnie, the two last dying in childhood. Robert, born in 1854, married Miss Frances Barber, and resides on Mr. Dobson's old homestead; they have had five children, Orville, Adda, Maggie (who died when a young lady, in February, 1900), and Edward and Samuel, who died in infancy. Margaret, born in 1857, is at home. Clara, born in 1860, was educated in the schools of Iowa county, lives at home, and with her sister Margaret is rearing the two daughters of their sister, Mrs. Beers: May Beers, the elder, is now a teacher; she was a student at the Normal. Frederick, born in June, 1863, in Iowa county, married Miss Mary Tucker, of Montfort, and lives in Iowa county; they have three children, Marcia, Ellen and Anna.

Mr. Dobson has always been identified with the Republican party. He was elected justice of the peace in Iowa county, but refused to accept the position. All the family are members of the Primitive Church, in which the husband and father has labored in Christ's cause for over sixty years.

FRANCIS A. BAKER, of Evansville, Rock county, a member of the hardware firm of that city, is widely known and highly esteemed, not only for the fine business ability which he has displayed through a long and active life, but also for his upright and honorable character, which has been a potent factor in the upbuilding of the firm.

Mr. Baker is a son of John T. and Jemimah (Robinson) Baker, natives of Ohio. They were the parents of ten children, six of whom are now living: David E., of Clermont, Iowa; Edward J., of Nodaway county, Mo.; Francis A., of Evansville; Stephen J., whose sketch appears elsewhere in this volume; Allen S., of Evansville; and Caroline Jane, wife of John Davenport, of San Rafael, Cal. The father, who was a farmer, came to Rock county in 1837, and in 1840 settled in the town of Union, one and a half miles east of Evansville. He took up 160 acres of government land, and improved it into a fine farm. Here he reared his family. In 1864 he moved into Evansville, and died in that city in 1876, at the age of sixty-nine years. His first wife, the mother of Francis A., died in 1850. Both were strong Methodists. For his second wife he married Mrs. Jane Sales, and they had one child, Elizabeth J., now living at San Rafael. John T. Baker was a man of more than usual ability, and held various town offices. His father, Daniel Baker, was a native of West Virginia, and led a rural life, making his home in the State of Ohio.

Francis A. Baker was born in 1837 in Green county, Wis., and was reared on his father's farm in Union, where he spent the first sixteen years of his life. He attended the district school and in 1852 went to Janesville, Wis., and learned the tinner's trade, which is still his occupation. He spent the winter of 1856 engaged at his trade in Nebraska City, Neb., and the following summer he was in Kansas. In the fall of the same year he worked in St. Joseph, Mo., and crossed the Plains as a teamster in an expedition under command of Gen. Hancock, then a quartermaster in the United States army, and sent to Salt Lake City with troops and supplies on account of the Mormon troubles that year. Mr. Baker was two years in California as a miner and prospector, and five years in the same lines in Nevada, working at his trade during the winter, and spending the open season on the mountains. In 1866 he went to Montana, where he was a miner, and also employed in a sawmill, and in 1867 returned to Wisconsin. The same year he was at Ossian, Iowa, for a few months, and then worked for John Griffith, of Janesville, where he spent seven years. In 1877 he established himself in Evansville, where he has continued to the present time. He is senior member of the firm of F. A. Baker & Co., who carry the largest stock of hardware and similar goods to be found in the city, and has built up a wide circle of friends and patrons throughout the adjoining country. Fred A. Baker is a stockholder in the Evansville Telephone Exchange.

Mr. Baker and Mrs. Julia M. Baker, widow of his brother Aron T., were married April 21, 1869, and three children have been born to this union. Maud J., Bert F. and Lulu J. T.; he is also a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Modern Woodmen of America. He is a Republican, and has served on the village board of trustees. He has a handsome and well appointed home on Main street.

THOMAS H. EWING, who passed away Nov. 9, 1895, was one of the foremost citizens of New Diggings township, Lafayette county, where he had been engaged for many years in mining and farming. In his business and social relations he cheerfully met every obligation, and the record of his life, replete with all that is good, cannot fail to be an inspiration for coming generations.

Mr. Ewing was born in Cornwall, England, May 26, 1845, son of Thomas and Christiana (Mark) Ewing, who came to this country in 1850, and settled at Council Hill, Ill., later in New Diggings township, Lafayette Co., Wis., where they passed the remainder of their lives. In their family were five children, as follows: Thomas H.; James, of Peoria, Ill.; John A., of Scales Mound, Ill.; Catherine, of Scales Mound, Ill.; and Benjamin, who died in Nebraska.

Thomas H. Ewing grew to manhood in Illinois, and received a fairly good education, which he later supplemented greatly by reading and observation. In his young manhood he engaged in mining, which, in connection with farming, he followed all his life. By careful management and unceasing industry he soon acquired a firm financial footing, and his wise investments began to yield good and sure returns. First he became a stockholder of the Colman Mine, and later invested in mining and farming lands. In 1893 he purchased the "Stone House farm," known in New Diggings as the Abraham Looney homestead, and there began general farming. The old stone house was remodeled, and other buildings added to make a comfortable home. For a number of years Mr. Ewing was superintendent of and stockholder in the Blende Mine, and was superintendent of the Eureka Mine.

In September, 1869, Mr. Ewing was wedded to Miss Jane A. Farrey, who was born in England in February, 1852, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Brown) Farrey. Seven children brightened their home: (1) Aldaretta A., born in July, 1872, and educated in the public schools of New Diggings, married Isaac Harker, who now assists in the management of the Ewing home. (2) Thomas W., born in December, 1873, educated in Dixon College, is now engaged in the livery business in Benton, Wis. (3) Benjamin A., born in March, 1877, is, with the assistance of his brother-in-law, Isaac Harker, managing the home farm. (4) Charles L. was born in February, 1879; (5) Everett H., in September, 1881; (6) George R., in December, 1883; and (7) Earl M., in August, 1890. Mr. Ewing regarded it as a citizen's duty to have an intelligent knowledge of public affairs, and he made a deep study of the political situation, and was always found thoroughly posted in the leading events of the day. He was always identified with the Republican party, and for several years served as chairman of his town. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity, and also of the I. O. O. F. In his religious faith he was a devout Methodist, and a liberal contributor to all church work. Mrs. Ewing is a lady of culture and refinement, and is esteemed for her many loving qualities.

William Farrey and his wife (parents of Mrs. Ewing) came from England in 1853, and settled three miles west of Benton, where Mr. Farrey engaged in mining, which occupation he followed the greater part of his life. His death occurred at his home in 1872, just three years after his wife had been laid to rest. During the Civil war Mr. Farrey had given his service to his adopted country, becoming a member of Company I, 25th Wis. V. I., in 1862, and serving until the close of the war. He participated in Gen. Sherman's famous march to the sea, and suffered many of the hardships incident to soldier life. Mr. and Mrs. Farrey were the parents of nine children: Henry, born in 1851, now residing in Lead Mine, married Mary J. Hoffman, of Lafayette county; Mrs. Ewing; Mary E., born in April, 1854, married Raisbeck Horsley, of Benton, Wis.; Elizabeth, born in 1855, married Seldom Sheffer, of New Diggings township; William, born in 1857, married Mary Franklin, and lives in Lead Mine; Thomas, born in Lafayette county, married Mary Neenan, and now resides in Benton; Robert, born in the same county, married Lizzie Perkins, and lives in New Diggings; Louisa, the eighth in order of birth, married Frank Horsley, of New Diggings; and John B., the youngest, married Susie Miller, and makes his home in Lead Mine.

JASON B. LOTHROP, a most respected citizen of Lancaster, may well be classed among the pioneers of Grant county, as he is now one of the few living who had attained manhood's years when he arrived here, in 1837. He was born in Boston, Mass., Jan. 15, 1814, a son of Calvin and Betsey (Clapp) Lothrop, who spent their entire existence in Boston and vicinity, and of their numerous children Jason B. is the sole survivor.

Jason B. Lothrop learned the carpenter's trade in Boston. On June 1, 1836, he married Miss Cynthia Cutler, who was born June 16, 1816. In December, 1836, Mr. Lothrop went to Pensacola, Fla., where he followed his trade nearly six months, and then determined to visit the West, in May, 1837, arriving at Mineral Point, Iowa Co., Wis. In 1838 he returned to Massachusetts, and in the same year brought back to Wisconsin his young wife, settling in Grant county, where he has resided ever since—a period of over sixty-three years. For nearly twenty-eight years he lived in Jamestown, following his trade and farming, and then came to Lancaster.

On July 27, 1875, Mr. Lothrop was bereft of his wife by death, and on Jan. 1, 1876, he married his present wife, Mrs. Effa (Kelts) Brown. By his first marriage Mr. Lothrop had born to him seven children, viz.: Emeline Hardy, born in Massachusetts May 16, 1837, died in Grant county, Wis., Oct. 27, 1848. George Cutler, born Feb. 13, 1840, was for three years a member of Company I, 25th Wis. V. I., in the war for the preservation of the Union, and is now a resident of Nebraska. Alonzo Hawkins, born Dec. 19, 1841, served in the same company with his brother in the Civil war; he now lives near Lexington, Ind. Franklin Baldwin, born July 3, 1844, served in the same company with his brothers; he is a resident of Dubuque, Iowa. Agnes Melvina, born June 28, 1848, was married to Robert E. Lawrence, and died Oct. 24, 1876. Adelaide, born Feb. 13, 1852, died Feb. 23, 1868. Ella Frances, born Jan. 9, 1856, is the wife of M. H. Meyer and resides in Cleveland, Ohio. The present Mrs. Lothrop is a native of Oneida county, N. Y., and is a descendant of the oldest Dutch families of that State. Mr. Lothrop and his estimable wife are now passing their declining years in their pleasant home in Lancaster, and it is needless to add they are of the honored the most honored.

Mr. Lothrop, now eighty-seven years of age, is a remarkably well-preserved gentleman, and would readily pass for one fully sixteen years younger. His memory is vigorous and retentive, and his recollection extends to the years when Grant county was almost entirely a wilderness, from which he has lived to see it developed into one of the most productive counties in the State. His personal reminiscences would fill a large volume. In the early days he saw the French patriot, La Fayette, on the occasion of that eminent personage's final visit to the United States; he saw, likewise, Andrew Jackson, the hero of New Orleans, and once shook hands with the "great commoner," Henry Clay. In the early days Mr. Lothrop was in politics a Whig, and he has changed as the parties have changed. He has held many local offices in Grant county; for four years he was a member of the county board, and has also served on the town board. During his active life he was much interested in public education, and filled several important school offices.

In 1850, during the height of the California gold excitement, Mr. Lothrop crossed the Plains to the Pacific coast, having for his fellow voyagers Mr. Hannum and others, whose biographies may be found elsewhere. He returned by way of the Isthmus of Panama, across which he walked, from the Pacific ocean to the Gulf of Mexico.

PROF. RUDOLPH H. MUELLER, principal of the high school and superintendent of the public schools of Argyle, Lafayette county, is one of those German-born American citizens who have inherited the inherent noble characteristics of their race, and have combined them with the progressive spirit of the New World, a union that gives to America a peculiarly high class of citizens.

Prof. Mueller was born in Germany, and when two years of age was brought by his parents to this country. The public schools of Dane and Jefferson counties, Wis., afforded him his early literary training, which was supplemented by a course in the University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis., whence he was graduated in 1890, in the modern classical course. Previous to his graduation he had taught school for four terms in Jefferson county, and immediately upon leaving school was engaged as principal of the high school at Chetek, Wis., where he remained three years, after which he assumed charge of the schools of Argyle, succeeding Prof. E. W. Pryor. These schools have long sustained a high reputation for thoroughness, and it is safe to say that under the able direction of the present superintendent they are second to none in the county. Besides himself there are five teachers employed, John W. Watson being assistant principal in the high school; Miss Mina Anderson, grammar school; Miss Jennie Peacock, intermediate; Miss Anna Davis, second primary; and Miss Inger Fenns, first primary. In February, 1901, the number of pupils enrolled was 235, fifty-two of whom were in the high school, the senior class numbering eight. Prof. Mueller is very popular with his pupils, and is held in very high esteem by the citizens of the town.

JOHN CLINE. In the rush and strife of modern environment it is with difficulty that we are brought to realize the courage and self-confidence possessed by the pioneers who started out from comfortable homes to penetrate into wildernesses where even communication with civilization was only possible by long days of slow travel, often over nothing but trails. But the men who made Wisconsin were tillers of the soil, and many of the complex elements that now confuse as they confront us were reduced by them to the question, "Can I find a suitable home for my family, where energy and perseverance can receive their reward from a productive soil?"

One of those hardy, sensible, honest men is John Cline, the subject of our review, who has had a residence of half a century in Lafayette county. Mr. Cline was born in Crawford county, Penn., Feb. 24, 1818, son of George and Margaret (DuMars) Cline. George Cline came to America with his parents when a small child. His father was one of five brothers who came to America together, and made settlement on the Susquehanna river, but finally scattered to different parts of the country, two of them locating in western Pennsylvania; one of these was the grandfather of our subject. The father of our subject died in 1849, and in 1852 the mother, with her youngest son, James, came to Lafayette county, Wis. She died at the home of James, at the age of eighty-eight years.

Our subject is one of a family of nine children, all of whom became residents of Lafayette county, and all survive except Adam and Fanny, the former dying in the siege of Petersburg, during the Civil war. The survivors are John; Noble D.; George and Jacob, twins, the former a resident of Lafayette county, the latter of Burlington, Kans.; Sarah Ann, widow of Robert Henry, of Iowa; Polly, wife of Silas McMannes, of Dumont, Iowa; and James.

Our subject attained manhood in his native State where he married Mary Ann McMannes, a native of Ireland, in 1839, and seven children were born to this union, six now living: Sarah, Mrs. Abraham; John T.; George D.; Mary Melvina, Mrs. Loffswold, of Lyons, Iowa; Fanny, wife of M. F. Howrey; and Melissa, wife of L. B. Howrey. Mrs. Cline died Dec. 20, 1891, and on April 19, 1893, our subject married Miss Margaret D. Sudduth, who died April 9, 1895. On Nov. 27, 1895, he wedded Mrs. Angelina (Sudduth) Hill, a sister of his second wife, who was born in Kentucky, a daughter of John and Editha Sudduth, who passed all their lives in that State.

After deciding to make a home in the West for his growing family, Mr. Cline started with his wife, four children and a brother from Mercer county, Penn., journeying in a covered wagon as far as Cleveland, Ohio, where the party crossed Lake Erie. They then took the only train that ran through the State of Michigan, reached Milwaukee, and thence by team again came to Lafayette county, arriving on June 3, 1851, having been on the way since May 20. On his arrival in Lafayette county, Mr. Cline was uncertain just where he would locate, but had in view Grant county, where his sister and her husband, Silas McMannes, lived. Accordingly the tired little party moved onward again until Grant county was reached.

After viewing the land Mr. Cline finally decided that Lafayette county offered more advantages for settlement so he returned and purchased a farm in the town of Fayette, which was the family home for many years; in fact, all of his business life was passed there. The first purchase was of fifty acres, on which was a small house, and all of the land was wild but ten acres. Mr. Cline also entered a claim for a quarter section of school land adjoining his fifty acres, which he afterward purchased when it came into the market, getting it at the government price, and this gave him a farm of 200 acres. The little house held the family for some two years, but in 1853 he built a rock house from rock which he and his brother Adam quarried the previous year; the lumber used in its construction was hauled from Galena, on the Wisconsin river, the trip requiring two days. In this residence Mr. Cline lived for many years, but he finally rented his farm and removed to the village of Fayette, about ten years later coming to Darlington, where he has continued to reside ever since.

Mrs. Cline came to Highland, Iowa county, with two brothers, William and Franklin Suduth, in 1846, and in February, 1847, married Francis A. Hill, from Buxton, in the State of Maine, near Portland, a lawyer by profession, and a finely educated man, interested in lead mining in Iowa county, being associated with C. C. Washburn and other leading men of the early days in the lead regions. He died July 15, 1850, of Asiatic cholera, after which Mrs. Cline took charge of his business of surveying, and she met many of the leading people of the day, of whom she can tell many interesting tales. Mrs. Cline has a daughter, Fanny A. Hill, whose devotion to study broke down her health, and has made her an invalid. Mr. and Mrs. Cline have a pleasant home, and are numbered with the best people of Lafayette county. They are consistent and valued members of the M. E. Church.

BURTON F. NOWLAN, managing editor of the Janesville Daily Gazette, and secretary of the Gazette Printing Co., is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar F. Nowlan, and was born in Janesville June 1, 1870. He attended the city schools until 1884, when he injured one of his knees while at play, and for the next five years was an invalid, being confined to the house nearly all the time. As a source of amusement he was given an amateur printing press, the outfit costing three dollars. He took a liking to the toy at once, and, by soliciting work, and adding to his outfit from time to time, soon had more business than he could attend to. He then sold his amateur office, inventorying more than $250, and made arrangement with the late Garrett Veeder, the veteran publisher and printer, for the use of his material on shares. Under Mr. Veeder's guidance Mr. Nowlan mastered the printer's art in all its branches, learning the trade from its foundation. He remained with Mr. Veeder until October, 1880, when he left him to enter the employment of the Gazette Printing Co., as a reporter. By following the teachings of John C. Spencer, then city editor of the Gazette, Mr. Nowlan made rapid progress, and a few years later became news editor of the paper. He held this position until January, 1898, when he became managing editor.

It was as a reporter that Mr. Nowlan first showed the stuff of which he was made. Hearing that an accident had happened at the gas works, he hastened thither. It was late on the afternoon of April 17, 1891, and on the way he met Cornelius Ryan, of the fire department, and accompanied him to the scene of the accident. Arriving at the gas works, they found that three men—H. E. Merrill, superintendent of the company; William Farmer, his assistant, and Fred Henrich, the engineer—had been overcome by gas and were lying senseless in the cellar at the foot of a narrow winding stairway. Nowlan and Ryan hastened into the basement and rescued Henrich, but were nearly overcome themselves. They stuck to the task, however, and succeeded in rescuing Farmer also. By this time both were exceedingly weak, and, while Mr. Nowlan fought for breath in the street, Mr. Ryan staggered to the telephone, in another part of the plant, to summon help. Mr. Nowlan arrested the attention of a passer-by, William Irwin, by motioning, and with his assistance undertook to remove Mr. Merrill, who was still in the basement. Together they descended the stairs, and while Mr. Irwin was lifting Mr. Merrill up the stairs, Mr. Nowlan undertook to lift his feet clear of the stairs and the railing, but he fell back on the floor unconscious. He was soon missed by the others, and as an immense crowd had gathered by that time, was quickly brought forth into the open air. All recovered, but if

Mr. Nowlan's newspaper instinct had not impelled him to make haste the three would undoubtedly have died before the arrival of help.

As an editorial writer Mr. Nowlan has been as successful as he was in his news work. He is not afraid to speak his mind at all times. He lays no claim to a command of flowery language, but aims to make his meaning clear, in which he has apparently succeeded, as some of his political articles have been widely copied and endorsed by the press of the State. Mr. Nowlan realized from the first that he would be greatly handicapped in life by his lack of education, as he left school when he was only fourteen years old, and accordingly set about a systematic course of reading. The first money that he ever earned went to buy Dickens' works, a set of books he now values more than any other on his library shelves.

On June 24, 1894, Mr. Nowlan was married to Miss Jessie E. Merrill, the youngest daughter of Hon. and Mrs. Hiram Merrill. They have two children, Louise Marlette and Hiram Merrill. They reside in their own pretty, modern house at the corner of South Bluff and South Second streets. Mr. Nowlan is a lover of the rod and gun, and is secretary and treasurer of the Carcajou Shooting Club, a corporation owning a duck shooting preserve at Lake Koshkonong. He is also president of the Janesville Trap Shooting Club.

There is an object lesson for young men in Mr. Nowlan's career. Although he began life without education, and in very poor health, he has made the trip, in ten short years, from the amateur printing press to the desk of the managing editor of one of the oldest and most influential newspapers in the State. At the time he assumed his present duties he was probably the youngest man in Wisconsin to occupy so important and responsible a position.

E. J. MARVEL, the efficient superintendent of the soda mill of the Platteville Powder Co., was born in Cynthiana, Ind., in 1837, a son of George and Ruth (Jordan) Marvel, also natives of the Hoosier State, who in 1840 moved to Illinois, where the remainder of their lives were passed. By occupation the father was a farmer. Three of his sons were among the defenders of the Union during the Civil war—James A., John and E. J. James A. enlisted in Illinois, in 1862, in the 5th Illinois Cavalry, and was discharged for disability in 1864; he died in Illinois in 1872. John was also a member of an Illinois regiment, in the 100-day service; he is now living at Mt. Erie, Wayne county, that State.

The boyhood and youth of E. J. Marvel were passed in Illinois, and in the schools of that State he acquired his education. On first coming to Grant county, Wis., in 1857, he was employed at farm labor, his home being in Paris. At Platteville, in August, 1862, he enlisted in the 25th Wis. V. I., and was mustered in at La Crosse, Wis., his regiment being assigned to Sherman's command. He was with that general on the march to the sea, and participated in the battles of Resaca, Missionary Ridge and Decatur, Ga.; the siege of Atlanta; and in the Carolina campaign, including the battle of Bentonville, the last engagement of the war. Mr. Marvel took part in the grand review at Washington, D. C., and was honorably discharged in that city June 7, 1865, after which he returned to his home in Paris, Wis. The following year he purchased a flouring-mill at that place, which he operated until coming to Platteville, in 1882, to accept his present responsible position with the Platteville Powder Co.

In Grant county Mr. Marvel was married, in 1858, to Miss Elizabeth C. Wilson, who died in 1865 leaving one son, George W., now a merchant of Ashton, Neb. For his second wife our subject wedded, in 1867, Miss Emma Vannatta, a daughter of Aaron and Elizabeth (Kispaugh) Vannatta, who are mentioned more fully in the sketch of S. B. Vannatta elsewhere. By this union was also born one son, Walter E., who is married and resides in Clinton, Ill., filling a responsible railroad position.

As a Republican Mr. Marvel takes quite an active interest in political affairs. He is a prominent member of W. T. Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R., in which he has served as commander and junior and senior warden, and is also connected with Melody Lodge, No. 2, F. & A. M.; Washington Chapter, No. 2, R. A. M.; and the Eastern Star Chapter. Both he and his wife hold membership in the Congregational Church at Platteville, and enjoy the hospitality of many of the best homes of the city.

JOSEPH T. MARVIN, of Darlington, Lafayette county, is an esteemed citizen, and a veteran of the Civil war whose honorable and industrious career since his return from the "tented field" has given added meaning to his military services.

Mr. Marvin was born in Walton, Delaware Co., N. Y., in 1822, and belongs to a family whose ancestry in this country runs back to 1636, when two brothers, Reynold and Matthew Marvin, came from England and settled in the Colonies, Reynold Marvin being the progenitor of Joseph T. Marvin, whose name appears above. Recent investigations have resulted in disclosing the ancestry as far back as the early part of the fifteenth century. The Marvin family was well represented in Colonial days, and its various generations were largely stout-hearted and strong-minded men and women. During the old Colonial wars and in the French and Indian war, as well as in the struggle for American independence, it was well represented.

Matthew Marvin, the grandfather of Joseph T., served seven years in the Continental forces, was with Gen. Washington at Valley Forge, during the darkest period of the American Revolution, and was mustered out as first sergeant. It is also recorded of him that he took part in the battles of Brandywine, Red Bank, Mud Fort, Trenton and Princeton. At the capture of Cornwallis this veteran of seven years was one of sixty-eight picked men forming an escort for LaFayette.

Thomas Marvin, son of Matthew, and father of Joseph T., was a soldier in the war of 1812, and it was but natural that the grandson should feel the force of family tradition strongly enough to bear arms himself for his country when the occasion demanded.

Joseph T. Marvin remained in New York until 1855, in which year he came to Wisconsin. On April 22, 1861, he enlisted in Company H, 3d Wis. V. I., and they left the State July 12, under orders for Hagerstown, Md. On Feb. 3, 1862, Mr. Marvin was made second lieutenant, and transferred to Company C. On Aug. 13, following, he was made first lieutenant, and returned to Company H. On Feb. 6, 1863, he was appointed quartermaster of the regiment, in which capacity he continued to the close of the war, and was mustered out July 18, 1865. The regiment had a long and honorable record of campaigns, marches and battles to its credit, and saw service in Maryland and Virginia until after Gettysburg. It was with Banks in his Shenandoah campaign, and with Pope in Virginia; fought at Bolivar Heights, Winchester, Cedar Mountain, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg, and was then sent to the West, being transferred from the 12th Army Corps to the 20th. In the West it served under Gen. Hooker, and then became a part of the command of Gen. Sherman, following him through Georgia and the Carolinas to Washington, and taking part in the grand review. Mr. Marvin made an exceptionally fine record as a soldier and as an officer.

Joseph T. Marvin was married to Miss Jennie E. Hall, of the town of Willow Springs, Lafayette county, where she was born in 1843, a daughter of Elisha Hall, who settled in the town about 1834. Mr. Hall was the first treasurer of Willow Springs after its organization in 1849, and took an active part in the early affairs of the town. He was a prominent Congregationalist, and kept a hotel on strictly temperance principles for many years. Mr. Marvin was bereft of his wife by death in 1896, and is now making his home with his daughter, Mrs. Minnie Oates, in Darlington. The surviving members of the Hall family now (1901) are Mrs. Nellie Duncan; Miss Fannie B. Hall; and Mrs. Clara Odgers, of Milford, Oregon. There were two sons in the family; George C. (who served in the Union army) and Calvin Hall, but both are deceased.

Our subject was one of a family of eight, of whom only three are now (1901) living. Matthew W. Marvin is living in New York, near the old family homestead where he was born. He also bore arms for the Union, serving in the 144th N. Y. V. I., in which he attained the rank of captain. Since the war he has been a conspicuous figure in local politics, and has been a member of the State Senate. Fred F. Marvin was a member of the 11th Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, being a member of the band; he died in Canon City, Colo., September, 1900.

GEORGE HANTHORN, ex-sheriff of Rock county, and one of the representative men of Janesville, was born in Dilworthtown, Chester Co., Penn., May 26, 1832, a son of Thomas and Louisa (Cobourn) Hanthorn.

George Hanthorn, the paternal grandfather of our subject, was of Irish descent; he had seven or eight children. The maternal grandfather was John Cobourn, a native of Chester county, Penn., of English descent, a shoemaker by trade, who died when nearly ninety; he had six children.

George Hawthorn

Mary Elizabeth Hawthorn

The parents of our subject were natives of Chester county, Penn., and of the two sons and two daughters born to them George Hanthorn is the only survivor. Thomas Hanthorn was a school teacher in his younger days, and later was assessor and collector for many years, dying in his native county in 1851, aged fifty; his wife survived until 1891, when she, too, passed away, aged eighty-three. In religious belief the mother was an adherent of the Baptist faith, and was a very good and worthy woman. Their son Oscar F. was a soldier in the war of the Rebellion, and died in Alexandria, Va., immediately after the battle of Antietam, from disease contracted in the service.

George Hanthorn was reared in Chester county, Penn., attending the district schools when opportunity afforded, and began to learn the trade of stone-mason when but fifteen, which occupation he followed many years. In 1857 Mr. Hanthorn migrated to Illinois, but after spending one summer in that State removed to Wisconsin, and has resided in Rock county ever since. Upon coming to this State, Mr. Hanthorn followed his trade for many years, but later purchased eighty acres of land in Johnstown township, where he resided three years. This property he then sold, and bought 160 acres in the same township, farming same until 1885, when he was elected sheriff and removed to town, and his son Duane took charge of the farm. Two years ago Mr. Hanthorn sold this property, and bought 240 acres in the town of Bradford, which his son now operates.

On Sept. 7, 1862, George Hanthorn married Miss Rebecca A. Vandenburg, daughter of William G. and Mary Ann (Leavenworth) Vandenburg, and two children, Oscar Duane and Orlando Van, were born of this union. Oscar Duane married Miss Minnie Hankie (whose parents own a farm in the town of Harmony, Rock county), and five children have been born to them, four living, Harold, Leo (who died at the age of six years), Earl, Le Roy and Carroll. Orlando Van married Miss Nellie Inman, and lives in Janesville, where he is a letter-carrier; they have two children, Lottie and Mabel R.

The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Hanthorn, Gilbert Vandenburg, a native of Holland, died when over eighty years old, in New York State, and was the father of a large family. The maternal grandfather of Mrs. Hanthorn, David Leavenworth, who was a native of New York State, of English descent, and a millwright by trade, died when he, too, was over eighty. All of his seven children lived to a good old age, longevity being a characteristic of the Leavenworths.

Mrs. Hanthorn's parents were natives of New York State, came West in 1845, and located in the town of Bradford, Rock county, engaging in farming. The father died March 24, 1893, aged nearly eighty-six, and his wife survived him but four days, passing away on March 28, 1893, aged eighty-three. Both were consistent members of the Congregational Church, and people of prominence in their community. Ten children were born to this worthy couple, four sons and six daughters, four now living: Elizabeth C., wife of Stanley H. Joiner, of La Prairie township; Rebecca A., wife of our subject; Addie V., wife of James A. Kipp, of Badger, S. Dak.; and David L. Vandenburg, of Clear Lake, Iowa. One son, Minard A. Vandenburg, was a soldier, and died at home from the effects of exposure and hardships during the war. One died in infancy. The others were Caroline, Sarah, Josiah, and Burzinah.

Politically Mr. Hanthorn has always espoused the cause of the Republican party, and has ably represented its principles upon several occasions, having been sheriff of Rock county in 1885 and 1886; supervisor of Johnstown township several terms; chairman of the township board a couple of times, and alderman from the Second ward, one term. Mr. Hanthorn was also street commissioner for four years, and county coroner for two terms, and in every capacity proved himself an able exponent of the wishes of his constituents, and faithful in the discharge of his duties.

Mr. and Mrs. Hanthorn have a beautiful home on the Delavan road, corner of Vine street, where they are surrounded by the comforts of life. Their residence was erected in 1895, and is surrounded by six and one-half acres of ground. Prior to building, Mr. Hanthorn resided on Milton avenue. In the community where he has lived so many years, and to which he has always given his hearty support in all matters of public improvement, Mr. Hanthorn enjoys a well-earned popularity, and his friends number legions.

GEORGE WIEDERHOLD, proprietor of the "Dickeyville Hotel," at Dickeyville, Grant county, was born in Prussia April 12, 1839, and is a son of Nicholas and Anna (Fidler) Wiederhold, both natives of Prussia. The father was born in 1795, and the mother in 1797. They came to this country in 1857, landing at Baltimore after a seven weeks' voyage. Coming to Galena, Ill., in June of that year, the husband and father died the following August, leaving his wife with five children. The strain was too great for her endurance, and she broke down, dying the following year. Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Wiederhold were consistent Christian people, and are remembered as ambitious and energetic to the last degree. Of their five children, all born in Germany, (1) Elizabeth, the eldest, born in 1831, was, like the other children, educated in their native land. She married Jacob Barth, a native of Baden, Germany, and they settled in Galena, Ill., where she died in 1898, leaving one daughter, Lizzie, now Mrs. Lorenzo Focht, of Galena. (2) Mary, born in 1833, married Henry Althaus, of the town of Paris, Grant county, and died, leaving no family. (3) Dorothy, born in 1835, is now the widow of George A. Leffelholz, and lives in Jamestown, Grant county. She has had five children, one that died in infancy. Annie, Lizzie, George and Henry. (4) Joseph, born in 1835, was first married in Galena, and moved to the town of Paris, where his wife died, leaving seven children, George, Joseph, Frank, John, Charles, Dorothy and Katie. Dorothy is the wife of Charles Dresler and lives in Kieler, Grant county. Katie is the wife of Christopher Dresler, of the town of Paris. Joseph Wiederhold married second Miss Dorathea Weber, of Grant county, to which union were born four children. He now lives in the town of Paris.

George Wiederhold is the fifth and youngest member of the family. A good education was given him in Germany, and after coming to this country he learned the shoemaking trade, which he followed until he enlisted in the Civil war, as a member of Company H, 25th Wis. V. I., under the command of Capt. Schwan. This regiment served in the Western Army under Gen. Sherman and other distinguished officers. On the march to the sea its presence was often made manifest to the retiring enemy. Skirmishes and fighting were daily occurrences, and they were often days without food, barefooted and ragged, but they drove the Rebels, and the "boys" were happy. Mr. Wiederhold served until the close of the war, and received his honorable discharge at Madison, Wis., and he returned with gladness to the scenes of peaceful life.

Resuming his trade at Dickeyville, Mr. Wiederhold was married there in August, 1865, to Miss Theresia Schmerbach, of Grant county, daughter of Barth and Annie R. Schmerbach, natives of Germany, who came to the United States in 1848, and lived for a short time in the State of New York. Coming to Wisconsin, they settled near the Wisconsin and Illinois State line, on what was known as the Sinsinawa Mound, and there made their home for a number of years, eventually moving to the town of Paris, where they died. Mrs. Wiederhold was born in Germany in 1846, and was reared in this country. After their marriage Mr. Wiederhold and his wife located in the town of Dickeyville, where he owned a home. Later on he bought a farm near the village, and, greatly improving it with new buildings and energetic work, they there made their home until 1874. That year he purchased his father-in-law's hotel property in Dickeyville, and became a hotel man, which has been his calling to the present time. As a genial and hospitable landlord he has made many friends among the traveling public, and is known as a solid and substantial citizen.

To Mr. and Mrs. Wiederhold have been born a large family of children, of whom (1) Annie and (2) Lizzie died in childhood. (3) Maggie, born in 1866, married John Hartung, a resident of the town of Paris, and has had eight children. John (who died at the age of seven years), George, Joseph, Frank, Lizzie, Lena, Arthur, and the baby. (4) Joseph, born in the town of Paris in 1868, married Miss Lizzie Utte, and lives on his father's old homestead farm. They have one son, Arthur. (5) George, born in September, 1870, is running a restaurant in Cuba City. (6) Michael, born in May, 1872, married Miss Christina Kunkle, of this county, and they now reside in the village of Dickeyville, where he is doing a good business as a contractor and builder. (7) Annie, born in 1874, is the wife of Peter Snyder, a resident of the town of Hazel Green, where he is engaged in farming. They have two children, Peter and Joseph. (8) Theresia, born in January, 1877, married

Joseph Splinter, and has her home in Cuba City; she is the mother of two children, Arthur and Hildergard E. (9) Barthel, born in July, 1880, has learned the carpenter's trade, and is now in partnership with his brother in Dickeyville. He is one of the solid and capable young men of the day.

Mr. Wiederhold has held several local offices, was a member of the town board, and for eleven consecutive years was collector of the town. Our subject, wife and family are all members of the Catholic Church.

WILLIAM S. FIELD, an active business man and farmer of New Diggings township, Lafayette county, has led a most strenuous life, filled with experiences difficult in accomplishment, but interesting in retrospection. He was born in New Diggings township July 17, 1840, one of the large family of children of William and Sarah (Shaffer) Field.

William Field was born in Kentucky in 1804, and his wife, Sarah Shaffer, was a native of Germany, born in 1813. They came to Wisconsin in their early married life, locating on government land now included in the township of New Diggings. He owned about 2,400 acres of prairie and mineral land in the days when Grant, Iowa and Lafayette counties were all in one, under the name of Iowa county. He erected a double log house for protection from the Indian raids, the nearest fort being at Galena, Ill., twelve miles away, but they were often obliged to take refuge there in the more exciting times. Mr. Field was a farmer and a dealer in minerals, and became very wealthy as his land increased in value. He was widely known all over southwestern Wisconsin, as well as on the Mississippi, as he did some business between Galena and Kentucky, on the river. In politics he was always interested, and voted with the Democratic party. He filled a number of offices during his time, and was one of the prominent men on the frontier. Although he was not a member of any denomination, he and his wife were both good Christian people, charitable and kind, and were greatly beloved. Mr. Field was much interested in the educational problems presented by the sparsely settled country, and helped to erect the first school house in his community. His death occurred in 1858, and that of his wife in 1887. They were the parents of a large family of children: (1) Elizabeth, born in

New Diggings, attended the district school erected by her father, and later Mount Carroll Seminary, in Illinois. She married John Chambers, of Missouri, and they first lived on a farm given her by her father, later removing to Sheldon, Iowa, where she died in 1900, leaving a family of eight children, George, William, Alice, Emily, Ida, Aaron, John and Fred. (2) Fannie became the wife of A. S. Rock, and they reside in Shullsburg, Lafayette Co., Wis., on his farm. They have two children living, Charles and Anna. Eliza, a third child, died in early womanhood. (3) Miss Emily resides on the old homestead. (4) George married Miss Anna Harker, and bought himself a farm, which he afterward sold, going to Mobile, Ala. Returning home, he was drowned in the Mississippi river. (5) Martha married Millard Townsend, and resided in Shullsburg, where both died, leaving a daughter, Edith, now Mrs. White, of Galena, Ill. (6) William S. is sixth in the order of birth. (7) Benjamin married Emeline Williams, and located in St. Cloud, Minn., where she died in 1900, leaving four children. (8) Edward married Miss Annie Collins, of England, and they make their home on his farm in New Diggings. They have children as follows—William, Edward, Charles, Katie, Gerald, Timothy, Benjamin, Emily, Rilla, and Arthur. (9) Alice married a Mr. Young, of Beetown, Grant county, who died, leaving his widow and two children. (10) Annie married Frank Bailey, and lives on a part of the Field homestead. She has four children, Carrie (wife of George Hall, of Platteville), Silas, Bertie and Ada. (11) Silas, the youngest in the family, married Bell Metcalf, and lives on a part of the old home farm. They have four children, Willis, Luella, Benjamin and Sarah.

William S. Field, while growing to manhood, attended the district schools of the neighborhood. He was early trained to frontier life, and in 1860, with two teams of oxen and one of cows, crossed the Plains to Pike's Peak, via Denver, Colo., being three months en route. He worked in the gold fields, spending a year and a half in prospecting and locating claims, and then moved to Hannibal, Mo., where with three others he contracted to furnish the lumber for the railroad from Cameron to Kansas City. After they had completed the contract, and just before it was inspected by the company and taken off their hands, it was burned by soldiers of the Union army, while on a raid after Quantrell's guerrillas. Martial law being in force, Mr. Field was obliged to walk seven hundred miles to reach his Wisconsin home. He then engaged in lumbering in Wisconsin, but in 1863 he again made a Western trip by wagon, this time to Montana, where he was successfully engaged in gold mining until 1867, when he returned home. He had had adventures enough for a time, and resolved to settle down on the home farm and pass the rest of his days in less exciting occupations. He now has a large stock farm, with good buildings, all erected by himself, and is one of the most enterprising business men of southwestern Wisconsin.

In 1867 Mr. Field was united in marriage with Miss Lizzie Hurley, daughter of John and Joanna (Driscoll) Hurley, who were natives of Ireland, married in Pennsylvania, and became early settlers of Wisconsin. Mr. Hurley engaged in farming and mining in Wisconsin until his death, leaving a widow and four children, all of whom are now deceased except Mrs. Field. Mrs. Lizzie (Hurley) Field was born in June, 1847, and grew to womanhood in Lafayette county, receiving a fair education, and in time becoming one of the successful teachers in the county. Eleven children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Field: (1) Edith, born in November, 1868, married James Martin, a farmer of Benton, Wis., and has six children, Mary, Regina, Catherine, Joseph, John and Edith C. (2) William J., born in May, 1870, now a farmer in New Diggings, married Eliza Hillary, and has four children, Florence, Catherine, Cheresa, and Lizzie. (3) Charles A., born Feb. 16, 1872, married Minnie Rodgers, of Fort Dodge, Iowa, and now resides in Des Moines, Iowa. They have two children, Florence E. and Elizabeth. (4) Edward was born March 14, 1876. (5) George, born March 13, 1878, resides in Fort Dodge, Iowa. (6) Annie, born in January, 1880, married William Newman, of New Diggings, and has one son, Mannuatus. (7) Zita, born in May, 1882, attends the home schools. (8) Nellie was born in December, 1883. (9) Lizzie, in October, 1885. (10) Gertrude, in September, 1887. (11) Joanna, in November, 1890.

While Mr. Field has always taken a keen interest in the affairs of the day, he has never aspired to office, having found that his own private business engrossed all his time and attention. He is very progressive, and ever ready to take hold and investigate improvements and developments, and owns the first separator threshing machine that came to this part of the State, the original cost of which was $2,500. For thirty years he has followed threshing over this section. He is the founder of the Co-operation Creamery at New Diggings, owning a large share of the stock. In religious belief he has allied himself to no denomination, but as his wife is a member of the Roman Catholic Church he has liberally contributed toward the support of same. The family are very popular socially, and their pleasant home is always open to give visitors a hearty welcome. They have paid great attention to music, and two of the daughters, Zita and Nellie, are fine musicians. The entire family are talented, and attract a most cultured circle of friends.

JOHN FREEMAN KEMMERER. A native of Rock county, Mr. Kemmerer has throughout life remained a resident thereof, employing his earlier years in farming, then engaging in business at Clinton, and since 1898 acting as traveling salesman for the Deering Harvester Co., of Chicago. Successful in whatever he has undertaken, he is a representative citizen of the State, active in affairs of public interest, and contributing by his force of character and clear principles to the welfare of the community in which he lives.

Mr. Kemmerer was born in Rock township, Rock county, Sept. 17, 1854, son of Samuel (deceased) and Elizabeth (Gish) Kemmerer, who were natives of Pennsylvania, both belonging to sturdy German families of the Keystone State. The paternal grandfather was a farmer and the maternal grandfather a miller; both died in Pennsylvania, well advanced in years. Both reared large families.

Early in their married life the parents of our subject resolved to found a home in the then distant West. In the fall of 1849 they came to Rock township, Rock county, and here Samuel Kemmerer purchased a tract of forty-four acres and began his successful business career in the Western home. He steadily added to his modest acres until he possessed and tilled a well-cultivated farm of 258 acres. In 1884 he retired from active life, moving to Janesville, where he ever after continued to reside. In politics he was a Republican, in religious faith an earnest Methodist, and he was always active in church work, in his younger days acting as steward, class-leader, etc. To Samuel and Elizabeth Kemmerer were born six children, four sons and two daughters, namely: Abram, of Redfield, S. Dak.; Charles W., of Janesville, whither he recently removed from Shopiere, Rock Co., Wis.; Blandena; John F., our subject; Lewis, of Janesville; and Ida, wife of W. Van Valen.

John F. Kemmerer was reared on the farm, receiving his education in the district schools. He began active life for himself by renting a farm, which he operated for four years, and then bought 183 acres of land in the townships of Turtle and La Prairie, later adding fifty acres to the tract. He lived there until 1891, when he removed with his family to Clinton, and there engaged in the stock and machinery business. In 1898 Mr. Kemmerer accepted a position as traveling salesman for the Deering Harvester Co., which he still holds.

On Sept. 12, 1877, Mr. Kemmerer married Miss Ella E. Smith, daughter of Artemus and Olivia P. (Pike) Smith, and to them have been born four children, George I., Ethel B., Forrest G., and Walter F. In 1898 George and Ethel graduated from the Clinton high school, and he is now attending the State University; Miss Ethel is teaching at Manchester, Ill. Mr. and Mrs. Kemmerer and family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which he has been steward for a number of years. Politically he is a Republican. Among the societies Mr. Kemmerer is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. He is held in high esteem, and his influence has ever been exerted in advancing measures for the general welfare.

Artemus Smith (deceased), father of Mrs. Ella E. Kemmerer, was born in Chester, Vt., April 11, 1818, son of Artemus Smith, Sr., a native of Massachusetts. Artemus Smith, Jr., was engaged in business in the East until 1854, when he came to Chicago and engaged in the manufacturing of bonnets. He sold out there and moved to Shopiere, Wis., where he was engaged in the coopering business. In 1863 he bought a farm of 100 acres located a short distance from Shopiere, to which he afterward moved. On Nov. 1, 1843, he was married to Olivia P. Pike (now deceased), daughter of Jonathan Pike; her grandfather on the mother's side was a brave soldier in the Revolution and in the war of 1812, and her grandfather on her father's side enlisted in the army of the Revolution when sixteen years old. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have had seven children, five of whom are still living.

J. W. JONES, deceased. Many of the successful and prominent farmer citizens of the great State of Wisconsin had their birth on the other side of the Atlantic ocean, and coming to this country took rank among the best citizens. Such was the case with our subject, the late J. W. Jones, than whom no more estimable citizen ever passed out of life in Lafayette county.

Mr. Jones was born in South Wales Feb. 10, 1822, coming to the United States in 1841; he made the long trip in a sailing-vessel. Landing in New York, he remained in that State for two years, and in 1844 joined the settlers who were then flocking to the fertile lands of Wisconsin. Selecting Elk Grove as a suitable place for settlement, he purchased eighty acres of land, and improving this, added more, and still later another tract, as his means permitted, until his estate now comprises 472 acres in one body, both of cultivated and wooded land, the larger portion being under cultivation. Remaining industriously employed on this place, he became one of the most substantial men of the township.

In 1853 Mr. Jones married Miss Catherine Webster, a daughter of Stephen and Anne (Holman) Webster, who were both born in Cornwall, England, where they married, coming to this country in 1848. The family settled in Potosi, in British Hollow, Grant Co., Wis., and remained there some years, later moving to Mineral Point, after which the parents lived retired. Of a family of eleven children, but three survive. Our subject's wife, Catherine, the youngest, was born in England Sept. 17, 1827, received a fair education in the common schools of her own land, and upon coming to America was engaged as a needlewoman, her accomplishment in this line making her services in great demand, and enabling her to live in comfort and independence.

After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Jones settled down to domestic life in a little log cabin which he had erected, and in which they continued to reside until the building of the present commodious and comfortable home, in 1876. For five years previous to his demise Mr. Jones was afflicted with blindness, which prevented him from attending to much business, but the capable woman who so bravely cared for herself when a stranger in a strange land came to his aid, in his age, and her assistance and management relieved him of many cares. Mr. Jones was a consistent member and cheerful supporter of the Swedenborgian Church, his influence in the community ever being in favor of religion and good citizenship. For many years he was a member of the town board, and held other offices in the gift of his townspeople. Politically he upheld the principles of the Democratic party. Children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Jones as follows: Harriet, born in 1855, was educated in the best schools, married Edward Curkeet, of Elk Grove, and has children—Lillian, John and Orville. Ruth, born in 1857, married Frank Bently, of Platteville, and has children—Francis, Robert, and Bayard. Bessie, born in 1860, married James Murphy, a leading lawyer of Platteville. John, born in 1862, was well educated, and is now the competent manager of his father's large estate. Katie was born in 1865. Frank W., born in 1868, graduated in the class of 1890 at the Platteville Normal School, and in 1891 entered Madison University as a geological student, graduating from that institution in 1898. Coming home, he was taken sick, and shortly after his brilliant young life ended. The community was saddened by this untimely end to a bright career.

EDWARD H. RYAN, A. B., LL. B., a member of the Rock County Bar, was born in Janesville April 3, 1852, of Irish descent.

Edward Ryan, his father, was a native of County Tipperary, Ireland, and his mother, Eliza O'Donnell, was born in Burlington, Vt., although her parents, too, came from Tipperary. His paternal grandfather, also named Edward, was a farmer in the Irish county whence some of the younger members of the family emigrated to seek a new home and better fortune in this country, and passed his life in the old country. He was twice married, and three children were born of the first marriage, and six of the second. Edward Ryan (2), the father of Edward H. Ryan, after coming to America spent seventeen years in the city of New York. He was industrious and economical, and in 1850 found himself in a position to seek a new home in the broader Western country, where the virgin soil and the unbroken forest yet awaited the plow of the farmer and the axe of the woodman. He settled in the town of Plymouth, Rock Co., Wis., on a farm of eighty acres, and, by careful management and judicious investment, gradually increased his holdings, until at the close of his life he was the owner of 800 acres and was regarded as one of the prosperous, substantial men of the community. He died in 1883, in his seventy-fourth year. His wife, Mrs. Eliza (O'Donnell) Ryan, was one of a family of two sons and four daughters born to Michael O'Donnell, of Tipperary, Ireland, who came thence to the United States by way of Canada. Crossing the border, he lived for a time in Vermont, and later in New York, going thence to Wisconsin in 1847. For a short time he lived in Janesville, but soon removed to Green county, where he engaged in farming, and owned a farm of 160 acres. He was noted for his integrity, no less than for his gentle disposition and equable temperament. He entered into rest after reaching an age seldom paralleled—one hundred and two years.

Edward H. Ryan was the first-born of a family of seven children, the others being Ellen E., James M., John F., Joseph A., William H., and Thomas Ambrose. Ellen E. is the wife of Daniel Ryan, of Janesville, of which city James M. and Joseph A. are also residents. John F. lives in Montana, and Thomas Ambrose resides upon the old homestead in Plymouth, where the father of the family settled more than half a century ago. William A. was a soldier in the 19th United States infantry, serving gallantly in Porto Rico during the Spanish war, and was mustered out at Camp Meade, Pennsylvania.

Edward H. Ryan was given a college education. His preparatory collegiate course was taken at Milton (Wis.) College, and in 1870 he entered the Freshman class of the State University, receiving his degree of A. B. in 1874. From March until September, 1875, he studied law with Hon. John Winans, of Janesville, and then matriculated at the law school of his Alma Mater, graduating with the degree of LL. B. in 1876. He was admitted to the Bar on June 18, of that year, and remained in Madison until March, 1877, as an assistant to Judge J. H. Carpenter. Going thence to Shreveport, La., he was admitted to practice in the courts of that State, but not finding his surroundings congenial he returned to Rock county, after six months. For the fourteen following years he was engaged in railroad construction, and for four years afterward he found satisfaction in the independent life of a farmer. Then coming to Janesville, he once more began the practice of his profession, in 1899 forming a partnership with J. L. Mahoney which continued two years. He is a life-long Democrat, and his religious creed is that of the Roman Catholic Church, in the profession and practice of which faith a long line of his ancestors have lived and died. He is a man of happy temperament, and of marked individuality. Possessing the genial humor and ready wit of his race, no less than its unselfish generosity, he has a strong personality, which enables him fearlessly to maintain the right and combat the wrong. Fraternally he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America.

Mr. Ryan married, in 1886, Susie C. Ingersoll, daughter of Charles L. and Susan Curry Ingersoll, of Vernon county, Wis., and they have had two children, Edward A., born March 19, 1887; and Genevieve I., born June 19, 1890. Mrs. Susie C. Ryan's paternal ancestors came to America in 1638. Six of her ancestors on the paternal side, and two on the maternal side, were in the Revolution. Her uncle, John Curry, is a Judge of the Supreme Court of California; her grand-uncle, Daniel Curry, was a noted Methodist divine, was at one time bishop, and also editor of the "Christian Advocate."

A. H. BARBER, M. D., an eminent physician and surgeon and honored resident of Lancaster, Grant county, was born in Fairfield, Vt., in 1843, a son of John J. Barber. Dr. Barber's father died a number of years ago, at the advanced age of eighty-eight years; his mother, who was born in 1819, is still living. The Doctor is the only son, and he has two sisters, namely: Mrs. Eleanor Durand, of Crookston, Minn.; and Mrs. Lucy Tomlinson, of Osage, Iowa.

Dr. Barber was brought to Grant county by his parents in 1845. His earlier education was acquired in the public schools, and at a private school in Lancaster, and for a year he was a student in Beloit College. He began the study of medicine with Dr. Hyde in 1866, and attended his first course of lectures at the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor. In 1870 he was graduated from the Long Island (N. Y.) College Hospital, and later took a course of instruction at the College of Physicians & Surgeons, beginning practice in Lancaster, where his ability was soon recognized, and where he has ever since been favored with a large and lucrative patronage.

To the marriage of the Doctor with Miss Lucy Holloway have been born two children, viz.: Elvira, wife of N. B. Bailey, cashier of the bank of Baldwin, Wis.; and Herbert, who died in infancy.

SILAS HILL, one of the early settlers of Darlington, Lafayette county, is also distinguished because of his valiant service during the Civil war. Mr. Hill was born in Salem township, Washington Co., Ohio, Feb. 4, 1825, a son of William and Elizabeth (Hill) Hill.

William Hill was a native of County Antrim, Ireland, and crossed the ocean to America when but ten years of age. His wife was a native of Maryland, and of English ancestry. Her father, James Hill, was a soldier under Washington from the commencement of the Revolution, was one of the company who made the perilous passage across the Delaware on the night before the battle of Trenton, and was present at the surrender of Cornwallis. The subject of this sketch was one of a family of twelve members, eleven of whom, seven sons and four daughters, reached maturity. The survivors are: Silas, our subject; Mrs. Eliza Huber, his twin sister, who resides in Shullsburg, Lafayette county; James, who is a resident of Sedalia, Mo.; Ruth, who resides at Mondovi, Wis.; and Mrs. Mary Wilson, a resident of Nebraska. Our subject had the great misfortune to lose his devoted mother when but thirteen years of age, and in 1845 his father also died.

In 1847 Silas Hill left his former home and came to Shullsburg, Wis., where he engaged in mining, and in 1850, with scores of miners from the local districts, he crossed the Plains to California, and applied his lead mining experience to gold mining, spending three years in that State. Mr. Hill returned to his home in Lafayette county three years later, arriving on April 1st. Previous to going to California he had married Mary Franklin, who died in 1854, leaving one son, William Hill, now a resident of Duluth, Minn. The second wife of Mr. Hill, Elizabeth Collier, died in 1873, leaving six children. Mr. Hill's present wife, formerly Miss Florence Ball, of Mineral Point, Wis., was born near there in 1854, one of the eight children of William and Maria Ball, both of whom are deceased. Her father was born in Cornwall, England, in 1812, coming to this country when twelve years old, and her mother was a native of Massachusetts, born in 1818. Mr. Ball located at Mineral Point, Wis., for some years, but in 1867 moved to Darlington, where Mrs. Hill was residing at the time of her marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Hill have one son, Clarence E., who was born Dec. 9, 1887. The younger son, Orville, died Feb. 4, 1897, after a brief illness, his demise being a lasting grief to his parents.

Mr. Hill enlisted in the Union army, on Aug. 21, 1862, and was mustered into the United States service at Racine, Wis., as a member of Company H, 33d Wis. V. I., under Col. J. B. Moore. This regiment had an honorable record, and took part in many of the most important engagements in which the Western Army was engaged. Soon after the siege of Vicksburg Mr. Hill was given a furlough to come home on account of sickness. He rejoined his regiment at Natchez, Miss., but his malady returned, and he was obliged to enter a regimental hospital at Jacksonville, Ark., rejoining his regiment again at Nashville, Tenn. He was honorably discharged Aug. 9, 1865. Mr. Hill has never recovered from the effects of his army service, and has been a great sufferer from rheumatism ever since. Always an honest and industrious man, he is a much respected and esteemed citizen of Darlington. Socially he is connected with Harvey Post, No. 35. G. A. R. Mr. Hill has for several years been successfully engaged in the culture of strawberries, for the market.

PROF. JOHN SIEBERT TAYLOR, one of the leading instructors in vocal and instrumental music in Janesville, Rock county, was born in Leechburg, Penn., Sept. 15, 1869, a son of John and Julia (Bair) Taylor, natives of Pennsylvania.

Matthew Taylor, the paternal grandfather of our subject, a native of England, was a merchant tailor by trade, and came to America, locating in Pennsylvania, near Leechburg, where he died at the age of ninety-five. He had a large family. The grandfather on the mother's side, John Bair, was a native of Pennsylvania, of German descent. The family he reared was a large one, and he died at eighty-four.

In his younger days John Taylor, father of Prof. Taylor, learned the trade of a tanner, which he followed for fifty years, but now lives retired from active business, at Leechburg, Penn. His wife died in 1882. He is a consistent member of the M. E. Church, as was also his wife. Seven children were born to this couple, five sons and two daughters: George B., of Birmingham, Ala.; Mary C., wife of J. H. Parks, of Leechburg, Penn.; Millard F., of Leechburg; Harriet, wife of S. M. McCracken, of Leechburg; Charles G., of Leechburg; William L., of Leechburg; and our subject.

Prof. John S. Taylor was reared in Leechburg, Penn., where he attended the public schools, and later took a course of instruction in the musical department at Oberlin (Ohio) College. In 1895 Prof. Taylor came to Janesville, and has taught vocal and instrumental music ever since, becoming very popular, his methods of instruction being such as to commend him as a teacher, while his pleasing personality gains him numerous friends. For the past five years Prof. Taylor has been the leader of the Y. M. C. A. band: is a member of the M. E. Church, and is an important factor in the musical circles of Janesville. In political matters Prof. Taylor is a Republican, and supports the principles of his party upon all occasions.

The musical studio of the Professor is located in the Court Street M. E. Church block. J. Siebert Taylor

Hess-Burr, of Chicago. He not only sings well himself, but his pupils show well placed voices and a good style.

WILLIAM WHITE, of Mount Hope, Grant county, is a well-known citizen and a veteran of the Civil war, having been a member of Company I, 20th Wis. V. I.

Mr. White is a native of the land of Burns, having been born in Corshill, Ayrshire, Scotland, in 1831, a son of Alexander and Jane (Walker) White. The former died when the subject of this sketch was about ten years of age. In 1852 the mother and her three sons immigrated to the United States, and their first home in the New World was in Bovina, Delaware Co., N. Y., where the mother died in 1865. All of this good woman's sons served their adopted country in the war for the preservation of the Union. Robert was a member of the 144th N. Y. V. I.; he now resides near Denver, Colo. Alexander, who was also a member of a New York regiment, still lives in Delaware county, New York.

William White served a three-years apprenticeship and one year as journeyman at the baker's trade. He came to Wisconsin in 1855, about three years after coming to America, having been given a glowing description of Grant county, Wis., by a Mr. Lewis, father of the well-known citizen of Lancaster, Wis., William Lewis. Deciding that it would be a good place in which to settle, he accordingly, accompanied by Alexander Sloan, turned his steps westward, traveling directly from the State of New York to Galena, Ill., and thence to Platteville, Wis. The young travelers reached Platteville by stage, but by that time their scanty hoard of money was exhausted, and as it was Saturday they asked to be kept over Sunday, continuing their journey to Lancaster, on foot on Monday. At this latter place William White bargained with the driver of the stage to take them to Patch Grove for a shotgun which he had brought with him from the East. In addition Mr. White received a dollar in currency, but it proved to be counterfeit, there being so much "wild cat" money in circulation at that time that it was difficult to distinguish genuine from false. Arriving at Patch Grove, Mr. White went directly to the home of John Lewis, a brother of William Lewis, with whom he remained for some time chopping wood for his board, until he had an opportunity to work for money. It was not long before a man named Moses Burns, who had learned Mr. White wanted work, came to John Lewis's, in Patch Grove, to hire him. Not having received any money, Mr. White was beginning to be destitute of clothes, and resolved to make an extra effort to buy a vest, which he very much needed, on credit. With this end in view he called on the merchant of the town, I. G. Wery, and stated his case, promising to pay as soon as he had earned the money. However, as he was a comparative stranger to the merchant, the latter refused. There happened to be present, at that time, a countryman of Mr. White's, Alexander Paul, who interceded for him, and promised to stand security for the young stranger. Just at this time the employment was very welcome, but after working two weeks Mr. White found it impossible to continue with his employer, and was therefore obliged to ask an extension from the merchant. However, he soon obtained another place, with a man named Jacob Snyder, with whom he remained two years. At the end of this time Mr. White had paid for his vest, purchased other necessary clothing, and saved one hundred dollars, which he applied toward the payment of a quarter section of land he and his friend Sloan had bought, each contributing one hundred dollars. Later Sloan wanted to sell his interest, but Mr. White had no money, although he was very anxious to get the land. At last he obtained the name of a man, George Pike, with whom he had become acquainted while working for Moses Burns, upon a note, which enabled him to get the land he desired.

After securing his land, the next thing was the building of a house, and again the money question confronted the ambitious young settler. However, to the sturdy pioneers who developed these Western States, difficulties were overcome with surprising energy. Not having the money to buy materials, Mr. White, with a friend, E. Y. Ousley, went to Crawford county, in the timber land, built a winter cabin, sawed the logs, and in the spring rafted them to Millville. One of their oxen died from the effect of a rattlesnake bite, the rattlers being very numerous in that country. From there Mr. White hauled his lumber to its destination, and erected his first residence, a building 16x24 feet. When it was finished, Mr. White began to feel that he was making some progress in the world.

At about this time occurred the most important event of Mr. White's life, his marriage to Miss Mary Moore, a native of Ohio, a daughter of William Moore, one of the pioneers of that State. The wedding trip of Mr. and Mrs. White was not one that would be recognized as a model one in these days. When the home was ready Mr. White journeyed in an ox-cart to the home of Mr. Moore, returning with his bride in the same manner. The happy life of the young couple was destined to be rudely broken upon. The war cloud burst, and among the early enlistments was that of Mr. White, who enrolled himself in Company I, 20th Wis. V. I., and took part in the various marches, campaigns and engagements in which his regiment participated, including the battle at Prairie Grove, in which the gallant Capt. McDermott, and the first lieutenant, Bintliff, were killed; siege of Vicksburg, from which the regiment went to Yazoo City, then to Port Hudson, and from there to New Orleans. From that city the regiment marched to Brownsville, on the Rio Grande, Texas, where they boarded a Gulf steamer, and encountered heavy storms during the sixteen days they were on the Gulf of Mexico, thence to the siege of Forts Morgan and Blakely, and finally to Mobile. At this latter city occurred an unfortunate event, in which Mr. White had a narrow escape. By accident, a large amount of ammunition exploded, and a large number of men were killed. Mr. White was near the place of explosion, in charge of a detail of men, but fortunately a piece of timber fell upon him in such a way as to protect him, without seriously injuring him. However, he was nearly unconscious when rescued, and has never fully recovered from the shock, one of his legs having since been shorter than the other as a result, and the halt in his walk is a constant reminder of his services to his country. A horse that was in his charge at the time was killed.

Returning home Mr. White, with the help of his good wife, commenced improving his home, and their efforts were attended with success. His first purchase was largely added to, until he became one of the largest and most successful farmers and stock raisers in his township, and he remained on the farm until 1900, when he sold out to his youngest son and built a fine residence in Mount Hope. Eight children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. White, three sons and five daughters: Jane, wife of Anthony Morton; William, a contractor and builder of Minneapolis, Minn.; Alexander, a carpenter and builder, a resident of Mount Hope; Ulysses, wife of Harly Handy; Jessie, wife of George Harrower; Edward; Mary, wife of William Decker; and Cora, wife of Otis Russell.

William White enjoys good physical health, considering his age and experience as a soldier. Politically he is a Republican, and has served as member of the town board for five years, and on the school board for fifteen or sixteen years. Socially he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the G. A. R. post at Mount Hope. Mr. White inherits from his Scottish ancestry a high sense of honor and integrity; his word is esteemed as good as his bond, and he enjoys the blessings that come from an active, honorable and industrious life.

THOMAS WALKER, one of the leading citizens of Preston, Grant county, is a veteran of the war of the Rebellion, and relates many entertaining and thrilling stories of the days when he was one of the "boys in blue." His birth occurred in Yorkshire, England, Sept. 28, 1825, and he is a son of James and Dorothy Walker. The good mother died when our subject was only seven years old, and his father passed away when he was sixteen, leaving three sons and two daughters, of whom only Thomas and Peter came to America. The other brother, James, and the two sisters, Mary and Dorothy, are now deceased.

Leaving Liverpool Feb. 25, 1849, the two brothers came to the New World via New Orleans, landing in that city after a stormy passage, in a sailing-vessel, of nine weeks. There they took passage for Galena, Ill., but this being the great cholera year, scarcely had the steamer left the harbor when fifty of the passengers were dead or dying. The captain of the boat suggested to Thomas and Peter Walker that they add a little alum to their drinking water, and take as a preventive a little brandy and red pepper. Whether this is an infallible remedy or not Mr. Walker cannot say, but he and his brother were among the few who escaped the scourge. From Galena, our subject traveled to a place near Benton, in Lafayette county, Wis., where he engaged in lead mining, but as he was a mason by trade he decided to return to Illinois, and located in Jo Daviess county, working in the summer at his trade, and in winter as a miner. Finally he was employed to purchase minerals, and was located near Shullsburg, Wis., for about a year, at what was known as Big Patch Furnace, at a higher salary than he had as yet received. However, in a year, Mr. Walker engaged in mining again, and then worked in the smelting works near Hazel Green for about one year. Having accumulated sufficient money, Mr. Walker about this time purchased a farm of 240 acres, about nine miles south of Muscoda, but a year later exchanged it for one in the town of Clifton, Grant county, where he has made many improvements, converting the property into a good farm. In addition to his property in Wisconsin, Mr. Walker possesses 160 acres in Sherman county, Kan., which he purchased while spending several years in that locality, making the trip in 1888. On account of broken health, as a result of his army experience, Mr. Walker has not been actively engaged in farming for a number of years.

On Feb. 1, 1864, Mr. Walker was enrolled a member of Company H, 7th Wis. V. I., which regiment formed a part of the famous Iron Brigade, and for a time after enlistment he was drilled in Camp Randall, Madison, Wis. As spring approached, the regiment was sent to Culpeper Court House, Va., and on May 4, 1864, entered upon the famous campaign of the Wilderness. Mr. Walker participated in all of the battles of that bloody campaign around Petersburg, including the battle for possession of the Weldon railroad. The regiment joined in the pursuit of Gen. Lee, and was at Appomattox, being mustered out of the service July 30, 1865. Although never wounded, seriously, Mr. Walker had a very curious experience during the battle of Petersburg. Four bullets struck the buckle of his cartridge belt, in rapid succession, but he was not injured, although any one of them would have meant certain death if he had not been protected by the buckle. Among his most valued possessions, to-day, may be seen this self-same buckle, dented and showing evidence of hard usage, but more precious than if encrusted with diamonds. At the battle of Hatcher's River Mr. Walker took cold, which resulted in rheumatism and catarrh, from which he has never recovered.

Mr. Walker married Miss Mary Ann Thomas, daughter of Thomas Thomas, Sr., of Wingville, one of Grant county's old and well-known farmers, now deceased. During his term of service in the army Mr. Walker's wife and children remained on the farm at Clifton, where he rejoined them at the close of the war. To Mr. and Mrs. Walker have been born ten children—James M., who lives in Dixon county, Neb.; Tanner, who lives in Wingville township; Ulysses, now residing on the home farm; Norvel and Benjamin, of Wingville; Stella, living in Liberty township; Alda, living in Wingville township; and Mary Ellen, May and Llewellyn, deceased.

Mr. Walker is a worthy member of Sam Montith Post, G. A. R., and enjoys the confidence of a wide circle of friends, by whom his many excellent traits of character are appreciated at their true value.

WILLIAM M. CURRY and his wife, who reside on Section 25, in the town of Lamont, are among the early settlers of that part of Lafayette county, having been there since 1853.

Mr. Curry was born in Adams county, Ohio, April 3, 1823, a son of Thomas and Mary (David) Curry, both natives of Pennsylvania, who came to Ohio by way of New York, and in Ohio passed the remainder of their lives. William M. Curry was the youngest of nine children, and is now the only survivor of the family; he is the only one who ever came to Wisconsin. Our subject attained manhood in his native State, under the parental roof, and was married May 28, 1844, to Sarah Close, who was born in Mifflin county, Penn., Jan. 16, 1824. After their marriage they moved to Maysville, Ky., where they lived two years, then returning to their old Ohio home, where they had their residence until coming to Wisconsin, in 1853. Mr. and Mrs. Curry made their home in the town of Lamont, on Section 26, where they lived until, in March, 1879, they moved to their present place, the old homestead coming into possession of their son Irving G. Curry, who is now living there.

The children of William M. Curry and his wife are as follows: (1) Henry C., who was born at Maysville, Ky., March 7, 1845, is now living in Dickinson county, Iowa. (2) Mary, the wife of D. C. Shockley, of the town of Lamont, was born in Ohio June 2, 1846. (3) Irving G. was born Dec. 1, 1848. (4) Caroline, born May 27, 1850, is the wife of William S. Armstrong, of O'Brien county, Iowa. All were born in Ohio with the exception of the eldest.

Mr. and Mrs. Curry are among the oldest settlers in Lafayette county, both in age and point of years of residence in the county. Their long and honorable career is known to all who are at all conversant with the affairs of the county, and they command universal respect. When they came into the county, almost a half century ago, the country was comparatively new; wild game abounded; the Indian had moved on, but deer, wild turkey, and many other beasts and birds long strange to the prairies and woods of Wisconsin were still abundant. Mr. Curry and his estimable wife brought little money with them, but by industry and good management they have acquired a fine property, and in the last years of their stay on earth are surrounded with the results of successful toil and careful management.

Mr. Curry, like all his father's family, was reared according to the teachings of the Methodist church; Mrs. Curry came from a family indoctrinated in the tenets of the Presbyterian faith, and since their marriage both affiliated with the followers of the great Wesley; they have always been active in Christian work. Mr. Curry has for years been associated with the Republican party, but has come to hold more and more strongly to the affirmations of the Prohibition movement, and is looking upon the liquor question as the foremost problem in American politics to-day. Both he and his wife are held in the highest esteem, and their children are upright and honorable people, highly respected by all who know them.

ASAHEL P. SMITH, a noted citizen of the town of Lamont, Lafayette county, was a soldier for the Union in the Civil war, and served as a member of Company E, 31st Wis. V. I.

Mr. Smith enlisted in August, 1862, and his military career is an integral part of the history of his company and regiment, from which he was absent only ten days in a three years' service, at which time he was in the hospital at Columbus, Ky., on account of sickness. Company E was composed chiefly of men from the four towns of Darlington, Fayette, Argyie and Wiota, and was noted as presenting to the service an exceptionally fine lot of robust and stalwart men. The regiment was organized at Prairie du Chien, was mustered into the service Oct. 9, 1862, was ordered to Columbus, Ky.; its first service was in guard and picket duty. It was assigned to the 6th Division, 16th Army Corps, and on July 3, 1864, in general orders, was transferred to the 3d Brigade, 1st Division, 20th Army Corps, in that command taking a leading part in the capture of Atlanta, and in the important events that attended the famous march across Georgia to Savannah. The regiment was in the battles at Averysboro, March 16, 1865, and at Bentonville, N. C., three days later, where it lost about sixty men, killed, wounded and missing. They were at Goldsboro, N. C., when Gen. Lee gave up and the war was ended. The regiment was then marched to Washington, where it was encamped for a time, was sent to Louisville, Ky., and there mustered out. Our subject returned to Wisconsin. The final discharge papers for the soldiers of this command were issued at Madison, Wis., July 8, 1865.

Mr. Smith was born at Tolland, Conn., Nov. 12, 1830. John P. and Anna (Darby) Smith, his parents, were also natives of Connecticut, and never left their native heath. Asahel P. Smith was one of a family of thirteen children, and three of the sons served in the war of the Rebellion, Asahel P. being the eldest of the gallant trio; the others were Milo D. and Joel L. Smith, who belonged to the 7th Conn. V. I., commanded by Col. Alfred Terry, who rose to high rank as a gallant soldier and dashing commander. Both our subject's brothers died in Confederate prisons, having been taken by the enemy while Butler was retreating from the James river, in 1864. One died in Charleston, S. C., and the other at Florence.

In 1854 Mr. Smith came from his Connecticut home and settled in the town of Lamont, which was then a part of the town of Fayette. In 1860 he was married to Miss Jane Tresner, a daughter of William and Sarah (Warner) Tresner. They were at one time Illinois people, but came into Lafayette county from Indiana, and settled in the town of Willow Springs. Peter Tresner, a brother of Mrs. Smith, served in the war with Mr. Smith, and died in 1867. Mrs. Smith was born in 1834, and is still hale and hearty. They have two sons, Milo and Luman, and one daughter, Hettie L.

Mr. Smith has lived on his present farm since 1860. It is one of the better farms of the county, and has on it a comfortable and inviting residence and ample farm buildings of every kind. Mr. Smith is a Republican in politics, and cast his first vote for President for the first Republican candidate, John C. Fremont.

STANLEY H. JOINER. This influential farmer of La Prairie township, Rock county, justice of the peace, and town clerk, is one of the oldest settlers of the county, and is justly regarded as one whose mind and heart are in sympathy with his fellow men, and whose counsel it is always safe to follow. If one were to inquire into the causes which give men personalities of especial usefulness, account would have to be taken, in this instance, of Mr. Joiner's ancestry. Both his grandfathers were soldiers of the war of 1812. His maternal great-grandfather, Lieut. Abraham Locke, was an officer in the Revolutionary war. The achievements of the family have made it possible to trace the lineage back to a remote period in history.

The Locke family is known in this country back to William Locke, a mariner of the County of Suffolk, Stepney Parish, one of the largest subdivisions of London, England. The earliest representative in America was Deacon William, who was born in December, 1628, and in 1634, when an orphan boy of six years, was brought to America in the ship "Planter," settling in Woburn, Mass. Stanley H. Joiner, our subject, has the coat of arms of the Locke family, which was probably granted to Sir William Locke for his exploit at Dunkerque, France, in tearing down the Pope's bull of excommunication against the King, a deed then hazardous as the storming of a castle, on account of the temporal power of the Pope and the loyalty of the masses to him. It is believed that Sir William Locke was the son of John Locke, who was sheriff of London in 1461. If so, the ancestry can be traced to Thomas Locke, of Merton Abbey, 1291.

The immediate paternal ancestors of our subject were Harvey R. Joiner, his father; and Erastus Joiner, his grandfather, a farmer of New York State, who reared a large family, and lived to a good old age. The immediate maternal ancestry is traced as follows: (I) Daniel Locke, a weaver, and Abigail, his wife; (II) Dr. Daniel and Mary Locke; (III) Lieut. Abraham and Hannah Locke, our subject's great-grandparents, Vermont farming people; (IV) Daniel Locke, his grandfather, a native of Vermont, and a farmer of New York State, who had a large family, and lived to a ripe old age; and (V) Mary (Locke) Joiner, our subject's mother.

Harvey R. Joiner, our subject's father, was born Jan. 25, 1815, in New York State, there married Mary Locke, and in 1855 came to Wisconsin, locating in Bradford township, Rock county, and ten years later moving to La Prairie township, where he bought a farm of 106 acres in Section 1. This he improved and operated until 1891, in which year he moved to Rockwell, Iowa. Six years later he became a resident of Lake City, Minn., where he died Jan. 15, 1899, aged nearly eighty-four years. His wife died in 1880, at the age of sixty-one years. Both were devout members of the M. E. Church. Of their four children two are now living: Stanley H.; and Adin E., of Lake City, Minnesota.

Stanley H. Joiner was born Dec. 30, 1838, in Essex county, N. Y., and there remained until seventeen years old, attending the common schools and the academy. In 1855 he came with his parents to Rock county, and from that time has been identified with the development and growth of Wisconsin. He taught one term of school after coming to Wisconsin. He lived with his parents on the farm in Bradford township for a number of years, and in 1861 purchased forty acres which he farmed until 1863, in which year he bought his present home place of eighty acres in La Prairie township, which he has brought to a high state of cultivation, and where he has lived ever since.

Mr. Joiner married March 12, 1861, in Bradford township, Miss Elizabeth C. Vandenburg, daughter of William G. and Mary Ann (Leavenworth) Vandenburg, and granddaughter of Gilbert Vandenburg, whose parents came to America from Holland. On her mother's side Mrs. Joiner traces her ancestry back to Thomas Leavenworth, who emigrated from England to New Haven, Conn., about 1624.

William G. and Mary Ann Vandenburg migrated to Rock county, Wis., in 1845, locating in the town of Bradford, where he died March 24, 1893, his wife surviving him only four days. To Mr. and Mrs. Vandenburg were born ten children, four sons and six daughters, of whom four are now living: Elizabeth C., wife of our subject; Rebecca Ann, wife of George Hanthorn, of Rock county; Adeliza V., wife of James A. Kipp, of Badger, S. Dak.; and David L., of Clear Lake, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Joiner have one daughter, Estelle M., who married Lewis McDaniels, and has two children, Dee Jay and Ella May.

Politically Mr. Joiner is a Prohibitionist. He is a prominent agriculturist, and an active member of the Patrons of Husbandry, Grange No. 79. He is town clerk, an office which with the exception of three years he has filled continuously since 1884, and since that year he has also served most of the time as justice of the peace. Mr. Joiner is secretary of the La Prairie Creamery Co., and in business, social and public affairs is recognized as one of the foremost citizens of his township.

JOHN OETTIKER. Among the old residents of Lafayette county the name of Oettiker was prominent fifty years ago, and the descendants of those estimable pioneers are among the best citizens of to-day. Our subject, as his name signifies, is of Swiss parentage, his parents, Jacob and Mary (Brightenstein) Oettiker, both having been born at Mannedorf, Switzerland, in 1801 and 1821, respectively. Both came to America when young.

Jacob Oettiker was a tailor by trade. He located in Pittsburg, Penn., where from 1832 to 1847 he worked diligently, applying himself at night with books in order to educate himself in the language of his adopted country. In 1839 he married Mary Brightenstein, and before leaving Pittsburg two children, Henry and John (our subject), were born to them. Henry is now one of the leading men in the hardware line in Platteville; James, another son, born later, is a leading physician of Platteville; Jacob is a stock farmer well known through this whole locality. In 1847 Mr. Oettiker started with his small family for Wisconsin, making the trip by boat down the Ohio river, but on account of the ice in the Mississippi river they were obliged to winter at Hannibal, Mo. In the spring they resumed their journey, and finally located near the old State capital, near old Belmont, now known as Leslie, at which place Mr. Oettiker entered 160 acres of land, entirely unimproved; later adding more by purchase until he possessed several hundred acres. There the two younger sons were born, the family home being there until 1893, when Mr. Oettiker moved to Platteville. Much of the superintendence of the farm was left to the very capable management of his wife, Mr. Oettiker working at his trade until 1889, in which year they celebrated their Golden Wedding. The death of Mr. Oettiker took place in 1900, when he was almost a centenarian. Throughout life he had been a man of remarkable vigor of both mind and body, and took a deep and intelligent interest in the leading issues of the day, the game of politics having for him a peculiar fascination. His friends were numerous, and held him in high respect. His aged widow is still living in Platteville.

Our subject was born at Pittsburg, Penn., Jan. 1, 1844, and received a district-school education. When the Civil war was declared he entered the 44th Wis. V. I., and gallantly served through the war. In 1867 he was married to Catherine Bartle, of Grant county, Wis., a daughter of Zeddick and Nancy (Armstrong) Bartle, both of whom were born in Ohio, where Mrs. Oettiker was born in 1848. Her parents moved to Ellenboro, Grant county, where her father died soon afterward. One of her brothers lives in Platteville, two in Dakota, and a sister in Wisconsin.

After marriage our subject settled on eighty acres of land near Leslie, on the Northwestern railroad, where he has erected excellent buildings, all modern in structure and finish, and in 1883 he built his present comfortable and attractive home. The surroundings proclaim the fact that he is a careful farmer, his buildings, stock, improvements and farm all bearing that stamp. Among his neighbors he is regarded as one of the most substantial of the stock raisers of the township, and his farm, now consisting of 280 acres, is one of the best cultivated. Mr. Oettiker also became the owner of the old homestead, but has disposed of it.

To Mr. and Mrs. Oettiker have been born five children: Elmer, born in 1870, married Mary Gormer, of Grant county, and resides on the old homestead; they have one daughter, Margie. Luella, born in 1872, married William Nodolf, and resides on his farm in Belmont. Bert was born in 1880. Lessie was born in 1884. Ethel, born in 1889, is deceased.

For some years our subject has been a member of the town board, and he is the most progressive member on the board of school directors. His politics are Democratic, and he has held local offices in the gift of his party for a number of years. Although not connected by membership with any denomination, his influence has ever been in favor of religion, and the family are church attendants. They are noted in Belmont as enterprising and energetic, and no better citizens can be found in Lafayette county than the Oettiker brothers, as they are familiarly known.

ROBERT POLLOCK, who may be found at No. 265 South Bluff street, Janesville, Rock county, has but recently retired from active farm life, and is just entering upon a period of well-deserved leisure. He has been an industrious farmer all his life, and has lived in Rock county since he was fourteen years of age. He is to be congratulated that, while he is still hale and hearty, he can pause from the grind of life and take his ease as long as he shall tarry here below.

Mr. Pollock was born in Ayrshire, Scotland, Aug. 21, 1838, and comes of a long line of wise and "canny" Scotchmen. His parents, Robert and Lillies (Hodge) Pollock, who were natives of Ayrshire, had a family of four children, two of whom are now living. The father, a farmer, came to the United States in 1852, locating in Rock township, Rock Co., Wis., where he bought a farm of eighty-eight acres, and died there the following year, aged seventy-one. His widow survived many years, and died in 1883, aged seventy-one. They were Presbyterians. He was a member of the home guards in Scotland, but saw no active service as a soldier. His father, Robert Pollock, was a farmer, and lived and died in Scotland; he had a large family. His father-in-law, John Hodge, who was born and reared in Scotland, died in that country when nearly eighty years of age. He, too, had a large family. His occupation was that of a farmer.

Robert Pollock, the subject of this article, was fourteen years old when his parents came to Rock county, and here he has continued to live. He was fairly well educated in Scotland before emigrating to this country, and after his father's death felt quite competent to undertake the work of the home farm, which he carried on for some eight years. The farm was then divided among the children, and young Robert bought more land in the town of La Prairie, beginning with an eighty-acre farm and increasing his real estate until at one time he was the owner of 400 acres. He now owns a half section of land, which is regarded equal to any in the State for agricultural purposes, as well as for beautiful location and appearance. In 1893 he moved into Janesville, and spent four years in the city, but he did not feel quite ready to cease farming, and accordingly went back to his country home. In April, 1900, he rented his farm and resumed his residence in Janesville, where he had bought a fine and commodious home in 1892. Mr. Pollock has always been a general farmer and stock raiser, and during the last few years of his stay on the farm gave much attention to horses, particularly draught stock, Clydesdales and Percherons. He imported some fine stock in 1889.

Mr. Pollock was married to Miss Mary Elizabeth Gower, a daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth (Young) Gower, June 3, 1859. They became the parents of nine children, Lilly, Rose E., Leuie, Albert, Agnes, Nora, Myrtie, William and Jennie. Agnes and Myrtie are the only ones now living. Lilly died when a child of three years. Rose E. married Oliver Grant, had one child, and is now deceased. Leuie died when thirty-two years old, unmarried. Albert died when an infant of one year. Agnes married W. B. Hodge, and lives on the home farm in La Prairie township; they have three children, Robert A., Mary and Bethel. Nora married John H. Wright, and had one daughter, Mildred Blanche. Myrtie married John H. Hugunin, and lives in La Prairie township; they have two children, Carrie May and Gladys Irene. William and Jennie died in infancy. Mr. Pollock is a Republican, has been supervisor a number of terms, and chairman of the town board one term.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Pollock, our subject's first wife, died in 1886, at the age of forty-two, and on Jan. 9, 1891, he married Mrs. Elizabeth Gower, the widow of D. E. Gower, and daughter of T. L. and Mary (Comstock) Hollister. No children have been born to this union. Mrs. Pollock had three sons by her former marriage, Bert L., Forest E., and George Wesley. Bert L. married Mary Cox, and has one child, Evelyn. Forest E. married Julia Marble, who bore him one child, and is now deceased. George Wesley is a farmer, and unmarried. Mr. and Mrs. Pollock are members of the Baptist Church.

WILLIAM ASA MAYHEW, postmaster at Clinton, Rock county, and one of the successful business men of that town, has had a residence in Wisconsin covering a period of nearly a third of a century. It began soon after the close of his honorable career in the army. His education, interrupted by his enlistment as a soldier in the Civil war, was completed the following year, and prepared him for his successful business life.

Mr. Mayhew was born on Point Peninsula, Jefferson Co., N. Y., Sept. 23, 1844, son of St. Valier and Calista M. (Wheelock) Mayhew, natives, respectively, of Vermont and New York, and grandson of William Mayhew, who was born on the Island of Martha's Vineyard, of French descent. He was a man of high educational attainments, followed farming as a vocation, and also engaged in surveying. He lived past his ninetieth birthday, and died at Terre Haute, Ind., at the residence of his eldest son. His family consisted of eight children, four sons and four daughters. The maternal grandfather of our subject, Asa Wheelock, was a native of New York State, of Scottish and Welsh extraction. He was a sea-faring man in early life, and later served in the war of 1812. He settled down to farming, and migrated from New York to Jo Daviess county, Ill., becoming a pioneer, and living there to a good old age. He left a large family.

St. Valier Mayhew, the father of our subject, was a farmer of Jefferson county, N. Y., and during the Civil war was an earnest supporter of the Union cause. One of his most pleasant recollections was the purchase of one of the series of ten government bonds which during the dark days of the Rebellion, when the government credit was low, had been sent to Watertown, N. Y., for sale. In 1868 he moved to a farm of 130 acres which he had purchased in Clinton township, Rock Co., Wis., two and a half miles east of the village of Clinton. Two years later he sold this property to his son, our subject, and returned to his old home in Jefferson county, N. Y., where he died in 1882, aged seventy-five years. His wife survived until Feb. 22, 1894, passing away at the advanced age of eighty-five years. Both were devout members of the Methodist Church. Of their six children, four sons and two daughters, two are now living: Albert V., of Watertown, N. Y.; and William A., our subject. The father was an earnest man, of deep religious and political convictions, highly respected by his many friends and neighbors, who occasionally elected him to some local township office.

William A. Mayhew, our subject, was reared on the old homestead in New York, and attended the neighboring schools. In 1862, before he had reached his eighteenth birthday, he enlisted in Company M, 10th N. Y. V. Artillery, serving until mustered out, July 7, 1865, a little over three years. Mr. Mayhew participated in the battles of Cold Harbor, Whitehouse Landing, the first attack upon Petersburg, and Burnside's "blow-up." He was with Sheridan at Cedar Creek, and was in the charge on the Howlett House battery before Richmond, just before the battle of Appomattox, besides engaging in numerous skirmishes. After his return from the army he entered Belleville Union Academy, in Jefferson county, N. Y., and was graduated in the class of 1867, one of his classmates being A. D. Shaw, who from 1899-1900 was Commander-in-Chief of the G. A. R.

In 1868 Mr. Mayhew came to Wisconsin with his father, and for eight years engaged in farming during the summer, and in teaching school during the winter months. In 1890 Mr. Mayhew embarked in the drug business in the village of Clinton, in the room now occupied by the postoffice, and continued to conduct the drug store successfully until his appointment, Feb. 23, 1898, as postmaster at Clinton. He entered upon the duties of the office April 1, 1898.

Mr. Mayhew married, Oct. 19, 1870, Miss Rissa M. Mayhew, a native of Jefferson county, N. Y., daughter of Thompson and Cornelia (Hardy) Mayhew, farming people of that county. Two of her brothers, Theodore D. and Edwin V., served in the war of the Rebellion, Edwin V. as first lieutenant of Company G, 94th N. Y. V. I. To William A. and Rissa M. Mayhew has come one son, William A., Jr., born Jan. 16, 1883.

John A. Mayhew

Politically Mr. Mayhew is a Republican. He has served six years on the county board of supervisors, and has frequently represented Clinton in the county and State conventions. In 1885 he was appointed committee-room attendant in the State Legislature. Fraternally he is a prominent Mason, a member of Morning Star Lodge, of Beloit, F. & A. M., Beloit Chapter, No. 6, R. A. M., and Beloit Commandery, No. 9, K. T. He is also a member of the I. O. O. F., Knights of the Globe, Modern Woodmen, Home Forum, Mystic Workers of the World, and Alexis Tallman Post, No. 70, G. A. R. Mr. Mayhew read commercial law in Belleville, and has practiced in the justice courts of Clinton, is a notary public, and does conveyancing. He is a progressive, active, influential citizen of Clinton, and popular among an acquaintanceship which extends throughout Rock county.

CHARLES E. STEHL was born in Prussia, Germany, March 29, 1833, and is a son of John and Otallie (Wachsmith) Stehl, who spent their entire lives in that country. He was given a good education in the German schools, and in 1853 came to New York on the sailing-vessel "Oregon," the same year going to Philadelphia to work at the trade of a shoemaker. This calling he followed until 1865, when he came West. Mr. Stehl and Miss Caroline P. Myers were married in 1857. Mrs. Stehl is the daughter of Jacob Myers, a native of Germany, where she was born in 1833, coming in 1848 with her parents to Philadelphia, where her father died in 1855. The mother came West, and died in 1892 in Grant county.

When the Civil war broke out Mr. Stehl responded to the first call for volunteers, and enlisted in the 27th Penn. V. I. He took part in the second battle of Bull Run, at that time serving in the Army of the Shenandoah. Mr. Stehl participated in a number of battles in the Army of the Potomac, under Gen. Pope. He served under Gens. Burnside and Hooker, and was in the battles of Antietam and Gettysburg and a number of others less important. Mr. Stehl re-enlisted at the expiration of his first term, becoming a member of the 12th Penn. Volunteer Cavalry. Under Gen. Crooks they fought the Rebel army of Early, and on July 4, 1864, they were driven out of Harper's Ferry. This corps was then attached to the army of Gen. Sheridan, and served under that distinguished cavalryman until the close of the war. Mr. Stehl was at the battle of Winchester, and at Cedar Creek fought Mosby's guerrillas during the closing months of the war, and came home with the consciousness of having done his duty. A brave and efficient soldier, he was promoted from the ranks to official standing before the close of the war.

Mr. Stehl returned to Philadelphia when the war was ended. In the summer of 1865 he came West, locating in Arthur, in the town of Lima, Grant county, where he worked at his trade until 1893. After coming to the village he purchased the home which he owns at the present time, and he has other real-estate holdings. The career of Mr. Stehl is an honorable one. Landing in New York, he had only fifty cents with which to begin business in a strange land. From that humble beginning he has become one of the prosperous and well-to-do men of Grant county. Mr. Stehl was elected justice of the peace in 1875, serving continuously until 1898, was assessor for ten years, and in 1890 was census enumerator in his district. In 1898 he received the appointment of notary public. He is oil inspector for the State in his district.

Mr. and Mrs. Stehl are the parents of six children, of whom four are living at the present time: (1) Caroline and (2) Frank were both born in Philadelphia, and died in Wisconsin while children. (3) Louisa, born in Philadelphia in 1858, was a student at the State Normal at Platteville, and taught for several years in Grant county. She married W. E. Brown, of Lyon county, Iowa, and is the mother of eight children, Frank, Charles, Ora, Katie, Minnie and Winny (twins), George and Luella. (4) Charles E., Jr., born in Philadelphia in 1860, is now an engineer in one of the mills in San Francisco, Cal. (5) Katie, born in Grant county in 1866, married John Scott, a resident of Des Moines, Iowa, and they have two children, Stella and Inez. (6) Minnie, born in Grant county in 1868, is the wife of Thomas Harsha. They reside in the city of Nora Springs, Iowa, and have two children, Harry and Elton.

In politics Mr. Stehl is a Republican, has been prominent in the affairs of the town, and has been a delegate to the county convention for twenty-four consecutive years. As might be expected, he belongs to W. T. Sherman Post, G. A. R., at Platteville, and for forty-six years has been a member of the I. O. O. F., of the local lodge of which order, instituted Jan. 5, 1874, in the town of Arthur, he is a charter member. Mr. Stehl was reared a Lutheran, but attends the Methodist Church in company with his wife. Mr. Stehl left two sisters in the old country, Dora and Mary, and is now the only living member of his family.

JOSEPH R. BIRD, for many years engaged in farming in New Diggings township, Lafayette county, is a native of Canada, born at St. Andrews, on the Ottawa river, in August, 1832.

Robert and Anna Bird, his parents, were both born in Cumberland, England, where they were married. They removed to Canada, and engaged in farming. Mrs. Bird died when Joseph R. was about six years old, and the family then moved into Hamilton, in Upper Canada, where the children grew to maturity, nine out of ten reaching mature years: Samuel, Thomas, William, Joseph R., Margaret (deceased wife of Thomas Jacques, of Canada), Elizabeth (deceased wife of Thomas Buchan, of Canada), Esther (deceased wife of Malcolm MacIntyre, of California), Mary (deceased wife of James Buchan, of Canada), Annie (deceased wife of John Vandyke, of Canada), and Sarah (wife of John Benner, who resides at Niagara Falls, on the Canadian side). Of these, Samuel and Thomas were born in England, the others in the New World.

Joseph R. Bird was trained to farm work in Canada, and attended the district schools near his home there. In 1852 he came to the United States, being the only member of his family to leave Canada, and settled in New Diggings township, Lafayette Co., Wis., engaging in mining, which he continued for a number of years. After his marriage, in 1860, he settled on a part of his father-in-law's farm, and devoted himself to farming. In 1869 he erected his present home, and later two large barns, and now has one of the most highly improved places in the township, all due to his thrift and industry.

In 1860 Mr. Bird married Miss Mary Robinson, daughter of Thomas and Annie (Lee) Robinson, born in England in April, 1838, and by this union has become the father of a large family of children, of whom two died in infancy: Thomas died in early manhood; Grant, born in May, 1864, died in 1897;

Esther, born in 1866, married John Thorn-dyke, and has three children, Ray, Birdie and Mary; William, born in August, 1870, a farmer on his father's homestead, married Miss Maggie White, and is a prominent worker in the K. of P. lodge at Benton; Annie L. was born in September, 1872; Joseph, in November, 1875; Ella G., in 1877; and Stella F., in 1880; the last named is now a student in Warren Academy, at Warren, Ill. The family are all members of the Primitive Methodist Church, of which Mr. Bird was one of the founders in this community. In politics he has always been identified with the Republican party, and has held a number of local offices, having been a member of the town and school boards. He has proven himself a good citizen, a capable officer, and a kind and loving husband and father.

Thomas and Annie (Lee) Robinson, parents of Mrs. Bird, were both born in the county of Cumberland, England, and coming to Wisconsin as early as 1844, settled in the village of New Diggings, where they lived some years, moving thence to a farm in that township, where they passed the rest of their lives. Mr. Robinson was a blacksmith by trade, and during his residence in the village followed same as a means of livelihood. His death occurred in August, 1888, and that of his wife on May 6, 1889. They were the parents of four children who lived to maturity: Ruth, who married Christopher Allen, of New Diggings; Isaac, who married Eliza Graham, and moved to Hampton, Iowa, where he died Oct. 29, 1886, leaving his wife with eight children, Luella, Thomas, George, William, Estella, Alice, Ruth and Isaac; Matthew, of South Dakota, who married Lizzie Robson, and has four children, Thomas, Willie, Etta, and Elmer; and Mary, who became Mrs. Bird, and is one of the most genial of companions, always ready in her womanly way to shed sunshine wherever she goes.

HENRY BAKER, a retired pioneer farmer residing in Lancaster, Grant county, but who settled in Iowa county in 1842, is a native of Cornwall, England, born in 1821, a son of Digory and Thomasin (Uglov) Baker, who were the parents of a numerous family of children.

In 1832 two members of the above named family, Thomas and Edmund, came to the United States, settling in Wayne county, Penn. In 1836 Thomas returned to England, coming back to America in 1837 with a wife and two of his brothers, John U. and Francis. In 1838 Edmund and John came West on a prospecting tour, or in search of cheap land, and traveled over a large extent of territory with a team and wagon, visiting, en route, several English families of their acquaintance. They passed the winter with the well-known pioneer, Moses Meeker, on the Blue river, in Iowa county, Wis., worked for him one season, and, being pleased with the country, purchased 320 acres of land in the township of Linden, Iowa county.

In 1842, a year after the death of the mother of the family in England, the father, with his son Henry and two daughters, Elizabeth and Joanna, came to America, and at once proceeded to Honesdale, Penn., where Thomas and Francis were still domiciled, arriving in the month of June. In October the entire family set out for Iowa county, Wis., with the exception of Francis, who remained behind until 1844, when he and his family joined the others in Iowa county. The eldest child of the family, William, died in England in 1825, at the age of twenty-two years. The father lived with his children in Wisconsin until 1847, when he passed away. One son, named Digory, did not leave England until 1850, when he came to Wisconsin. In 1863 he returned to England, staid two years, and then came again to America, remaining till 1874, when he returned to England; he died in 1875, unmarried. The brothers who remained in Wisconsin all secured good farms in the township of Linden, and became prominent and respected citizens, occupying their homesteads for a long series of years. But time has wrought its changes, and there now remain only Henry and his brother, John U., the latter a resident of Madison. Of the deceased members of the family, Mrs. Elizabeth Sampson died in 1863; Mrs. Joanna Pierce, in 1871; Digory, as stated above, in England; Edmund, in 1881; Thomas, in 1888; and Francis, in 1897.

Henry Baker on coming to Wisconsin, at the age of twenty-one years, at first hired out as a farm hand, and also was employed at times in mining, as were nearly all of the pioneers of his part of the State. In 1847 he purchased forty acres of land in Linden township, Iowa county, to which he added, as he waxed wealthier, until his homestead comprised 340 acres, which he still owns.

On Jan. 1, 1846, Henry Baker married, in Honesdale, Penn., Miss Martha Kirby, a native of Pennsylvania, and a daughter of John and Jerusha Kirby, with whom Mr. Baker became acquainted while on a visit to the Keystone State, but a short time before his marriage. To this union were born thirteen children, of whom three died in infancy and two after reaching mature years. The eight survivors are named Edmund, Joanna (Mrs. Philipps), William, Finley, Lincoln, Daniel, Annetta and Emma. The two last named still have their home with their father; all were born on the homestead in Iowa county.

In 1892 Mr. and Mrs. Baker sought in Lancaster the rest and quiet required by their advancing years, and their well-earned competence fully justified them in seeking the desired repose. In the meantime, however, they had resided, from 1882 to 1884, in Prairie du Chien, in order that Mr. Baker might avail himself of the benefit of the baths at that place. In Lancaster Mr. and Mrs. Baker enjoyed their beautiful home until her death. By a fall Mrs. Baker sustained a resulting paralytic shock, and she died after a prolonged illness, Jan. 6, 1900, in the faith of the Methodist Church, of which she and her husband had been members since early life. She was seventy-four years of age, was one of the most faithful of help-mates and one of the most affectionate of wives and mothers.

Henry Baker began life a poor boy, in a frontier country, but by energy, industry and good management has secured for himself a competency for his old age. It is true that his early educational advantages were but limited, yet he was blessed with retentive memory, and still more blessed with a loving mother, who had some knowledge of books, and who so instructed him that at the age of seven years he was able to read. His actual attendance at school did not exceed six months, but by travel, observation and self-instruction he acquired a fund of solid and useful information.

Mr. Baker has twice visited his native England since he came to the United States, first in 1863, and again in 1894. He has attended two world's fairs—the Centennial in 1876, at Philadelphia, Penn., and the Columbian Exposition, at Chicago, Ill., in 1893, and it may well be inferred that a man of his keen observation and intelligence profited to no little extent from these visits. A conservative estimate of the number of miles traveled by Mr. Baker might be made at 20,000 by water and 30,000 by land, and yet in all his journeyings he never met with a mishap or lost a dollar. He stands today among the substantial men of Wisconsin, and his simple word is as solid as a rock.

ANSON P. WATERMAN. Among the more prominent business men of Beloit, Rock county, men characterized by both business ability and personal probity, Mr. Waterman is conspicuous. His career as a business man has been highly successful, and his personal integrity is unswerving. Such is the affirmation not only of his warm friends, but the sober judgment of every student of the city of Beloit as portrayed in the lives of its leading citizens. He is assistant treasurer of Beloit College.

Mr. Waterman was born in South Ballston, N. Y., Jan. 13, 1819, son of David and Phœbe (Hollister) Waterman. They were the parents of nine children, of whom only one is now living, Anson P. The father, who was a farmer, died in Saratoga county, N. Y., when seventy-six years old. His wife survived a short time, and died in her seventy-sixth year. Both were Presbyterians. He was a captain of an artillery company in the war of 1812, and was stationed at Ogdensburg. He was a man of considerable prominence at home, held various local offices from time to time, and was clerk of the town for many years. His father, Asa Waterman, was a native of New York, coming from English ancestry, and followed a rural life. He died when a young man. He reared a family of six children. His father, who also bore the name of Asa Waterman, was a soldier, fought under Benedict Arnold at Stillwater, and helped to carry Arnold off the field when wounded. He was appointed lieutenant-colonel in June, 1778, his commission, signed by Gov. Clinton, being still in the possession of the family. The maternal grandfather of A. P. Waterman was a native of Connecticut, and a descendant of Col. John Hollister, of Glastonbury, Conn. He was a farmer, reared a large family, and died in middle life.

Anson P. Waterman grew to manhood in his native State. He spent his first twelve years on his father's farm, and then entered a country store as a clerk, where he was employed for five years, later clerking in a hardware store in Schenectady, N. Y., for four years. When he became a young man he went into business for himself, as proprietor of a hardware store in Phelps, Ontario Co., N. Y., and was there engaged for about twelve years. In 1851 the young merchant came West to Beloit and bought an interest in a hardware store. In 1854 he brought his family West, and Beloit has been his home to the present time, though he has had business investments in St. Louis for thirteen years or more. For some thirty years Mr. Waterman was a hardware merchant in the city, and altogether has had about fifty years' experience in that line.

Mr. Waterman and Miss Jane A. Hubbell, daughter of Andrew and Sally (Sears) Hubbell, were married Dec. 31, 1840. They have had four children, Arabella F., Annie R., Jennie S., and Clara, of whom the last named died at the age of six years. Arabella F. married Major B. D. Lee, a prominent lawyer of St. Louis, who died in the spring of 1897; they were the parents of two children, Edwin W. and Wayne. Annie R. married Charles E. Whitman, president of the Whitman Agricultural Implement Manufactory of St. Louis. Jennie S. married Carroll S. Gregory, a plumber in Beloit, and a graduate of Beloit College; they are the parents of two children, Margery and Gladys.

Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Waterman celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of their marriage Dec. 31, 1900, the children and grandchildren all being present. They are members of the Presbyterian Church, in which he has been an elder for sixty years. He was a member of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in 1847, and has filled the same position on several subsequent occasions. For forty-five years he has been connected with Beloit College, as trustee and member of the executive committee, and for seventeen years as treasurer and assistant treasurer. His election to numerous other positions of prominence testifies to the utmost confidence entertained in his trustworthiness, efficiency and energy. He is now serving his fortieth year as trustee of that marvel among corporations, the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., having been connected with the company in that capacity since its organization, in 1861; with one exception he is the oldest member of the board of trustees in point of service, and has witnessed the growth of the concern from an insignificant beginning to its present position of importance, unexcelled, and scarcely equalled, in the country. For years Mr. Waterman served as a trustee of the Wisconsin Insane Asylum, at Madison, until the reorganization of the charitable institutions of the State.

In political sentiment Mr. Waterman is a staunch Republican, but takes little interest in the workings of party machinery. He was mayor of Beloit from 1857 to 1859. The business career of Mr. Waterman has been remarkably creditable. It is said that for several years he had the only exclusive hardware store between Lake Michigan and the Mississippi river. His life has been very active, and his influence strongly pronounced on the side of religion, temperance and good government. He was educated in the public schools, but he has read and studied much all his life, and his ideas are based on sound information and accurate knowledge. He has a pleasant home at the corner of College avenue and Bushnell street.

WILLIAM DUTHIE, of the town of Bradford, Rock county, belongs to the older generation of farmers in this part of the State, and has won his present enviable position by hard work and wise economy. His industry has been unflagging through all his active life, and his character beyond question.

Mr. Duthie was born Jan. 8, 1831, in the parish of Garvock, Kincardineshire, Scotland, son of William and Mary (Christison) Duthie, who had a family of four children: Mary, William and Jessie (twins), and John. Our subject was nine years of age when he lost his father, and his mother died a year later. The father was also born in Kincardineshire, and the family was descended from Norman crusaders. The mother, Mary (Christison), was a daughter of Alexander Christison, who was a farmer in the same county.

William Duthie after his parents' death was cast upon a cold world, and early learned to make his own way among strangers. He had but little opportunity for schooling, though the love for learning did credit to his parentage. At fifteen he had saved enough to give himself half a year's attendance at a district school, and it may be imagined with what zeal the orphan lad applied himself to his studies. Then he resumed his work among the neighboring farmers, and at nineteen went to the city of Edinburgh. There he spent six years at various occupations, the principal one being a protracted service on the police force of the city. In October, 1856, Mr. Duthie came to this country, and settled in Wisconsin. He was two months in Madison, and then engaged with a Rock county farmer to help him at monthly wages. After spending several years at farm labor he rented land for several years. In 1863 Mr. Duthie had become sufficiently prosperous to warrant his purchase of a farm. He bought that year a quarter section near his present residence, and proved so successful in its cultivation that he soon bought more, and bought again until he had acquired 66½ acres in the town of Bradford.

Mr. Duthie and Miss Mary Robinson were married in 1858. She was the daughter of Peter and Elizabeth (Lamb) Robinson, of Stirlingshire, Scotland, farming people, who came to this country as early as 1850. Mr. and Mrs. Duthie are the parents of six children: William C., Elizabeth, James R., Annie M., Margaret J. and Edward. William C. married Miss Nellie Eldridge, daughter of George Eldridge, of Clinton, and they have one son, William Edward. James R. married Miss Belle Lyttle, a daughter of John Lyttle, of Janesville, Wis. Annie M. married John Casper, of Waterford, Wis., and is the mother of three children, Mary, Jud and Burr. Margaret J. married Charles Boynton, and lives at Emerald Grove, Wis.; they have one daughter, Katharine.

Mr. Duthie is independent both in politics and in religion. He has been a supervisor for seven years, and is highly respected by all who know him as an honorable and capable man.

E. RIEGE, a retired business man of Platteville, Grant county, was born in Hanover, Germany, Jan. 14, 1837, a son of Joachim and Helena Riege, who were natives of Germany, and died there when the subject of this biography was a boy. Joachim Riege, the father, was a soldier under Blucher in the German army, and took part against Napoleon at the battle of Waterloo, but lost his health and died comparatively young.

In the spring of 1856 Mr. Riege, of this sketch, landed in New York City, well prepared as a young business man, and for about a year was employed in a store as clerk; he then formed a partnership with his employer, a Mr. Hinners, in general merchandising, the co-partnership lasting about three years. In 1860 Mr. Riege came to Wisconsin, and in 1862 entered into mercantile trade in Platteville, was prosperous, and in 1885 was able to retire on a competency.

In 1862 Mr. Riege married Miss Katie Doscher, the amiable daughter of Nicholas and Annie Doscher, then prominent in Platteville, who were natives of Hanover, Germany. Mr. Doscher came here in 1851, and here he still resides, at the age of eighty-two years; he lost his wife in 1874. They had two children: Katie, Mrs. Riege; and Henry C., quite a prominent citizen of Platteville. To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Riege eleven children have been born: C. H., who for the last ten years has been engaged in the book, stationery and fine art business in Fresno, Cal., is a member of the Masonic order, and is a scholarly young business man. Lillian, the eldest daughter, born in 1869, was graduated from the State Normal School at Platteville, where she received a fine German classical education; was for five years a teacher of languages in the public schools of Wisconsin, and is now the wife of Judge R. B. McCoy, of the Monroe county court at Sparta; they have four sons, Malcolm, Bruce E., Robert R. and Harold Doscher. Henrietta, born in 1873, a young lady of scholarly attainments, is at present a member of the home circle; she also graduated from the State Normal, taught two years, and later was graduated from the St. Louis (Mo.) Training School for Nurses. Adolph, born in 1880, was educated at the Normal School, and graduated from the business college of Platteville. Clarence L., born in 1883, was advanced in the languages and music at the State Normal, and is now in the Conservatory of Music at Chicago. Benjamin, born in 1886, is also a student at the State Normal. Nellie E., born in 1888, attends the Platteville high school. Four children of the family died in childhood.

Mr. Riege and his wife and children are members of the German Presbyterian Church, in which they are foremost in the work of the congregation, and of which Mr. Riege is a trustee and a strong financial supporter. In politics he is a staunch Republican, and for six years has filled the office of town councilman.

Although Mr. Riege came to America a poor young man, he came, as has been stated, well prepared educationally for the transaction of mercantile business. He was saving in his early days, had a keen understanding of monetary affairs, was shrewd and judicious in the investment of his surplus funds, and, withal, rigidly honest and strictly attentive to his duties as an employee. As a merchant he was obliging and urbane, and seldom lost a patron after he had an opportunity of once dealing with him. The result is that he now owns a large amount of real estate in the city of Platteville, including several brick business blocks on the main streets, and has been a stockholder and director in the First National Bank since its organization, and also one of the directors of the Electric Light Co. of Platteville.

In 1898 Mr. and Mrs. Riege relieved the monotony of their retired life by visiting their son at Fresno, Cal., and there spent the winter, taking in many of the beautiful scenes and natural wonders of the Golden State, but were not sorry to return to the city where so many of their years had been spent, and which Mr. Riege had aided so greatly in developing, here to pass their declining days in the peace and comfort so well earned in their days of activity and vigor.

SAMUEL C. RANSOM. Wisconsin had many brave sons who valiantly fought for the preservation of the Union during the trying days of the Civil war, and among the number was this gentleman, who was a member of the famous 20th Regiment. He is a resident of Mt. Ida township, Grant county, and is identified with its agricultural interests.

Mr. Ransom was born in Chautauqua county, N. Y., Feb. 2, 1830, a son of Elisha and Hannah (Camp) Ransom, natives of New York and Connecticut, respectively. The mother died in Chautauqua county in January, 1855; the father survived her many years, and spent his last days in Grant county, Wis., where his death occurred in August, 1872. Samuel C. was their only son, and they had five daughters.

Samuel C. Ransom spent his boyhood and youth in the county of his nativity, early becoming familiar with every department of farm work, and for several years before coming West was engaged in lumbering. The year 1852 witnessed his arrival in Wisconsin, and, after spending four years in Sauk county, he came to Grant county, in December, 1856, locating in what is now Mt. Ida township, of which he has since been a resident, with the exception of two years passed in Nebraska.

In 1850 Mr. Ransom married Miss Elizabeth Ambler, a native of New Jersey, who came to Sauk county with her parents in 1851. They have six children, four sons and two daughters, as follows: Melinda, wife of Joseph Du Charne; Frank C.; Sidney E.; Edgar; Carrie, Mrs. Jacobs; and John J. They have also lost three children by death: Edith, Mrs. Marshall; Lettie, Mrs. Lowe; and Chauncey Henry, who died in infancy.

Mr. Ransom was successfully engaged in farming when the Civil war broke out, but he laid aside all personal interests to enter the service of his country, enlisting Aug. 12, 1862, in Company C, 20th Wis. V. I., the company being under command of Capt. McDermott, who fell at the battle of Prairie Grove, and was succeeded by Capt. Charles C. Stevens. Mr. Ransom took part in the battle of Prairie Grove, the siege of Vicksburg, and the engagements at Yazoo City, Atchafalaya, Fort Morgan, Franklin Creek and Spanish Fort, remaining with his regiment until mustered out, at Galveston, Texas, July 14, 1865. He received his discharge at Madison, this State.

On his return home Mr. Ransom resumed farming, which he has followed as a business when able to carry on arduous labor, his health having been greatly impaired by his army service. He has a pleasant home in Mt. Ida township, where he and his wife reside. He was a faithful soldier for the Union, and is now an honored member of Sam Monteith Post, G. A. R. Religiously he and his wife are both worthy and consistent members of the Baptist Church.

JAMES HUGHES is one of the prominent citizens of Glen Haven township, Grant county, and a veteran of the war of the Rebellion, in which he served in defense of the Union, proving his bravery beyond all dispute.

Mr. Hughes was born in Ireland April 8, 1828, son of Hugh and Agnes (Sey) Hughes, both born in Ireland, and of Welsh descent. Both Hugh Hughes and his wife lived and died in Ireland, our subject being the only one of the family to come to America, which he did in the year 1853, locating in Pennsylvania, where he resided for three years. In 1856 James Hughes removed to Cassville, Grant Co., Wis. In January, 1858, he moved to Beetown and commenced mining. In 1865 he bought some land in the woods in Glen Haven, on to which he moved the same year, opening up and improving a fine farm of over 160 acres.

In 1861, fired with patriotism, our subject enlisted in Company C, 2d Wis. V. I., for three years or during the war, and was mustered in at Madison, Wis., and consigned to the Army of the Potomac, participating in the first battle of Bull Run and the engagement at Gainesville. At the latter place our subject was wounded in the arm and taken prisoner, being exchanged eight days later, and was confined in hospital at Washington, D. C., for three months. From there Mr. Hughes was taken to a hospital at Philadelphia, whence he was honorably discharged Jan. 29, 1865, returning to Beetown. Several months later he re-enlisted, in the 2d Cavalry, and went to Prairie du Chien, Wis., but was not accepted.

In December, 1866, our subject was married to Miss Mary M. Showalter, a native of Pennsylvania, and one child was born to this union, Myrtle, who is now attending college at Stevens Point, Wisconsin.

Mr. Hughes is a member of the G. A. R. at Bloomington. In politics he is an ardent Republican, and he is one of the prominent and respected men of Grant county. The success that has attended his efforts is the just reward of his years of labor, and he can look back with satisfaction upon an honorable and well-spent life.

CHARLES HENRY MENZIE. If the locomotive engineers of the country are a picked body of men; this gentleman is a fine representative of the craft. Though over sixty years of age he is still alert and vigorous, and no steadier grasp than his is laid upon the throttle along the entire line of the Milwaukee road.

Mr. Menzie was born in Hobart, Delaware Co., N. Y., June 26, 1837, and is a son of Robert R. and Rebecca Ann (Thorpe) Menzie, whose sketch appears elsewhere. They came to Walworth county, Wis., in June, 1850, and made their home in this State as long as they lived.

Charles H. Menzie was only thirteen years of age when he accompanied his parents to Wisconsin on their removal from New York. He grew to manhood in Delavan, and finished his literary education in the public school of that thriving town. When a boy he worked at various occupations, and early had the ambition to get on in the world and be of some account. His school days over, he was employed on the Racine & Mississippi railroad, now the Racine & Southwestern division of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, and was engaged in that capacity two years. Then, the Civil war breaking out, Mr. Menzie enlisted as a member of Company D, 22d Wis. V. I., and was in the service two years, eight months and thirteen days as a non-commissioned officer. He was a loyal soldier, participated in some of the most noted struggles of the Middle West, and was wounded in the left leg at Overall Creek, Tenn., carrying the ball in his hip to the present day. He was also in the battles of Spring Hill, Brentwood Station, and many other contests, which were called skirmishes, but which in any lesser war would have been called battles. His wound was severe, and rendered his retirement from the service necessary. Returning home, Mr. Menzie resumed his work on the railroad, this time as a fireman, having previously been a brakeman. He fired four years, and in 1869 was promoted to engineer, which has been his vocation to the present time. Since 1881 he has been continuously in the passenger service of the railroad, and is regarded as one of the most trusty and capable men on the entire line.

Mr. Menzie and Miss Nancy Emeline Beebe, a daughter of William L. and Sallie (Tripp) Beebe, were married July 17, 1867. They have one adopted daughter, Alice, who is now the wife of Rufus Baker, of Freeport, Ill. Mr. and Mrs. Menzie are members of the Episcopal Church, and he is a Mason of high standing, belonging to Excelsior Lodge, No. 97, A. F. & A. M.; Freeport Chapter, No. 23, R. A. M.; Freeport Commandery, No. 7, K. T.; Freeport Consistory; Tripoli Temple, of the Mystic Shrine, Milwaukee, Wis.; and is well versed in the secret lore of the order. He is also a member of L. H. D. Crane Post, of the Grand Army of the Republic, at Beloit. Politically Mr. Menzie is a Democrat. He lives at No. 912 School street, where he built a fine home in 1897. Mrs. Menzie is a genial and accomplished lady, and is very prominent in social circles. She belongs to the Order of the Eastern Star, and was the first Worthy Matron of Beloit Chapter, No. 77; is a member of the Ladies' Relief Corps; the Daughters of the American Revolution; the Eminent Ladies; the Lee Parliamentary Club; and other social and intellectual movements, doing everything possible to uplift and advance humanity in general.

STEPHEN B. LEWIS is president of the Knitting Co. which bears his family name, and is one of Janesville's honored citizens. Both his father and grandfather were natives of Connecticut, of English stock, although he himself was born at Turtleville, Rock Co., Wis., on July 12, 1848. Abel F. Lewis, his grandfather, for many years commanded vessels engaged in the coasting trade. It was not his wish that his sons should follow this calling, however, and as they began to grow up he removed inland, taking up his residence at McGrawville, Cortland Co., N. Y. In 1842 he came to Wisconsin, settling at Turtle Creek, in Rock county, where he constructed a dam and erected a saw and grist mill, from which he furnished lumber and flour to all the surrounding country. At that time Janesville was in its infancy, and life was comparatively primitive in its simplicity, the farmers hauling grain and flour with ox-teams. Mr. Lewis was a man of considerable prominence, and an active worker in the Baptist Church, occasionally filling its pulpit in the absence of the regular preacher. He died in Rock county in 1864, from pneumonia, aged about sixty-one years. He was the father of three sons and one daughter.

Edward F. Lewis, son of Abel F., and the father of Stephen B., was born in Connecticut, before the migration of the family to New York, and was about eighteen years old when he accompanied his father to Wisconsin. About 1849 he removed to Columbia county, Wis., before it had been surveyed, and there opened a hotel, which he successfully conducted for several years, until he was elected sheriff. After filling that office for two years he opened a store. He was a man of substance and of influence, and during the Civil war filled the post of deputy post marshal. He was virtually the founder of the Lewis Knitting Co., although he began manufacturing in 1871 in a smaller way. Prior to the above date there were no machines adapted to knitting double-ribbed underwear, it being the custom to sew together strips made of as great width as the machines then in use could produce. In that year he invented the process (which now bears his name) of knitting double-ribbed garments entire. He first experimented with underwear for his own use, and from this small beginning sprang the present large business of the Lewis Knitting Co., of Janesville. His first factory was at Portage, and there he resided until his death, in 1885, at the age of sixty-two. He was a Baptist in faith, as was also his wife, Betsey Barrett. She was one of nine daughters of Stephen Barrett, a descendant of Col. Barrett, commander at Concord Bridge, where was fought the first battle of the Revolutionary war. Stephen Barrett was a woolen manufacturer, and moved from Concord, Mass., to New York, thence to Ohio, and in 1842 to Rock county, Wis., settling at Turtle Creek. He was a deacon in the Baptist Church, and a man held in high esteem by his neighbors. He passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. E. F. Lewis, in his eighty-fourth year. His widow died about two years later, at the home of Mrs. Lewis, and was buried beside her husband at Portage, Wis. To Edward F. Lewis and his wife were born seven sons, of whom only three are living, Stephen B., Franklin F., and William L. Their first-born, Judson A., was a sergeant in Company C, 23d Wis. V. I., during the war of the Rebellion, and was killed by a bullet through the forehead while charging the enemy's works before Vicksburg.

Stephen B. Lewis was reared a farmer's boy, although his educational advantages were of a far higher order than were usually enjoyed by Wisconsin country lads of his day. He was educated in the Normal school at Whitewater, being graduated therefrom in 1874, and for ten years was principal of the high school at Clinton. At the expiration of that period he abandoned the chair of a teacher for the more active life of a business man, he and his brother Franklin F. associating themselves with their father in the manufacture of knit goods. Upon their father's death, in 1885, the brothers succeeded to the control of the business, which they removed from Portage to Janesville, in 1887, the name of the firm having been changed from E. F. Lewis & Sons to Lewis Brothers, and later to the Lewis Knitting Co. Some eighty-six hands are employed in the factory, and the output of the concern finds a ready market in all the principal cities of the country. Mr. Lewis is a deacon in the Congregational Church, and a liberal supporter of the cause of evangelical religion. A man of keen perception and sound business sense, he is respected for his high moral principle, and beloved for his many amiable traits of heart. He is a Republican, but has always declined office.

Our subject was married July 10, 1877, to Elizabeth, a daughter of Samuel and Sarah (White) Church, and they have one son, Rollin C., born Aug. 29, 1884.

STEPHEN JOHNSON, whose history is long and intimately associated with that of Grant county, was born near Appleby, in the County of Westmoreland, England, Feb. 14, 1821, a son of John and Lucy (Hall) Johnson, both also natives of the County of Westmoreland. In April, 1830, they sailed from Liverpool on a sailing-vessel bound for the city of New York, and were eight weeks on the Atlantic. They came West from New York by way of the canal, over the Buffalo route, to Pittsburg, where Mr. Johnson was engaged in farming for five years. In 1835 he moved his family to Madison county, Mo., where he died soon after entering the State; his wife's death occurred two days before his own. They left a family of seven children, of whom (1) William, the eldest, was born and reared in England, where he married. He settled in Madison county, where he died in 1840. (2) Thomas, born in England, grew up, married, and died in Missouri. (3) John, born in England, lived for a time in Platteville, Grant county, and in 1864 went to California, where he followed farming until his death, in 1895. His family still live in that State. (4) Joseph, born in England, married and settled in Missouri, where he was killed by Quantrell's guerrillas during the Civil war. Children of his are still living in that State. (5) Jane was born in England, and remained in Pittsburg, where she married Thomas Hodgeson. They settled in Washington county, Penn., where she died in 1890, leaving one daughter, Emma. (6) Stephen is the youngest of the family.

Stephen Johnson attended school in England, in Pennsylvania, and also in Platteville in 1842 and 1843, coming to Grant county in 1837, and working in the lead mines of this region some twenty years. In 1850 he married Miss Mary J. Neeley, of Platteville, daughter of John and Martha Neeley, who came West from Mercer county, Penn. Mrs. Johnson was born in 1834. After their marriage Mr. Johnson and his wife settled near Platteville, and remained in that place until 1855, when they moved to his farm in Millville. That year he bought a second farm in Ellenboro, which has been his home to the present time. In 1864 he enlisted, in Company B, 43d Wis. V. I., and was in the Army of the Cumberland. They were stationed at Johnsonville, Tenn., for a time, and engaged in the battle at that place. They were part of the forces gathered to oppose Hood at Nashville, and the entire march to Clarksville, Tenn., was a constant skirmish. The 43d was mustered out at Nashville June 24, 1865.

Mr. Johnson came back to Wisconsin, and at once resumed with eagerness the rounds of peaceful industry. He built a new house on the farm, and put the place in fine order. Mrs. Johnson died in November, 1868, leaving behind precious memories of a good and true-hearted woman. She was the mother of these children: (1) John N., born in Platteville in February, 1852, married in Kansas, where he is living on a farm in Jewell county with his four children, Lee, Stella, Elmer and Nettie. (2) William B., born Oct. 24, 1853, moved to Kansas while he was still a young man, married there, and is living at the present time in Red Cloud, Neb. He has two children by his first wife, Walter and Frank. By his second wife he has four children. (3) Nettie, born in the present home in February, 1858, is now the wife of Alvin Hall, near Platteville, and has one son, Stephen O.

On July 4, 1869, Mr. Johnson married for his second wife Miss Priscilla N. Hayward, of Potosi, daughter of Elisha T. and Elizabeth (Warfield) Hayward, who were born and reared in Boston. In 1834 they came West to Dubuque, Iowa, and the next year moved to Potosi, Wis., where Mrs. Johnson was born in April, 1835. Her grandfather Warfield was in the Black Hawk war. Mrs. Johnson was educated in Grant county, where she was engaged as a teacher. A lady of culture and refinement, she shows the influence of her New England ancestry. Her father, Elisha T. Hayward, was a prominent man in Grant county, and served as judge on the Bench one term. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have had three children, all still under the parental roof: (1) George Grant, born in 1870, was educated in the home schools. (2) Virgil F. was born in 1876. (3) Maggie V., born in 1880, has had a good education.

Mr. Johnson is a Republican, and has been justice of the peace twelve years, also filling other local positions. He and his wife are members of the Primitive Church, where he has been superintendent of the Sunday-school a number of years. Mr. Johnson belongs to Sherman Post, of Platteville, the local post of the Grand Army of the Republic. He is a genial and sympathetic character, and is willing always to do what is right and honest, and his kindly nature has endeared him to a host of friends.

HORACE H. STREETER is one of the heroes of the war of the Rebellion, and deserving of special mention in the annals of his county, State and Nation, for the active part he has played as a patriotic citizen. He is a native of the Empire State, born near Sacket's Harbor, in 1837, a son of Horace and Rebecca Streeter. During his childhood the family removed from the place of his birth to Erie county, Penn., where the mother died the father's death occurred previously, in the State of New York. In their family were five children, three of whom are living at the present writing: Horace H., of this review; and Mrs. Roxy Cushman and Norman S., both residents of Rewey, Iowa county, Wisconsin.

Horace H. Streeter came to this State company with his sisters, Mrs. Laura Taj (now deceased) and Mrs. Roxy Cushman, and later they were joined by their brother, Norman S. On his arrival in Wisconsin Horace was a lad of eighteen years, and in Iowa county he grew to manhood. In 1857 he was united in marriage to Martha E. Moore, who was born in Iowa county in 1841, her father, David Moore, being a well-known pioneer of the county, and a veteran of the famous Black Hawk war of 1832. He was a native of New York State, while his wife, America Parry, was a native of Kentucky. Mr. and Mrs. Streeter are the parents of fifteen children.

namely: Norman C., Nania R., Horace D., Laura E., Siernman S., Eugene F., Orville O., Myrtle J., Carl B., Arthur G., Ivy M., Ervin E. and Harry H., still living; and Martha E. and Harvey H., both deceased.

Prompted by a spirit of patriotism, Mr. Streeter enlisted Aug. 13, 1862, in Company E, 30th Wis., V. I., which regiment was considerably divided during its service, and was engaged very largely in detached duty. It was mustered into the United States service at Camp Randall, Madison, Wis., and, after performing various duties, at different places, was finally ordered to St. Louis, Mo. From Benton Barracks, in that city, it went to Cairo, Ill., where the command was long on duty. Mr. Streeter was honorably discharged at Louisville, Ky., July 29, 1865, for disability.

Since the war Mr. Streeter has been variously employed, and since 1871 has been a resident of Mt. Ida township, Grant county, where he has a pleasant home. In his political relations he is a Republican, and is a warm advocate of the main principles of that great political organization. Mr. Streeter possesses much influence in the local councils of his party, and has most creditably filled the office of town clerk for seventeen years. Fraternally he is an honored member of Sam Monteith Post, No. 73, G. A. R., of Fennimore, and religiously both he and his wife are worthy members of the United Brethren Church.

ALVIN S. COOK is one of the old Union veterans to whom the citizens of Grant county delight to do honor, alike for his patriotic services throughout the war of the Rebellion and for his moral and intellectual worth as a man. He was born in Erie county, N. Y., in 1838, one of the seven children of Orson and Resina (Alby) Cook, who came from the Empire State to the (then) Territory of Wisconsin in 1845. Two years later the father died.

Alvin S. Cook grew up in Grant county, which has been his home for fifty-five years, and both for his own and his parents' sake he is held in high regard. It was there that he married Miss Emily Jane Nixon, and there, too, their nine children—four sons and five daughters—were born, as follows: Emma, July 14, 1864 (died April 14, 1871); Olive M., June 22, 1867; George J., Nov. 1, 1869 (died Feb. 15, 1895); Claria F., July 26, 1872; Nettie M., Oct. 26, 1874; Elmer P.,

June 3, 1878; Alta R., June 15, 1881; Henry A., Aug. 26, 1883; Melvin T., May 11, 1885.

Our subject was scarcely more than twenty-one years of age when the harbor of Charleston, S. C., reverberated with the echoes of the first shot fired upon the American flag by Rebel hands, and it stirred his patriotic soul to its very depths. He and his brother Orson enlisted in Company C, 2d Wisconsin Cavalry, the brother losing his life in the service. After a year spent at the front Alvin S. was sent home on a "sick furlough," as there appeared to be danger of his constitution giving way, and not long afterward he received an honorable discharge. But, with restored health, he once more resolved to do battle in his country's cause, and re-enlisted, this time in the 1st Wisconsin Cavalry. He remained in active service until the close of the war, participating in all the sieges, skirmishes and battles in which that justly famed body of troops took part, and aiding in the capture of Jefferson Davis as that redoubtable chief conspirator was about to flee. At Burnt Hickory, Ga., his horse was shot under him, and, falling upon its rider, inflicted upon him injuries of so serious a nature that he has never fully recovered from them. As years pass over the head of this grizzled veteran of many a hard-fought field he remembers his devotion to his country in her hour of need with pleasure and pardonable pride; though as age brings more and more forcibly to mind the privations and sufferings which he underwent, his broken health and weakened frame, he heaves no sigh of regret, and utters no word of complaint. Mr. Cook is a Republican in political faith. His religious connection is with the Church of God.

JAMES W. CLEMENTS, a retired farmer of the town of Ellenboro, Grant county, whose career through life has been singularly clean and creditable in every way, was born in Herkimer county, N. Y., April 24, 1831, a son of Cornelius and Jenette (Haight) Clements, both natives of the same county. After their marriage Cornelius Clements and his wife settled in Chautauqua county, N. Y., where he followed the trade of a carpenter, and also engaged in farming, on his own land, until his death, in 1868. He left his wife, who survived him two years, and three children. She came to Illinois, and passed her last days with her daughter. (1) Sallie, her eldest daughter, was born and reared in New York, where she married Morgan Wilbur. They moved to McHenry county, Ill., where Mr. Wilbur engaged in farming, and there Mrs. Wilbur died, leaving one son, Charles, now a resident of Chicago. (2) Nancy, born in Herkimer county, N. Y., died when a young lady, at the old homestead in Chautauqua county. (3) Emelyne died in childhood. (4) James W. is the fourth member of this family. (5) Edward, born in New York, married Miss Sarah Hopkins, a lady of that State, and they now reside in Michigan, where he is engaged in agriculture. They have one daughter, Emma. (6) Emily, twin of Edward, married Joseph Gibbs.

James W. Clements passed his childhood at home, working on the farm, and attending the district schools until he reached his maturity. In February, 1853, he married, in New York, Amanda Francis, who was born in Genesee county, N. Y., in June, 1837, daughter of Amos and Isabelle Francis, old and prominent residents of that county. Amos Francis was born in Connecticut, and his wife, Isabelle (Doud), in Vermont. They lived for a time in Genesee county, and then moved to Chautauqua county, where Mr. Francis was a farmer up to the time of his death in 1853. Mrs. Francis died in 1851. Mrs. Clements is one of fourteen children, and was reared in New York. She and her husband were living on a farm in Chautauqua county at the outbreak of the Civil war. Mr. Clements enlisted in Company E., 154th N. Y. V. I., which was a part of the 11th Army Corps, Army of the Potomac. Gen. Hooker was their first commander. Mr. Clements was in the battle of Chancellorsville, where he was taken prisoner and held at Belle Isle by the Rebels for fourteen days, being then released on parole. This gave him an opportunity to make a brief visit to his family, and when his parole was cancelled his regiment was at Bridgeport, Tenn., where he joined it, and served until the close of the war. The regiment was sent West once, becoming a part of the 20th Army Corps, and then joined Sherman's army and took part in the march through the South up to Washington, where it was in the grand review, and finally mustered out.

During our subject's service in the army Mrs. Clements was left at home with three small children, and Mr. Clements made haste to rejoin his family. In New York he worked at farming and carpentering until his removal to Wisconsin. Here he purchased a farm from Samuel Francis, in the town of Ellenboro, and there made a permanent home. Substantial improvements were made, and the place became very neat and attractive. In 1897 Mr. Clements erected a home, furnished with all modern improvements possible in its location, and finished in hardwood; it is one of the elegant homes of the town. Mr. Clements owns a quarter section of fine farming land in Ellenboro, and for the past few years, on account of his health, has put his son Neil in active charge of his farming interests.

To Mr. and Mrs. Clements have been born five children: (1) Ella J. was born in Chautauqua county in 1855, where she obtained a good education, and was a teacher in her native State. She is now the wife of Albert Miner and resides at Chautauqua, where she is rearing two daughters, May and Hattie. (2) Hattie, born in New York in 1857, was well educated, and taught in the public school prior to her marriage with Theodore Sage of Chautauqua. They have two daughters, Olive (Mrs. Walter Dudley) and Amy. (3) Alma, born in New York in 1859, married Ab Fuller, and is now deceased. (4) Lida, born in New York in 1866, was educated in her native State and in Wisconsin, married Harry Russell, and has four children, James C., Roswell, Eva and Ella. They reside in the town of Harrison, Grant county. (5) Neil, born in New York in 1877, grew up in Grant county, remains at home, and has charge of the farm. In 1899 he married Miss Minnie Baker, of the town of Harrison, and they make their home with his parents.

In politics Mr. Clements is a Republican but has never sought an office. He and his family attend the Methodist Church, and especially he is a member of Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R., at Platteville.

ALLEN F. PHILLIPS lives in Janesville, Rock county, and has a beautiful and commodious residence at No. 227 South Main street. He has been a resident of the city some eighteen years, and in that time has commanded wide recognition as a capable and honorable business man and an upright citizen whose word is as good as his bond.

Mr. Phillips was born in Woodstock, Conn., Aug. 18, 1835, and his parents, Addison and Mary (Waldo) Phillips, were both natives of that State. They had two children: Allen F., our subject; and a daughter, Anna, who died when about twelve years old. The father in early life was a farmer, but in his later years was a merchant in the city of New York. In 1837, in company with his wife and son, he came West to Rockford, Ill., and there took up a half section of government land. In March, 1839, he accidentally shot himself, while going to the timber for a load of rails. His wife lived till the fall of 1898, dying at the advanced age of eighty-six. She was a Congregationalist, and a lady of many marked excellencies of mind and heart. Wheeler Phillips, paternal grandfather of the subject of this article, was born in Connecticut, and came of English stock. He was a prominent man in his day, being town clerk for many years, and long time judge of probate. He died on his farm in the village of West Woodstock, about seven miles from Gen. Putnam's wolf den, at the age of eighty-three. He was twice married, and had four sons, three by his first and one by his second wife. Francis Waldo, the father of Mary Waldo, was also a native of Connecticut, and of English descent. He was a farmer, and lived to celebrate his seventy-second birthday. He was the father of five children.

Allen F. Phillips was not quite four years old when his father's death occurred. The widow and her children were received into the home of her husband's father, and there Allen lived until the outbreak of the Civil war called him to the front in 1861. He enlisted in the fall of that year in Company A, 1st Connecticut Cavalry, and did gallant service in the cause of the Union for three years, his regiment being attached to the Army of the Potomac. He led a stirring life, and passed through many hot engagements, being under the command of Schenck, Milroy, Sigel, Pope, and Burnside. After the battle of Falmouth he returned to Stafford Court House, where the regiment lay encamped for a number of weeks, and was then ordered to report to Gen. Schenck, at Baltimore. Mr. Phillips was detailed for special duty in that city, and was there when the battle of Antietam was fought. With forty men he conducted five thousand Rebel prisoners through the city to Fort McHenry. Mr. Phillips at that time was second lieutenant. A day or two later his troops were ordered to Harper's Ferry, and were the first to cross on the new pontoon bridge, that they might help protect the Capital against the advance of Gen. Lee. Of the forty-nine men he led across twenty-four were afterward captured, among them Major Charles Farnsworth, who never returned, but died in Charleston, S. C., while a prisoner. This was about July 5, and the regiment lay at Harper's Ferry until the following January or February, mainly engaged in picket duty. Our subject was in the battle of McDowell under Gen. Milroy, and immediately afterward joined Gen. Fremont in his campaign for the expulsion of Gen. Jackson from the Shenandoah valley. In the second battle of Bull Run he was under the command of Gen. Pope. He was in many of the most important struggles and bloodiest combats of the war, and to-day he marvels at his escape unscathed. He bore a soldier's part in the battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Ashland, Kearneysville, Cedar Creek, in front of Richmond, in the Shenandoah Valley, and at Winchester, and was in an almost continuous state of action during all of his three years' service. He entered the army as a private, was promoted to second lieutenant, and made a record of which any man might well be proud.

After his discharge from the government service Mr. Phillips went to New York City, and engaged in the flour and feed business, which he followed until 1872. That year he sold out, and coming West located in Rockford, Ill., where he spent the next ten years. In 1882 he removed his business to Janesville, in which city he has made his home since that time. From the time he came West he has bought and sold stock, and in the pursuit of that calling he has made a host of friends.

Mr. Phillips was married to Miss Emma Childs, a daughter of Elias and Nancy (Perrin) Childs, Nov. 13, 1861. Mrs. Phillips is a lady of character and intelligence much above the ordinary, possessing those qualities of mind and heart that command and retain warm friendship, and has ably assisted her husband in his life labors. She is the mother of two children, Herbert A. and Myrtis A. Herbert has charge of the sheep and lamb department of the Hammond Packing Co., at Hammond, Ind.; Myrtis married John Soulman, and lives in Janesville, he being engaged in the wholesale tobacco business; they have three children, Ralph, Ruth and Helen. Mrs. Phillips belongs to the Congregational Church. He is a Republican.

CHARLES WARING, one of the representative citizens of the village of Livingston, Grant county, is of foreign birth, but his duties of citizenship have ever been performed with a loyalty equal to that of any native son of America, and when the nation was imperiled by rebellion he went to the defense of the Union, and protected the cause of his adopted country on many a Southern battlefield. He enlisted in December, 1864, in Company I, 47th Wis. V. I., and was mustered into the United States service at Camp Randall, Madison, on the 21st of January, following. The history of his regiment is too well known, and its honorable record too familiar to those versed in the history of the war between the States, to require special mention in this sketch. Suffice it to say that Mr. Waring faithfully discharged all the duties that devolved upon him, and during all the time that he was in the service lost but one day, and then from illness, returning to his command the following day, against the advice of the physician in charge. After hostilities ceased he was honorably discharged, Sept. 4, 1865.

Mr. Waring was born in Derbyshire, England, July 24, 1835, a son of John and Alice (Andrew) Waring, natives of the same country, the former born Aug. 2, 1812, the latter Oct. 13, 1815. They never came to America, but spent their entire lives in England, where the mother passed away Dec. 17, 1857. The father married again, and survived until 1896, dying at the age of eighty-five years. No children were born of the second union. There were five by the first, four sons and one daughter, but only Charles and John are now living, the latter a resident of Manchester, England. It is interesting to note in this connection that the above dates were taken from an old family Bible sent to Mr. Waring by his father a few years before the latter's death. The title page of this ancient book states that it was instituted in London in 1804.

At the age of fourteen years Charles Waring came to the United States, with an uncle by marriage, and it may be stated here that he worked a year to pay his passage, his parents being too poor to send him, and landed in America without a cent in his pocket. Arriving in Grant county, Wis., Nov. 16, 1850 he has since made his home in Clifton township, and has been absent from the township no length of time but twice—the time spent in the army and a sojourn of about six months in the Rocky Mountains. Yielding to a desire to once more see his aged father and visit the scenes of his early boyhood, Mr. Waring visited the land of his birth in 1895, and about a year later his father passed away. In his earlier days in Grant county he was engaged in mining, later in farming, and for twelve years conducted a hotel which he owned in Livingston.

On Dec. 16, 1857, Mr. Waring was united in marriage with Miss Harriet L. Hudson, who was born Jan. 2, 1833, in Delaware county, Ohio, and came to Platteville from that State in 1844. They have a family of five children, one son and four daughters, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Alice A., Jan. 4, 1859; Jennie, Oct. 15, 1863; Harriet E., June 28, 1866; Martha M., March 2, 1871; and Charles W., Feb. 24, 1878. One daughter, Henrietta, born March 3, 1876, died Feb. 1877.

Notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Waring's health was permanently impaired by his army service, he has led an industrious and active life, and has accumulated a competence for his declining years. He has ever been held in high esteem as a man of honesty and integrity. Although born on English soil, he is truly an American citizen, and the flag who honor he helped to sustain he esteems above others. In his political views he is a Republican, had the honor of casting his first vote for the first Republican Presidential candidate, John C. Fremont, in 1856, and has supported every Republican nominee down to McKinley. He voted twice, in 1860 and 1864, for the martyr President, Abraham Lincoln, whose memory is sacred to every true American citizen. Mr. Waring served on the board of supervisors in the town of Clifton for several years.

SAMUEL GRIFFITH, formerly foreman of the Rand & Laflin Powder Works at Platteville, is now living on a farm in the town of Harrison, Grant county, and is spending the last measure of his life in the enjoyment of leisand comfort that he has richly earned by years of honest industry and unbending integrity.

Mr. Griffith was born in Ebensburg, Cambria Co., Penn., in October, 1838, son of Griffith and Hannah (Rese) Griffith, natives of Wales and Cambria county, Penn., respectively. His parents moved to Platteville, Wis., in the fall of 1840, and spent their last days in this State, the mother dying in 1846, and the father in 1850. They left a family of five young children, of whom the subject of this sketch was the eldest. The eldest daughter, Harriet, born in Platteville, after her father's death returned to Pennsylvania, grew to womanhood, and married John Tibbit; they are still living in Cambria county, that State. George, born in Platteville in 1843, died when ten years old. Newton, born in 1845, was a soldier in the Union army during the Civil war, and was killed at the battle of the Wilderness. David, born in 1846, was drowned at Platteville in boyhood.

Samuel Griffith obtained his early education in the schools of Platteville and at Ebensburg, whither he was sent after his father's death. He remained in Pennsylvania until 1859, when he came back to Wisconsin, and secured employment in the powder works of Rand & Laflin, of which in after years he became foreman, serving in that capacity from 1872 to 1894. The young powder-maker enlisted in August, 1862, as a member of Company E, 25th Wis. V. I. He was at the siege of Vicksburg, the battle of Chattanooga, and on Sherman's march to the sea; was a participant in the fierce fighting around Atlanta, the battle of Decatur, and in many other fierce and bloody struggles. He survived the perils of that mighty war, and returned home after its close, to resume his position in the powder works.

Mr. Griffith and Miss Margaret Travis were united in marriage in 1877. Mrs. Griffith is a member of one of the first pioneer families of Grant county, being a daughter of Abram and Sarah (Cramier) Travis. Her father was born in Pennsylvania in 1798, was a soldier in the Black Hawk war, under Capt. Gentry and Major Rountree. The mother was born in 1813. They were married in that State in 1835, and came to Wisconsin the following year, by wagon, settling in the town of Harrison, Grant county, where he entered a large tract of government land. He put up a large hewed-log house, which was his home for ten years, and is still standing, in a good state of preservation. In 1846 he put up the house which Mr. Griffith and his wife, Mr. Travis' second daughter, now occupy. Mr. and Mrs. Travis lived in this home as long as they were spared. Mr. Travis was an Old-line Whig, and the first election in the town of Harrison was held in his own log house. He was widely known all over this country, where he was largely engaged in mining. He died in 1853, and she survived until 1894, reaching the venerable age of eighty-one years. Mrs. Travis married for her second husband John Petty, by whom she had one son, Moses, now a resident of Platteville. John Petty is still living, hale and hearty for one of his years, and makes his home on the old farm. Seven of the children born to Abram and Sarah Travis attained mature life, and came to occupy an honorable position in the world. Buckless C., his oldest child, was born on the present home in 1837, and was the first white child born between the Plattes; he married Miss Mary Vannetta, and they live in Grand Island, Neb., and have seven children living. George W., born in the town of Harrison, Grant county, Aug. 24, 1839, is now a resident of Idaho. John H., born in Grant county in 1841, is a merchant of Loup City, Neb.; he is married, and has a family of eight children, James, Abraham, David, Anna, Neily, Etta, Mollie, and Jessie. Mahala, born in 1843, is the wife of David C. Philips, of Dubuque, Iowa, and has one daughter, Maggie, now Mrs. John Kruger, of Chicago. Margaret, the wife of Samuel Griffith, was born at their present home June 28, 1847, obtained her education in the public schools, and here has largely spent her life. Anthony, born in 1849, now resides in Loup City, Neb., where he is a merchant. Abram, born in 1852, migrated to the far West in his early manhood, and settled in Nevada, where he married Miss Julia Edwards; after their marriage the young couple moved on to California, where they lived many years, and where Mr. Travis died in 1895, leaving his wife and one son, John.

After his marriage Mr. Griffith bought the old Travis homestead, where he has made his home to the present time. They have no children, but Mrs. Griffith has brought up the son of her brother, Robert, who is now a young man and is making his home with them. Mr.

Griffith has always been identified with the Republican party, and was much interested in politics in his early life, when he worked as a printer in the office of the Cambria (Penn.) Times. He is a member of Sherman Post, No. 66, Grand Army of the Republic, at Platteville, and takes much interest in its associations. For thirty years he has been a member of the I. O. O. F., and belongs to Platteville Lodge, No. 6. Mr. Griffith is one of the solid men of the county and has many warm friends. Mrs. Griffith is a woman of fine character and much housewifely ability, an efficient worker in all benevolent causes and societies, and her home is always open to the needy and friendless. She is a member of the Rachel Rebekahs and the Order of the Eastern Star.

FRANKLIN F. LEWIS enjoys an enviable reputation, as well as a wide popularity, through Rock and Columbia counties, not only because of his business success, but also on account of his recognized probity, and his earnest Christian character. He is one of Janesville's public-spirited citizens, conservative while progressive, a friend of the poor, and a liberal supporter of the cause of religion, for whose advancement he is an earnest worker.

A somewhat detailed history of his family, for three generations, is given in the biographical sketch of his brother, Stephen B. Lewis, to which the reader is referred for fuller information in reference thereto. Franklin F. Lewis was born at what is now Lewiston, but was then Fort Winnebago, in Columbia county, Wis., Sept. 28, 1850. During his childhood the Winnebago Indian villages surrounded the fort, the curling smoke of their wigwams mingling with that of the sunrise and sunset guns, while the tepees of these sons of nature swung low from the forest trees. His boyhood was passed upon his father's farm, and his early education was obtained at the high school in Portage and at the State Normal School at Whitewater. For several years he taught at Waupun, for two years being superintendent of the "west ward schools" in that city. Returning to Whitewater, he was principal of the "East Side School" for twelve months, and afterward general superintendent of the city schools. His innate physical activity, however, demanded an outlet, and he laid down the chalk, the pencil and the birch to embark in commercial life. His first experience in this line was at Red Wing, Minn., where he remained two years. Next he became a traveling salesman for the Whitewater Manufacturing Co., selling furniture and undertakers' supplies. His keen intelligence, common sense, good judgment and tactful address insured him success, and it was not long before he was tendered a better position by the Cleveland Burial Case Co., his territory covering Iowa, Missouri, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Nebraska, the (then) Territory of Dakota and northern Illinois. In 1883, however, he severed his connection with that concern, to embark in the manufacture of knit goods, in association with his father and brother, at Portage, Wis. A succinct history of the enterprise may be found in the sketch of Stephen B. Lewis. Incorporation under the name of the Lewis Knitting Co. was effected in 1889. Franklin F. Lewis becoming secretary and treasurer, which responsible position in the concern he yet holds. In addition to rare capabilities as a man of affairs, he possesses native genius as a mechanic and inventor. The company avails itself of not less than four of his patents for improvements in machinery and garments, and in addition to the manufacture of underwear he successfully operates a plant for the manufacture of automatic knitting machine (of the same pattern used in the company's factory), devised and patented by our subject.

Both Mr. Lewis and his wife are active members of the Congregational Church, while he has been both a pioneer and a leader in Christian work. For eleven years he has been secretary of the First Congregational Church and society. He is also a member of the board of directors of the Young Men's Christian Association of Janesville, was chief organizer of the Young Men's Christian Association concert band, and for six years has been its president. The organization has succeeded beyond his fondest hopes, having successfully played, under the auspices of the Association at Baraboo, Madison, Delavan, Beloit, Gree Bay, Wis., and at Grand Rapids, Mich., under the auspices of the International Association.

Politically Mr. Lewis is a Republican. His kindly disposition and generous impulses, the many cares which weigh heavily upon him shoulders leave him but little time to devote to personal recreation and social pleasures. For twenty-two years he has been a member of the A. O. U. W., but he belongs to no other fraternal organization. He was married Nov. 29, 1877, to Victorine, a daughter of Anson and Hannah (Thorpe) Rockwell. The issue of the marriage has been one son, Edward Rockwell, who died in infancy, and two daughters, Mabel Barrett and Frances Eleanor, the elder born at Whitewater, and the younger at Janesville.

JOHN STOCKMAN, a well-known agriculturist, whose home farm is in Section 6, Harmony township, has been a resident of Rock county for many years, and his career is a noble illustration of the possibilities of country life for the industrious and saving, who are willing to work hard, and wait patiently for the legitimate results of their toil and care.

Mr. Stockman was born in the North of Ireland, in County Antrim, Sept. 2, 1827, and is a son of James and Rebecca (White) Stockman, both natives of Ireland. They were the parents of three daughters and four sons, and three of their children are now living: John; Jane, widow of Rev. Andrew Walker, of Milton, Wis.; and Hugh H., of Milton township, Rock county. The father followed the trade of stone-mason, when he was a young man. He crossed the ocean in 1831, and followed his trade in Philadelphia some two or three years, from that city removing to Saratoga, N. Y., where he combined farming and stone-cutting. In 1843 he came to Wisconsin, bought a quarter section of farm land in Milton township, Rock county, and devoted his life to its improvement. As a farmer he was highly successful, holding what he bought and making large additions to it until, at one time, he owned nearly if not quite a section of land. He died there in 1873, at the age of seventy-seven. His wife survived him some five or six years, and was about the same age when she died. Both were Presbyterians.

Hugh Stockman, father of James, died in Ireland, when he was about seventy years of age. He was a farmer, was of Scottish descent, and had a family of four sons and two daughters. John White, the father of Rebecca, was a native-born Irishman, though of Scottish descent. He came to this country in early life, lived in the State of New York for some years, and moved into Canada, where he spent the last years of a life that lasted almost a century. He had four sons and three daughters, and his youngest son was the father of Gen. White, who served in Africa as an officer of the English army operating against the Boers in the late war.

John Stockman was about sixteen years old when he came with his parents to Rock county. He attended school in Philadelphia and afterward in New York, and obtained a good common-school education. He lived at home until he was twenty-six, when he started for himself on a farm of 130 acres, part of which was a present from his father. He has added eighty acres to it since, and now owns a choice tract of land, consisting of 213 acres, which has become under his capable tillage a very valuable farm. He has lived in Wisconsin since 1843, and has occupied his present home since 1856.

Mr. Stockman and Miss Elizabeth Nicholson were married Dec. 14, 1853. She is a daughter of William and Mary (Booth) Nicholson. Mr. and Mrs. Stockman are the parents of eleven children, James William, Robert Henry, Mary Jane, William James, John B., Rebecca Alice, Sophia, Martha Jane, Ellen Elizabeth, Matilda and Mary Estella. James William died when three months old. Robert Henry married Isabel Peck, lives in Fulton township, and has two living children, Chester and Blanche Pearl. Mary Jane died when nine years old. William J. married Alma F. Story, lives in Harmony township, and has one child, Earl. John B. married Ella Anderson, of Mason City, Iowa, and now lives at Eldora, Iowa, where he is teaching school; they have one child, Harold. Rebecca Alice is the wife of Dr. Bennett, of Beloit, and is the mother of two boys, George and Howard. Sophia is deceased; she married Frank Gunnison, of Jefferson county. Martha Jane married Henry C. Yale, and is the mother of four children, Nellie Estella, Eugene Henry and Emmett (twins), and Albert. Ellen Elizabeth died at the age of twenty-one. Matilda married Harry Smith, and had one child, David Earl; she died March 13, 1900. Mary Estella died when a mere child of two years and eight months. Mr. and Mrs. Stockman are members of the Presbyterian Church, of which he was an elder for thirty years. He is a member of Milton Lodge, No. 65, I. O. O. F., and of Du Lac Lodge, No. 72, Patrons of Husbandry. He is a Prohibitionist, and has held various local positions of trust and honor, was supervisor three years, and chairman of the board one year; was town clerk two years; assessor four years; has been justice of the peace twenty years; and is secretary of the mutual fire insurance company that covers the four townships of Harmony, Milton, Fulton and Janesville, which position he has held since 1872. He has also held a commission as notary public for many years. From 1856 to 1885 he was a Republican, but in the latter year he voted with the Prohibitionists, and has since acted with that party.

Mrs. Stockman's parents were natives of England. They had five children, of whom she was the eldest child, and the only one now living. Her mother was first married to Robert Meggott, and bore him two sons and two daughters, two of whom are now living: Mary, widow of John Lowis, now living at Escanaba, Mich.; and William Meggott, of Janesville.

CHARLES R. SENDELBACH, of Fennimore, Grant county, was one of the members of the gallant 20th Wis. V. I., and made a record as a soldier that any man might be proud of. He was born in Saxony, Germany, March 15, 1828, son of David Sendelbach, who died when he was eight years old. His mother, Margaret Sendelbach, died when he was eighteen years old. They were the parents of seven children, Charles being the youngest son. He learned the trade of cabinet-making, and in 1849 came to this country with his youngest sister, Louisa. They landed at Baltimore, and went from there to Pittsburg, where he worked at his trade for a few months, also for a time at St. Louis. In 1850 he made his first appearance in Wisconsin, and soon after his arrival pre-empted forty acres in the town of Liberty, Grant county.

Charles R. Sendelbach and Miss Sarah A. Connolly were united in marriage Jan. 31, 1853. She was born April 21, 1830, daughter of Henry and Sarah Connolly, who came from Kentucky, and settled in the town of Mt. Ida, Grant Co., Wis., in 1844, spending their last years in that town. He died in 1859, and she in 1873. They were the parents of twelve children, only three of whom are living: Louis, who was born in 1828; Mrs. Sendelbach; and her youngest brother, James, who has his home in Nebraska. In the fall of 1853 Mr. Sendelbach bought a portion of his father's farm in Mt. Ida, and at a later period purchased what was left of the homestead, he and his wife living on this farm until 1895, when they moved to Fennimore.

Mr. Sendelbach enlisted, Aug. 13, 1862, in Company I, 20th Wis. V. I., and was with his regiment until the battle of Prairie Grove, where that gallant soldier, Capt. McDermott, was killed. A few moments after he fell Mr. Sendelbach was badly wounded, being struck three times by bullets in his legs, and was taken to the hospital at Fayetteville, Ark. This battle was fought Dec. 7, 1862, and Mr. Sendelbach was kept in the hospital and the convalescent camp until the following spring, when he returned to his regiment, at that time stationed about twelve miles south of Rolla, Mo. He continued with the command to the end of the war, and was discharged at Galveston, Texas, in 1865.

Mr. Sendelbach came home and went back to work, and has been greatly prospered. He was a brave soldier of the Union, and is a worthy member of the community. He belongs to the Sam Monteith Post, Grand Army of the Republic. Politically he is a Republican. He was reared a Lutheran, and his wife is a Baptist. They are the parents of nine children, eight of whom are living: David, born Nov. 23, 1853; John L., June 21, 1855; Sarah M., May 24, 1857; William H., Aug. 12, 1859; James, April 17, 1861; Fannie Ann, Feb. 3, 1863; Charles R., May 30, 1866; Dorothy Jane, Feb. 28, 1869; and Mary E., Aug. 2, 1875 (died Jan. 23, 1894).

THOMAS SCOTT holds an honored place among the retired farmers of the town of Hazel Green, Grant county, where his long and useful life wins respect as its simple and unpretending virtues carry their own lessons.

Mr. Scott was born in Cornwall, England, July 17, 1831, a son of Thomas and Mary Scott, both natives of England; the latter died when her son Thomas was a child. Our subject's father was twice married, and Thomas was the only child of the last marriage; John and Frederick were the offspring of the first union. John Scott died in England, and Frederick came to America and West to Wisconsin, where he lived some twenty years, the moving to Missouri, where he became a prosperous farmer. Thomas Scott, Sr., moved to Canada, where he died.

Thomas Scott obtained his early education in the public schools of England, and in 1852 came to Hazel Green, Grant county, where he was employed by the neighboring farmers for about two years. He purchased a forty-acre tract about this time, which he improved and added to it adjoining land from time to time, until he had a magnificent farm of 280 acres. He put up good buildings, and now owns one of the fine farms of southwestern Wisconsin.

Mr. Scott and Miss Ann Ralph were married in 1859. Mrs. Scott was the daughter of William Ralph, of Hazel Green, and was living in Hazel Green at the time of her marriage. To this union were born seven children: (1) Thomas is a grain buyer in Iowa. (2) Abbie is the wife of Richard Scadden, of Hazel Green. (3) John W. is single, and at home. (4) Jessie is the wife of G. C. Anderson, of Iowa, and they have one son, Lesley Percival. (5) Elizabeth, born in Hazel Green, married G. C. Anderson, and died leaving two children, Lyle and Lancelot. The other members of the Scott family died in childhood. The mother died in 1869. In 1870 Thomas Scott married Mrs. Cottingham, daughter of Joseph and Winnifred Richards, both natives of Cornwall, England, and pioneers in Grant county. They came to this country in 1847, and three days after their arrival Joseph Richards was drowned, while crossing the Platte river, leaving his widow and four children to struggle alone with pioneer hardships in a strange country: (1) Lizzie married Leonard Lowe, and is now dead. (2) Joseph died in Humboldt county, Iowa. (3) Henry is in Iowa. (4) Mrs. Scott was born in Cornwall, England, in 1839. She bore three children to her first husband, two of whom, Matthew Cottingham and Isabel (now Mrs. Scott), live in Colorado. To Mr. and Mrs. Scott have been born four children: (1) H. Erwin, born in Hazel Green in 1872, is a graduate of the State Normal School at Platteville, and is now cashier and teller of the Farmers Bank at Cuba City. (2) Joseph O., born in 1874, married Miss Charlotte Jeffreys, a resident of Hazel Green, and a teacher of the public schools, and they have one son, Hillis A. They now live in the village of Hazel Green. (3) Margaret, born in 1876, a young lady of many charms and graces, is at home. (4) Sarah Irene, born in 1878, is the wife of Edward Scadden, and lives on a farm in Grant county, Wisconsin.

Mr. Scott is one of Grant county's earnest Republicans, and in religion is associated with the Methodist Church, of which his wife and daughters are members. He was one of the founders of Wesley Chapel forty years ago, on the prairie in the town of Hazel Green, where services are still held. Mr. Scott also helped to build the first school building in the town. In 1896 Mr. Scott purchased the Richard Ingraham property on Main street, in Hazel Green, and thoroughly remodeled the house, making it in every respect modern and up-to-date. He and his wife enjoy the unstinted appreciation of their friends and neighbors, and are regarded as honorable and reliable people, with kind hearts, and of generous disposition.

GEORGE BLAKESLEY, deceased. Among the citizens of Grant county who, early in the war of the Union, responded promptly to the President's call for volunteers to defend the old flag was George Blakesley, who enlisted in October, 1861, in Company C, 2d Wisconsin Cavalry, and died May 31, 1862, in the hospital at Jefferson City, Mo. He was born in Connecticut Sept. 11, 1828, and when a boy removed with his parents from his native State to Steuben county, N. Y. Later the family became residents of Michigan, where the father died, and the mother subsequently came to Wisconsin, her death occurring at the home of her daughter, in Plainfield, whom she was visiting at the time. In the family were nine children.

Mr. Blakesley grew to manhood in Steuben county, N. Y., where he became acquainted with the young lady who on Oct. 13, 1850, became his wife. In her maidenhood she was Miss Ruth Welling, a native of Dutchess county, N. Y., and a daughter of Josiah and Sarah Welling. In early life Mr. Blakesley commenced learning the blacksmith's trade, and soon after his marriage returned to Steuben county to complete his apprenticeship. In 1857 he came to Grant county, Wis., where he followed the business of blacksmithing until he entered the army. Although he was in the service but a short time, he left an honorable record as a faithful soldier, who was always found at his post of duty, ready to defend the old flag and the cause it represented.

When Mr. Blakesley went to the front he left his wife with four small children, the youngest being but a few months old. Upon the mother devolved the responsibility of rearing the family, and this duty she faithfully and creditably performed, although the task was at times a severe one. The family consisted of three sons and one daughter. The sons, Max, Frank and George, are all living at the present writing (1901), but the daughter, Ella, and her husband, John Lewis, are both deceased. They left one daughter, Barbara, who makes her home with Mrs. Blakesley. There was also another daughter, Ida May, who died in infancy, before the father left for the war. Mrs. Blakesley has a pleasant home in Patch Grove, where she resides, and is held in high esteem by her many friends and acquaintances.

WILLIAM B. STRONG. This honored and beloved resident of the city of Beloit, Rock county, may well look back with gratitude as he marks the lengthening shadows along the dusty way of life. God has given some privileges of help and cheer along with the burden of duty that He has put upon him. Loyally and gladly he has met the demands that have come to his ears from the suffering and needy.

Mr. Strong was born in Brownington, Orleans Co., Vt., May 16, 1837, and is a son of Elijah Gridley and Sarah (Partridge) Strong, both natives of that State. They were the parents of four children: Ellen Sylvia, who married Charles G. Rolfe, and died in 1864, in her thirty-fifth year; Dr. Henry P., a practicing physician in Beloit for over forty years; Rev. Dr. James W., president of Carlton College, in Minnesota, for nearly thirty years; and William B. The father was a farmer, merchant and hotel-keeper in Brownington and Montpelier, Vt., and in Beloit, coming to the latter city in 1851, and opening the "Beloit House," on the site of the present station house of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway. He died in January, 1859, in his fifty-sixth year. His widow died in 1865, in her fifty-ninth year. Both were members of the Congregational Church. He was sheriff and deputy sheriff of Orleans county, Vt., for nearly thirteen years.

William B. Strong was fourteen years old when he came to Beloit. When sixteen years old he had charge of the telegraph office in Beloit. Early in 1855 he was in charge of the telegraph office at Janesville, and was made agent for the old Milwaukee & Mississippi Railroad Co. at Milton. He was station agent at Whitewater for six months, and at Monroe for six months. He was returned to Janesville, where he represented the company for more than seven years, being called to McGregor at the expiration of that time to act as assistant superintendent of the McGregor Western railroad, now a part of the Milwaukee system. He served in this position two years. For three years he was in Council Bluffs, Iowa, as the general western agent of the Chicago & Northwestern, after which he was made assistant general superintendent of the Burlington & Missouri River railroad, and had his office at Burlington, Iowa. Two years later this line became a part of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, and Mr. Strong went to Chicago as assistant general superintendent of the entire system. After two years spent in the employment of that corporation he was made general superintendent of the Michigan Central, and acted in this capacity for a period of two years. He was recalled to the "Q" system as its general superintendent, which position he held for two years, and then became vice-president and general manager of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad. In 1881 he was called to Boston, to take the office of president of this corporation, and there he remained until ill health necessitated his retirement, in 1889. In 1894 Mr. Strong made his permanent home in Beloit.

Mr. Strong and Miss Abby J. Moore were united in wedlock Oct. 2, 1859. She is a daughter of Holland and Meribah (Cheeney) Moore. Three children have been born to this union: Fred M., Ellen S. and William James Henry. Fred M., who graduated from Yale in 1882, is vice-president of the Second National Bank of Beloit; he married Miss Ella L. Ross, of Chicago, and they have three children, Leila Griswold, William B., and Henry Ross. Ellen S. married George A. Burdett, of Brookline, Mass., and they have three children, Elizabeth Martin, Ellen Moore and Silvia Strong; they now live at Newton Center, Mass. William J. H., now professor of rhetoric in the University of Wooster, at

Wm B Strong

Wooster, Ohio, was graduated from Harvard in 1893, and from Emerson College of Oratory, Boston, in 1898. Mrs. William B. Strong was the first white girl born in the New England colony that first settled Beloit, in 1838. Mr. and Mrs. William B. Strong are Congregationalists, and in politics he is a Republican. They live two miles out on the Beloit road, on what is known as the "Part-ridge" farm.

Among the many good deeds of this generous man and public benefactor was the gift of Gridley chapel, a beautiful brick edifice for religious worship, a memorial to his father. This noble structure was dedicated Aug. 27, 1899, and our subject's brother, Dr. James W. Strong, at that time president of Carlton College, at Northfield, Minn., delivered the memorial address, largely a character study and a historical sketch of their father and mother. A beautiful tribute was paid to the saintly character of the man, Elijah Gridley Strong, in whose memory the building is erected, and much stress was placed upon his devout spirit and high character; the address was throughout an eloquent presentation of the spiritual and religious side of the life of the man whose memory was thus honored. The name itself is significant as that of Capt. Gridley, who opened the dread engagement in Manila Bay, and in the Church is commemorated by Gridley Hall, at Carlton College, the gift of a New England cousin. Elijah Gridley Strong was a descendant in the sixth generation from Elder John Strong, of Northampton, Mass., who came from England in 1630, and became the father of eighteen children, fifteen of whom reared families of their own. No larger family in this country is known as descended from one progenitor.

ULYSSES MILTON HUNGERFORD, of the town of Watterstown, Grant county, is a well-known citizen of the county. He is one of five brothers who served as soldiers in the war of the Rebellion.

Mr. Hungerford was born in Livingston county, N. Y., April 12, 1834, son of Josiah and Elizabeth Hungerford, also natives of Livingston county, where all their children were born. Our subject learned the trade of a carpenter with his father, and attended the district schools of his native county during boyhood. In 1854 the family migrated from their home in Livonia, Livingston Co., N. Y., to Kankakee, Ill., where the father died in November of the same year. The family came thence to Wisconsin, locating at Spring Green, and the mother survived to an advanced age, passing away Jan. 6, 1893, in Sauk county, Wis., at the age of nearly ninety.

It was in March, 1854, that our subject went from his native State to Illinois, and in the fall of the following year, 1855, he came to Wisconsin, stopping at Spring Green, Sauk county. In the spring of 1856 he removed to Crawford county, remaining there until August, 1857, when he went to Grant county, where, on Aug. 30, 1857, he was married to Sarah Carson, daughter of Lott and Margaret Carson, early settlers of Wisconsin, formerly of Lafayette, Ind. Mrs. Hungerford was born Oct. 9, 1836, in Tippecanoe county, Ind., and came to Wisconsin in 1854 with her parents. Soon after his removal to Grant county Mr. Hungerford became a permanent resident of the town of Watterstown.

On Dec. 28, 1863, our subject enlisted in the 6th Wisconsin Light Artillery, and in February of the following year the command proceeded to Huntsville, Ala. In June, 1864, the command started to join the army of Gen. Sherman, which was attacking Atlanta, and was detailed to guard the railroad bridge near Cartersville, while the siege was in progress. When Sherman started for the sea Mr. Hungerford went with his command to Nashville, and took part in the important events at that place under Gen. Thomas. From Nashville the command proceeded to Chattanooga, and from there to Madison, Wis., where it was discharged in July, 1865. Although not wounded, Mr. Hungerford lost an eye in the service, by accident, and suffered severely from scurvy, from the effects of which his health has never fully recovered.

The eldest brother of Ulysses M. Hungerford, Eugene C., was also a soldier. Born April 25, 1832, he was at the time of his enlistment a student in the Wisconsin State University, at Madison. In 1861 he entered the service, enrolling in Company H, 5th Wis. V. I., for three months, and after his honorable discharge re-enlisted. He was killed May 3, 1863, at the storming of Fredericksburg, under Gen. Burnside. This gentleman was a gallant soldier, and his death was greatly deplored. Edwin R. Hungerford, the second brother of our subject, and third in the order of birth, enlisted in August, 1862, in the 6th Wisconsin Light Artillery, and died at Corinth, Miss., the same year. Thomas J. Hungerford, the next in order of birth, was born Dec. 20, 1840, and enlisted in October, 1861, when the battery was organized, serving until October, 1864. Owing to his arduous service his health was broken, and he died Aug. 15, 1881. Addison Hungerford, the fifth of this family to enter the service of the United States, was born March 7, 1845, and enlisted in the 47th Wis. V. I. in 1864, serving until the close of the war. He is now residing at Evansville, Wis. There were also two daughters in the family of Josiah and Elizabeth Hungerford: Martha, the eldest of the family, born July 14, 1830, died Oct. 29, 1865; Harriet E., born Aug. 15, 1836, died Dec. 2, 1865.

Mr. and Mrs. Hungerford have a pleasant home, many friends, and enjoy the fruits of their early industry. Mr. Hungerford is an esteemed member of the local G. A. R. post, and can look back with pleasure on his career, both as a soldier and as a private citizen.

EDWIN F. CARPENTER has not rounded out the limit ascribed to middle life, yet he has already attained marked distinction in his chosen profession, the law. He comes of that rugged Green Mountain stock which gave to the army of the Revolution such men as Ethan Allen, as well as other heroes, whose names have been forgotten, while their deeds and achievements live in history.

Edwin F. Carpenter was born in Moretown, Washington Co., Vt., May 12, 1845, son of Ira Carpenter, who married (second) Rhoda S. Spofford. Both his parents were natives of the Green Mountain State. The father tilled the sterile soil of New England, with the average success attending farmers of his day and generation. He was a man of courage, enterprise and integrity, and it was, perhaps, these traits which especially commended him to the suffrages of his fellow citizens, who elected and re-elected him to the office of sheriff. He was born in 1798, and died in 1862, with his physical and mental faculties alike showing but little sign of impairment. He was twice married, and by his first wife, Annie, had four children, only one of whom, Cephas W., survives. His second wife, the mother of Edwin F. Carpenter, was Rhoda

S. Spofford, who died in 1881, in her seventy-third year. To this union came six children, three of whom are living, Ira M., Edwin F., and Albert N.

The father of Ira Carpenter, and the grandfather of Edwin F., was named Cephas. His birthplace cannot be definitely stated, but it is certain that he was born in either Connecticut or Vermont, and come from rugged Puritan stock. He was a man of rare mental power, as well as of recognized integrity; a gallant soldier in the war of 1812, and for many years a justice of the peace. He lived to be nearly eighty-nine years old, and his death was deeply mourned by his fellow citizens, who had learned to love him for his many virtues, as well as to respect him for his sound judgment and conservative public spirit. The maternal grandfather of Edwin F. Carpenter, the father of Rhoda S. Spofford, was also a Vermonter by birth, and of English descent. He was the father of a large family, and died at an advanced age.

Edwin F. Carpenter was born at Moretown, Washington Co., Vt., May 12, 1845, attended the country schools, and at the age of eighteen came West, locating at Beloit, Wis. There he entered the preparatory department of Beloit College, and later matriculated in the classical department, graduating in 1870. Proceeding at once to Janesville, he entered the law office of Cassidy, Merrill & Dixon, as a law student, and was admitted to the Bar the following year. In 1873, both Mr. Dixon and Mr. Merrill having withdrawn from the firm, Mr. Carpenter and Mr. Cassidy formed a co-partnership for the practice of law, under the style of Cassidy & Carpenter. Since that date various changes in the firm have taken place. Mr. Cassidy was succeeded by Mr. S. J. Todd in 1880 or '81, and he in turn, the following year by E. D. McGowan. This business association continued for several years under the firm name of Carpenter & McGowan, and since its dissolution our subject has carried on practice without a partner. He has been eminently successful. He has a keen, analytic mind of a judicial cast, and has for the last six years ably discharged the responsible duties of circuit court commissioner. He has been twice elected city attorney, his period of service covering four years, and at present represents the Third ward of Janesville in the city council, having been elected on the Republican ticket.

Mr. Carpenter was married, Dec. 18, 1873, to Miss Emma A. Lappin, whose father, Thomas Lappin, married Mary J. Jackman. Two children have been born to them, Edwin Lappin and Henry F. Mrs. Carpenter is a communicant of the Episcopal Church.

EUGENE F. WARREN, one of the most prominent, successful and progressive business men of Albany, Green county, was born in Fort Covington, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., on June 30, 1833, a son of Lemuel and Betsy (Richardson) Warren, the former a native of Montpelier, Vt., and the latter of Washington county, N. Y. Three of their five children still survive: Dr. John H., of Cincinnati, Ohio; Lemuel H., of Albany, and our subject. Lowell Warren, the paternal grandfather of our subject, was born in Marlborough, Mass., on Oct. 23, 1764. The family can be easily traced to the coming over of the "Mayflower." Lowell Warren was a blacksmith by trade, was in the battle of Quebec, and died at the close of the Revolutionary war. His son, Lemuel Warren, was a farmer who came to Janesville, Wis., in 1838, taking up 200 acres of land, which he afterward sold to the father of the late Frances E. Willard, it being her old home. In 1840, Mr. Warren removed to Union township, Rock county, and there took up 160 acres of land, five miles east of Evansville, which he improved and added to until he possessed about 400 acres. He died on the old home farm, Sept. 13, 1846, aged fifty-five years and ten months. His wife died in 1874, at Albany, Wis., aged seventy-seven. They were most worthy people, well-known and thoroughly esteemed, and belonged to the Universalist faith. Mr. Warren had been a soldier in the war of 1812, and was present at the battle of Plattsburg, and his widow received a land warrant for his services. The government in 1840 made him one of the first justices of the State, which office he held until the time of his demise.

Eugene F. Warren was five years old when his parents came to Rock county, Wis., where he grew to manhood. During his childhood and youth Indian boys were his play-mates, and they taught him to swim and to use a canoe. His educational advantages were limited, his sister being his teacher, she being the second one to fill the position in Rock county. Remaining on the farm until twenty years old,

Mr. Warren then entered in the employ of a grain firm in Janesville, remaining with them for one year and a half, spending the same time in the employ of the American Express Company, as its messenger. On July 5, 1854, he came to Albany, where he engaged in general merchandising, which he combined with milling, remaining in the former line for twenty-three years, and continuing the latter to the present time, with the exception of three years of army service.

On Aug. 13, 1861, Mr. Warren enlisted in Co. E, 13th Wis. V. I., assisting in recruiting the company, and was made its first lieutenant. In 1862 he was in the Army of Kansas, where there was severe service—no battles which stirred the country to enthusiasm, but the hardest kind of military duty, long marches over ice, and snow-covered prairies, often short rations and sickness. The following year he was transferred to the Army of the Tennessee, where his regiment engaged in fighting what was denominated "bush-whackers," and scouting, but was present at the battles of Forts Henry and Donelson. While there our subject was detailed as a judge-advocate of a general court-martial which continued in session for a period of three months, fifty-two cases being tried, and five of this number receiving the sentence of death. In the fall of 1863, Mr. Warren was ordered to Huntsville, Ala., thence to Stephenson, Ala., where, after a long and weary march, on short rations, he remained until November when he left that place to encamp in the village of Edgfield, opposite Nashville, Tenn., remaining there until the summer of 1864, when he returned to his home and business—at least, that is what he intended to do, but a week later he received from the Secretary of War an appointment to a captaincy in Maj.-Gen. Hancock's corps. As one of his brothers had accepted an appointment as U. S. revenue collector, and the other brother was in very poor health, Mr. Warren felt it wise to decline the flattering offer. His business needed his watchful eye, badly, and he decided to remain in Wisconsin.

In 1869 Mr. Warren built the flouring mill known as the mill of Warren & Tomkins, and in 1881 purchased the Albany Woolen mill, in 1896 adding an electric light plant, and now furnishes that necessity to the village. Among the business enterprises successfully managed by our subject, was that of the mail and stage business, which, in connection with his brothers, was conducted as long as no railroads connected the Great Lakes with the Pacific slope. This gave employment to hundreds of men and horses, and was a public enterprise of great magnitude.

On Sept. 9, 1855, Mr. Warren was married to Miss Sarah S. Gleason, a daughter of Robert and Nancy (Jones) Gleason, and five children were born of this union: Mary E., now engaged in a millinery business, in Elgin, Ill.; Nellie, who married Frank Smith, of Madison, S. Dak., and has one daughter, Genevieve; Grace, who married Harry Hill, since deceased, lives in Elgin, with her sister, and has one daughter, Genevieve; William G., who died at the age of four; and Charles, who died at the age of twenty-two at Los Vegas, New Mexico, after having been in the employ of the U. S. Mail between Chicago and St. Paul, since he was sixteen. Both Mr. and Mrs. Warren are members of the Universalist Church, where they have the esteem of every one. Socially, Mr. Warren is a member of Albany Lodge, No. 36, F. & A. M.; and Evansville Chapter; also of Erastus Hoyt Post, No. 69, G. A. R. A very ardent Republican, Mr. Warren has been called upon to fill various offices, was chairman of the town board for twenty-seven years and of the county board for one term. With his brother, Dr. Warren, he was among the founders of the village of Albany, and the family has always been prominent in its commercial, social and educational affairs. Mr. Warren owns his own handsome residence, and also much other real estate in the town. A man who can be trusted, upright, honorable, progressive and energetic, Eugene F. Warren possesses the characteristics which make him a fit representative of this community. With a war record for gallantry and endurance, combined with the elements of a judicial mind, he well deserves the honor which his fellow citizens delight to render him.

EVAN J. EVANS. This name will be readily recognized by those familiar with the business personnel of Beloit, Rock county, as that of an enterprising and successful grocer of that city. He has won a good patronage, and is on the highway to solid and lasting prosperity.

Mr. Evans was born in the town of Emmett, Dodge Co., Wis., Jan. 28, 1864, and, as his name indicates, is of Welsh extraction. His great-grandfather, John Evans, born in 1737 on Lleged Enwin farm, near Cardigan, Cardiganshire, Wales, was a farmer. He had a family of five children.

John Evans, grandfather of our subject, born in 1777, on Tier-bach farm, near Mellin Gum, Llangadock Parish, Caermarthenshire, Wales, died April 12, 1838. He was a prosperous farmer. He married Ann Stephen Thomas, of Court farm, Mellin Gum, born in 1790, died Sept. 27, 1862. To this union were born nine children: Sarah, Mary, Margaret, Stephen, John, Thomas, David J., and Evan and William (twins), two of whom, John and David J., came to America. John, born Nov. 10, 1822, came to America in 1870, and until 1873 lived at Scranton, Penn. He then moved to Watertown, Wis., where he is still living, bringing his wife and family of five children—Thomas (a reporter for the Milwaukee Sentinel, now deceased), John, Mary, David and Margaret.

David J. Evans, father of our subject, born Aug. 11, 1831, at Llethergela, Llangadock, Wales, early in life made up his mind to come to America, and in 1851 boarded a sailing-vessel at Liverpool, England, which landed him at New York after a tiresome voyage of six weeks and one day. Thence he went to Pittsburg, Penn., where he found employment with a coal company at his trade, that of carpenter, and there worked until 1853, when he got the Western fever. From 1853 to 1854 he spent most of his time and money traveling through the Northwestern States in search of a fortune. In the summer of 1855 he settled at Watertown, Wis., where he found employment with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co., working at his trade until 1859, when he rented a farm of eighty acres, located on the North road, six miles north of Watertown, Emmett township. This farm he operated until 1865, when he bought eighty acres of land located in the northern part of the town of Emmett. In 1868 he bought another eighty acres of land, across the road, located on the south line of the town of Clyman, Dodge Co., Wis., this making a farm of 160 acres, to which he moved, and which he operated very successfully, living there until March 22, 1880. He then moved to a farm of 200 acres which he bought in the fall of 1879, located in the town of Emmett, Dodge county, three miles north of Watertown, on what is known as the North road; this place was formerly owned by Griff Jones, and is now known as the "Silver Creek Dairy Farm." Mr. Evans still resides on this beautiful place, where his attention has been for the most part turned to stock raising, dairying and butter making, the butter from this farm having taken first prize at farmers' institutes, county fairs, and at the Milwaukee State fair. He also bought and ran the first self-binder (harvesting machine) in the county, a machine that bound with wire; later he bought one of the first twine-binders in his section, and he also bought one of the first steam threshing machines run in this section.

On March 31, 1857, Mr. Evans wedded Ann Lloyd, who was born March 4, 1839, at Gwynvyn, Merionethshire, North Wales, daughter of Evan and Catherine Lloyd, the former of whom died in Wales, in middle life. At the age of six years, in 1845, Mrs. Evans, with her widowed mother, brother John, and sister Catherine, boarded the sailing-vessel "Jamestown," at Liverpool, England, and after a voyage of four weeks they landed at New York City, where they took canal-boat to Utica, N. Y., living there up to 1855. While in Utica the mother was married to William Williams, of that place, and to this union was born one son, Griffith. From Utica they moved to Watertown, Wis., and on their arrival there at once bought a farm north of the city, in the town of Emmett, Dodge county, where they continued to reside up to the time of Mr. Williams' death, in 1870. Mrs. Williams then rented the farm and moved to the city of Watertown, where she lived up to about six months before her death, when she was taken to the home of her daughter, Mrs. David J. Evans, dying there May 13, 1889. She was born Aug. 13, 1816. Mr. and Mrs. David J. Evans became the parents of five sons and three daughters: John, born May 25, 1858, who died in 1868; Evan J., born Jan. 28, 1864; David L., born July 8, 1866, a farmer of Pittsville, Wood Co., Wis.; Griffith W., born Dec. 19, 1868, a grocer at Waukegan, Ill.; Anna E., born Feb. 22, 1871, wife of John Slight, a farmer of Watertown; Catherine, born Aug. 12, 1874, a dressmaker, who lives at home; and John, born June 3, 1880, and Maud, born Dec. 27, 1883, also at home. The parents are Congregationalists in religious faith. Mr. Evans is a Republican in political sentiment.

John Lloyd, Mrs. Evans' brother, born in 1837, died in 1894. He was one of the volunteers who enlisted in Company B, 29th Wis. V. I., at Watertown, Wis., to do his part in the Civil war, and served his full time of four years, during which he was engaged in quite a few battles. In 1874 he was elected assemblyman from his district to Madison, Wis. He was a Republican and a popular man in his town. From the close of the Civil war to about 1876 he conducted a farm in the town of Clyman, Dodge Co., Wis. In 1876 he sold the farm and moved to Randolph, Wis., where he bought a farm, and continued to live there up to the time of his death.

Evan J. Evans grew to manhood on his father's farm near Watertown, and had fair educational advantages. He worked hard during his boyhood, attending school only four or five months a year, during the winter terms, and while living at home on the farm in Clyman he had two and a quarter miles to walk each way, carrying his dinner with him. However, he made such good use of his time at the district school that when he was fifteen his parents decided to let him board with his grandmother Williams, in Watertown, and attend high school there, and he passed through both the high school and the Northwestern University of that place. It took hard study to keep up with his classes, as he was out of school during the spring and part of the fall term, working on the farm. When he was sixteen his father engaged an expert engineer to teach him how to run the threshing engine, of which he took charge for from two to four months each year for eight or nine falls—a farmer in spring, engineer in fall, student and later teacher in winter, for after completing his schooling he taught some eight or nine terms, proving very capable. But a business career had attractions for him he could not resist, and on April 19, 1890, he came to Beloit, opening a grocery store June 6, 1890. He has followed this business to the present time, and it is not saying too much to say that he has made it a decided success.

The wedding ceremonies of Evan J. Evans and Miss Meta Krueger were celebrated Sept. 24, 1890, at Watertown, Wis., and they have had four children: Vera, born Jan. 13, 1893; Everett, Nov. 25, 1894; Aneta, March 5, 1890; and Elvin John, April 5, 1899. Everett died at the age of three months. Mr. and Mrs. Evans belong to the Safety Fund Insurance Society, Syracuse, N. Y., and to the Equitable Fraternal Union. Their bright and cheery home is at No. 133 Garfield avenue. Mr. Evans is a Republican in politics.

Mrs. Meta (Krueger) Evans was born June 29, 1868, in Emmett, Dodge Co., Wis., on the old family homestead. Her grandfather, Fritz Krueger, was born in 1789, and died in 1876, passing his entire life in Germany. He was a goldsmith, and a dealer in merchandise. Adolph Krueger, Mrs. Evans' father, was born in Domitz, Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Germany, Sept. 3, 1819, and was a goldsmith by trade. In June, 1849, he sailed from Hamburg, Germany, and landed at New York six weeks later. Thence he journeyed to Milwaukee, and in the fall of 1849 to Watertown, Wis., where he worked at his trade, and owned and ran a furniture factory until March 10, 1863, when he moved to a farm on the North road, three miles from Watertown, in Emmett township, Dodge Co., Wis. That place has ever since been his home. On Aug. 8, 1850, Mr. Krueger married Miss Anna Bruesch, and on Aug. 8, 1900, they celebrated their Golden Wedding. To this union were born four children: Ernest, born June 26, 1857, resides on the farm; Emma, born Sept. 27, 1859, is the wife of E. Lipman, a dry-goods merchant of Beloit, Wis.; Ida, born April 21, 1862, is the wife of A. F. Baumann, a contractor of Watertown, Wis.; Meta, born June 29, 1868, is the wife of Evan J. Evans, our subject.

Nicholas Bruesch, father of Mrs. Anna (Bruesch) Krueger, was born in 1809, at Chur, Graubunden, Switzerland. He was a merchant and hotel-keeper. In 1827 he married, and he and his wife had five children, two of whom died in Switzerland. In 1846 Mr. and Mrs. Bruesch, with their three children, boarded an American ship at Havre, France, and sailed across the Atlantic, reaching New York after a period of forty-two days. There they took a steamship for Buffalo, N. Y., journeyed from Buffalo to Chicago by rail, and by boat from Chicago to Milwaukee, Wis., thence to Watertown, where they resided until 1853, in which year Mr.

and Mrs. Bruesch both died, of cholera. Anna Bruesch, born Oct. 19, 1832, at Chur, Switzerland, became the wife of Adolph Krueger.

GEORGE W. ISRAEL, a retired farmer in the town of Paris, Grant county, was born in Michigan Feb. 9, 1837, a son of G. W. and Wealthy (Cobb) Israel, both natives of Erie county, Penn. Shortly after their marriage they removed west to Michigan, spending some years in that State, and coming to Platteville, Wis., in 1841. Mr. Israel did not remain in Platteville very long at that time, but soon moved to Iowa county, Wis., and in 1868 bought a farm in Boone county, Iowa, near the village of Boonesboro. Mrs. Israel died in Grant county, Wis., in 1846, and in 1852 Mr. Israel wedded Sarah Potter, who died in Boonesboro, Iowa, after the death of her husband in the same place.

George W. Israel is the only one of a family of four children born to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Israel, who lived to attain his maturity, the others all dying in infancy, or early childhood. In the common schools he received his education, and when the Civil war broke out, he enlisted in Company F, 20th Wis. V. I., and served in the Western Army, a greater part of the time under the command of Gen. Herring, of Dubuque. The 20th Wisconsin was engaged chiefly in Missouri and Arkansas, and was a participant in the battle of Prairie Grove, Gen. Price commanding the Rebel forces, where it was badly cut up. Mr. Israel saw service at Vicksburg, New Orleans, and at the capture of Mobile, the latter being his last engagement in the war. The 20th Wisconsin was a hard worked and gallant regiment, and during its service it is said to have marched over nine thousand miles. At Madison, it was honorably discharged from the government service.

Mr. Israel was a farmer in Boone county some three years after his return to civil life. In 1868 he married Miss Elizabeth Chapman, of Platteville, Wis. Mrs. Israel is the daughter of Thomas and Sarah (Key) Chapman, old settlers in Grant county, who were born in England. When Wisconsin was still a territory they made a settlement on a farm near Platteville. The father died in 1883, and the mother in 1864. By his first wife Mr. Chapman was the father of three children: Robert. of Dakota; Mary Jane is the widow of John Parnell, of Platteville; and Elizabeth, who is Mrs. Israel, was born March 3, 1848.

Mr. Israel and his wife lived on Mr. Chapman's farm some six years, when he purchased the farm which is now their home in the town of Paris, where they at once located, and where they have lived to the present time. Mr. and Mrs. Israel are the parents of a family of five children: Thomas, born in Iowa in 1871, grew to manhood in Grant county, and is a resident of Platteville; Sarah, born in Platteville in 1873, is now the wife of James Hamilton, and lives on his farm in the town of Paris, where they are rearing a family of five children, Alice, Walter, Clyde, Ethel, and George; Robert, born in Platteville in 1876, is unmarried, and is a resident of this town; Fanny, born in 1883, graduated from the district school in 1896, and is considered the youngest graduate of the town of Paris; and Nora, born in 1887, is now a student of the public school. Mr. Israel is a Republican, and has been an active worker in the politics of the town. Both he and his wife are counted among the best people of the town, while his record as a soldier is that of a man who did his full duty to his country in her hour of peril.

CHARLES ATWOOD, one of the solid representatives of the commercial interests of Janesville, Rock county, is engaged in the ice business, under the firm name of the City Ice Co.

Mr. Atwood was born in Janesville March 6, 1852, a son of Volney and Catherine Ann Atwood, of whom a sketch will be found elsewhere. He was reared in Janesville, receiving his education in the very excellent schools of his native city, and when he reached mature years engaged in handling coal and wood. Being very successful in this line, after having been in business from 1871 to 1880 he branched out somewhat, adding ice to the commodities handled, and since 1887 has continued the ice business only. He and his partner are carrying on a large and constantly increasing trade, having built up their house by honest methods and prompt and efficient service.

On July 23, 1877, Mr. Atwood married Miss Alta M. Doty, daughter of E. Philo and Abigail M. (Austin) Doty, and eight children have been born to them: Volney D., Abbie A., Mary Lea, Harry Cummings, Charley Starr, William Williston (who died in May, 1900), Leo and Edward Philo. Volney D. graduated from the Janesville high school in 1894, and is now cashier for the American Express Co. at Green Bay, Wis. Abbie Atwood graduated from the Janesville high school in 1895, and has been a teacher in the public schools of the city since that time. Mary Lea, who graduated in 1898, is at home. Harry C., who graduated in 1900, is now in the Merchants & Mechanics Bank.

The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Atwood, Zuri Shaddai Doty, was a native of New York, and of the seventh generation in descent from the founder of the family in America, who came over in the "Mayflower." His father was a soldier in the Revolution, and Mrs. Atwood is a member of the Daughters of the Revolution. In 1841 Zuri S. Doty came West, settling in Rock county, Wis., and engaged in farming for some time, until he removed to Janesville and embarked in the manufacture of sashes, doors and blinds, and all kinds of millwright work. Later Mr. Doty went to Madison, then to Chicago, finally returning to Madison, where he died April 16, 1885, at the advanced age of eighty-one. During his long and useful life this good man made many friends, and his loss was deeply felt. He was three times married, and was the father of eleven children, all of whom grew to be highly respected men and women.

Ira Austin, the maternal grandfather of Mrs. Atwood, was a native of New York State, and a blacksmith by trade. He came to Turtle, Rock county, in the early days of Wisconsin, and died at Madison at an advanced age. There were two daughters in his family.

E. Philo Doty, father of Mrs. Atwood, a native of Lockport, N. Y., left his native State when yet a boy, in 1841, and came West with his parents, who as above stated settled in Turtle, Rock county, removing thence to Janesville. After attaining mature years he engaged with his father in the sash, door and blind factory, and manufactured a specialty known as the Doty washing machine, the company producing it being known as the Doty Manufacturing Co. Mr. Doty continued in this business until his death, in 1869, when he was but forty-three years of age, and his widow (now aged sixty-eight) still survives, residing with her son-in-law, Judge Fifield. She is an Episcopalian, while Mr. Doty was a Universalist. Five children, two sons and three daughters, were born to Mr. and Mrs. E. Philo Doty, of whom three are still living: Alta M., Mrs. Atwood; Edward Philo, of Janesville; and Anna S., wife of Judge Charles L. Fifield, of Janesville. One brother of Mrs. Atwood, Henry Doty, lived in Janesville many years, and died in 1894. He was secretary of the Doty Manufacturing Co., and also the founder of the incandescent light company in Janesville, being at first the proprietor, but later, as the increasing volume of business demanded, the concern was incorporated.

Mrs. Atwood is an earnest worker in and consistent member of the Episcopal Church, and both she and her husband are very popular. In their pleasant home, where Mr. Atwood has resided for twenty-five years, these two most estimable people dispense a cheerful hospitality, and are most justly numbered among the leading citizens of Janesville. Mr. Atwood is a member of the K. of P.; is a Republican in politics, and has served as school commissioner for two years. For twenty years he has been a member of the fire police. He was the first superintendent of the Janesville Street Railroad, holding that position until 1888, and contributed very materially to its success; the first horses purchased for use on the road were bought by Mr. Atwood.

FRANCIS ASBURY COOLEY, a retired farmer of Brodhead, Green county, is one of the older citizens of the county, where he has practically spent his entire life engaged in the cultivation of the soil. He was born in the town of Spring Grove, Green county, July 12, 1846, a son of William B. and Lucretia (Evans) Cooley, natives of New York and Kentucky, respectively.

William B. Cooley was a school teacher and Methodist minister. He came West in 1839, and taught school at Rock Island, Ill., where he was also a circuit rider for the church. In 1845 he married Lucretia Evans, who died in 1848, leaving two children: Francis Asbury and William M., of whom the latter, a railroad engineer for the past thirty years; resides in Chadron, Neb. After his wife died Mr. Cooley moved to Stephenson county, where he taught school, and later taught at what was known as the Basswood Church, in Green county, Wis. In 1850 he married Mary A. Busser, and they had seven children, four of whom are now living: Ella, the wife of G. C. Aurand, of Bowdel, S. Dak.; James N., of the same place; Frank W., superintendent of schools at Calumet, Mich.; and Homer D., a lawyer, of Everett, Wash. The father lived at Brodhead a number of years, and died in 1871, at the age of sixty-five. His widow survived until 1899, when she died at the age of seventy-four. He was town superintendent a number of years in the early days, and held various town offices. His father was Lewis Cooley, a native of Holland, and an early settler in western New York, where he reared a large family, and died at an old age. The father of Lucretia (Evans) Cooley was Enoch Evans, a native of Virginia, who moved to North Carolina in pioneer days, and then into Kentucky, where he attained historic distinction as the first mail carrier in the State. He made his journeys on horseback, and had many exciting and perilous experiences. From there he moved to Indianapolis, Ind., when it was a fort, and his last days were spent at Monroe, Wis., with his son William, and he died at the age of one hundred and one, just as the old settlers were making ready to celebrate his birthday. He was the father of seven children.

Francis Asbury Cooley has lived his entire life in Green county, and has many interesting recollections of primitive pioneer days. He vividly recalls the manufacturing of matches by hand, frequently watching his uncle at this work, and he can describe also the shingle machine and tread-power threshers his grandfather used. He can locate the ground upon which stood the log cabin homes of various early settlers, as well as that where was erected the first cabin in the township. Mr. Cooley attended the district school and the Brodhead high school. When he became a man he worked for his father a time, and then rented a part of the farm, buying it later. He owns one hundred thirty acres in the town of Spring Grove, and engaged in its cultivation until 1882, when he moved to Brodhead, purchasing his father's home from his step-mother, and there makes his own home at the present time.

On Dec. 8, 1867, Mr. Cooley married Miss Samantha Alexander, a daughter of Frederick and Elizabeth (Work) Alexander. They have one son, Walter E., who is now cultivating the old home farm; he married Miss Minnie Atkinson, and has two children, Harry and Fred. Mr. and Mrs. Cooley are members of the Methodist Church, in which he is a trustee. Socially he is a member of the Bicknell Lodge, No. 94, A. F. & A. M. Politically he is and always expects to be a Prohibitionist, and has served as supervisor one term and township assessor one year.

Frederick and Elizabeth (Work) Alexander, parents of Mrs. Cooley, were natives of Pennsylvania, of German descent. They had ten children, and six of these are now living: Priscilla, the wife of Simon Hawk, of Clermont, Iowa; Mary Ann, the wife of Moses Slawson, of Brockway, Penn.; Joseph, of Oakley, Wis.; Samantha, the wife of Mr. Cooley; Hannah, the wife of Avery Tracey, of Oakley, Wis.; and Caroline, the wife of William Tracey. Mr. Alexander was a fuller by trade, and in later life became a farmer. He came to Stephenson county, Illinois, in the spring of 1855, and in that fall moved to Fayette county, Iowa, and settled on a farm, which he occupied until 1867. That year he moved to Oakley, Wis., where he farmed for a number of years. His wife died in 1886, at the age of seventy-three. He died in August of the following year, at the age of eighty. They were devout members of the Methodist Church.

JAMES G. KIRKPATRICK, deceased. To note in this biography that our lamented subject was born in 1813, takes the mind far back over an eventful epoch of history, to a time when there were no railroads or telegraphs, and the wonders of science without which we imagine we could scarcely exist were still undiscovered. But in those days brave men and women were born and lived eventful lives, often setting before the present generation examples of industry, patience, energy and indomitable perseverance which should not be lost upon it.

James G. Kirkpatrick was a native of the State of Georgia, a worthy son of James and Sarah (Pettajohn) Kirkpatrick, both of whom were reared in the South. Some time previous to 1832 they migrated to Illinois, and at that time, when the Territory of Wisconsin was opened up for settlement, the parents of our subject were among the first pioneers to venture into the wilderness. Locating near Arthur, in Grant county, they lived there until many years had fallen upon them, and died surrounded by numerous descendants.

Our subject received his education in Illinois, there grew to manhood, and accompanied the family to Wisconsin, where he took part in the Black Hawk war, coming home unscathed. In 1840 he was united in marriage to Miss Caroline Newman, the estimable daughter of John and Nancy (Jones) Newman. John Newman was born in Pennsylvania in 1793, and his wife was a native of Kentucky, born Dec. 6, 1803. After their marriage they lived in Madison county, Ill., until 1836, when they moved to Wisconsin and settled near Arthur, in Grant county, there passing the remainder of their lives. Mr. Newman erected upon a part of his property the first gristmill in Wisconsin. The eight children reared by Mr. and Mrs. Newman were: Caroline, Mrs. Kirkpatrick, who was born March 8, 1821, in Illinois; Harriet, who married Alonzo Cushman, of Iowa county; Nelson, born in 1830, who lives in the State of Iowa; John, born in 1832, residing in Nebraska; Capt. Jefferson, born in 1833, who was killed in the battle of the Wilderness during the Civil war, while serving as captain of Company C, 7th Wis. V. I. (he left a wife and two children, who reside in Chicago); William, born in 1836, who crossed the Plains to California, and was drowned in crossing the Feather river, in 1862; Jane, born in 1839, married to Philo Medley, of Grant county; and Eliza, born in 1843, married to John Enloe, of Lafayette county.

After marriage our subject and his wife started to clear up a farm near Arthur, in Grant county, being among the pioneers in that locality. In those days the country still remained in many portions almost a wilderness, and the tales that Mrs. Kirkpatrick can still tell of that early time in the county are many and exciting, filled with adventures with Indians, with floods and prairie fires, but all of these events seem to have but strengthened in her that strong and helpful nature which still is shown at the advanced age of eighty years. In 1866 they sold this farm and bought another in Iowa county, which was also improved, and sold in 1900; Mr. Kirkpatrick's last purchase was in Belmont township, Lafayette county, which he made his home until his death, in 1897.

Besides cheerfully assisting her husband as only a noble woman can, never complaining of the privations to which she was obliged to submit, Mrs. Kirkpatrick also bore and reared her family of five children to respected manhood and womanhood. We have the following record of the family: (1) Samuel, born in 1841 in Grant county, became a member of the 11th Wis. V. I., during the Civil war, served faithfully for four years, and now resides in Platteville. (2) Charles, born in Iowa county in 1845, married Anna Lytle, a daughter of James and Elizabeth (Gillam) Lytle, of Lancaster county, Neb., the former a native of Ohio and the latter of Illinois. They were residents of Platteville until 1868, when they removed to Nebraska, where Mrs. Lytle died, and he is now a resident of Colorado. Mrs. Charles Kirkpatrick was born in Platteville in 1861. They reside on their farm in Cass county, Neb., and have one daughter, Bessie. (3) John, born in 1848, married Mary A. Davis, of Belmont, who died, leaving one son, Lewis E., who died in 1898, the father now living in South Dakota. (4) Isabel, born in 1851, married Charles Bomley, a farmer of Iowa county. (5) Nancy E., born in 1860, is the wife of Charles Martin, a farmer of Iowa county; his seven children are Dora, Ethel, Virgil, Rascal, Leo, Beulah, and Erma.

In politics our subject was always devoted to the principles of Jackson Democracy, and as nearly as possible lived up to them. Among the old neighbors and friends who have known Mrs. Kirkpatrick so long, and who affectionately remember our subject, this lovable and intelligent lady is passing a peaceful and happy old age. For many years the cares of life set heavily upon her, but she has now the great satisfaction of knowing that her children are all well placed in life, and her influence has gone out for good wherever she has been known. Many will be saddened when "grandmother" no longer greets them from her accustomed corner.

JOHN BURGIN SMITH, a well-to-do farmer in the town of Bradford, Rock county, was born May 6, 1842, on the place which he still owns, and adjoining the one on which he resides, and comes of an English parentage.

John Smith, his father, was born in England March 10, 1818, and accompanied his parents to the United States when he was a lad of eleven years. They settled in New York, and moved from there to Michigan, where the elder Smith, named Joseph (the grandfather of John B.), was a contractor on government works in 1836. When that work was completed he moved to Chicago, and engaged in the business of a hotel-keeper until 1845, in which year he moved to Wisconsin, and purchased a farm near Madison, where he lived until his death, in 1868. His wife, Mary Yeatman, died about ten years earlier. They were the parents of six children, John, Alexander, Henry, Mary, Sarah and Caroline. All are deceased except the last named.

John Smith located at Bradford Center in 1839. He was a farmer. The first school, church and town meetings were all held in his house, and continued to be until suitable accommodations could be provided, which was not so easily done in pioneer days. Their various buildings were all erected later on property which he donated for sites. Mr. Smith was chairman of the town board of supervisors four years, and held public office continuously throughout life. He died in 1887, and his widow survived until 1896; their bodies are interred in Smithton cemetery. On May 14, 1840, at Naperville, Ill., Mr. Smith married Louisa Sargent, a daughter of John and Nancy (Burgin) Sargent, of New Hampshire, and they had four children, John B., Louisa A., Alfred C. and Edwin S. Louisa A. married George Wilcox and lives at Clinton, Wis. Alfred C. enlisted in Company E, 10th United States Infantry, at Lexington, Ky., and died July 28, 1867, at Fort Wadsworth, Dakota Territory. His body is buried in Smithton cemetery on the old homestead. Edwin S. married Flora Irish, of Clinton, Wis., and they are now living in that place. This family was instrumental in the organization of the Free Baptist Church of Bradford, and John Smith was among the most conspicuous of its founders. He was its main support during his life, and left the name of a devout Christian and a public-spirited and most benevolent character.

John Burgin Smith grew to manhood on the paternal acres, and received an impulse in the way of right living from his father's example that was potent in his formative days. He obtained his education in the public schools and in the academy at Allen's Grove, Wis., and when he became a young man was engaged in teaching with success. He did service as a soldier in the Union army during the war of the Rebellion, enlisting May 11, 1864, in Company A, 40th Wis. V. I., under the command of Capt. Samuel T. Lockwood. He responded to the call for one-hundred-day men, and spent the period of his enlistment in doing picket duty around the city of Memphis and helping repulse the Rebel Gen. Forrest's forces when they raided that city. He was honorably mustered out of service at Madison Sept. 21, 1864. Mr. Smith then sought a fortune in the gold mines of Montana, and spent five fairly successful years in the mountains, entering Montana in 1865, and returning home in 1871, to take the management of the old homestead farm; here has been his residence to the present time.

Mr. Smith and Miss Bertha Wright, daughter of William and Jessie (Taylor) Wright, of Janesville, Wis., were married Dec. 14, 1873. Mr. Wright was a harness maker, and had the reputation of being one of the very best workmen in his line in the State. He was born in Scotland, and came to this country in his early youth. Mr. Smith took a government contract for carrying the mails daily from Fairfield to Janesville, Wis., for a period of four years ending July 1, 1899, thereby securing a postoffice at Bradford Center, which he has kept in his house since, for the accommodation of the public. Rufus L. Rollins made an excellent record as a prompt and time-keeping carrier. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are the parents of the following children: Laura, born Jan. 14, 1875; Pearl, July 23, 1877; John Wright, April 13, 1879; and Jessie L., March 11, 1885. Laura is the present postmistress at Smithton, and was appointed by Postmaster-General Charles Emery Smith Feb. 28, 1900, to succeed her sister Pearl, who had held the office two years, and resigned to take up school teaching. Pearl is a graduate of the Clinton high school, and is now a student at the White-water (Wis.) Normal, preparing herself for her chosen work with zeal and a wise perception of its difficulties as well as advantages. Jessie is now a student at the Clinton high school, and expects to graduate in 1901. John, the only son, is at home, and is carrying on his father's farm, during the winter attending the agricultural department of Wisconsin University.

John B. Smith is independent in politics and religion, and is a man of sterling worth and character, highly regarded by his neighbors and very successful in the management of his own affairs. He is a good neighbor and a generous friend.

OSCAR M. LOOMIS is a representative citizen of Grant county, and a veteran of the Civil war. His birth took place in Cattaraugus county, N. Y., in 1834, his parents being John and Melitabel (Hadley) Loomis, the former a native of Boston, Mass., a son of a Revolutionary soldier; the mother was of Scottish descent. The parents of Mr. Loomis moved from New York when Oscar M. was one year old, settling in Ohio, where they remained for nine years, and removing then to the Territory of Wisconsin, locating near Madison. Some years later they removed into Grant county, where their last days were spent, in the town of Mount Hope.

Oscar M. Loomis was one of a family of twelve children, six sons and six daughters, and four of the sons served their country during the Civil war, Benjamin, Joseph and Oscar M. being members of the 43d Wis. V. I. Benjamin is now a resident of Bassett, Neb.; Edwin, of Boscobel, Grant county; while Oscar M., after his army service and several changes, has become one of the solid men of Fennimore, Grant county. It was in 1854 that Mr. Loomis entered into agricultural pursuits at Mount Hope, and there married Jane Tum-berry, a lady of English descent.

In 1864 Mr. Loomis enlisted, at Woodman, Grant county, was enrolled at Madison Sept. 16 as a member of the 43d Wis. V. I., and served until the close of the war, his health necessitating some three months' detention in the hospital. After his return home Mr. Loomis again resumed farming, some time later removing to the town of Woodman, where he continued that pursuit. Like many others, Mr. Loomis found that the hardships of army life had seriously impaired his health, and he finally decided to make a change in his occupation, with this end in view removing to Werley, Grant county, where he engaged in merchandising for a period of nine years, and was station agent at that place. The next four years he spent in South Dakota, since which time he has been a resident of Fennimore, with the exception of one winter which he spent in the South in search of health.

Mr. Loomis lost his first wife Oct. 28, 1877, she leaving a family of six children: Joseph, Daniel, John, Mary, Nellie and Bessie. Mr. Loomis was married later to Mary Eaton, and he and his estimable wife are valued members of the United Brethren Church. Mr. Loomis is also a member of Sam Monteith Post, G. A. R., at Fennimore, and enjoys the esteem of his associates. They can sympathize with him on account of his poor health, as their army experience is responsible for the breaking down of many an old soldier.

ARABUT LUDLOW, deceased. Few if any names are so intimately written in the inner and vital history of Monroe as that of Arabut Ludlow, farmer, merchant and banker. Gifted with that quality of good judgment that sees while the many are blind, spurred by a spirit of restless endeavor, grounded in inflexible principles of integrity, it might have been predicted that in whatever field of action he chose to exercise his talents success would have attended him. Like many other men who have risen in the world, his boyhood days were environed with obstacles and disadvantages, as if fortune, to emphasize the merit of her favored sons, had made their growth a question of strenuous endeavor.

Mr. Ludlow was closely identified with the development of Green county, Wis., for more than a half century. A Vermonter by birth, he came to the Badger State a youth of twenty years, with courage in his heart, seeking a career in the then distant West. He was born in Burlington June 21, 1818, son of James and Rosanna (Morton) Ludlow. The father was a farmer of Burlington, and the only son of a farmer of English ancestry, who lived to a good old age. To James and Rosanna Ludlow were born three children who lived to maturity: Arabut; Jane, who married Addison Macomber; and Rosanna, who married Benjamin Chenowith, of Monroe. The mother died when the youngest child was a babe, and the father for his second wife married a Miss Alexander, by whom he had one son, now deceased. The father died comparatively young in life, while visiting in New York State.

The boyhood of Arabut Ludlow was spent at the home of an uncle. He received a good education in the common schools and academy of his day, and when sixteen years of age went to live with a Mr. Waterman, who, in connection with farming, operated a carding machine and starch factory. To Mr. Waterman's care and counsel Mr. Ludlow was indebted largely for his business education, though from his mother he had inherited marked business qualities. Mr. Waterman was like a father to him, schooling him in sterling business principles, and intrusting him in a measure with the management of the carding machine and starch factory. And here during those critical formative years from sixteen to twenty Arabut Ludlow developed that sagacity and ability which attended his subsequent business career. At twenty he was ready to face new conditions. With $50 capital he left his native State in 1838 for distant Michigan, where for two years he carried the mail, on an Indian pony, between Grand Rapids and Livingston Center. Having saved his earnings, he in the fall of 1839 went to Chicago, then a struggling village. He had sold goods on his travels, and reached Chicago with a team. His services were engaged to make a trip to Green Bay, conveying a load of goods and bringing back furs. Soon discovering that there was profit in this transportation, he engaged in the business for himself, gradually shortening the trips until they ended at Madison, trading general merchandise for furs, or paying cash for the same. Mr. Ludlow conducted a thriving trade until 1846. On March 3 of that year he married, in Winnebago county, Miss Caroline C. Sanderson, daughter of John and Lydia (Harris) Sanderson, and in October of that year located at Monroe, where he started a general store and engaged actively in mercantile pursuits for many years, becoming one of the most prominent business men of Green county. In 1857 he erected a fine country home on the farm, a half mile north of the city, to which he removed with his family in that year, and where he continued to reside until his death, almost forty years later. He accumulated much property, owning at one time 2,100 acres of farm land, in addition to much real estate in the city. He improved considerable of this property, erecting among other structures the "Ludlow Hotel."

In 1854 Mr. Ludlow opened an exchange at Monroe. Two years later the firm of Ludlow, Bingham & Co. was organized, and obtained a State charter as the Bank of Monroe. In May of that year the first notes of the bank were issued. In 1864 the First National Bank of Monroe was organized, and into it in June, 1865, the old Bank of Monroe was merged,

Mr. Ludlow purchasing a large interest, and taking with him J. B. Galusha, who had been cashier of the Bank of Monroe from its organization. Mr. Galusha was elected cashier of the First National Bank, in which capacity he remained until his resignation, in 1887. Mr. Ludlow became a director in 1865, and remained on the board until his death. In 1870 he was elected vice-president, and three years later became president, holding the position continuously until his voluntary resignation, Jan. 1, 1894. He was the guiding spirit in the management of the bank, which was as well known by the name of "Ludlow's Bank" as by its real title. All his business affairs were conducted with energy and decision, but in manner and sentiment he was genial and good-humored, known to all his old friends as "Lud."

In politics Mr. Ludlow was a strong Republican. He was deeply interested in political questions, and lent his personality and force of character to the cause he espoused. But he was in no sense an office seeker. He served, however, as a delegate to the Republican National Convention at Philadelphia that nominated Gen. Grant for the Presidency. The death of Mr. Ludlow occurred April 5, 1896, in the seventy-eighth year of his age. His widow survives, and still resides in the old homestead.

Mrs. Ludlow is a native of Cambridge, Mass., and a representative of several old New England families. Her parents were natives of Massachusetts, and her father was a soldier in the war of 1812. He was of Scottish ancestry. Her maternal grandfather was of English extraction, and a soldier of the Revolutionary war, participating in the battles of Lexington and Bunker Hill and other engagements. Her daughters are now members of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and her son, Willis, is a Son of the American Revolution. To John and Lydia (Harris) Sanderson were born three children, all living, namely: Caroline C., Mrs. Ludlow; John Sanderson, of Louisiana, Mo.; and Lydia, widow of Josiah Richardson, of Brodhead, Wis. The mother died when Caroline C. was a child, and the father married for his second wife Miss Martha Blood, by whom he had one child who grew to maturity, Harriet, now widow of Cyrus Putnam, of Brodhead. Mrs. Ludlow came with her father to Chicago in the spring of 1839, and thence moved with him to Rockford, Ill. She was twenty-one years of age at the time of her marriage to Mr. Ludlow, in 1846.

To Arabut and Caroline C. Ludlow were born seven children, namely: Henry, Edwin, Irving, Willis, Addie, Nettie and Nellie. Henry is president of the First National Bank of Monroe; he married Alida Condee, and they have three children, May, Charles and Addie. Edwin is unmarried, and lives at the old homestead. Irving died young. Willis is a farmer, and lives in Monroe; he married Lottie Meeker, and they have two children living, Hattie and Harris. Addie married Homer Bingham, of Monroe; they have one daughter, Helen, and now live in Denver, where he is engaged in the lumber business. Nettie died at the age of two years. Nellie married John Flower, a real estate dealer of Denver; they have two children, Caroline and Ludlow.

MATTHEW J. WILLIAMS, a prominent farmer of Benton, Lafayette county, is a citizen whose life extends back to the days when this vicinity was the borderland for Western civilization, and who has performed a part of the hard labor necessary to develop the then unbroken wilderness. He was born in the town of New Diggings, Lafayette county, Nov. 3, 1834, and his father was Capt. Matthew Williams, of pioneer fame.

Capt. Matthew Williams was born in Cornwall, England, in 1781, and his wife, Mary Johns, was born in 1787. Their marriage was celebrated in England, and there they lived until after the birth of their seventh child, when Mr. Williams came to America to found a new home and prepare for the coming of his wife and children. He worked in the mines in Pennsylvania for a short time, and then came on to Wisconsin, purchasing land near Benton, on which he prospected for mineral two or three years. The year 1832 found him enrolled in the United States service, and an active participant in the Black Hawk war. When that sharp struggle was ended he returned to England, rejoining his wife and family. They started for America on a sailing-vessel, and landed in their new home in June, 1834. After his return to Wisconsin Capt. Williams engaged in mining, and was the discoverer of the noted "Buncome Mine." in Lafayette county. The remainder of his life was devoted to farming and mining, and he was widely known among the pioneers, taking an active part in the arduous public affairs of the day. He was a member of the Old-line Whig party, and took a keen interest in the political questions of the hour. His death occurred in April, 1843, and that of his good wife, who had borne with him all the trials and hardships of frontier life, in March, 1862. They left one son and four daughters: (1) Matthew J. is mentioned below. (2) Ann married W. R. Sampson, in England, and came to this country with her parents. They first located in Lafayette county, and later moved to Iowa county, where she died on a farm near Ridgeway, leaving a family, of whom are yet living—Mary J., wife of James S. Taylor, of Palmyra, Mo.; W. R., who was a soldier in the Civil war, now a resident of Nebraska; Samuel W., a resident of Nebraska, formerly a member of the "Bloody 2d" Wisconsin Regiment, serving throughout the Civil war; James T. (a lieutenant of the 12th Wis. V. I. during the Rebellion), also a resident of Nebraska; and Rev. Matthew W., a minister of Fremont, Neb. (3) Phillippa, born in 1824, married Judge A. C. Brown, now of Jackson, Cal. They first lived in Grant county, Wis., where he practiced law, and in 1850 moved to California, where he became judge of the courts and a very prominent man. Mrs. Brown died in 1896, leaving three children out of a family of thirteen—Mary, Maggie and George. (4) Mary married Edwin Johns, of Galena, Ill., where she died soon after her marriage. (5) Elizabeth, born in 1826, married William G. Thompson, a lawyer of New York State, later of Illinois, where he died, leaving three children—Matthew W., W. G., and Henry C., of whom W. G. is now the only survivor. Mrs. Thompson for her second husband married James S. Taylor, and located on a farm in Seymour, Lafayette county, later going to Missouri, where she died in July, 1860.

Matthew J. Williams, the only one of his generation yet living, received but a limited education in the primitive schools of New Digings. He early began farming and mining, and after his father's death became an important factor in the support of the family. His mother made her home with him up to the time of her death, in 1862. He settled on the old homestead near Benton, and has made that his home practically all his life, with the sole exception of two years passed in the mines of California, Idaho and Montana. He was fairly successful as a miner, but returned to his old home, where he has followed mining and farming together ever since. He is enterprising and industrious, and his highly cultivated fields give abundant evidence that he has a thorough knowledge of his work.

In 1860 Mr. Williams was united in marriage with Miss Mary Alexander, daughter of William and Mary Alexander, an old pioneer couple who came to this country from County Tyrone, Ireland, and located in Benton, where they both died. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander were the parents of the following children: John, of Dubuque, Iowa; Jane, wife of Richard Dent, of Benton; Eliza, wife of Jackson Brandsetter, of East Dubuque; William, of Cuba City, Grant Co., Wis.; Thomas A., of Shullsburg, Wis.; and Mary, Mrs. Williams. Mrs. Williams was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, Dec. 24, 1839, and died Jan. 6, 1901, a kind and loving wife and an affectionate mother. She was a faithful member of the Christian Church, and steadfastly endeavored to carry out her professions in her daily life. She was the mother of nine children, as follows: Mary L.; Benjamin F.; Lavena P., who died in childhood; William R. S., a railroad conductor, born in January, 1861, who married Nora Mac Breen, of Dubuque, and has one child, Marguerite; Frank B., born in December, 1864, who when a young man entered the gold fields of the Pacific coast, has visited the mines of New Mexico, traveled all over the gold fields of the West and East, and is now the owner of a gold claim in Dawson City, Klondike; Mary Luella, born in 1869, who married James E. Miller, of Lead Mine, Lafayette county, and has had four children, James L., Matthew W., Joseph L., and Mary Viola, the last named having died in childhood; Henry C., a miner in Livingston, Wis., born in 1871, who married Maggie McCauley, and has two children, Viola and an infant unnamed; George W., born in 1874, an industrious and highly respected young man, now manager of the home farm; and Lavena, born in September, 1880, educated in the home schools, who has remained at home taking care of her parents and nursing her mother through the latter's last illness. She is a lady of culture and refinement, and presides over the old home with much grace and dignity.

Politically Mr. Williams was first a Whig, and then, with the formation of the Republican party, cast his ballot in support of the new organization, and has since remained an unfaltering adherent of its principles. Socially he is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and of the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 21, of Benton; he was a charter member of the I. O. O. F. lodge at Lead Mine, having joined thirty-three years ago, and has been a member of the Benton lodge since its organization, having helped to form it. While a member of no religious denomination, he has been a liberal supporter of all church work, and has given generously to benevolent purposes, regardless of creed or sect.

FELIX C. BENNETT, a prominent citizen of Green county, Wisconsin, is at the present time living in the city of Monroe, retired from all active association with business of any sort. He has been intimately identified with the agricultural and commercial interests of the county for many years, and has always been regarded as one of its representative men. Under the first and second administrations of President Cleveland he was postmaster at Monroe, and proved a capable and popular official.

Mr. Bennett was born in Licking county, Ohio, March 28, 1839, a son of Michael and Elizabeth (Donnelly) Bennett, natives of Pennsylvania and Ohio, respectively. They were the parents of four sons and two daughters, all but one of whom are now living: Felix C.; Joseph, of Monroe; Angeline, the wife of William Parks, of Hampton, Iowa; James W., of New Birmingham, Texas; Nancy A., the wife of Asa Bailey, of Thornton, Iowa; and Wiley, deceased. The father was a farmer. He went to Ohio with his parents when a boy, and spent his earlier years in that state. In 1854 he moved to Wisconsin, and located on a farm of four hundred acres in Washington township, seven and a half miles north of Monroe. He made his home on this farm until 1870. That year he sold out all his real estate and moved into Monroe, and lived in that city until his death, in 1897, at the venerable age of eighty-five years. His wife survived him until March, 1900, when she passed away at the age of eighty-six. They had lived together nearly sixty-five years, and were members of the Christian Church. He had been a man of considerable importance, and had held various township offices when younger and more active. His father, Joseph Bennett, was of English and German descent. Mrs. Bennett's parents, Felix and Charity (McGuire) Donnelly, were of Scottish descent.

Felix C. Bennett lived in Licking county, Ohio, until he was about fifteen years old. His father was keeping a hotel at Newark during the Mexican war, and in that Ohio city Mr. Bennett grew to the age of fifteen years, when he came to Wisconsin, in company with his parents, and lived on their Green county farm for many years. He obtained a very good education in the public schools, and is a wide reader, and a deep thinker on live public questions. The business career of Mr. Bennett began by the rental of farm land in Monroe township, which he held for three years. Then the young farmer bought an eighty-acre tract in the same township, which he improved and occupied until 1875. That year he moved into Monroe, and engaged in the grocery business. He continued in that line for some twelve or fifteen years, doing very well as a tradesman and building up a fine patronage. When President Cleveland became the official head of the country it was a problem who should succeed the retiring postmaster of Monroe. Mr. Bennett easily demonstrated his possession of a standing as the leading Democratic politician of the city, and he was accordingly appointed, both in 1888 and in 1896, his second term of office expiring January 31, 1900.

In May, 1864, occurred the marriage of Felix C. Bennett and Miss Catharine Bell, the daughter of William and Nancy (Hauger) Bell. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett became the parents of two sons and two daughters, Clay W., Estella, and twins who died in infancy. Clay W., a dentist in Monroe, is the subject of a sketch found elsewhere in this work. He married Ida Roderick, and they have two children, Byron and Catherine. Estella married George E. King, a druggist in Janesville, and has one child, Helen. Mrs. King graduated from the Whitewater Normal, and for a number of years was engaged in teaching. Mrs. Catharine Bennett, the first wife of our subject, died in 1879. She was a member of the Christian Church, and a woman of fine character. Mr. Bennett was again married, Dr. Hannah C. Russell, daughter of John and Hannah (Rolfe) Russell, becoming his wife March 9, 1882. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett are associated with the Christian Church. He is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and politically is a staunch Democrat. He has served as supervisor and member of the county board from the First ward of the city of Monroe. Mr. Bennett built his present residence in 1893.

HON. JAMES H. CABANIS, who served as mayor of Platteville, Grant county, in 1900, was born in Springfield, Ill., Dec. 25, 1838, a son of George E. and Mary A. (Lantermann) Cabanis, who were the parents of two children: Jasper N. and James H., of whom more will soon be said.

George E. Cabanis was born in Kentucky in 1817, and when a young man located in Springfield, Ill., where he married Miss Lantermann, and where he followed his trade of carpenter until 1845—working in his earlier days on a boat for Abraham Lincoln. In the year last named he brought his family to Smelser township, Grant county, Wis., where he passed away in 1892, and where his widow still resides.

Jasper N. Cabanis, alluded to above, was born in Springfield, Ill., in 1836, was brought to Smelser when about nine years old, was here educated in the Platteville Academy, and here grew to manhood. Not long after the Civil war broke out he enlisted, in the 25th Wis. V. I., and died while in the service, leaving his widow, who had borne the maiden name of Hannah Richards, with one son, Leon, who now resides at Storm Lake, Iowa.

James H. Cabanis, who was but seven years old when brought to Smelser, was also educated in the old academy of the town, and for six or seven years thereafter taught in the public schools of the county. In 1867 he married Miss Ada H. Haney, a native of Grant county, and a member of one of the oldest pioneer families of Wisconsin. At marriage Mr. Cabanis settled in Georgetown village, where he was engaged in mercantile trade for over thirty years, and he also owned a large farm near by, which he cultivated to a considerable extent. In 1895 he came to Platteville, and engaged in the gents' furnishing trade and in tailoring, succeeding beyond his expectations in this line.

In 1898 Mr. Cabanis, who had become very popular both as a tradesman and as a politician, was elected mayor of Platteville on the Republican ticket by a large majority, having qualified himself for this important and responsible office by having previously filled several offices of trust and honor in Grant county, such as member of the town board of Georgetown and representative from his district in the State Legislature, in 1881 and 1882. As mayor of Platteville he exhibited great executive ability, and filled his seat with grace and dignity.

To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Cabanis have been born four children, in the following order: Mary, a graduate in music from Evanston Conservatory, Ill., and now the wife of Simon Clark, of Grant county, and the mother of three children, Florence, and the twins, Donald and Harold; Frank, who is vice-president of the Big Patch Zinc and Lead Co., of Grant county, and is manager of the mines; Harry, bookkeeper for his father; and Jennie F., a student at the State Normal School in Platteville.

Mr. and Mrs. Cabanis have been members of the Methodist Episcopal Church for more than thirty years, and still take an active part and interest in its work. Fraternally Mr. Cabanis is a Mason. He has been one of the most successful of business men, and, with Mr. Reed as his partner, owns the largest tailoring and gents' furnishing store in the city of Platteville.

HANNAH C. BENNETT, M. D., wife of Felix C. Bennett, is a daughter of John and Hannah (Rolfe) Russell, and granddaughter of Richard Russell and of Thomas and Nancy (Bailey) Rolfe. She has won a high standing in the city of Monroe, Green county, where she has lived for many years. The novelty of a woman physician may have served to attract attention in the early days, but her modest and unassuming character, genuine worth, and thorough mastery of her profession, command the confidence and trust of the public to a marked degree.

John Russell and his wife were natives of Kent, England, and when they emigrated to this country, in 1850, were accompanied by their six children, born in England. They located in Sussex, Waukesha Co., Wis., where they had one child born to them. Their children were: Sarah, wife of George Hall, of Rio, Wis.; Matilda, wife of George Greengo, of Sussex; Dr. Hannah C.; Mary, widow of Owen Cordy, near Cambria, Wis.; John, of Cambria; Rolfe, of Waukesha; and Catherine, who died at the age of twenty-four. The father was a boot and shoemaker, and died in Sussex in 1883, aged seventy-four years. His wife died in 1888, aged seventy-six. They were Episcopalians. His father, Richard Russell, died in England when sixty years of age; he had ten children. He was an overseer and a lumber lawyer. Thomas Rolfe, the father of Hannah, mentioned above, was a farmer, and died in England, aged eighty-six years. He had six children.

Dr. Hannah C. (Russell) Bennett attended the common school at Sussex, and later was a student at Carroll College, Waukesha. She secured a good education, and taught school for ten years. About this time her attention was turned to the field that opened before women in the practice of medicine, and, feeling some natural adaptation to the profession, she took up the study of that science, and was graduated from the Women's Medical College in Chicago in 1876. Her own home became the field of her first practice after her graduation, and there the Doctor was engaged for five years. In 1881 Dr. Russell came to Monroe, and here she has been continuously engaged in her profession to the present time. She married Felix C. Bennett in March, 1882, and finds in her gifted and successful husband a noble associate in making life useful and helpful to the world.

NICHOLAS H. BROWN, one of the many natives of Yorkshire, England, who have contributed no little part toward the development of southwestern Wisconsin, was born in December, 1840, son of Joseph and Prudence Brown.

Joseph Brown brought his wife and family to America in 1850, and settled in the town of Benton, Lafayette county, where he found employment in the lead mines, at which he continued for three years, or until he had saved enough to purchase a farm east of Shullsburg, whither he removed. He then made farming his occupation, and greatly improved his land, continuing to reside thereon until his death, in 1864. After the death of her husband Mrs. Brown moved to Shullsburg, where she made her home until her death, in 1874. Ten children were born to this worthy couple, but two of whom survive: Isabel, born in Wisconsin, now the wife of James Prouse, a well-to-do farmer of Swartwout, Miss.; and Nicholas H.

Nicholas H. Brown had received a fair education in England before the removal of the family to this country. After they located in Wisconsin it was necessary that he go to work to contribute to the family fund, which he did, accompanying his father in the lead mines for three years, and assisting in the cultivation of the farm after its purchase. In 1874 he moved to Shullsburg, where for two years he was engaged in the grocery business, but since 1878 he has lived retired. Upon his determination to make Shullsburg his home he purchased a good home, which he still continues to occupy.

In 1867 Mr. Brown was united in marriage with Miss Annie Harrison, born in 1844, daughter of James and Martha Harrison. She was educated in the thorough schools of Alton, Ill., acquired a good literary training, and is a charming, cultured, Christian woman, who has devoted much of her life to doing good to those about her. No children have come to this marriage. Both Mr. and Mrs. Brown are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and always to be found where there is good work to be done. In politics Mr. Brown is affiliated with the Republican party, but not in the sense of being an office seeker. He is highly respected, and bears a reputation for dealing justly with all men. Fraternally he is a Knight Templar Mason, holding membership in Amicia Lodge, No. 25, F. & A. M., Shullsburg; Darlington Chapter; and Galena Commandery, No. 40.

James and Martha Harrison, the parents of Mrs. Brown, were pioneer residents of Wisconsin, formerly of Illinois. James Harrison was born in Virginia in 1807, and his wife Martha in Kentucky in 1820. After their marriage they settled in Alton, Ill., making that their home until 1845, when they came to Monticello township, Lafayette county. There his death occurred in July, 1873. Mrs. Harrison made her home after the death of her husband with her daughter, Mrs. Brown. They were the parents of four children: (1) Augusta, born in Illinois in 1838, died in April, 1883. She married Edward Vanvoorhis, who was born near the Hudson river, in New York, in October, 1826, and they resided on a farm near Gratiot for some years, then purchasing a farm east of Shullsburg. They were the parents of six children—Cornelia, wife of Daniel Kramer, of Shullsburg; William, who died in young manhood; George, deceased in early manhood; Ione, deceased; Dr. James H., a graduate of the Northwestern Medical College, of Chicago, now a practicing physician; and Isabel, who on account of failing health has made her home in Los Angeles, Cal., for five years. Mr. Vanvoorhis makes his home with his sister-in-law, Mrs. Brown. (2) William H., born in 1840, in Illinois, now a successful physician in Houston, Texas, was a surgeon of the 4th Wisconsin Volunteer Cavalry during the Civil war. (3) Isabel, deceased, a graduate of Mount Morris (Ill.) Seminary, and for a number of years a teacher in that institution, became the wife of Rev. Amos Patton, of Chicago. They resided at Lockport, Ill. She became the mother of two children—Clarence, who died in childhood; and Harrison, a popular teacher in the Illinois public schools. (4) Annie is now Mrs. Brown.

DAVID W. WATT. The family of Watt, or at least that branch thereof to which David W. Watt belongs, is of Scottish lineage. His paternal grandfather, who was also named David, a well-to-do farmer, was born in Virginia, and removed to Ohio early in life. He was the father of seven children. He died in 1868, at the age of sixty-nine.

David Watt, son of David, was the father of the influential citizen of Janesville whose life is under review. He was a farmer, as was his father, and like him, too, became dissatisfied with his surroundings in early manhood. In 1849 he went with his family from Ohio, his native State, to Wisconsin, locating first at Janesville, and removing within a few months to Green county. There he remained until 1872, his home being near Monroe. In the year last named he determined to go yet farther West, and bought a farm in the town of Hamilton, Franklin Co., Iowa. There he died six years later, in his sixty-first year, his widow following him to the grave in 1893, after attaining the age of threescore and ten. Her maiden name was Ruth Ball, and her father, Farlin Ball, who was a millwright, removed from Vermont to Wisconsin in 1849. He bought land near Monroe, and there passed the remainder of his life, dying at the age of seventy-two, respected by his neighbors. He and his wife reared a family of eight children. To David and Ruth Watt were born five sons and three daughters, of whom seven are yet living: John M., the sheriff of Franklin county, Iowa; Elizabeth, wife of Joseph Nye, of Hampton, in that State; George F., a resident of Hawarden, Iowa; Zanna, Mrs. Joseph Noggle, of Hampton; Charlotte (married); Quigley, of Iowa Falls; and David W.

David W. Watt was born in Jefferson county, Ohio, April 24, 1849, and was reared upon his father's farm in Green county, Wis. He began life's battle in 1868, when, a youth of nineteen years, he came to Janesville to enter the store of Colvin & Farnsworth, as clerk. After eighteen months' experience there he went to Chicago, where for a year he filled a position with Field, Leiter & Co. At the end of that time he returned to Janesville, and for two years following was successfully engaged in the livery business. This venture made him acquainted with many showmen, and he concluded to embark in that branch of business himself. His first associate was Burr Roblins, with whom he remained four years. For the next eight years he was connected with the Forepaughs, and for a year with Bailey & Cooper. His connection with these enterprises carried him into every quarter of the Union. While with Forepaugh & Bailey he acted as treasurer and ticket agent, and through his alertness and facility earned the sobriquet of the "lightning ticket seller." Returning to Janesville, he settled down to a more quiet life, embarking in business as a real-estate agent, in which he has been very successful.

Mr. Watt was married Jan. 4, 1872, to Josephine M., a daughter of Lorenzo and Mary Ann Dearborn, and they have had two sons, William W. and Bertie Lorenzo. The elder is a reporter on the staff of the Janesville Daily Gazette, and the younger a clerk in a shoe store. Mr. Watt is a Republican in politics, and at present (1900) holds the office of city assessor, a position for which he is well qualified by native ability, knowledge of men and recognized integrity.

RAMSEY BEAUMONT, a retired farmer, and the present mayor of Belmont, is one of the representative citizens of Lafayette county, and a man whose honorable life and upright character deserve a prominent place in the pages of a publication such as this.

Mr. Beaumont is a native of Yorkshire, England, born June 27, 1838, and is a son of Joseph and Elizabeth (Hatfield) Beaumont, both English born and bred. Joseph Beaumont, with his wife and four children, in 1845, crossed the ocean and came to Platteville, Wis., where he died in August, 1846, leaving his family alone and in a strange land. Mrs. Beaumont, however, was a woman of a brave spirit, and she settled in that town, determined to keep her children together, and give them a schooling that would fit them for a successful career in the new country. And there, after two years, she married her second husband, John Mareatt, of that city. He was also English born and bred, and a man of much energy and force of character. They moved to Kendall township, in 1850, and settled near what is locally known as the "lighthouse," put up by Stephen Rockwell, to show people the way across the prairie at night. Ramsey Beaumont was the eldest child of his parents, and his brother George their second son. Both were born in England. They were old enough at the breaking out of the Civil war to enlist, and George became a member of Company E, 11th Wis. V. I., under Col. Harris, a West Point graduate. The regiment was in service during the entire war, having re-enlisted in February, 1864, and mustered in as a veteran organization, and was in some of the most stirring scenes and battles of that great struggle. It was mustered out in June, 1865. While in the service Mr. Beaumont contracted chronic diarrhea, and he died six weeks after returning home. During his service he had a furlough, came home, and married Miss Elizabeth Good, daughter of Charles Good, of Elk Grove, Lafayette county. No children were born to this union. Mary Beaumont, born in England, is now the wife of Henry Feathers, a retired farmer of Belmont, and is the mother of eleven children. Mariah Beaumont, born in England, is the widow of Arthur Brewer, of Cuba City, Grant county, and has a family of six children, William, Minnie, Richard, Frank, Albert, and Wallie. Joseph Beaumont, born in Platteville, in December, 1845, is now living on his farm in Adams county, Iowa. He married Anna Blewit, of Lafayette county, and they have had a family of four children; Mary, Nellie, Willie and Emma.

Ramsey Beaumont grew to manhood on the farm, and received his education in the district schools, and, though it was neither very profound nor extensive, he was a close student, and has made the most of the somewhat deficient teaching of a generation ago. In 1860 he married Miss Ellen Yaw, a native of Ashtabula county, Ohio, and the daughter of Joseph and Mary A. (Beckwith) Yaw. Her father was born in New York, and her mother in Connecticut, coming of good old Revolutionary stock. Mrs. Beaumont received her education mainly in Ohio, as her parents came to Wisconsin in 1853. After his marriage Mr. Beaumont bought a prairie farm in Kendall township, where he erected ample buildings, and improved the place so that it has become one of the choice farms of the county. In 1896 he bought a location and put up a residence in Belmont, which at once became his home. Here he has lived a quiet and peaceful life, and is enjoying a well-earned rest from the hard labor of his earlier years. He has been one of the hard-working and successful farmers of Lafayette county, and has so managed his affairs that in his old age he is not dependent, but enjoys an ample competence, and can live comfortably and at his ease. Mrs. Beaumont passed away Nov. 10, 1900, and is buried at Belmont. Mr. and Mrs. Beaumont had eleven children, of whom five are now living: Spencer and Jennie died when they had reached the age of two years, the others in infancy. Laura was born in Lafayette county in 1863, and studied in the Normal School at Platteville; she is now the wife of Henry Westrope, a hardware merchant of Corning, Iowa, and is the mother of two children, Ellen and Allen. Rosie was born on the homestead farm in Lafayette county, and is living with her parents. Joseph, born in 1872, married Miss Ada Hasker, of Shullsburg, and resides on his father's farm; they have two children, Addison and Howard. Albert was born in 1875, married Miss Lizzie Metcalf, of Shullsburg, and shares the cultivation of his father's farm with his older brother. John, born in 1881, is unmarried, and is residing in Wisconsin. Brothers of Mrs. Beaumont are living in Belvidere, Ill., Cedar Falls, Iowa, Iowa Falls and Alexander, Iowa, and all are prominent and successful business men.

Mr. Beaumont is a Republican, and is regarded as one of the leading men of the party in Lafayette county. He has held different town offices, and is now serving his third year as president of the village board. He is a member of the Episcopal Church, while his wife was a Methodist. Fraternally Mr. Beaumont is a Mason, and a member of Star Lodge, No. 64, A. F. & A. M., at Darlington. He is regarded as one of the solid and reliable men of Lafayette county, and is very popular in every walk of life, an esteem which his wife fully shared.

EDWIN AZRO CHARLTON, deceased, of Brodhead, Green county, is remembered as one of the most intelligent and highly cultured members of the Press Association of Wisconsin. He had a fine mind naturally, and had cultivated it under the shadows of the most classic centers of old New England. He was a lover of knowledge, and had drunk deep of the Pierian spring that flows eternally for great and noble souls.

Mr. Charlton was born in Littleton, N. H., Sept. 29, 1828, and was the eldest child of Walter and Mindwell (Moulton) Charlton. His parents had five children: Edwin A.; Anna, now Mrs. Hiram Long, of Marceline, Mo.; Myra, Mrs. A. W. Gee, of Manchester, N. H.; Augusta, Mrs. H. H. Rodliff, of Chelmsford, Mass.; and LeRoy, who died in childhood. The parents were intelligent and cultivated people, and both had taught school in their earlier years. For six years after marriage they lived at Littleton, and then moved into the wilderness near the Canada line. There young Edwin attended the district school, and when he reached the age of sixteen was sent back to Littleton to attend a select school taught by Harry Bingham, A. B., then a recent graduate of Dartmouth. In 1845 the senior Charlton moved to Hanover, N. H., for the sake of better schooling for his children. This change was a decided sacrifice on his part, as he had risen to considerable prominence in Orleans county, Vt., and had been elected to a number of important official positions.

At Hanover Edwin A. Charlton prepared for college at the Academy, which was established as "Moore's Indian Charity School." Here he worked and studied for about two years, and then the family moved to Claremont, making that place their home for many years. There Edwin worked on the farm, in the factory, and attended school, and in the fall of 1850 entered Dartmouth College. He taught every winter, keeping up his college work outside to such effect that he was graduated with his class in 1854, with a standing that ranked him in the first third. The class had fifty-seven members, and this is a record rarely surpassed in brilliant scholarship and studious application. It gave him entrance to the honorary Phi Beta Kappa Society, and an enviable name in the world of letters.

After leaving college Mr. Charlton was principal of the academy at Haverhill one year, and in 1855 was preceptor of the academy at Gilmanton. He studied law for a time in the office of Freeman & McClure, but in 1857 was called to Lockport, N. Y., to take the position of principal of the Union School. He was in this place four years, and did such satisfactory and congenial work that he gave up all thought of the law, and devoted his life to teaching. Mr. Charlton was vice-principal of the Union School at Schenectady, where he remained until the summer of 1862. In March of that year he was married to Miss Helen Elizabeth, daughter of Judge Alfred Holmes, of Lockport, N. Y., and the same fall went back to Gilmanton to assume the duties of the preceptor of the Academy. The next year he was made superintendent of the Union Schools at Schenectady, and held that position five years. He was superintendent and principal of the high school at Auburn, N. Y., for two years, and, finding a change of climate imperative, came to Wisconsin, and became president of the first Normal School established in this State, the one at Platteville. He held this office eight years and one term, and in that time firmly established the school upon solid ground, and in his teaching and planning largely anticipated the work that has since been done by normal trainers.

In 1879 Mr. Charlton retired from the school room and entered upon a new calling, one, however, for which his great literary gifts and fine business abilities fitted him to a high degree. That year he bought the Brodhead Independent, a weekly publication, and devoted himself to its editing and publishing. The paper has greatly increased in its circulation, not only while he published it, but under the magic of his name, and is one of the most successful newspaper publications of the State. He was cordially received by his associates in the Press; was a delegate to the National Editorial Association, held at Boston in 1890, and in the State Association he held several offices. He was twice clerk in the Wisconsin Legislature; comparing clerk in the Assembly in 1887, and in 1895 proof-reader in the Senate. His continued interest in school work was shown by the fact that in 1884 his former pupils at the Normal School made him a life member of the National Educational Association.

Mr. Charlton belonged to the Phi Delta Theta while at college, and early in life became a Mason. At Gilmanton he united with the Congregational Church, and at Schenectady joined the Presbyterian.

To Mr. and Mrs. Charlton two children were born: Walter Holmes, born at Schenectady Jan. 4, 1866, died in Lockport, N. Y., in September, 1875. Winifred Holmes was born May 13, 1874, at Platteville, completed the high school course at Brodhead, was graduated from the Normal at Platteville in 1894, and from Beloit College in 1898. She is now teaching Latin and German in the Brodhead high school.

Mr. Charlton, accompanied by his wife, attended the Grand Army Encampment and the meeting of the Knights of Pythias at Minneapolis in 1896, and returned home greatly refreshed by his journey. He was taken with severe illness shortly after his return, which developed into pneumonia beyond the power of medical help. He never rallied, but steadily declined until the end came, Nov. 14, 1896.

Such is the brief and imperfect story of a noble life, lived under lofty inspirations and desires. He sought to help the world, and was always found battling for what would improve men. He had a genial spirit and kindly heart, and a "delicate thoughtfulness for the comfort and welfare of others was his most prominent characteristic." Mrs. Charlton, in compliance with his expressed wish, still continues the publication of the Independent, and has associated with her Mr. I. L. Hanford, who entered the firm in 1892, under the name of Charlton & Hanford.

LOUIS L. HARMS. Among the prominent and enterprising citizens of Platteville is numbered the gentleman whose name introduces this sketch. As a native of Grant county, he has been identified with its interests throughout his entire life, and by honest toil and industry has succeeded in acquiring a competence.

For many years he engaged in farming, then followed merchandising for a time, and is now practically living a retired life, though he is interested in mining operations.

Mr. Harms was born in Smelser township, Oct. 7, 1853, a son of Dedrick and Maria M. (Melvin) Harms. The father was born March 30, 1805, in Hanover, Germany, where he was reared and educated, and in 1834 sailed from Bremen, arriving in New Orleans after a long and tedious voyage. By flat-boat he came up the Mississippi river to Dubuque, Iowa, where he worked at day labor, and later found employment in the mines. The same year, however, he came to Grant county, Wis., and commenced working in the mines there. At that time he was unmarried, and in very limited circumstances. In 1839 he was joined by his brother John, and together they invested their money in land, always doing business under the firm name of D. & J. Harms. Their first purchase was the claim of a Mr. Hazard, who had commenced to break the land, and to it they added from time to time as their financial resources increased, until they owned a large amount of property. The partnership between the two brothers continued until the death of Dedrick, Sept. 3, 1882. He was married in Galena, Ill., Aug. 6, 1843, to Miss Maria M. Melvin, a native of Bloomington, Ind., and a daughter of James and Sarah (Roberts) Melvin. Her mother was born in Virginia of Holland ancestry, while her father was born near the city of Baltimore, Md., and brought his family to Grant county, Wis., about 1831, becoming a farmer of Belmont township. He was a soldier in the Black Hawk war, and during those troublesome times his wife and daughter stayed at the blockhouse at Mineral Point. Both Mr. and Mrs. Melvin died in Nebraska.

After his marriage Dedrick Harms located on the old homestead in Smelser township, where he engaged in farming and stock raising throughout the remainder of his life. Although he came to the New World empty-handed, by industry and good management he became one of the most successful and substantial citizens of his community. Politically he was a Democrat, and religiously both he and his wife were members of the Lutheran Church. She departed this life March 10, 1898. Their children were as follows: John C., born June 6, 1844, died March 13, 1871;

Mary I., born Oct. 23, 1845, became the wife of C. F. Schroeder, of Platteville; Henry H., born Feb. 16, 1848, died Nov. 9, 1898; Dedrick W., born Jan. 30, 1850, died April 23, 1856; James W., born Feb. 20, 1852, is represented on another page of this volume; Louis L., of this review, is next in the order of birth; Martha J., born April 15, 1855, died June 25, 1886; Sarah E., born May 8, 1857, is the wife of Dr. A. R. Law, of Madison, Wis.; Emily M., born April 9, 1860, and George L., born April 25, 1862, both live on the old home farm; and the youngest, born Nov. 3, 1864, died in infancy.

Louis L. Harms was reared and educated in Smelser township, becoming thoroughly familiar with every department of farm work. On reaching manhood he continued to engage in agricultural pursuits until 1885, when he moved to Platteville, and embarked in general merchandising under the firm name of Sander & Harms. He sold his interest in the business three years later, and is now living retired, though interested in mining to some extent.

In Smelser township, Sept. 16, 1880, Mr. Harms was united in marriage with Miss Mary Anna Riege, who was born in that township July 8, 1859, and is a daughter of Henning and Mary Ann (Hofferkamp) Riege, the former a native of Hanover, Germany, the latter of Holland. They were among the early settlers of Smelser township, where they continued to make their home. Mr. and Mrs. Harms are the parents of four children: Benjamin H., born March 5, 1881, is now proprietor of the "Paris Hotel," at Dubuque, Iowa, and one at Maquoketa, Iowa. Lilly Ann, born June 3, 1882, died Sept. 20, 1885. Purl L., born March 12, 1885, is at home. Edith J., born April 16, 1886, died March 4, 1891.

In religious faith Mr. Harms is a Lutheran, and in politics is a Democrat. He is a member of the fire department of Platteville, and, as a public-spirited and progressive citizen, he takes an active interest in those enterprises tending to advance the moral or material welfare of his town or county. He is honored for his sterling worth, and his friends throughout this section of the State are many.

WILLIAM HENRY HUDSON. An old and honored resident of Albany township, Green county, is William Henry Hudson, who was born in Ohio, in the city of Chillicothe, June 17, 1833; although for forty-nine years he has been engaged in active life, he bears his sixty-seven years with ease.

Gabriel Hudson, the paternal grandfather of our subject, was a fine specimen of the Virginia gentleman, and was prominent in political life in his State for many years. His father had willed him his slaves, but Gabriel, opposed to slavery, gave them their freedom, and left home on account of this action. He had been a brave soldier during the war of 1812. The maternal grandfather, Jared Bobo, was a native farmer of Maryland, held many public positions, and died in advanced age, having been the father of five children. James and Mary (Bobo) Hudson, parents of our subject, were natives of Virginia. They had a family of eight children: William H., our subject; Mary, wife of William Grey, of Marion, Kans.; George W., of Minonk, Ill.; and Jared, of San Antonio, Texas; the others being deceased. James Hudson was a farmer, and in 1844, moved from Ohio to Illinois, located in Lacon, bought a farm there and remained upon it until 1849, when he sold out and came to Green county, Wis. Here he purchased 120 acres in Decatur township, and there he lived until 1864, when he sold and moved into the village of Brodhead, where he died in 1866, aged sixty-nine years. His wife survived him twenty years, being eighty-six years old. Both parents were good and pious people, devoted members of the Baptist Church, he having held many township offices during earlier life.

William Henry Hudson was eleven years old when his parents removed to Illinois, and was sixteen when he came with them to Green county. Reared a farmer boy, he grew up thoroughly acquainted with all the details of agricultural life, attended the district schools, and by the time he had reached man's estate, was willing and prepared to encounter life for himself. His home instruction had been such as to teach him valuable lessons of thrift and economy, hence he did not work long by the month before he was ready to rent land, which he did for several seasons. The first 160 acres which he bought in Grant county was held and improved for several years, when he sold this, in order later to buy a more valuable tract, in the meantime renting land again for a short time. Buying a farm of 200 acres in Albany, he had no trouble in renting it out, nor in finally selling it. In 1870 he purchased another 160-acre farm in Albany, also rented that for a time, and later advantageously sold it.

Mr. Hudson was married Nov. 15, 1858, to Miss Helen P. Hill, a daughter of Asahel and Julia Ann (Shultz) Hill, and one daughter, Ada E., has resulted from this union. She is now the wife of J. A. Hess, of Winona, Minn. The parents of Mrs. Hudson were natives of New York, she being the only daughter. The mother died on Feb. 12, 1881, the father on Oct. 4, 1900, both of them having been consistent members of the M. E. Church. They were pioneers in Green county, in 1849, and bought the farm where, for the past forty-two years, Mr. and Mrs. Hudson have resided. The grandfather of Mrs. Hudson settled in Green county in 1836, and was obliged then to drive to Chicago, with an ox-team, in order to go to mill, a very important and necessary function in those days. He was ninety-one years old when he died, being an example of the sturdy stock of which pioneers were made.

For a short time our subject was in the mercantile business, in Albany, later spent three years in the drug business, and fourteen years in the stock business, in buying grain, and in general trading. During his residence in the township, Mr. Hudson has served as township trustee several terms and has been also on the board of supervisors. His idea of the best form of government is for a system of law whereby the weak can be protected against the strong. Among the best known and most respected people of Albany township, where their parents left honored names, they well represent the kind of citizen upon which the bulwarks of society in Green county rests.

JOHN F. WARE, a representative of the sterling worth and industry of those whom the mother country has sent to our shores, was born in Yorkshire, England, in December, 1833, and now resides in Smelser, Grant county.

Frederick and Esther (Heben) Ware, the parents of our subject, were both born in Yorkshire, England, coming to this country in 1844, and locating near Pittsburg, Penn. In 1849 they moved to Wisconsin, where he settled on a tract of wild land in Smelser, two miles west of Big Patch. At that time deer were plenty, and the surroundings were all wild, but Mr.

Ware cleared up and placed this place under a high state of cultivation before his death, in 1885. His first wife, mother of our subject, died in Pittsburg.

John F. Ware received an excellent education in the schools of Pittsburg, and after locating in Wisconsin learned the trade of miller, under John A. Woodward, of Platteville, where he was engaged when the Civil war broke out. With a number of other young men of his age, from the same town, Mr. Ware enlisted in Company F, 20th Wis. V. I., under Capt. Whitman, of Dodgeville, this command being included in the Western Army, under Gen. Logan. The regiment was chiefly employed in Missouri, following the Confederate Gen. Price, their first engagement taking place at Springfield, Mo.; and later, in 1863, the regiment succeeded in breaking up Price's army. The same year the regiment was placed under Gen. Grant, our subject taking part in the siege of Vicksburg, and participating in the expeditions on the Yazoo and Rio Grande rivers, in Texas, and then moving onto Spanish Fort, taking part in seven different battles, and continuing in the service until the close of the war, in 1865. Mr. Ware has a record of never having been off duty, or being sick enough for confinement in hospital, until within a few months of the end of the war.

Coming back to Wisconsin, Mr. Ware resumed milling at Platteville, and in 1866 was married to Miss Emma Trenary, a daughter of Philip and Isabel Trenary, both of whom were born in England; the family is an old and prominent one in Platteville. Mrs. Ware was born in Grant county in December, 1846, and was educated in the old academy at Platteville. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Ware first settled at Kendalltown, Lafayette county, where Mr. Ware engaged in milling for thirteen years, from that place moving back to Platteville; thence to Annaton; again to Platteville; thence to Rockville, Grant county, where they passed the following few years. In 1880 Mr. Ware purchased the Thomas Mill property, where he followed milling until within a few years ago, engaging in that occupation altogether twenty-nine years in Grant county. He then changed his occupation to farming and stock raising, the latter especially proving a very successful venture.

To Mr. and Mrs. Ware has been born one child, Clara B., at Kendalltown, in 1875. She was a student of the Platteville Normal for several years, but on account of poor health did not remain to graduate. In 1893 she married Joseph Andrew, of Grant county, and they reside on his farm in Smelser; one daughter, Viola, has been born to them, who was removed by death when yet a child.

Politically Mr. Ware has always been identified with the Republican party; he is a member of Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R., of Platteville; both Mr. and Mrs. Ware have long been connected with the M. E. Church, and they are highly respected. Mr. Ware was a faithful soldier, and his comrades in arms speak in the highest praise of his courage. As a citizen he possesses the confidence of the community, his many acts of kindness and Christianity endearing him to his neighbors.

FRANK P. STARR. Although not more than forty-five years old, Mr. Starr has already won an enviable reputation, both as an educator and a public officer. Endowed by nature with talents of high order, he has not failed to cultivate and improve his hereditary gifts. His father, James Starr, was of English birth, as was also his mother, whose maiden name was Amelia Butters. His parents' home was near Bristol, England, where his father carried on the trade of a butcher and shipper. Both their two children—Frank P. and Egbert J.—were born after their emigration to America. Egbert, the younger, is a resident of the township of Newark, Rock county, where both were born; it is with the life and career of Frank P. that this brief sketch has chiefly to do.

James Starr crossed the ocean in 1850, and for four years made his home in Beloit. Thence he removed to Newark township, where he bought a farm of 115 acres. His mind was receptive, and his ideas progressive. He was successful and prosperous, gradually adding to his holdings until he was the owner of 200 acres. He died in 1889, at the age of sixty-eight, while his widow yet lives upon the old homestead. Both he and his wife were members of the Established Church of England.

Frank P. Starr was born Dec. 27, 1856. His boyhood was passed upon his father's farm, and the district schools of Newark township and a select school at Beloit were the seats of learning at which he acquired his early education. The Beloit school aimed to give its pupils a sound, practical training as teachers, and Mr. Starr has proved himself one of its best equipped and most competent graduates. For some twenty years he followed the high vocation of an instructor, filling the principal's chair at the Afton (Wis.) Academy for eight years with distinguished success. The native ability and true worth of such men as he cannot long lie "under a bushel." During 1896-97 he was president of the Rock County Teachers Association, and in 1898 was elected county clerk, being re-elected in 1900. The latter office he still holds, discharging its duties to the satisfaction of the electors and exhibiting in the discharge of his duties capability of a high order. Politically he is an ardent Republican, and his rare oratorical gifts constantly force him to the front as a campaign and public speaker. He also has literary ability which has won him merited recognition. Fraternally he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, of the Royal Neighbors, and of the I. O. O. F. He is venerable consul of Florence Camp, No. 366, M. W. of A., Janesville, and a delegate to the Head Camp.

Mr. Starr was married, April 8, 1881, to Mary, a daughter of James and Mary (Matthews) Marley, and they had one daughter, May, born April 9, 1882. Mrs. Starr died Aug. 30, 1897, aged thirty-five years. On Oct. 27, 1899, Mr. Starr married Naomi Barriage, who was born May 22, 1866, in Belleville, Ontario, daughter of George and Sarah Barriage. Mr. Starr is a Congregationalist in religious connection.

J. W. THOMPSON, owner of one of the fine farms in New Diggings township, Lafayette county, is a grandson of one of the first farmers and miners in the town, Joseph Thompson by name. Joseph Thompson located here in early life, and his death occurred in 1854, his remains being laid to rest in New Diggings. Eight children were left to mourn his decease, as follows: Joseph; George; Thomas, who died in Ohio; Abram, who died in Australia; Job, a resident of Montana; Martha, deceased wife of John Hazel, of Shullsburg, Wis.; Harriet, wife of John McCoy, of Darlington; and William, father of J. W. Thompson.

William Thompson followed farming and mining on a government claim in New Diggings some years, and then purchased a tract of wild land, which he improved, and where he passed the remainder of his life. He married Margaret Rudd, who died on the old home. They were both members of the Protestant Methodist Church, and led devout Christian lives. They became the parents of five children, of whom J. W. is the eldest; Elizabeth, born in 1851, died in 1873; Charles, born in March, 1853, now a farmer at Apple River, Ill., married Annie McFadden, of Illinois, and has three children, Katie, William and Charles; Thomas, engaged in gold and silver mining in Montana, married Martha A. Shlip, and has a large family; and Margaret J., born in 1856, married Alfred Green, of Minneapolis, when her death occurred in 1886.

J. W. Thompson was born in New Diggings township in February, 1849, and the district schools afforded him his only means of acquiring an education. The loss of his parents in early life necessitated the breaking up of the home, and Mr. Thompson and his brothers and sisters were brought up in the homes of their relatives, our subject finding a home with his uncle Charles. In 1870 he settled on his father's old homestead, which he had purchased, and for eighteen years made his home there. He then purchased what is known as the John Williams farm, east of New Diggings village, and by the erection of a new house, barn and other necessary buildings has made of it an ideal country home, with all the modern improvements and conveniences science and art have made possible. He has also erected a house on part of his property for one of his sons.

In 1870 Mr. Thompson was married to Miss Jane Metcalf, daughter of William and Mary (Jackson) Metcalf, who were both born in England, and came to this country in the early 'forties, Mr. Metcalf dying soon after their arrival, and leaving his wife with five children, who are still living. Mrs. Metcalf makes her home with her children. To Mr. and Mrs. Thompson have come four children: William, born in June, 1873, now a farmer of White Oak Springs, Lafayette county, married Miss Libbie Parkins, and has one daughter, Mary. Mary, born in 1875, married Harry Lyne, of Illinois, who is now engaged in farming near Darlington, Wis.; they have two children, Nellie and an infant unnamed.

Joseph, born in 1877, now farming a part of the old home, married Miss Eva Coulthard. Clifford M. was born in March, 1894.

Mr. Thompson has always been active in the work of the Republican party, and has paid great attention to the questions of the day, of which he has a remarkable conception. He has held a number of local offices, among them being those of member of the town board and treasurer of the school board. Socially he belongs to the Knights of the Globe. In religious connection he belongs to no church, but as his wife is a member of the Protestant Methodist Church he has always contributed liberally to its support, and assisted its many worthy ventures. Mr. Thompson owes his position in the financial world largely to his own individual efforts, and has always borne a high reputation for industry and integrity, justly holding the respect of the citizens of his town.

GEORGE WEST, of Brodhead, Green county, is a retired farmer, who has passed the psalmist's limit of life to find much peace and pleasure on the farther side. He is among the older settlers of the county, and has led a long and useful life.

Mr. West was born in Erie county, N. Y., Jan. 7, 1818; and is a son of John and Avis (Bowen) West, natives of Scipio, Cayuga county, N. Y., and Vermont, respectively. Ten children were born to his parents, seven of whom are now living: George; Susan, wife of Richard Sherman, of Erie county, N. Y.; Thomas, of the same county; Elizabeth, widow of Nelson Parke, of DeKalb county, Ill.; John and Jonathan, twins, on the old place; and Avis, wife of James Hill, of Erie county, N. Y. The father was a farmer, and died in Erie county, N. Y., when almost eighty years of age. His wife lived to be eighty-seven years old. They were Quakers, and people of the highest character. His father was George West, a farmer, and of Irish descent, who was born in New York, and was the father of eight children, and who died when eighty-four years old. The father of Mrs. Avis West was Jennings Bowen, a native of New York, and of Scotch descent. He was a farmer, and the sire of a numerous family. He reached a good old age.

George West passed the first twenty years of his life on the paternal estate in Erie county, where he attended the common school, and received an impulse in the right direction from the teaching and example of his parents that has never left him. He came West in 1838, and located south of Monroe near the State line. In 1842 he made a claim of sixty acres in Stephenson county, Illinois. This he fenced, and on it built a log cabin, but he did not hold it very long, having an opportunity to sell it at a sharp advance. He then entered three "eighties" in the town of Sylvester, Green county, which he still owns. Mr. West has owned at different times about one thousand acres of Green county real estate. In more recent years he has sold quite liberally, and has helped each of his children to a start in life, but still owns a valuable farm of two hundred seventy acres. This he rented in 1874, and moved into Brodhead, where he has since lived.

Mr. West crossed the Plains in 1850, with a team and covered wagon, spending four months and four days on the trip, and spent a year in the gold mines. He built the first house in Nevada City, seventy miles from Sacramento, where he expected to make his home. He had three little children, and his wife prevailed upon him not to take them to the far West. He returned by the Isthmus of Panama, and reached home by way of the Lakes.

Mr. West and Miss Susan Winchell were married in 1839. They were the parents of twelve children, Samuel, Louisa, Avis, George Franklin, Clarissa, Mary, Alice, Ida, Nelson, and three who died in infancy. Samuel is running the home farm; he married Miss Kate Reed, and is the father of four children, George, Mattie, Nettie and Bertha. George died in early childhood, as did Louisa. Avis (deceased) married John Watt, of Hampton, Iowa; they had six children, Winchell, Gertie, Kate, Elizabeth, Arthur, and Trelore. Clarissa married (first) James Vance, and has one son, Frank K., who is now assistant cashier in the bank at Brodhead. James Vance died, and Clarissa married (second) George Truesdell, and by this union has two living sons, Harris and Jay. Mr. Truesdell died and his widow married (third) John Watt, of Hampton, Iowa. Mary married John Vance, and is the mother of ten living children, Alice, Jessie, Nettie, Samuel, George, Zoe, Zell, Kate, Glenn, and Mary. Alice married Frank Northcraft, and lives in Brodhead; she is the mother of two children, Grace and Myron. Ida married Harry Smith, and has her home in Chicago;

they have one daughter, Flossie. Nelson died when nineteen years old.

Mrs. Susan West, the first wife of Mr. West, died Oct. 15, 1893, leaving behind her tender memories as a wife and mother. She was a member of the Baptist Church. Mr. West and Mrs. Eliza Jane Decker were married Sept. 30, 1894. She was the widow of Nicholas Decker, and the daughter of Henry and Rachel Walters. Mrs. West became the mother of two children in her first marriage, Emmarilla and George Henry. The daughter died at the age of thirteen years. George Henry married Sallie Mitchell, and is the father of one son, George Clayton. Mrs. Sallie (Mitchell) Decker died, and George married his second wife, Miss Ida L. Byrne; they live two miles from Juda, and have two children, Valliere Gwendolin and Howard Sterling. Mrs. West is a Baptist, but her husband clings to his ancestral faith, and firmly holds to the tenets of the Quaker order. He was a Whig and for many years has voted the Republican ticket. He owns a nice home in the north part of the town, and is highly respected by all who know him.

Mrs. West's father was a native of Germany, and came to America when nine years old, and grew up in Ohio. He died in Kansas about 1871, when sixty-six years old, and his wife, a native of Pennsylvania, died in 1863, at the age of forty-nine. They had eight children, six of whom are now living, Eliza, the wife of George West; Sarah Ann, the wife of George Atkinson; Adeline, the wife of L. W. Lord; Hester, wife of C. A. Francisco; John and Archibald Walters. The parents came to Decatur township in 1846, and in 1861 went to Kansas, where they died.

COL. H. H. VIRGIN, a veteran of the Civil war, and now living in retirement in his native city of Platteville, Grant county, was born in 1840, a son of N. H. and Emma (Weed) Virgin, natives of Pennsylvania.

N. H. Virgin came to Wisconsin as early as 1830, and here married. He became very popular and prominent among his fellow citizens, was elected to the State Legislature, was one of the prime promoters of the State Normal School at Platteville, and was tireless in his labors to advance the prosperity of his town whenever he had an opportunity of so doing. His wife bore him seven children, of whom three still survive. She was called away in 1884, and his own death occurred in 1892, Platteville losing thereby one of her most useful and honored citizens. The three living children alluded to are Emma, wife of George Laughton, of Racine, he being a substantial and leading business man of that city; Mary, widow of William Laughton, of South Bend, Ind.; and Col. H. H.

Col. H. H. Virgin was graduated from the Platteville Academy, Platteville, and from a commercial college at Madison. He enlisted in the volunteer service at the outbreak of the war of the Rebellion, and nobly and bravely fought to save the honor of his country's flag and to preserve the Union intact. The first year he served as battalion adjutant in the 2d Wisconsin Cavalry, Col. C. C. Washburn's regiment, and the last three years was with the 33d Wis. V. I. During the Red River expedition he took command of a brigade at Yellow Bayou, and by a charge on Gen. Major's (formerly Gen. Taylor's) Brigade, known as Taylor's Texas Brigade, succeeded in turning the tide of battle. He took part in over forty battles, had three horses shot under him, and rose to the rank of colonel, serving until the close of the struggle.

In 1874 Col. Virgin married Miss Annie E. Kane, of Dodgeville, the estimable and accomplished daughter of William and Mary (McArthur) Kane. William Kane was a son of John Kane, a leading merchant of Baltimore, Md., came to Wisconsin in an early day, and embarked in general merchandising at Mineral Point, Iowa county, where he died in 1845, leaving his widow with three children, viz.: Annie E., Mrs. Virgin; Mary, who died when a young lady; and John L., who died in 1898, Mineral Wells, Texas, where he was known as the "Cotton-Seed King."

Col. Virgin and his wife on their marriage settled in Platteville, where the Colonel was engaged in business, and owned one of the most luxurious homes in the city. There have been born to them two daughters, viz.: Georgie, who is one of the most highly accomplished young ladies of the city, having graduated from the State Normal School and the State University at Madison; Ethel Lyn, who was also graduated from the State Normal School and the State University, and in November, 1899, was married to George O'Neil, a solid business man of Milwaukee. The Virgin family are members of the Episcopal Church, and politically Col. Virgin has for some years been identified with the Democratic party.

In July, 1899, Mrs. Virgin and her two daughters made the "grand tour" of Europe, visiting Belfast, Ireland, the Isle of Man, Edinburgh and the north of Scotland, London, Paris, Geneva, journeying down the Rhine to Cologne, to Brussels, Antwerp, Amsterdam, Berlin, Dresden, Vienna, Venice, Florence, Rome and Naples, and finally returning to the land of their nativity. Col. Virgin and his wife are now living in elegant retirement, being among the wealthiest and most honored residents of Platteville.

WINFIELD SCOTT PECKHAM (deceased). Among those who have been instrumental in building up the present civilization of Green county, and have left a marked impression upon their generation, was Winfield Scott Peckham, the subject of this sketch, who passed out of life on April 15, 1898, in his sixty-ninth year.

Mr. Peckham was born in Oneida county, N. Y., on March 19, 1829, and was a son of Abel and Ada (Brown) Peckham, who were natives of Rhode Island. They had a family of eleven children, seven now living: Nelson, of Beaver City, Oklahoma; George O., of Ashland, Wis.; Joshua, of Lincoln county, Neb.; Halsey, of Gothenburg, Neb.; Sallie, widow of Isaac Armsbury; Ada, widow of V. D. Burt, of Albany, Wis.; and Polly, wife of John Atkinson, of Pawnee City, Nebraska. The paternal grandfather of our subject was Joshua Peckham, of English stock, descended from Sir John Peckham, who came from England to Newport, Rhode Island, in 1638. The maternal grandfather of our subject was a native of Rhode Island, a soldier in the war of 1812, who located, when an old man, with his son in Illinois, where he died, aged about eighty years. He was a son of a well-known Baptist minister, Nathan Brown.

Abel Peckham, the father of our subject, came from Chautauqua county, N. Y., to Green county, Wis., in 1851, and located in a farm of eighty acres in Albany township. In the log house standing on this farm the family lived until 1856, when Mr. Peckham erected a commodious brick house, where he remained all his life. His birth occurred in 1798, in Grafton, Rensselaer Co., N. Y., and after a useful and busy life his death occurred in 1864. In 1820 he married Ada Brown, who was born in Petersburg, N. Y., in 1800. In 1822 Mr. and Mrs. Peckham moved to Trenton, in Oneida county, where he worked at the cooper's trade for many years. Later on in life the family settled on a farm in Chautauqua county, where Mr. Peckham cleared up the land and lived until his removal to Wisconsin.

Winfield Scott Peckham remained under the parental roof until 1849, when he removed to Wisconsin, locating in the city of Milwaukee, where he remained four years, working at his trade of cooper. In 1853 he came to Albany, with the intention of devoting his time to farming, and here bought eighty acres of land on Section 35, which he improved, while continuing work at his trade, which in those days was a very lucrative one.

On Jan. 1, 1862, Mr. Peckham was married to Mrs. Eleanor (Bailey) Turner, the widow of Merritt Turner, of Luzerne county, Penn. After his marriage he erected a small frame house on his land, in which he lived one year, when he purchased eighty acres of Section 27, where they lived two years, and in the fall of 1866 he moved to his father's place on Section 26, which until the spring of 1887 was the family home. At that time advancing years and the acquisition of a competency caused Mr. Peckham to decide on removal into the neighboring village of Albany. Building one of the most commodious and complete houses in the town, the family removed to it, and there the kind and generous father breathed his last. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Peckham: George T. married Cora Belle Price, and now lives on the old farm, with four children, Everett, Lester, Harry and Jessie; Lydia M. married Edward Phelps, of Albany, and they have a family of nine children, Florence, Dana, Roy, Marion, Eleanor, Edna, Chester, Lila and Ivan. By her former marriage Mrs. Peckham had two children: Gilas H., who married Maria Finn, and lives in Albany township, near the village, with three children, Lelia, Claudia, and Hallie; and Lowell E., who married Ida Peckham, and has four children, Effie, Annie, Glennie and George, the father dying in 1896.

Mrs. Peckham was the daughter of Harry and Mercy (Colvin) Bailey, natives of Rhode Island, who moved to Pennsylvania when quite young. They had fourteen children, eight of whom survive: Mrs. Peckham; Otis, of Oakley, Penn.; Henry, of Richland county, Wis.; Perlina, wife of Halsey Peckham, of Gothenburg, Neb.; Albert, of Richland county; Huldah, Mrs. Brown, of Ashland, Oregon; Jason, of Cadott, Wis.; and Polly, wife of James Smith, of Gering, Neb. The parents located in Richland county, Wis., in 1855, buying a large tract of land; the father dying in 1883, the mother in 1879, both having been good and worthy members of the Baptist Church. Mrs. Peckham is connected with the Methodist Church.

All his life Winfield S. Peckham voted with the Republican party, firmly advocating its principles. A prominent and influential man, he filled many local positions, and on account of his interest in school matters was made clerk of the educational board, both in the country and in the village. Mr. Peckham left behind him a record of an industrious, self-respecting life, and in his death Green county lost a most estimable citizen.

HON. CHARLES HENRY BAXTER, a leading, progressive citizen of Lancaster, Grant county, who represented the Sixteenth Senatorial District in the Wisconsin Senate in 1893-95-97-99, is a worthy representative of one of the well-known families of Grant county. The paternal ancestry of the Baxter family is of English origin, and is traced in a direct line back to Richard Baxter, famous in Christian literature.

Dr. Hiram Baxter, father of our subject, was born in New York State, where he married Elizabeth Decker, who was descended from an early Dutch family of the State of New York. In 1856 he migrated to Wisconsin with his family, and settled at Lancaster. He was a prominent and widely-known physician, and continued in practice up to the time of his death, in 1866, while yet not an old man, being but sixty-one years of age. His wife had passed away the previous year. They were the parents of four sons who attained to mature years: William, the eldest, a druggist by occupation, died at Lancaster in 1885; Daniel N. was a soldier in the war for the Union, serving in Company K, 47th Wis. V. I.; Charles Henry is third in the order of birth; and the fourth, H. G., is a resident of Grant county.

Charles Henry Baxter was born Nov. 15,

Chas. Buxton

1841, on the historic grounds of Stillwater, Saratoga Co., N. Y., and was about fifteen years of age when the family moved to Wisconsin. He was educated in the public schools of his native State and of Wisconsin, and in 1860 commenced business life as a clerk in the store of George Howe, of Lancaster. In August, 1862, having decided to enter the military service of his country in defense of the Union, he enrolled in Company C, 25th Wis. V. I. He enlisted at Lancaster, and was mustered into the United States service at La Crosse. The Indians at that time being troublesome, his regiment was ordered to the Minnesota frontier, but in the following February proceeded to Columbus, Ky.; thence marched by Snyder's Bluff, and from there to Helena, Ark., suffering severely from the malaria of the country. Mr. Baxter continued with his regiment, which was sadly decimated by disease, and was finally attacked with chronic diarrhea and taken to the hospital at Mound City, Ill., where he remained until his discharge, in August following. Returning to Lancaster, he there remained until the spring of 1864, when, having sufficiently recovered to re-enter the service, he again enlisted, this time in Company A, 41st Wis. V. I., and was mustered into the service at Camp Washburn, Milwaukee. He accompanied the regiment to Memphis, Tenn., and served on detached duty at the headquarters of the adjutant, and a little later on the staff of Gen. C. C. Washburn, doing duty at headquarters until he was mustered out, in September, 1864. In January, 1865, he received a captain's commission, and was assigned to Company K, 47th Wis. V. I. After organization, at Madison, the regiment was ordered to report to Gen. Thomas, at Nashville. It was stationed at Tullahoma, where Capt. Baxter, as ranking officer, was frequently in command of the regiment. Later he was detached and made chief of ordnance of the Middle District of Tennessee, on the staff of Gen. Milroy. After the latter was mustered out, Capt. Baxter was transferred to the staff of Gen. Van Cleve, and held his position throughout the remainder of his term.

On his return to Lancaster, our subject engaged in business with George Howe, and continued in that business, the firm being Charles H. Baxter & Co., until August, 1895, when he retired. The business of the firm was an extensive one, as in addition to general merchandising they dealt in lumber, coal and live stock. Since his retirement our subject has been elected vice-president of the State Bank of Grant County.

Mr. Baxter has been called upon to hold various official positions in his city and county. He has served in the council, and as mayor of Lancaster; as member of the county board of supervisors; member of the State central committee for eight years; chairman of the county central committee for twenty years; president of the Southwestern Wisconsin Veterans' Association for ten years; delegate-at-large to the G. A. R. encampment in 1885; also to that held in Boston, Mass., in 1890. He was the Republican candidate for the Assembly in 1886; was elected to the State Senate in 1892, John Bremer being his Democratic opponent; and was re-elected in 1896 by a largely increased majority, Morton Eastman being the Democratic candidate. For three terms, 1895-97-99, Mr. Baxter was chairman of the joint committee on Claims; and he was also member of the committees on State Affairs, Banking, Insurance, and Military Affairs.

Mr. Baxter was married, Feb. 20, 1865, to Miss Maria Howe, who was born in Clinton county, N. Y., a daughter of George Howe, an honored citizen of Lancaster. Their children are George Howe (who was associated with his father in business), Laura and Martha. Mr. and Mrs. Baxter are members of the Congregational Church. In politics he has always been an ardent Republican, and prominent and influential in the councils of his party. He is one of Grant county's most progressive and public-spirited citizens, and has ever been held in high esteem.

JOHN WILFORD BLACKSTONE, in the history of whose life is interwoven much of the early history of southwestern Wisconsin, was born in Madison, Madison Co., N. Y., Oct. 18, 1796, a direct descendant of William Blackstone, the first white settler on the site of Boston, Mass. William Blackstone was born in 1600, and on July 4, 1659, wedded Sarah Stephenson. By this marriage he had a son John, born in 1661. He and his wife, Catherine, became the parents of John (2), born Jan. 18, 1699, who on April 2, 1727, wedded Elizabeth Foote, born Nov. 19, 1709. John (2) and Elizabeth (Foote) Blackstone had a son John (3), born in May, 1733, who on May 19, 1757, married Rebecca Baldwin; she was born April 18, 1734, and became the mother of Stephen Foote Blackstone.

Stephen Foote Blackstone was born Dec. 3, 1772, and on Jan. 23, 1793, married Anna Wilford, who was born April 24, 1767, a granddaughter of Richard Wilford, who was born a free citizen in London, England, in 1653, and a daughter of Joseph Wilford, who was born in Branford, Conn., about 1715. The Wilford family was represented in this country at a still earlier date by one John Wilford, of New Haven and Branford, who died unmarried; he devised his estate, which was very large, to his nephew John, of London, and Richard came over as agent of the estate for John. Stephen Foote Blackstone was born in the town of Branford, Conn., and died Jan. 14, 1862, aged eighty-nine years, one month, eleven days.

John Wilford Blackstone assisted his father in clearing a heavily wooded farm in Madison county, N. Y., and received his education by attending school as the opportunity offered. He prepared for college with the resident minister, and in 1815 entered Hamilton College, at Clinton, N. Y., whence he was graduated in 1819. In the last year of his college life he engaged with a merchant by the name of Hart, and together they loaded keel boats with merchandise, left Olean Point, N. Y., at the head waters of the Allegheny river, and passed down that stream, the Ohio and the Mississippi rivers as far as Vicksburg, selling their goods at the small towns along the way. Cincinnati at that time was a little place of about twelve hundred inhabitants. The return trip was made by skiff and on horseback, this being before the days of steamers. On his return Mr. Blackstone received his degree from Hamilton College, and studied medicine, receiving his diploma. He made his first location in Hamilton, Canada, but after a short time again started from Olean Point, this time in a skiff, in company with James Hammond. They passed down the rivers until they reached Shawneetown, Ill., where at that time there was a plant for the manufacture of salt. Just about this time the mines at Galena, Ill., began to attract the attention of the world, and vast numbers of men were flocking thither in hopes of speedily winning a fortune. In 1827 Mr. Blackstone and his friend joined this army of adventurers, and passed the first winter in the vicinity of Elizabeth, Jo Daviess Co., Ill. His mining partner at that place, whose name is unknown, was also a college graduate, and fortunately had brought with him his college text-books. These furnished the young men their only reading matter, and so with much profit to themselves they reviewed their college work during the long winter evenings. After varying fortune, both good and bad, but mostly bad, Mr. Blackstone purchased eighty acres of land in the town of White Oak Springs, Lafayette (then Iowa) Co., Wis., and began farming. He met with success this time, and at his death owned 1,500 acres of arable land, some of it valuable mining land as well.

Mr. Blackstone was associate judge under the Territory of Michigan of the large mining district comprising Iowa county, and was elected to the Territorial Legislature in 1837, from Iowa county; he was speaker of the first Territorial Assembly, held in 1838 in Madison, the present State capital. For many terms he was chairman of the town board of supervisors, and many times chairman of the county board. He was draft commissioner of Lafayette county in 1862, and justice of the peace nearly all the years he resided in White Oak Springs. During the Black Hawk war he held a lieutenant's commission in Capt. Clark's company, and was stationed at Galena.

On April 4, 1833, Mr. Blackstone was married to Mrs. Catherine Hammond, widow of his former companion, James Hammond. She was born in Rockingham county, N. C., in 1806, and passed her early life in that State and in Tennessee and Kentucky. Her maiden name was Tomlinson, and her father and two of his brothers were with Gen. Jackson, behind the cotton bales at New Orleans, when Gen. Pakenham received such a bloody repulse. Seven children were born of this union: (1) Theodore E., born Jan. 4, 1834, died at Chinook, Mont., leaving a widow, Mary E. (Hardy) Blackstone, and four sons and five daughters. (2) John Wilford Blackstone, of Shullsburg, Wis., born Dec. 22, 1835, married Ellen E. Hardy, sister of his brother Theodore's widow, and has four children—Mrs. Roccey Prince, of Minneapolis, Minn.; Jessie E., principal of the Prescott school, at Anaconda, Mont.; John Wilford Jr., editor and publisher of the Southwestern Local, of Shullsburg; and Ralph H., of Aurora, Ill. John Wilford Blackstone, son of the pioneer, was elected judge of Lafayette county at the age of twenty-five, and held the office two terms of four years each, beginning Jan. 1, 1862, and ending Jan. 1, 1870. He held the office of prosecuting attorney for the county in 1873-74, was assemblyman for the western half of the county in 1879, and State senator from Green and Lafayette counties in 1880-1881. He was educated at Platteville Academy, Beloit College and Brown University, and is by profession a lawyer. (3) Isabel, born Aug. 15, 1837, died unmarried. (4) Joseph, born Dec. 17, 1839, enlisted in the 20th Wis. V. I., in 1862, and served until the close of the war. He was sergeant major of the regiment, took part in the battle of Prairie Grove, Ark. (where he was wounded), also participated in the siege and capture of Vicksburg, and in the capture of Fort Morgan and Spanish Fort, at Mobile, Ala. He has been chairman of the town board of supervisors of Shullsburg, and chairman of the county board of Lafayette county. He resides in Shullsburg, where he has a large creamery. His wife, who was Miss Mary Emma Poole, has borne him four sons and two daughters. (5) Augustus, born Dec. 21, 1841, married Mary Jane Richardson Sept. 1, 1870, and has two sons—Adelbert L., an attorney at Waukesha, Wis.; and Bertrand A., a photographer at Platteville, Wis. (6) Eugene died unmarried. (7) Janette.

John Wilford Blackstone, the subject of this sketch, was prominent in all the affairs of his part of the State from its earliest settlement to the time of his death, Oct. 15, 1868. As one of the men who helped to lay the foundation for the great State of Wisconsin, men of broad minds, wide experience, and, in many cases, of high scholastic attainments, his name often appears in the records of his town, county and State. He was a man of great self-control, and of calm, cool judgment, and through a long life enjoyed the confidence and respect of all with whom he came in contact. Of powerful build physically, and of resolute courage, he won from the wilderness a handsome competency, and at the ripe age of seventy-two entered upon his last pilgrimage, honored and beloved by all good people.

EDWARD E. EDDINGTON has long been an old and honored resident of Janesville, and has but recently established himself on the farm which he has long owned in LaPrairie township, Rock county. For many years he has done business in Janesville, and is widely known as an upright man, a quick and capable workman, and one whose word may be taken without allowance.

Mr. Eddington was born in Cattaraugus county, N. Y., Oct. 15, 1844, a son of Augustus and Henrietta (Curtis) Eddington, both natives of New York. They had four sons and three daughters, all but one of whom are now living: Frank, of Chicago; Edward E.; Henry, of Clear Lake, Minn.; Morris, of Janesville; Betsey, wife of John Lockwood, of Clear Lake; and Millie, wife of Lucius H. Lee, of Janesville. The father was a farmer, and sought a home in the West in 1846, locating in Salem, Kenosha Co., Wis., where he bought land. Some years later he moved to a quarter section in Waushara county, but left it on account of the poverty of the soil, and tried a farm in Calumet county, returning, however, to Salem and buying a farm and farming the old homestead. He is now living in Janesville. His wife died in 1882. Mr. Eddington is a Methodist, as was also his wife. His father, John Eddington, came from England when a young man, and died in New York while still in middle life. He was a natural iron and wood mechanic, and tales of his ingenuity are still repeated in the family. He had four children. Hiram Curtis, the father of Henrietta, was a native of New York, was a soldier in the war of 1812, and lived to be a very old man. He did not have a numerous family.

Edward E. Eddington, the subject of this biographical sketch, came from the State of New York with his parents, and received his schooling at the Salem home. On May 17, 1864, he enlisted in Company C, 39th Wis. V. I., and served four months. He was at Memphis, Tenn., when the Rebel commander, Gen. Forest, made his raid on that city. After the war he learned the trade of blacksmith, and followed it in Janesville many years, doing a considerable business as a carriage and wagon maker and general blacksmith. Latterly he has been troubled with failing health, and having decided to try an entire change of occupation, he in the early part of the year 1900 moved out of the city to a farm in La Prairie township, which he has owned for many years. It contains 160 acres, and is a choice and desirable agricultural establishment.

Mr. Eddington and Miss Martha Elizabeth Read were married Nov. 4, 1874. She is a daughter of William H. and Margery Ann (Ercanbrack) Read. Four children have been born to bless this union: Jennie May, Nettie Belle, Arthur R. and Fay E. The daughters are teaching, and the sons are still at school. Our subject is a Republican, and takes an intelligent interest in public affairs.

Mrs. Eddington's father was born in Bangor, Maine, and her mother in New York. They had eight children, all but one of whom are still living: Mrs. Martha E. Eddington; George W.; John R.; Sarah Louise, wife of Homer M. Paul; William A.; Mary, deceased; Jennie, wife of Charles Campbell; and Thornton. Her father came West among the early settlers, settling in La Prairie township, Rock county, about fifty-six years ago, took up government land, and became quite prosperous. He died between the city of Janesville and his home, from heart disease, in 1880, lacking one week of being sixty-two years of age. His widow died in April, 1886, aged fifty-seven years, two months and twelve days. William H. Read's father, John Read, died in Bangor, Maine, in 1861, when over eighty years of age. Mrs. Eddington's maternal grandfather, Philip Ercanbrack, belonged to that portion of the early settlers of New York familiarly known as the Mohawk-Dutch. He came West, settled in Rock county, engaged in farming, and died in middle life; his wife, Betsey, died in Hebron, Ill. His father, James Ercanbrack, lived to be ninety-eight years old, and his mother, Mrs. Virtue Ercanbrack, lived to the age of ninety-three.

THOMAS H. EATON (deceased) is well remembered by the older settlers of Monroe, Green county, as a man of decided energy and great force of character. He served in the army during the Civil war, and contracted sickness and suffered injuries which were protracted in their effects upon his health, and shadowed his last years with chronic illness. He bore up bravely, however, and did a man's work through the threescore and ten years that were allotted to him, with the lack of less than one. Mr. Eaton was born in the town of Elk Run, Columbiana county, Ohio, April 9, 1822, and was a son of John and Sarah (Marker) Eaton. They had eleven children, all of whom have passed on to "join the great majority." John Eaton was a farmer, and served as a soldier in the war of 1812. He was a leading Democratic politician of Crawford county, Ohio, and died when upwards of seventy years of age. His father bore the name of James Eaton.

Thomas H. Eaton was taken into Crawford county, Ohio, by his parents when a small boy, and there grew to manhood. He had but little schooling, and was a thoroughly self-made man, bright, intelligent, studious, and closely observant of the ways of the world. When he became a man he learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed some years. He came West to Wisconsin about 1851, and soon after began the study of law. He was admitted to the Bar in due time, and began his legal practice in the city of Monroe. Mr. Eaton was living here at the breaking out of the Civil war, and promptly and enthusiastically espoused the cause of the Union, and rendered valuable service in the formation of several companies of soldiers. He entered in Company G, 22d Wis. V. I., as first lieutenant. He was in the service about nine months, when he received an injury to his spine that brought on effects from which he never recovered. He was brought home barely alive, and was never a well man after his return from the war.

On April 9, 1845, Mr. Eaton was married to Miss Martha Albert, a daughter of Peter and Frances (Brennermann) Albert. Five sons and one daughter were born to this union: John, Kendrick, Mary Frances, James Harvey, Charles William and George W. John died when five months old, and Kendrick when a little over three years. Mary Frances married Macletus Chapin, and lives in Monroe. James Harvey married Miss Lizzie Kasten, and lives in Monroe; he practiced law for a time, but is now manufacturing pleaters. Charles W. died when about four years old. George W. married Miss Mattie Boyer, and is a farmer in Clarno township, Green county; they have two children, Ruth Edna and James Harvey. Mr. and Mrs. Eaton were both members of the Christian Church, and lived the doctrines they professed. His widow still finds comfort and support in the faith that brightened her early life and made it possible to endure the troubles that have befallen her. Mr. Eaton was formerly a Republican, but in his later years became a Democrat. He was justice of the peace in Clarno township, and held the same office in Monroe for a number of years; served on the town board, and commanded the respect and confidence of his neighbors to a marked degree. He died April 9, 1891, aged sixty-nine years.

F. H. Eaton

The father of Mrs. Eaton was born in Germany, and came to this country when nine years old. He lived in the State of New York for a number of years. His wife was born in Pennsylvania, and after their marriage they moved to Wayne county, Ohio, where Mrs. Eaton was born June 22, 1824, at Mount Eaton. They had nine daughters and three sons, Mrs. Eaton being the youngest, and two of their children are now living: John, of Paoli, Ind.; and Mrs. Eaton. James, of Milwaukee, who was a soldier in the Civil war, died in November, 1900. John had two sons who were soldiers and lost their lives in that struggle. Peter Albert, the father of Mrs. Eaton, a tailor by trade, returned to Pennsylvania on a business trip, was taken sick, and died about 1828, when still in middle life. His father also bore the name of Peter Albert, and served in the Revolutionary war, dying in middle life. The maternal grandfather of Mrs. Eaton, Christ Brennermann, spent his entire life in the State of Pennsylvania, and served in the Revolution; he was a farmer, becoming very wealthy, and giving all his children a good start in life. Mrs. Eaton has lived in Green county forty-nine years. She was a noble helpmate to her husband, and is a good Christian woman.

The history of the Eaton family assumes large interest with the story of John Eaton, the great-great-grandfather of the gentleman whose name appears at the opening of this article. He was English born and bred, and when the Revolution of 1688 brought on civil war in Ireland he took up arms against the despot James II, and for signal gallantry at the battle of the Boyne, July 1, 1690, was rewarded by King William with a liberal grant of land in Ireland, where he established his family. His son, to whom the paternal estate descended in due time, was greatly attracted by the possibilities of life in America. He disposed of his Irish possessions, and, coming to this country, settled on the shore of Chesapeake bay, where he spent the remainder of his days. He had by his first wife three children, James, Hugh and Mary. James was born Dec. 25, 1733, on his father's estate in Ireland, and after the death of his mother and the second marriage of his father he took up his residence in London. He lived in that city seven years, and then entered the British navy, and served seven years on a man-of-war. When his term of service had expired, Mr. Eaton traveled extensively in Europe; and, finally crossing the ocean, settled at Hagerstown, Md., where the world-worn traveler found a wife in the person of Elizabeth Downey. Their children were John, Hugh, James, Elizabeth, Nancy, Rebecca and Sarah. The father was a pioneer settler in Washington county, Penn., locating, in 1779, on the headwaters of Pike Run. He died there March 31, 1814. His son, John, the father of Thomas H., of Monroe, was born April 25, 1778, at Green Spring Furnace, near Hagerstown. He went with his parents to their Pennsylvania home, where he grew to manhood, and where, at the age of eighteen, he married Catharine Marker. The fruit of this marriage was eleven children, two of whom died in infancy. The others were Elizabeth, Rebecca, William, Nancy, Sarah, Horace P., James Harvey, Reason Beall and Thomas Hawkins. John Eaton, the father, was a pioneer of Columbiana county, Ohio, where he settled about 1809. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, under Gen. William Henry Harrison, and was one of the early settlers of Crawford county, Ohio, locating in the town of Liberty in 1830. During the winter of 1830-31 he was instrumental, with the aid of the father of the "fighting McCooks," who was then clerk in one of the branches of the Ohio Legislature, in permanently fixing the county seat of Crawford county. He died in the town of Holmes, in that county, July 23, 1850. The youngest of his sons, Thomas H., grew to manhood there, and afterward came to Wisconsin, to live the honorable and useful life here recorded.

GEORGE W. WRIGHT (deceased), late of Platteville, Grant county, was born in Madison county, Ill., Aug. 4, 1827, and was a son of James C. and Sarah Wright, natives of Kentucky. The parents migrated first to Illinois, where they lived some years, and in 1828 came to Wisconsin, locating in Elk Grove, Lafayette county, where they resided until 1858, Mr. Wright following farming. They then retired to Platteville, where Mrs. Wright passed away in 1874, and Mr. Wright in 1877. They were the parents of nine children besides our subject, born in the following order: Belinda, wife of Eli Robinson, a lawyer; Permelia, deceased wife of Thomas Ginn; Emily, deceased; Martha C., deceased wife of Charles Rand; Samuel E., of Dunlap, Iowa; Harriet E., who was married to Albert Boise, and died in 1867; William H. H., also a resident of Dunlap, Iowa; Mary F., wife of the late Thomas J. Hooper, of Milwaukee, Wis.; and Austin. The parents had many trying experiences in the early days, and were "forted" twice during the Black Hawk war.

George W. Wright was educated in the Platteville Academy. In 1850 he crossed the plains to California, enduring many hardships en route, and encountering many hostile Indians. He was rewarded with success, however, while in the Golden State, where he passed eight years in the mines, and in 1858 returned to Wisconsin with a small fortune. He then for a time attended a business college in St. Louis, Mo., and in the spring of 1864 was employed by Dr. Newhall in a drug store in Galena, Ill. In 1865 he came to Platteville again and opened a pharmacy on his own account, which he conducted until 1871, when, in order to increase his scientific knowledge of pharmaceuticals, he hired a pharmacist to take charge of his business, and entered the Chicago School of Pharmacy. He was in Chicago at the time of the great fire in 1871, and with many others was hemmed in on the lake front some ten or twelve hours during that excitement. The School of Pharmacy was burned, and he then resumed the drug business, which he followed most successfully until his death, which occurred in Platteville, in September, 1892. He made many friends in the city, who, with his family, sincerely mourned the loss of an affectionate husband, an indulgent father, and a good and patriotic citizen. He had long been an Odd Fellow, and in politics was a leading Republican. Mr. Wright was a member of the Wisconsin State Pharmaceutical Association, of which he was one of the original promoters and one of the first vice-presidents.

In 1860 Mr. Wright was united in marriage with Miss Nancy E. Kell, daughter of John and Emily (Swett) Kell, old and respected residents of Madison, Ill., the former of whom, native of Tennessee, is now living in Missouri; the latter, a native of Illinois, was of New England descent. They reared two children: Nancy E., now Mrs. Wright; and David W., a farmer of Richmond, Mo., where his wife died, leaving three children, Nellie, Edward and Lloyd. To Mr. and Mrs. Wright were born four children, of whom three died in infancy. The survivor, Charles E., was graduated from the University of Wisconsin, at Madison, in 1888, and is the successor of his father in the drug trade at Platteville, being chief manager of the store, which is the finest in the city, and in which Mrs. Wright also holds an interest. He has become quite popular as a chemist, as well as personally, and fraternally is a member of the Odd Fellows lodge in the city.

Religiously Mrs. Wright is a member of the Congregational Church, has ever been very active in pushing forward the good work of the congregation, never being behindhand in her contributions to the support of the church itself, and is a lady of the most charitable and kindly impulses. She is a member of the Daughters of Rebekah, an adjunct of the I. O. O. F.

WILLIAM MATES, now a retired farmer making his home in Belmont, Lafayette county, is a man of venerable appearance, and the natural regard that his advanced years would command is increased by a knowledge of his upright character and unbending integrity.

Mr. Mates was born in County Wicklow, Ireland, near Dublin, in February, 1821, and is a son of Richard and Elizabeth (Burn) Mates, both Irish born and bred. His father was born in 1783, and his mother in 1790. The future Lafayette county farmer obtained his education in the schools of his native county, and lived in Ireland until he had attained maturity. In 1844 Mr. Mates left his Irish home, bound for Wisconsin, making the journey by the long and roundabout way of New Orleans and up the Mississippi to Galena, and thence overland into Lafayette county, where he worked on a farm in Elk Grove township. Returning to Ireland, he remained there about two years, and when he came to Wisconsin a second time he brought his aged parents with him, and settled them on farm land, some of which they bought from the government at a dollar and a quarter per acre. He bought more land, and now owns nearly four hundred acres in one body. Richard Mates died in 1863, and his widow survived until 1874. They had a family of seven children: Mary married a Mr. Tomlinson in Ireland, and is still living in her home country, at the age of eighty-six years; she has three children living in Ireland. Leonard was born in 1817, and came to Wisconsin at the same time his parents made the journey; as long as they lived he made his home with them, and is now an inmate of the home of his brother, the subject of this writing; he owns a good farm in Lafayette county. John was born in 1823, and grew to manhood in Ireland. After coming to Wisconsin he married Miss Kate Kinch, an Irish lady. They settled in Belmont, Wis., but later moved to Iowa, and then to South Dakota, where she died, leaving him three children, Charles, of South Dakota; Anna E., who married Mulford Johnson, and lives in South Dakota; and Marend, who lives in Iowa. Grace Mates was born in Ireland, married Hugh Livingston, and resides in Grant county, Wisconsin, where her husband died, leaving her with a family of seven children, William, John, Robert, Isabel, Mary, Grace, and Jennie. Jennie Mates, born in Ireland, came to this country with her parents, and married Joseph Livingston, a farmer in Iowa county, where she died in 1865, leaving four children—Robert, now a resident of Iowa county; Angeline, the wife of Hiram Rundel, of the same county; Hannah, the wife of John Rundel; and Elizabeth, the wife of H. Rundel, of Platteville, Wis. Richard Mates was born in Ireland in 1830, and married a Miss Sherrill, of this State, who bore him three sons, John, William and Henry, all residing in that town. He was a farmer, and followed farming until a few years ago, when he moved to Belmont, and is now not engaged in any business.

William Mates came to Lafayette county when a young man, established himself on a solid and substantial foundation, and in 1847 was married to Miss Anna Hammond, of Ireland, who was born in 1826, grew to womanhood, and received her education in her native town. She is a daughter of Richard and Annie Hammond, who died in Ireland previous to her coming to this country. Mr. and Mrs. Mates lived on their farm until 1875, when they moved to Platteville in order to give their children the advantage of the State Normal at that place. In 1883 Mr. Mates purchased a fine home on Main street, in Belmont, and here they have since made their residence. Of their family of nine children but few lived to maturity, and only one son is now living, Richard F., who is a young business man of Belmont, with a bright future ahead of him. Eliza died when she had reached young womanhood. Mary J. and Susan Grace both lived to the age of eighteen years. Martha was born on the farm, where she grew up, and married S. G. Clark, of Iowa; she died in 1892, leaving two children, Ora and William A., who make their home with their grandparents. Eunice, William, Emma and Anna died in childhood. Richard F. Mates, as noted above, is an enterprising and progressive business man of Belmont. He married Miss Susan Martin, a daughter of one of the well-to-do and old-time families of the county, and they have four children—Martin W., Elsie, Mary and Clay. He is an extensive cattle dealer and stock raiser of Lafayette county, dealing not only at home but in the Chicago markets.

William Mates has been identified with the Republican party since its first organization, and has held a number of local offices in Lafayette county, having been justice of the peace, town superintendent of schools, etc. He and his wife are Methodists, and are devout adherents of that faith. They are among the oldest residents of the county. Their large means were earned by honest toil, and to-day there is no more highly appreciated family in the county than these of whom we have been writing, for their honest lives and sympathetic spirit.

CORNELIUS BUCKLEY, of Beloit, Rock county, is an attorney-at-law, and holds a leading position at the Rock County Bar. He is well grounded in the fundamental principles of the law, and can readily apply them to the complicated details of modern and present business conditions. He is an impressive speaker before the jury, and excels in the presentation of the facts of the case and the principles of the law that govern it.

Mr. Buckley was born in Beloit April 24, 1856, and is a son of Timothy and Hannah (Kelleher) Buckley, both natives of the town of Mallow, County Cork, Ireland. They were the parents of seven children, all but one of whom are now living: Cornelius and Catherine, twins; Patrick, deceased; John, of Beloit; Mary, of Chicago; Elizabeth, the wife of John J. Sweeney, of Freeport, Ill.; and Frank, of Washington. The father came to Boston in 1853, and two years later located in Beloit, in which city he is still living. The mother died July 10, 1868, at the age of thirty-seven. Both were devout Catholics. His father, who bore the name of Cornelius Buckley, died in Ireland when a young man. The father of Hannah Kelleher also died in Ireland; he was a farmer.

Cornelius Buckley was reared to manhood in his native city, attended the parochial and public schools of Beloit, and matriculated at the State University as a student in the law department. Previous to his entrance into the law school he had studied law, and he was admitted to the Bar June 5, 1883. He was admitted to the supreme court of the State and to the United States supreme court in 1893. Mr. Buckley is also a member of the Bar of the State of Minnesota, and is authorized to practice before the court of appeals in Virginia. He was engaged in practice before the courts at Washington, D. C., in 1893, 1894 and 1895, and held there for a short time a position in the census department. He is a member of the Virginia Historical Society at Richmond, and of the Savannah Historical Society of Georgia, and fraternally is a member of the Woodmen of the World. Our subject calls himself a Jeffersonian Democrat.

Mr. Buckley and his twin sister live in the old home at No. 1243 Emerson street, their father living with them. He is regarded as an able lawyer and a careful adviser, and stands among the leaders of his profession in Beloit.

MARTIN P. RINDLAUB was born Feb. 15, 1838, on a farm four miles east of Gettysburg, Penn. During the war of the Rebellion a battle was fought so near to the family residence that the occupants could see it from the attic window.

John Andrew Christian Rindlaub, our subject's father, was born in Gottingen, Kingdom of Hanover, Germany, April 12, 1797, and came to this country in the year 1819, in a sailing-vessel, being nine weeks in crossing the ocean; he landed at Baltimore, Md. At that time there were no railroads, telegraphs, sewing machines, reaping or threshing machines, and not even lucifer matches. Mr. Rindlaub was a tailor by trade, and for a number of years he traveled from house to house in pursuit of his business. He died at the home of his son Martin P. in April, 1885, at the advanced age of eighty-eight years. On Nov. 4, 1827, he married Sophia Mummert, who was born in Adams county, Penn., daughter of Jacob Mummert, a native of York county, Penn., born Nov. 4, 1784; he died at an advanced age. Her mother, Margaret (Schrein-er), was born in Lancaster county, Penn., April 6, 1790; she also lived to a good old age. To Christian and Sophia (Mummert) Rindlaub were born children as follows: Margaret B. C., Sept. 20, 1828; Jacob H. M., Feb. 10, 1830; Dorothy H. E., April 10, 1832; J. A. Christian, Jan. 27, 1834; Susan M. S., Jan. 14, 1836; Martin P., Feb. 15, 1838; R. Sophia, June 19, 1840; Elizabeth M., April 19, 1843; Julia A., Oct. 7, 1848. They are all living (1901) except Margaret, Christian and Elizabeth. The mother died March 28, 1866.

Martin P. Rindlaub received his education in the public schools and at Gettysburg (Penn.) College. He learned the printing business in the office of the Gettysburg (Penn.) Sentinel, Robert Goodloe Harper, proprietor, finishing in the fall of 1856. He taught school that winter, and the next summer entered Johnstown (Penn.) Academy, assisting the principal and pursuing his studies. The following winter he taught school on the western slope of the Alleghany mountains, in Cambria county, Penn., and in order to reach his school he had to walk from Altoona across the mountain, a distance of twenty-five miles. The country in which he taught was mostly covered with virgin pine timber, a few clearings here and there being the exception. There were few wagon roads, and the country was traversed mostly along trails blazed through the forest, much of the travel being on foot. The following spring the subject of this sketch came West to Warren, Ill., arriving there on the first day of June, 1858, to accept the position of foreman of the Warren Sentinel, as it was called at that time. Shortly afterward he bought a half-interest in the paper, and within a short time bought the entire plant, remaining there until the spring of 1864, when he sold the office and went to Galena for a few months, as assistant editor of the Galena Gazette. Following this he went to Lancaster, Wis. (July 1, 1864), to assume a like position in the office of the Grant County Herald, Joseph C. Cover, proprietor, and here remained until March 1, 1867, when he purchased the Grant County Witness, Platteville, of which paper he has remained the sole proprietor ever since. The paper was established in 1859.

When Mr. Rindlaub first took charge of the Witness it had only about 600 subscribers, but he immediately enlarged the paper and made other improvements which soon had the effect of running up the circulation to over 2,000, and placing it among the leading newspapers of southwestern Wisconsin. When he first came to Platteville there were only three newspapers in the county: The Herald, at Lancaster; the Broadacre, at Boscobel; and the Witness, at Platteville. Now (1901) there are thirteen. Our subject has been a member of the National Press Association, and is the present president of the Wisconsin State Press Association.

Mr. Rindlaub's parents were members of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, and early in life our subject connected himself with that body. Later on he joined the Congregational Church, in which organization he has held prominent positions among the officers of the church. He has always taken a prominent part in politics, has been chairman of the Republican Congressional District Committee, and is now chairman of the Republican Senatorial District Committee; the Assembly District Committee; and also of the Town and City Committees of Platteville. He was postmaster at Platteville during President Harrison's administration, and is at present Deputy Internal Revenue Collector for the Second District, Wisconsin. Mr. Rindlaub is a member of the Masonic fraternity, having joined in 1859, and belongs to the Chapter and Commandery; is also a member of the Masonic Veterans' Association, whose headquarters are with the Venerable Chief, Gen. J. C. Smith, Chicago; and is also a member of the I. O. O. F., and of the Encampment.

On Dec. 15, 1862, Mr. Rindlaub married Catherine Swartley Young, who is descended from two of the oldest families in Pennsylvania, the Swartleys and the Youngs. She was born at Doyleston, Bucks Co., Penn., Feb. 23, 1842. Her father, Joseph Young, of Northampton county, Penn., was the son of John and Elizabeth Young, who occupied premises that had been in the family for nearly two hundred years. Joseph Young was publisher and proprietor of a newspaper for many years. He served in the Union army during the war of the Rebellion. Mrs. Rind-laub's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Fox (Swartley) Young, died when Mrs. Rindlaub was only twenty-one days old, and she had one brother, John S. Young, who died in the summer of 1870. She received her education in the public schools, at Ingham's Seminary, in Doylestown, and at the State Normal School in Millersville, Penn., and has always taken an active part in all matters pertaining to the advancement of the social and moral condition of her sex. She is a member of the Order of the Eastern Star; of the W. R. C., in which she has been President; of the Order of Rachel Rebekahs, I. O. O. F., of which she has been President; and of the Congregational Improvement Society, of which she has been President. She is at present (1901) Department Chaplain of the Woman's Relief Corps of the State of Wisconsin, and vice-president of the Woman's Suffrage Club of Platteville; and devotes much of her time as leader of the Young Ladies Missionary Society and to mission work generally. She has also been prominently connected with W. C. T. U. work for the past twenty-two years.

Eight children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Rindlaub, as follows: William Martin, at Warren, Ill., Feb. 1, 1864; John Harry, at Lancaster, Wis., May 1, 1865; Kate Swartley, at Lancaster, Nov. 29, 1866; Emma Gertrude, at Platteville, Feb. 12, 1869; Ada Sophia, at Platteville, Jan. 17, 1871 (died April 11, 1880); Elizabeth Pond, at Platteville, Jan. 27, 1873; Martin Phillip, at Platteville, Nov. 6, 1874; Julia Hill, at Platteville, Oct. 17, 1880. The eldest, William M., married Miss Nina Bean, of La Crosse. He is one of the editors and business manager of the Witness. John H. graduated from the State Normal School, after which he studied medicine at Columbia Medical College, Washington, D. C., and also took special courses, at Georgetown College and at Bellevue. He then spent a year in Europe, studying in the cities of Berlin, Vienna, Edinburgh and London, and in 1896 located at Fargo, Wis., confining his practice to diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat. Kate S. married John H. Robertson, a jeweler and oculist, located at Morrison, Ill.; they have one child, Martin Rindlaub Robertson. Emma Gertrude is at home with her parents. Elizabeth P. graduated from the State Normal School, Platteville, took a four years' course in medicine at Ann Arbor (Mich.) University, and afterward a special course at Philadelphia, and is now with her brother at Fargo, as his assistant. Martin P., Jr., graduated from the State Normal School, Platteville, then graduated in the literary course in the Wisconsin State University, and for three years has held the chair of Latin in the Platteville Normal School. At the close of the last school year he was granted a year's leave of absence by the Board of Regents, and now he and his youngest sister, Julia, who graduated at the Platteville Normal last year (1900), are spending a year in study and travel in Europe.

OTTO F. GEIGER is a leading representative of the business interests of Cassville, Grant county, being a member of the well-known firm of Klindt, Geiger & Co., general merchants of that place. Of excellent business ability and broad resources, he has attained a prominent place among the substantial citizens of his county, and has won success by his well-directed, energetic efforts.

Mr. Geiger was born in Cassville April 3, 1859, a son of John and Christina (Nicholas) Geiger. The father was a native of Germany, and came to this country as a political refugee in 1833. Landing in New York, he remained in that city, working in a cigar factory for a time, and then went to Kaskaskia, Ill., where he engaged in mercantile business until coming to Cassville, Wis., in 1848. Here he embarked in business as a member of the firm of Raffauf & Geiger, and the old frame building in which they conducted their store is still standing near the present place of business of the firm of Klindt, Geiger & Co., having been moved to give place to the brick building erected in 1860. The firm carried on business as general merchants and grain dealers until that year, when Peter Raffauf returned to Germany, and Mr. Geiger became the sole proprietor of the store, buying his partner's interest. Under the name of John Geiger he engaged in business until his death, which occurred in December, 1873. The following year John A. Klindt purchased the property, and was alone in business until March, 1878, when the firm of Klindt, Geiger & Co. was established. In 1883, in addition to their extensive mercantile business, they erected a creamery at Cassville, which they have since conducted with marked success.

Mr. Geiger's mother died in Cassville in 1860. Otto F. is the youngest of her three children, the others being Mary, wife of Robert Hufschmidt, of Lansing, Iowa; and Gustave J., who was a partner in the business until his death, in January, 1880. The father was again married, in Cassville, his second union being with Miss Josephine Scholz, also a native of Germany. To this marriage have been born six children, namely: Wilhelmina, wife of Frank Junkermann, of Clinton, Iowa; John E., a farmer, of Thorp, Wis.; Joseph F., a resident of Cassville; F. A., an attorney of Milwaukee; Henry E., teller in a bank at Madison, Wis.; and Pauline A., of Cassville.

Reared in Cassville, Otto F. Geiger attended the public schools, and later entered the State University, at Madison, where he pursued his studies for two years. He then began his business career as a member of the firm of Klindt, Geiger & Co., with which he is still connected. It is the oldest business house in Cassville, and has the best and most extensive trade of any in this section of the State. Mr. Geiger is an energetic, enterprising business man, of known reliability, and the success that has come to him is certainly well merited. Beside his village property he owns an interest in farming land. In his political views he is a Democrat, but an advocate of sound money, and gives his support to every enterprise which he believes calculated to prove of public benefit.

DARIUS EASTMAN, for many years a resident of the township of Wayne, Lafayette county, and one of the best-known and most successful farmers and stock raisers of Southwestern Wisconsin, represents one of the pioneer families of the State, and is a descendant of one of the early emigrants to the American colonies. He was born in the town of Wayne, Ashtabula Co., Ohio, March 8, 1831, son of Amos and Ruby (Brockway) Eastman. A genealogy of the American branch of the family, compiled in recent years, states that the emigrant, Roger Eastman, was born in 1611 in Langford, County of Wilts, England, emigrating from that country to the New England colonies at an early age. In April, 1638, he sailed from Southampton in the good ship "Confidence," John Jobson, master, and in due time landed at Salem, Mass., making his first home at Salisbury. He there married, and became the father of ten children, eight sons and two daughters, whose progeny have scattered all over the country. In Part 3. of the Eastman Genealogy, there is a representation of the armorial bearings of the family.

Amos Eastman, father of Darius, was born in Canada (where his parents were temporarily residing) May 22, 1804, son of Amos Eastman, Sr. While he was still young the family removed to the State of New York, then to Pennsylvania, and later to Wayne township, Ashtabula Co., Ohio, where occurred his marriage with Ruby Brockway, who was born there May 11, 1810. In 1844, with his wife and six children, Amos Eastman left Ohio, and settled on Section 22, Wayne township, Lafayette Co., Wis., which became their future home. The father died Dec. 21, 1886, at the ripe old age of eighty-two years and seven months. The wife and mother passed away May 10, 1863. Amos Eastman was held in high esteem, and during his long residence in Wisconsin obtained possession of a large amount of land, although by trade he was a carpenter; he erected a number of the early buildings. To him belongs the honor of having given the township its name, which he called for "Mad Anthony Wayne," of Revolutionary fame. He and his wife were faithful adherents to the principles of the Free-Will Baptist Church. Their children were: Darius, mentioned below; Dr. William, of Mineral Point; Ariel A., of South Wayne; Cassius B., a member of Company B, 31st Wis. V. I., in the Civil war, who died shortly after his return from the service, of disease contracted in the army; and Lucinda and Mary, both now residents of Nebraska.

Darius Eastman was about thirteen years of age when he accompanied his parents to Wisconsin, and practically grew up in Wayne township. On Aug. 15, 1862, he entered the Union army, being assigned to Company B, 31st Wis. V. I. The regiment was actively engaged during its whole term of service. Mr. Eastman kept a diary of passing events throughout the war, which after nearly forty years is still in excellent preservation. This diary notes the various occurrences from day to day, and from it might be compiled a complete history of the regiment from the time it entered the service until the close of the war. On leaving the State the regiment went to Columbus, Ky., arriving there Sept. 25, 1863, and two days later started for Nashville, Tenn., which point it reached the following day. A short rest was allowed there, and on Oct. 5 it was transferred to Laverne, Tenn., starting on the 24th for Murfreesboro. Company B, with two other companies, was detached to guard bridges that spanned Stone river, and remained in that vicinity until the spring of 1864, when they rejoined the regiment at Murfreesboro. There, on the 11th of March, Mr. Eastman was detailed to serve in the commissary department, where he remained several months, but finally succeeded in getting permission to rejoin his regiment, then near Atlanta. Leaving Murfreesboro on Aug. 25, he reached his regiment on the 29th. The 31st then formed a part of the 3d Brigade, 1st Division, 20th Army Corps, and they entered Atlanta on the 4th of September, being among the first troops to enter after the evacuation of the enemy. On Sept. 15, began that historical march to the sea, and Mr. Eastman participated in all the battles and skirmishes of that never-to-be-forgotten campaign, including the battles at Fort Harrison, before Savannah, Aversboro and Bentonville, and then marched on to Washington to take an honored place in the grand review, May 24, 1865. The regiment was mustered out of service at Louisville, Kentucky.

Since his return to the pursuits of peace Mr. Eastman has engaged in agricultural work and in the raising of Shorthorn cattle, in which he has been eminently successful. He is now an extensive land owner, and in all his business transactions has maintained a high reputation for sterling integrity, being respected by all men.

On Feb. 7, 1876, Mr. Eastman was united in marriage with Miss Susan Shepard, and four children have been born to them; Le Roy E., Charles L., Roger A. and Lulu.

FRANKLIN H. DERRICK, of Brodhead, Green county, is a retired farmer, and is passing his last days in this beautiful little inland city. He has lived a useful life, worked hard, and is now enjoying a competence for which he has rendered an honest equivalent in brain and brawn.

Mr. Derrick was born in Erie county, N. Y., Jan. 26, 1824, and is a son of Rodolphus D. and Lorinda (Sheldon) Derrick, natives of Vermont and New York, respectively. Eight children were born to them, of whom two are now living: Franklin H.; and Elvira, the widow of Levi Derrick, of Henderson, Neb. The father was a farmer, and during his active years cleared several heavily timbered farms in his native State. He came to the West in 1838 to make his home, though he had already been out two years before and bought land in Green county, Wis. In 1840 he broke land on this farm, and the following year moved his family to it, and made it his home as long as he lived. He died in 1860, at the age of sixty-seven, and his widow died fourteen years later, at the age of seventy-seven, lacking one month. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and in his mature years a leading man in his community. He was one of the three county commissioners in Green county at an early day, held several town offices, and was on the county board at different times. His father, Ephraim Derrick, was a native of Vermont, of English lineage. He was a Revolutionary soldier, and drew a pension. He died in New York at the age of seventy-seven. His grandfather, John Derrick (1), born in England in 1633, came to America in 1674, and died at the age of one hundred and eight years. The maternal grandfather of the subject of this article was William Sheldon. He was a farmer in New York, reared a family of eleven children, and reached the age of seventy-five.

Franklin H. Derrick was fourteen years of age when he came with his parents to Wisconsin, and he has lived continuously in Green county since that time, with the exception of two years which he spent in California, engaged in mining. He crossed the Plains in 1850, taking five months to make the journey. In 1852 he returned home by way of the Isthmus, and on a sailing-vessel to New Orleans, where he took a steamer for Cincinnati. He farmed until 1883, when he retired. Mr. Derrick attended the district school one winter after coming to the West. He lived at home until his father's death, when he bought the entire homestead of four hundred acres, but has since sold it.

Mr. Derrick and Miss Harriet A. Boslow were married Nov. 18, 1846. She was the daughter of John and Mary (Condon) Boslow, and became the mother of seven children, Theodore James, Franklin R., Levi F., Mary L., Harriet L., Flora L., and Paul E. Theodore James lives at Jolly, Texas; he married Mrs. Ellen Purdy. Franklin R. lives at Brodhead, and is the husband of Miss Belle Moore. Levi F. married Miss Mary Simmons, and lives at McCracken, Kans.; they have two children, Edna and Maud. Paul E. married Miss Adeline Bowen, and lives in the city of New York. Mary L. married John C. Balis, and both are dead; they were the parents of six children, Franklin T., Robert, Ernest, Mary L., Hattie and Mabel. Harriet L. married Junius T. Lamson, and lives at Orleans, Neb.; they have four children. Flora L. died at the age of two years. Mrs. Harriet A. Derrick died Oct. 22, 1871, at the age of forty-nine. She was a member of the Methodist Church. Mr. Derrick married Mrs. Mary A. Northup, Sept. 17, 1872. She was the widow of Sylvester Northup, and the daughter of Sanford Williams. Mr. and Mrs. Derrick are members of the Methodist Church, where he serves on the board of trustees. He was formerly a Republican, but is now a Prohibitionist. He was sheriff from 1873 to 1875, and was chairman of the town board a number of terms. He has a good home in Brodhead, and is reckoned among the leading citizens in the town and county.

REV. LEROY ELLIS, of Patch Grove, Grant county, is a well-known clergyman of the Methodist Church and an ex-soldier of the war of the Rebellion, as well as a greatly beloved citizen of his community. When the first note of war sounded throughout the country, and the news of President Lincoln's first call for troops went abroad, Mr. Ellis was among the first to respond. When the information reached him that the President had issued a call for volunteers, like Gen. Putnam, he was plowing in the field, and like that noted patriot, he responded promptly to his country's call. History tells us that Putnam left his team and plow in the field where he was at work and hurried to the scene of strife. Mr. Ellis unhitched his team and drove them to the barn, but without waiting to unharness them started at once for Boscobel, where he promptly enrolled himself as a member of Company F, 3d Wis. V. I., under Capt. George W. Linbucker. The regiment went as quickly as possible to the front and engaged in the early military operations in Maryland. The Third formed a part of Gen. Patterson's command at Harper's Ferry, Va., when Gen. McClellan advanced to meet the Confederate army, which advance resulted in the battle of Bull Run. Gen. Patterson, as is well known, was ordered to join Gen. McClellan, but failed to arrive in time to participate in the disastrous first battle of Manassas. Thus Mr. Ellis was not in that noted engagement. The command to which he belonged crossed into the Shenandoah Valley, and took part in the second battle of Bull Run under Gen. Pope, and also participated in the battles of South Mountain and Antietam, under Gen. McClellan. Later the regiment went into camp on Maryland Heights, where it remained for about six weeks. There Mr. Ellis was taken ill, and was in Hospital Camp A at Frederick City, later being removed to the convalescent camp, where he was finally discharged for disability on April 29, 1863. He was severely injured in Banks' retreat from the Shenandoah Valley, when that gentleman was defeated by the illustrious Stonewall Jackson. The nature of his injury was a rupture, and from this and other effects of his military service he still suffers.

Rev. Ellis was born in Perry county, Ohio, May 18, 1835, a son of Daniel J. and Maria (Cochran) Ellis, who never came West, but spent their last days in Ohio. The mother passed away when her son was a small child, but the father survived her many years. Mr. Ellis may be said to be a clergyman of the Methodist Church by heredity, as his paternal grandfather, Rev. Michael Ellis, was a pioneer preacher of the West and was associated with the Rev. J. B. Finley. Mr. Ellis was one of three children born to his mother, but the father married a second time, and by that union had five children. They long ago scattered and some of them have passed away. Mr. Ellis was reared in his native State. On May 28, 1856, he arrived in Prairie du Chien, Wis., and for some time was engaged in farming in Grant and Iowa counties. He was always of a religious turn of mind, but had no opportunity for preparing for the ministry in early life, and it was not until 1867 that he became a local preacher, continuing as such for twenty years. His first charge was at Patch Grove, where he remained three years, and after several other assignments he was returned to Patch Grove in 1895, where he is still living, in 1901.

On Jan. 29, 1865, Mr. Ellis was united in marriage with Miss Mary A. Culbertson, who celebrated the seventeenth anniversary of her birth on that day. Her parents, Robert and Levina (David) Culbertson were pioneers of southwestern Wisconsin. Seven children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Ellis, three of whom died in early childhood, while two sons and two daughters are still living, namely: Frank B., a resident of Redwood county, Minn.; George R., of Oregon; Jennie May, wife of Fred R. Barnes; and M. Elma, a teacher by profession, residing at home. Rev. Ellis possesses in an eminent degree the respect and esteem of all who know him. His preaching is characterized by an earnest sincerity that carries conviction to the mind and heart of the hearer. He is cordial and genial in manner and charitable toward all, and the non-religious as well as the Christian believer is his friend. Fraternally he is an esteemed member of the G. A. R. Post of Bradtville.

LUCIUS S. MOSELEY, of the town of Beloit, Rock county, is one of the older and more successful farmers of that region. He has spent his life in the cultivation of the soil, and kindly nature has richly rewarded his continuous and honorable industry. In the town of Beloit he is spoken of by his neighbors as an honest and upright man, who is at once a good neighbor and a respected citizen of the community.

Mr. Moseley was born in Bureau county, Ill., July 26, 1843, but received his early training in the town of Beloit, for his parents removed to Rock county when he was but a child. He had received a good common-school education, and was prepared to enter Beloit College at the outbreak of the Civil war. He enlisted Aug. 14, 1862, in Company B, 22d Wis. V. I. On the battlefield of Spring Hill, Tenn., he was made corporal, and was afterward taken prisoner, with almost the entire command. Mr. Moseley was confined in Libby prison for a short time, was then paroled, and was at the camp at St. Louis for about two months, when the command was reorganized and sent to the front. He served as a soldier until the close of the war, and took part in many fierce and bloody battles, being at Resaca and Peach Tree Creek, and with Gen. Sherman on the march to the sea. Several times was Mr. Moseley struck by flying missiles, but never seriously injured. He was mustered out at Washington, and finally discharged at Milwaukee.

Our subject was engaged in farming some months after his return home at the close of the war, and then did teaming in the city of Beloit for about two years, working for the Rock River Paper Co. Then he resumed farming on rented land, and finally purchased the farm where he now lives, containing 120 acres, on which he has made many handsome improvements. In his early life Mr. Moseley learned the trade of a carpenter, and still follows it in connection with farming. He is an active and industrious man, and does not mean to let any time go to waste.

Mr. Moseley is a member of L. H. D. Crain Post, Grand Army of the Republic, at Beloit, has been its commander two terms, and takes a deep interest in the welfare of all the "old boys," comrades on the tented field in the long ago. He has also been president of the Rock County ex-Soldiers and Sailors Association. Mr. Moseley takes considerable interest in public affairs, and has filled several offices in the town of Beloit, having been collector for five years, and has been assessor and supervisor. He is a strong Republican.

Mr. Moseley was married, in Beloit, Wis., Dec. 16, 1869, to Miss Fanny M. Brittan, who was born in Elbridge, N. Y., May 22, 1847. They have five children, Metta M., Harry L., Hubert B., Jessie V., and Florence H. The young people of the family are bright and promising, and will very shortly make their influences felt in the world.

Selden D. and Harriet W. (Gage) Moseley, our subject's parents, were born in Connecticut and New Hampshire, respectively. They were married in Bureau county, Ill., and came soon after to Rock county, where they spent the remainder of their lives. They were the parents of four children, of whom Lucius S. was the second child. The father of Mrs. Lucius S. Moseley was Alfred Brittan, and her mother Alvira (Armstrong) Brittan. He was born in England, and she in New York. They were married in that State, and came to Rock county in 1855, and here passed the rest of their lives. They were the parents of four daughters and one son, and Mrs. Moseley was the eldest of their family.

NATHAN ALLEN LOOFBOUROW, M. D., a prominent physician and surgeon at Monroe, Green county, was born at Mineral Point, Wisconsin, Oct. 9, 1849, and is a son of Dr. John and Rebecca (Lamb) Loofbourow, natives of Virginia and Indiana, respectively. They were the parents of six sons and four daughters, and eight of their children are now living: Sarah is the widow of George Proctor, of Jamestown, N. Dak.; William, at Monroe; Wade H., at Osceola, Wis.; Harriet, the wife of J. A. Buss, of Platteville, Wis.; Dr. N. A., of Monroe; Mary, the wife of Henry Hanners, of Platteville, Wis.; Thomas, of California; and John, of Cincinnati. The father was a physician, and practiced for a time in Ohio, in 1828 coming to Wisconsin, where he located in Mineral Point, practicing there until his death, in 1859, when he was seventy-six years of age. He opened a farm in the wilderness, and became the owner of five hundred acres. He was active in the development of the new country, and served in the Black Hawk war. His widow long survived him, and died in 1892 at the age of seventy-six. Both were members of the Christian Church. Dr. John Loofbourow had been twice married before; he had one child by his first wife, who is now dead. His second wife was the widow of Dr. Monroe, and was the mother of Dr. William Monroe, of Monroe, Wisconsin.

The paternal grandfather of Dr. N. A. Loofbourow died in the East, and his history is lost. His maternal grandfather, Lamb, is supposed to have been a native of Indiana. He came to Wisconsin in 1828, and opened a farm in Lafayette county, near the village of Wiota, where he died about 1863, when upwards of seventy years of age, leaving five children who lived to maturity. He was a soldier in the Black Hawk war.

Dr. Nathan A. Loofbourow made his home in Iowa county until he was sixteen, and then moved into Fayette, in Lafayette county, where he lived until 1870, attending the local schools, and also a select school in Fayette. For some two or three years he was a teacher in the public schools of Wisconsin, in the meantime studying medicine under the direction of Dr. William Monroe. He was a student in Rush Medical College, Chicago, and was graduated in February, 1873. He also attended the famous Bellevue Hospital Medical College, at New York, took post-graduate lectures in Rush, and in 1887-88 spent the greater part of a year in the celebrated medical hospitals and schools at Paris, Vienna, Edinburgh, and London. The Doctor established himself in Monroe in 1873, and has been continuously in practice in this city since that time, with the exception of the intervals of study abroad.

Dr. Loofbourov and Miss Alice Banta, the daughter of Jeremiah and Caroline (Bridge) Banta, were married Nov. 12, 1874. The Doctor and his wife are the parents of one child, Lelia, who is now living with her father at his home on Washington street in Monroe. He belongs to the I. O. O. F., and also to Ivanhoe Lodge, Knights of Pythias. He is a Republican, and has always taken a deep interest in public questions.

EDWARD RUSKELL, familiarly known as "Squire Ruskell," of Belmont, Lafayette county, is a man whose age commands the respect his character and learning deserve. He was a farmer for many years, and now that he is living in what the Psalmist denominates as years of sorrow and trouble, he is enjoying a green and noble old age.

Mr. Ruskell was born in Ireland May 18, 1825, and is a son of Robert and Sarah (Kegan) Ruskell, the history of whose entire lives is compassed in their birth, rearing, marriage and death in that country. There Mr. Ruskell grew to manhood, and there he contracted those matrimonial bonds that outlive youth and beauty, but he sought a home over the sea, with his young wife, Eliza Richardson, whom he married in 1849. The same year they came to this country, crossing the ocean on a sailing vessel, landing at New York, and making their way to Wisconsin just as it was being transformed into a State. Mr. Ruskell applied himself without hesitation to any work that he could secure, working by the month, and saving his earnings, small as they were, until he had enough after several years to buy a small farm in Kendall township, Lafayette county. The same patient industry and economy enabled him to increase his farm property until he owned an extensive farm. He put up good buildings and improved the grounds thoroughly. A few years ago he divided a section of land among his sons, and is now living a retired life at Belmont. His wife, the faithful sharer of his toils, and a woman of gracious spirit, died in August, 1889, and the following year Mr. Ruskell made a protracted visit to Ireland, going over in May and returning the following September. He was the father of nine children, who have lived to grow up, marry and settle in Lafayette county: William, who is now in the Dakotas, where he is traveling for his health, has his home and business in Lafayette county. Sarah is the wife of J. Olney, of Belmont. Mary A. married Joseph Martin, of Lafayette county, and is now deceased. Robert F.; Thomas; Bessie married William Killpatrick, and both she and her husband are now dead; John; Edward died a few years ago at the old home; Abbie, the wife of Cyrus Buss, of Lafayette.

In 1893 Mr. Ruskell contracted a second matrimonial union, his bride being Mrs. Hannah Bunt, a daughter of William and Elizabeth Sowden, of England, where she was born in 1830. In 1849 she married Henry Bunt, of Cornwall, England, and came to Wisconsin the same year, settling on a farm in Elk Grove, Lafayette county, making it their home until Mr. Bunt died, in 1880, leaving her a widow with two children, Emily and George W. The daughter married James L. Mitchell, now a Platteville merchant, and is the mother of two children, Mary and Eugene. George W., born in 1854, married and moved to Lemars, Iowa. Mrs. Ruskell has no children by her second marriage. Mr. Ruskell is a Democrat, and has long been identified with that party. He was a treasurer of Kendall township for many years, and for twenty-six years served as justice of the peace. He and his good wife are members of the local Methodist Episcopal Church, and are counted among the best people of Lafayette county.

OLE J. LUNN, of the town of Beloit, Rock county, was born in Racine county, Wis., May 1, 1846, and was brought by his parents into Rock county when he was a child of two and a half years. Practically his entire life has been spent in the community where he is living, and it has been like the pages of an open book, simple and clear. He has been honest and industrious, with a simple and unassuming integrity and an upright spirit.

Jacob Lunn, our subject's father, enlisted as a soldier in the army of the Union, and was a member of Company I, 22d Wis. V. I. He died at Columbia, Tenn., from the effect of wounds received in the battle of Spring Hill, March 4-5, 1863, when fifty-three years old; his record as a soldier was beyond reproach. His wife, Martha, lived to be eighty years old, and died in the home of her son Ole. They came to America from Stavanger, Norway, June 1, 1844, locating first in Racine county, Wis., where they lived three and a half years. They had two sons, Ole J. and Jacob. Jacob died in the old home when fifteen years of age, May 15, 1864.

Ole J. Lunn was reared on the farm that is now his home, and here he has spent all his life. He loves the farm, loves its care and cultivation, and knows there is no life that can be so grandly lived as that of a farmer. He owns 160 acres of choice land and takes pride in keeping it up to a high state of fertility; he is also engaged in breeding blooded cattle.

Mr. Lunn and Miss Isabella O. Stensland were married at Madison, Wis., Sept. 28, 1868. Mrs. Lunn was born in Norway, and came to this country with her parents when a girl of twelve years. They arrived in America in 1863, and immediately made their way to Rock county, Wis. Mr. and Mrs. Lunn are the parents of nine children, Martha, Martin, John, Julia, Charles, Jacob, Benjamin, William (who died when one year old), and Albert (who died at about the same age). The family are members of the Congregational Church.

JAMES S. LOONEY, a retired farmer of Benton, Lafayette county, was born Dec. 31, 1838, son of Abraham and Huldah (Bean) Looney. The father was born in Knoxville, Tenn., in 1800, and the mother in Missouri in 1811. The grandparents, David and Mary (Spergin) Looney, were born in Charleston, S. C., and after their marriage moved to Knoxville, Tenn., thence to Illinois, where Mrs. Looney died. David Looney moved to New Diggings, where he lived with his son Abraham until his death. Robert Looney, the father of David, was a colonel in the Revolutionary war. David Looney and his wife reared a family of six children: Abraham, the father of James S.; David; Hetty; John; Robert, who crossed the Plains to California, where he died in 1860; and Jane, who married Benjamin Beaseley, and died in Missouri.

In 1826 Abraham Looney settled in New Diggings, Wis., where for a time he was engaged in smelting ore. Later he took a farm of prairie land, by pre-emption. In his mature life he became an extensive land owner. During the Black Hawk war, with others, he erected a fort on his farm, to protect the families from the Indian raids. For a number of years Mr. Looney carried on a store, shipping miners' supplies throughout the district. In 1828 he was married to Huldah Bean, a daughter of Ahab Bean, who settled in Lafayette county for a while, then returning to Missouri. At a later period he came to Wisconsin a second time, settling in Iowa county, where the last years of his life were spent, and where he died. Abraham Looney made his home in New Diggings until the death of his wife, in 1845; she left four children. He was subsequently married to Mrs. Hannah Gear. Mr. Looney died in 1884, his wife some years previously. His children were: (1) Melville, born at the old home in 1835, married William J. Bird, a native of Canada, and a local minister. They are now living retired in the town of Darlington, and have had four children, Charles, Huldah, Isabelle and Lincoln. (2) Henry, born in 1837, was married to Miss Mary A. Hayth, of Wisconsin. They are residing in Ballard, Wash., and have a family of six children, Wallace, Cora, Abraham, Eva, Charles and Maud. (3) James S. (4) Abraham, born in Lafayette county in 1844, was educated at Morris, Ill. He was married to Miss Julia A. Evans, of New Diggings, and they settled on one of his father's farms in Lafayette county, where they lived until 1878, when they removed to Iowa, and a few years later to Ballard, Wash., where they now reside. They have three children, Russell, Jessie and Ella.

James S. Looney obtained his early education in the public schools of New Diggings, and later on was a student in Rock River Seminary. For three years he followed teaching in his own county. He became a soldier at the outbreak of the Civil war, enlisting in Company I, 3d Wis. V. I., July 19, 1861, under Capt. Howard Vandergriff, of Shullsburg. He was mustered in at Fond du Lac, and the regiment was assigned to the Army of the Potomac. Its first engagement was at Charlestown, Va., and it was also at Winchester, after which battle our subject was part of the force that arrested the Legislature of Maryland, while it was in session for the purpose of joining the Southern Confederacy. Mr. Looney was in the battle at Strasburg, and also at Cedar Mountain, in 1862. He participated in the second battle of Bull Run that same summer. In September of the same year he was a soldier in the terrible battle of Antietam, where his regiment lost heavily in killed and wounded. At Chancellorsville the 3d Wisconsin lost ninety-six killed and wounded; at Gettysburg the regiment was engaged in the battle for three days. From that bloody field the 3d was sent to New York, to crush the draft riots in that city. The following September the regiment returned to Alexandria, Va., and the entire corps was presently attached to the Army of the Cumberland. At Stevenson, Ala., the 3d was on guard duty for a time. While at that point the company to which Mr. Looney belonged re-enlisted, and he was one of the first to enroll himself for the war.

Mr. Looney was married, while home on a furlough, Jan. 15, 1864, to Miss Jane, a daughter of William and Adeline (Kirkham) May. The Mays came to New Diggings at an early day, and here they lived and died. Mrs. Looney was born in Missouri in October, 1840. Mr. Looney went back to his regiment, then in Tennessee, and the 3d participated in the splendid campaigning that led up to the fall of Atlanta, and was part of the Union forces at Resaca. Mr. Looney had a hand in the battles at Dallas, Kenesaw Mountain, Peach Tree Creek, and at the last-named battle he was wounded, July 21, 1864, by a minie ball, in the knee. He was taken to the field hospital, where he remained until he was able to re-join his regiment at Atlanta, and accompany Gen. Sherman on his march to the sea. They followed Johnson and his retreating Rebel hosts to Raleigh, where they witnessed the final fighting of the war. The 3d took part in the grand review at Washington. Mr. Looney made a record of which any soldier might be proud. He was in twenty-one heavy battles, and was twice wounded. He was discharged at Louisville, Ky., July 18, 1865, and hastened to resume the peaceful industry which he had for the time abandoned to take part in the dreadful game of war. He lived on the old homestead until 1896, when he bought real estate in the town of Benton, where he has erected one of the finest modern homes to be found in the entire region. He put up new buildings on the farm, and is the proprietor of several tenements in Benton, which he rents.

To Mr. and Mrs. Looney have been born three children: (1) Huldah, born in 1866, married William Cottingham, and is now living on a farm of Mr. Looney, joining the old homestead. They have a family of seven children, Charles, Virgil, Glanard, Benjamin, Archie, Letha, and Gay. (2) Arche, born at the old home in April, 1872, was married to Miss Maggie Sullivan, and lives in New Diggings; they have one son, James. (3) Joseph H., born in November, 1873, was married to Miss Jennie Sullivan, and resides on part of the old homestead in New Diggings.

Mr. Looney is a Republican, and has held the office of mayor in Benton. While a resident of New Diggings he was called on to fill many local offices. Socially he belongs to Thomas H. Oates Post, No. 96, G. A. R., Shullsburg, is also a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and Benton Lodge, K. P. Mr. and Mrs. Looney belong to the Order of Rebekahs. Both attend the Methodist Church, to which she belongs. Mr. Looney is a popular and successful business man, a careful financier, and an upright character. He is an honest and genial gentleman, and enjoys the esteem of many friends.

GEN. JAMES BINTLIFF. The people of Wisconsin will always read with pleasure incidents in the lives of those who, through its half century of growth, have taken an active part in shaping its destinies. Such a man was Gen. James Bintliff, who, from 1851 to 1896, was well known in Wisconsin and beyond its borders as one who in every walk of life labored to assist in establishing the community and the State upon the broad foundations of truth, justice and humanity. Although he passed the evening of life in a neighboring State, his heart was ever with Wisconsin, and his best wishes for its prosperity.

Gen. Bintliff was the son of Gershom and Maria H. Bintliff, and was born in Yorkshire, England, on Nov. 1, 1824. At the age of fifteen he became a clerk in a lawyer's office at Halifax, and was subsequently bookkeeper for the Halifax & Wakefield Canal Co. In 1841 his father and mother, with four children, came to the United States, and the next year he followed them with the younger brother and sister. They settled in New York, where, in 1847, at Skaneateles, he was married to Miss Harriet Snook, daughter of John Snook, of Somersetshire, England. From the time of his marriage until 1851 he was a partner with Mr. Snook in business; then he came to Green county, this State, where he took the position of cashier of the Bank of Monroe. In 1856 he was elected register of deeds for Green county, and was admitted to the Bar in 1859. The next year he bought an interest in the Monroe Sentinel, the leading newspaper of the county, of which he afterward became the sole proprietor.

Soon after the beginning of the Civil war Mr. Bintliff recruited a company of volunteers, of which he was commissioned captain. This company was mustered into the service on Sept. 2, 1862, as Company G, of the 22d Wis. V. I., and was ordered to Kentucky, taking part in several minor engagements on its way between Louisville and Nashville. A detachment of the regiment, including Company G, was ordered to Brentwood, Tenn., where it was attacked and captured by a large force under Gen. Forrest, on March 25, 1863, and sent to Libby prison, where our subject was confined until the following May, when he was exchanged and joined his command in St. Louis. In March, 1864, Capt. Bintliff was commissioned by Gov. Lewis, colonel of the 38th Wis. V. I., which was sent to the Army of the Potomac, and took an honorable part in the series of engagements that led up to the capture of Petersburg and the end of the war. In the final assault on Petersburg, Col. Bintliff, with his command, which consisted of three regiments, was the first to break through the enemy's lines and capture and hold an important fort until the whole line was evacuated. During the day of April 2, 1865, he held the position he had captured, Fort Mahone, against three attacks from a division of the Confederate army under Maj. Gen. Gordon. The three regiments which Col. Bintliff commanded were his own 38th Wis., under the immediate command of Maj. Roberts; the 109th N. Y., under Lieut. Col. Pier, of the 38th Wis.; and the 207th Penna., commanded by Col. R. C. Cox. At ten o'clock that night he was sent to take command of the Third Brigade, against which a further attack was expected. Maj. Gen. Hartranft, in his official report of the campaign, and also Col. Sam Harriman, in his report, both extol the gallantry of Col. Bintliff for his brilliant services on this occasion, recommending his promotion; and he was accordingly commissioned brigadier general by the President, and continued in command of the Third Brigade until the close of the war, being mustered out in June, 1865.

Gen. Bintliff returned to Monroe and engaged in mercantile business until 1870, when he purchased an interest in the Janesville Gazette and removed to that city, remaining in charge of that paper until 1878, when he bought the Republican, of Darlington. For five years he edited the Republican with ability, and then transferred it to his son, E. H. Bintliff, and J. G. Monahan, the latter of whom has since become its sole owner.

When the Board of Supervision of the Penal and Reformatory Institutions of the State was organized under the law of 1881, Gen. Bintliff was appointed one of its members, and after he disposed of the Republican he devoted his whole time and attention to his official duties. Deeply interested in the questions of sociology, the discussion of which is so characteristic of the close of the century, he was a valuable and influential member of the board, possessing great executive ability. Gen. Bintliff was also made a trustee of the Wisconsin Soldiers Orphans Home, and president of that board from 1877 until its labors were concluded, and the last of its funds distributed to those entitled, in 1896. After the expiration of his second term in the Board of Supervision he was in no active business. Until 1896 his residence remained in Darlington, when he removed to Chicago, where he lived with his widowed daughter at 7429 Bond avenue, Windsor Park. Another daughter, Mrs. Ida Simpson, resides in the same block; and his only surviving son, Edward H. Bintliff, is the editor of the Kankakee Gazette, while two grandsons are in business at St. Louis, Mo. During all this time the wife of his youth shared the vicissitudes of his career, and although herself full of years, felt less the infirmities of age, and was the solace of his declining days.

Gen. Bintliff was lame from the result of a fall which dislocated his hip, and within the last year of his life became blind, so as to be unable to read or to recognize his friends except by the voice; while his general health failed, his mental faculties were bright, and the abundant resources of a well-stored mind were at his command to aid him in bearing his infirmities with equanimity. Always a great student, especially in the line of humanitarian studies, he recalled much that was interesting, and continued to delight in learning concerning questions that touch the life and well-being of his fellow-men. Instead of bemoaning his condition, however, he maintained his cheerfulness by striving to inculcate in the minds of all within the wide range of his influence, those principles of brotherly kindness that he had proven and found to have enduring value. He entered into rest March 16, 1901.

JOHN M. RIGGS is numbered among the brave veterans of the war of the Rebellion who still remain to tell the story of those terrible days, when courage was tried to the utmost, and the flag was saved, although drenched with the blood of thousands.

Mr. Riggs was born in Meigs county, Ohio, in 1834, son of William R. and Lavina (Burris) Riggs, the former a native of Virginia. The family removed from Ohio to Missouri, and from that State to Wisconsin in 1844, settling at Belmont. In 1849 the father crossed the Plains to California, and died there not long after his arrival, the mother surviving him many years. In their family were two sons and two daughters, of whom only the subject of this sketch and his sister Virginia Ann, who lives in Michigan, now (1901) survive.

John M. Riggs was reared upon a farm. In 1851 he crossed the Plains to California, returning in 1854, but in 1855 he went back once more, and remained until the fall of the following year. When the Civil war broke out Mr. Riggs felt that his sympathies demanded that he offer his services, and on Aug. 16, 1862, he enlisted in Company B, 33d Wis. V. I., his services extending over a period of three years, or until the close of the war. During this time Mr. Riggs took part in many of the important events of that time, the regiment leaving the State under the command of Col. Jonathan B. Moore, who had been sheriff of Grant county, Capt. George R. Frank in command of Company B. On October 18, 1862, the regiment was mustered into the service, and left for the front the following month, proceeding directly to Memphis, Tenn., where it was assigned to Gen. Lawman's division, in Gen. Sherman's Army of the Tennessee. This division became a part of the 16th Army Corps, and took an active part in the siege of Vicksburg, attack on Jackson, and the Meridian expedition. One of the important events in which the 33d participated was the bloody battle of Tupelo. After many hard marches and several important battles, the 33d reached Nashville Nov. 30, 1864. In March of the following year the regiment joined in the attack on Spanish Fort, and after the surrender of Mobile moved on to Montgomery, Ala., where they did picket duty. Later they were ordered to Vicksburg and mustered out, and finally, in August, 1865, disbanded at Madison, Wis. It has been truly said of the 33d that few regiments saw more severe service and that its record is untarnished by any cowardly or dishonorable action. Mr. Riggs' health was badly broken as a result of his service, and as he grows older he realizes just how much he and his companions gave to their country. Since the war Mr. Riggs has resided on his farm, where all of his children were born and reared.

In May, 1871, John M. Riggs was married to Miss Lydia Beam, who was born in New Jersey in 1846 and brought by her family to Illinois and later to Wisconsin. Her parents are still living, and reside in Watters-town. Mr. and Mrs. Riggs have four sons and two daughters: John M., Mamie, Frank, James E., Elsie V. and Floyd. The four youngest are still residing with their parents, while the others are settled not far away. The home of the Riggs family is a very pleasant one, and both Mr. and Mrs. Riggs are highly respected by all who know them. Mr. Riggs has proven himself a loyal citizen, good husband and father, and kind friend, and no one is better entitled to an honorable place in the records of Grant county than he.

CHRISTOPHER MEINERT. Among the respected residents of the beautiful town of Albany, Green county, within whose borders reside so many of the successful and substantial citizens of Albany township, is Christopher Meinert, the subject of this sketch. His birth took place in Pickaway county, Ohio, on July 13, 1818, a son of Garrett Henry and Catherine (Wonderly) Meinert, both of whom were natives of Germany. A family of nine children were born to them, only two of whom survive, our subject and his sister Angeline, who is the wife of Jacob Abley, of Albany township.

The paternal grandfather died in Germany, where he was a farmer by occupation: the maternal grandfather followed teaming in a Pennsylvania hamlet, where he died, although he had been born in Germany. The father of our subject was reared on a farm in his native country, and engaged at work in a sugar refinery after coming to New York. In that city he married, and then moved to Ohio, renting a farm in Pickaway county, selling out later and moving to Vermilion county, Ind., where he bought a farm of eighty acres from the government, dying at this place in 1858, in his fifty-ninth year. His wife survived him many years, being aged eighty-one when she passed away. In religious faith she was a Methodist, while he was identified with the Lutheran Church, both being good and worthy people, who possessed the respect of all.

Christopher Meinert was reared principally in Indiana, where he attended the district schools. His occupation has always been that of a farmer, in which he has met with great success. In 1841 he came with his wife and baby to Wisconsin, landing in Green county on Oct. 14, and settling on a farm three miles east of Monroe, where he built a cabin and remained twenty months. Finding more desirable land in Albany township, he moved there, purchasing 240 acres of land a short distance west of the village. Here the family resided until 1884, when Mr. Meinert rented out his land and bought one of the best houses in the village of Albany, living there in comfort ever since. The farm is still in his possession, and is a fine place, well cultivated and improved with excellent buildings.

Mr. Meinert was married on Feb. 14, 1838, to Miss Elizabeth Frazier, a daughter of James and Elizabeth (Cade) Frazier, and five children were born to this union, one of whom died in infancy; Martha (deceased) married Joshua Brown, and had one son, Floyd; Eli married Ida Andrews, and lives in Lemhi county, Idaho, with two children, Ernest and Ina; Mary married Milton McPherson and they live in Idaho, with one daughter, Theo; and Sarah, Mrs. Hyde, who lives in Idaho, and has two children. The mother of these children died on April 9, 1851, aged about thirty-two, a worthy member of the Christian Church. For his second wife Mr. Meinert married, Nov. 20, 1851, Mrs. Abigail Mead, a daughter of Joseph and Charlotte (Hellenbolt) Dory, and the widow of Ames Mead. Six children have resulted from this marriage: Garrett H., who married Emily Aulthouse, lives at West Bend, Wis., and has two children, Adolph and Hattie; Isaac died at the age of seven; Irad married and lives in Hailey, Idaho; Frances, who married Dick Sherkamp, lives in Albany; Dora, deceased, married Floyd Flint, and left one daughter, Dora Addie, residing in Albany; Statirah lives at home. Garrett Henry and wife, and also Mr. Sherkamp, are mutes. One son was born to Mrs. Meinert by her former marriage, Oscar A. Mead, who married Hattie Kenney and has two children, Hattie and Merton.

The father of Mrs. Meinert was a native of France, her mother of New York, the former taking part in the war of 1812. Her first husband took part in the rebellion in Canada, in 1837.

Although not a politician, Mr. Meinert has settled views on public questions, and belongs to the Socialist party. For several terms he served the township as supervisor, performing his duties faithfully and well. The family is well known, and Mr. Meinert is a shining example of industry and honesty well rewarded. He is a member of the Christian Church.

JOSEPH GOODRICH CARR, one of Rock county's substantial and intelligent farmers, is the oldest native now living in the town of Milton, being the fourth male white child born in the township.

Peleg S. Carr, his father, was born in Stephentown, N. Y., April 23, 1794, and married Deborah Goodrich Jan. 11, 1816. To them were born ten children, all of whom lived to advanced maturity. He was of English ancestry, and directly descended from Robert Carr, who sailed for New England on the 9th of May, 1635, in the good ship "Elizabeth Ann." He was also one of the original purchasers from the Indians of the island Conanicut, in Narragansett bay, consisting of about six thousand acres.

Deborah Carr, the mother of the subject of this sketch, was a lineal descendant of John Goodrich, who emigrated from England in 1644. She was born Jan. 26, 1794, at Goodrich Hollow, near Hancock, Mass. She possessed a vigorous constitution, and was a woman of more than ordinary executive ability, and her industrious, self-reliant nature has been an important factor in the career of her children. She died at the home of her son Joseph, Sept. 24, 1874, at the advanced age of eighty years. For many years, with characteristic energy, she toiled with her husband among the Berkshire hills, but the opportunities for bettering their condition were meager, and they resolved to try their fortune in the land beyond the Great Lakes. They arrived at the home of Mrs. Carr's brother, Joseph Goodrich, May 26, 1839, accompanied by a family of eight children, and also a son-in-law, Nathaniel Rose. The next day they purchased a claim of 480 acres, and at once moved their small possessions into a little log cabin 14x18, and commenced pioneer life in earnest. Joseph G. was born on the 19th of the following March, 1840. Thus he has been an eye-witness to the development that has transformed a wild, trackless prairie and woodlands into a high state of cultivation, sharing the privations peculiar to pioneer life, and becoming part of the growth of the town by aiding largely in the work that has made southern Wisconsin bloom and blossom like a garden. After his father's death, which occurred Sept. 28, 1846, he lived with his mother, at the old homestead, until 1854, when his brother, Solomon C. Carr, became its owner. His mother then purchased eighty acres of land which were still in an uncultivated condition, and erected a comfortable house and outbuildings, and her sons Elijah M. and Joseph G. began to convert the land into fertile fields which yielded an abundant harvest.

On the 17th day of October, 1863, Mr. Carr was united in marriage to Miss Phoebe Isabelle Maxson, by Rev. James Rogers. Five children have blessed their union, of whom Maude, born Aug. 13, 1882, died Feb. 27, 1884. Fred M., born April 2, 1865, is an energetic farmer at Marshfield, Wis.; he married Miss Ella Palmer March 28, 1894, and they have two children, Haldane, born Feb. 25, 1895, and Maude, born May 12, 1899. Annabel, born April 7, 1866, married Ludwig Kumlien, professor of physics and natural history in Milton College, Dec. 21, 1892; their children are Carr, born Dec. 6, 1893; Lorraine, born Feb. 28, 1896; and Alice, born Oct. 30, 1900. Joseph L., born April 7, 1870, resides in Chicago; he married Miss Charlotte Maxson June 10, 1896. Alice M., born Jan. 17, 1875, married Fred H. Campbell June 27, 1894, and resides in Edgerton, Wis.; they have had two children, Lenore, born Oct. 13, 1897, who died Aug. 31, 1898; and Phyllis, born April 11, 1899.

Mrs. Carr was the daughter of Nathan Maxson and Susan Isabelle Well, who were married Sept. 23, 1844. Both were natives of New York. Four children were born to them: Phoebe I., Oct. 8, 1845, in Alfred, N. Y.; Nathan E., July 29, 1847; Mary G., April 17, 1849; and Adelbert W., March 19, 1852, who died May 14, 1890, in the Indian Territory. Nathan Maxson was born Oct. 23, 1819, in Alfred, Allegany Co., N. Y., one of eight children born of the marriage of Luke Maxson and Susannah Greene, which occurred in 1807, and was the first marriage celebrated in the town of Alfred, N. Y. The fathers of both contracting parties being Revolutionary soldiers, Mrs. Carr is thus entitled to membership in the Daughters of the American Revolution. Mrs. Carr's parents were early settlers of Milton, and were people of much character and intelligence. Both are deceased, Mr. Maxson having died Feb. 17, 1855, and his wife Oct. 31, 1866.

Mr. and Mrs. Carr began their married life upon that portion of the homestead which belonged to his mother, where they yet reside, he having purchased the same in 1866, thus adding to his original fifty acres. Oak Lawn now consists of 250 acres of improved land, which he has brought to a state of fertility from the virgin soil, and which is now noticeable in this region of fine farms for its beautiful lawn, commodious residence, excellent barns and outbuildings—all models of convenience and bespeaking the thrift and enterprise of the energetic owner. For years he has made a specialty of dairy stock raising, and his herd of fifty grade Jerseys are the pride of Oak Lawn.

Socially Mr. Carr has been an earnest, untiring worker of the Patrons of Husbandry, and Du Lac Grange, No. 72, owes its origin to him and his neighbor, Robert Stockman, who perfected the organization Feb. 18, 1873; he has served as worthy master of same several years. He was chosen treasurer of the Milton Junction Building Association at its organization, in 1881, and has served in the office continually since then. In politics he is an ardent supporter of the Republican party, and has taken a deep interest in public affairs and improvements of all kinds, as every true American should do, but was never an aspirant for office.

Though of a retiring, unassuming nature,

Mr. Carr is a benevolent, whole-souled man, and his honorable, upright life during his long-continued residence in the same community, for more than sixty years, has won for him the respect and confidence of all who know him, and he is deservedly held in high esteem as a valued friend and citizen, and a man of sterling worth. His worthy wife has been truly a helpmeet in all branches of his business, and their lives have been a marked success.

DWIGHT TIMOTHY PARKER, SR., who throughout his active life was a prominent business man of Grant county, died while still a young man; but probably no man in the list of the early settlers of the county contributed in as great a degree as did he to its material growth and development when the limited number of years of his business life proper is considered, and the comparatively early age at which he passed away.

Dwight Timothy Parker, Sr., was born in the village of Malone, Franklin Co., N. Y., Dec. 21, 1821. His parents, Enos and Mary (Todd) Parker, both belonged to old New England families. Investigation into the ancestry of the Parker family discloses the fact that it is descended directly from Catherine Cole, one of the pilgrim band that landed from the "Mayflower" on Plymouth Rock in December, 1620. Mary Todd Parker belonged to a well-known New England family that was well represented in the war of the Revolution, and she was a sister of Rev. John Todd, a famous New England divine. This estimable woman possessed many of the characteristic traits that rendered her family so noted. Unfortunately her children were deprived of her love and care when still very small, she dying when Dwight T. Parker was but a child, leaving behind her two sons and one daughter who attained to mature years. Of these children, (1) Dwight T. was the eldest. (2) Arunah came to Grant county, Wis., after his brother, and studied law with J. Allen Barber, of Lancaster, Wis., with whom he practiced until 1848, when he was elected county clerk. Later he took a trip through the South, and finally became identified with copper mining interests in Pennsylvania, and at the same time had a law office in New York City. His death occurred in 1855, when he was aged thirty. (3) Mary, named after her mother, married John Newton, a prominent citizen of Prairie du Chien; she died in the autumn of 1871.

Enos Parker was twice married after the death of his first wife. To the second union four children were born: George W., who came to Grant county in 1856, was for a time employed as clerk by his brother Dwight, and for many years was a member of the firm of Parker, Hildebrand & Co., of Boscobel, of which concern Dwight T. Parker was the senior partner; John J., also associated with his brother Dwight for some time, finally went to South Dakota, and died at Spearfish, that State, where he was engaged in mining; William W. is now a resident of Spearfish, S. Dak.; Catherine became the wife of Owen Gibbs, of the firm of Deering, Milligan & Gibbs, of Portland, Maine, and died in that city in 1875. No children were born to Enos Parker's third marriage. Mr. Parker died at the home of his daughter, in Portland, Maine, in January, 1870, in his seventy-sixth year, his death being the result of a cold contracted at the wharf in Portland while viewing with thousands of others the coming into the harbor of the vessel bearing the remains of the famous philanthropist, Peabody, from Europe.

The Parker family were long residents of the State of Connecticut, but prior to the birth of Dwight T. Parker they removed to New York, and thence to Georgia, Franklin Co., Vt., when the latter was but two years old. Dwight T. Parker was named for Timothy Dwight, Sr., long president of Yale College, whom his father greatly admired. At the paternal home in Vermont our subject grew to manhood, working on the farm, assisting his father, and attending the country school of his neighborhood in the winter. Reared in the characteristic New England manner, habits of perseverance, industry and frugality were early instilled into his nature, and formed the keynote of his after success. About the time he attained his majority Mr. Parker decided to seek his fortune in the West, and in 1843 he started toward the setting sun, his objective point being the then Territory of Wisconsin. The first stop he made was at Watertown, Wis., for the purpose of obtaining work of some kind to replenish his depleted purse. From that place he journeyed to Lancaster, Grant Co., Wis., most of the way on foot, having but a few dollars in his pocket, but a superabundance of good health, energy and determination. Working at whatever honorable employment he could find, no matter how humble, Mr. Parker tried mining and other kinds of manual toil, by which he accumulated enough money to commence his active business career in 1847. Prior to this he had also taught several terms of country school, but after engaging in business for himself he continued thus until his death. His first venture was in the mercantile line, at Lancaster, with N. W. Kendall, who was sheriff of Grant county in 1844-46, under the firm name of Kendall & Parker. Two years later Mr. Parker bought out the interest of Mr. Kendall, and for about ten years conducted a large and prosperous business.

In 1856, on the coming of the railroad to Boscobel, Mr. Parker saw increased facilities for business, and, with his usual foresight, established there what was known as the "People's Store." This proved so successful that he established branch stores at Fennimore and Wauzeka. While his mercantile interests were extensive, various other enterprises received a share of his attention, and in February, 1871, only a few months prior to his death, he established the First National Bank of Boscobel, of which he was president and principal owner. This bank was continued until 1879, when its business was succeeded to by A. J. Pipkin. Mr. Parker was the owner of a fine stock farm in the town of Fennimore, on which he resided from 1865 until 1870, taking a great deal of interest in his stock and the development of the place. This farm was the largest and finest in Grant county, comprising about one thousand acres under cultivation and many more of timber and unbroken land. In time Mr. Parker also became the largest real estate owner in Boscobel, and in 1869 he erected, in that city, the largest and finest store building in Grant county, which is now, and has been continuously, occupied by the firm of Parker, Hildebrand & Co. The death of Mr. Parker occurred at Boscobel May 21, 1871, the result of a tumor, caused by an injury received two years previously.

The character and career of Dwight Timothy Parker are well worth the emulation of the youth of to-day. Beginning life a poor boy, with no advantages other than those given to an ordinary farmer boy, by his own industry and determination to succeed, and the exercise of a well-balanced judgment, he secured wealth and a position in the business world which few men attain in the limited number of years that covered Mr. Parker's business career. While he was essentially a business man, and the leading one of Grant county, he was public-spirited, and always prompt to assist with his influence and means any enterprise whose object was the promotion of the best interests of the community. A member of no church, he recognized the value of religious teachings, and gave liberally to the establishment of churches and their support. Mr. Parker was also interested in educational matters, and to the worthy poor he ever lent a helping hand. Notwithstanding his large business interests, which ever demanded much of his time, he found opportunity for reading, and possessed a well-stored mind. Among his favorite authors were Burns and Saxe, and he would repeat many of the finest quotations of the Scottish poet in native dialect in a most delightful manner. Mr. Parker's home was a most beautiful one, and he was a generous and liberal entertainer. The home circle was ever a happy one, and his domestic relations were the most pleasant. When Dwight T. Parker died Grant county lost one of its ablest financiers, the community one of its most useful citizens, and his immediate family a kind, generous, loving husband and father.

On Dec. 27, 1848, Mr. Parker was married, at Lancaster, Wis., to Mary E. Shrader, born at Vandalia, Ill., Dec. 17, 1829, a daughter of Lenhart O. Shrader, a prominent citizen of Lancaster, who was clerk of Grant county from 1843 to 1846. A sister of Mr. Shrader, Mary E., became the wife of Hon. Charles Dunn, first Chief Justice of the Territory of Wisconsin, and afterward Judge of the Fifth Wisconsin Circuit; their daughter became the wife of Nelson Dewey, the first governor of Wisconsin. Mrs. Parker when a child lost her mother, and was reared in the home of Hon. Charles Dunn: she is still living, residing at the old home at Boscobel. To Mr. and Mrs. Parker were born four children: May Louise, Dwight Timothy, Frank Arunah and Charles Dewey. The first mentioned was born in Lancaster June 13, 1851, and secured an excellent education, graduating in music at the Rockford Female Seminary in 1870, and in literature at the Milwaukee Female College in 1873. She was married Feb. 23, 1875, to Andrew J.

Pipkin, a prominent citizen and banker of Boscobel. They have no children.

DWIGHT T. PARKER, JR., president of the State Bank of Fennimore, was born in Lancaster June 30, 1856, and was educated at Beloit College and at the Wisconsin State University. In 1878 Mr. Parker became vice-president of the First National Bank of Boscobel, an institution founded by his father, remaining as such until the business was transferred to A. J. Pipkin. For sixteen years prior to the organization of the bank at Fennimore Mr. Parker occupied and conducted his large stock farm in Fennimore, which is one of the finest in the State of Wisconsin, comprising 500 acres of choice land. In 1895 Mr. Parker moved into the village of Fennimore, and in 1896 established the State Bank there, of which he has since been president. This gentleman inherits many of the qualities of his father, whom he ever holds in fond remembrance, by whose teachings he endeavors to be governed, and whose example he emulates. The banking institution of which he is the head is conducted on sound business principles. Its business has increased rapidly year by year, and at the beginning of 1901, only four and a half years from the date of its organization, its deposits were $150,000, which demonstrates the confidence the institution inspires in the community. Mr. Parker is public-spirited, an ardent Republican, though in no sense a politician, and is ambitious for the success of the principles of his party, although he has no desire for public office. Mr. Parker is a member and treasurer of the Republican State Central Committee, and chairman of the Grant County Republican Central Committee; also chairman of the Special Jury Commission for Grant county, and auditor of the Southwestern Wisconsin Mutual Fire Insurance Co. However, as president and chief stockholder of the State Bank of Fennimore, Mr. Parker's energies are chiefly occupied; and in addition to his business interests he in 1895 served as chairman of the town of Fennimore and as member of the finance committee of the county board. At the present time he is one of the trustees of the village of Fennimore. He is a member of the Order of K. P., and is treasurer of the lodge at Fennimore.

On Oct. 13, 1880, Mr. Parker was married to Miss Cora B. Anderson, of Ripon, Wis., born at Fairview, Penn., April 3, 1858, daughter of Robert and Alice Anderson, who came to Boscobel about 1868. Mrs. Parker graduated from the Boscobel high school, and was a successful teacher for many years. Later the family removed to Ripon, Wis., where she was married to Mr. Parker. This lady is a member of the M. E. Church, is president of the Grant County W. C. T. U., and an ardent and faithful worker in the cause of temperance. Mr. and Mrs. Parker have five daughters: Ethel and Marie (twins), Amy, Eleanor, and Gladys.

Frank A. Parker, the second son of Dwight T. Parker, Sr., was born at Boscobel Jan. 20, 1859, and was educated at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Later, for some time, he was in Denver and New Orleans on account of his health, and in 1882 located in Minneapolis, and engaged in the real-estate business. There he was married to Miss Genevieve Marian de Gosseline, who died in that city Nov. 24, 1895, leaving five children, Arunah F., D. Charles, Genevieve I., Paul I., and May Louise. At this time (1901) Frank A. Parker is a traveling salesman.

Charles Dewey Parker, the youngest in the family of Dwight T. Parker, Sr., was born at Boscobel April 9, 1862, and was educated in the schools of his native town. For some time he was associated in business with his brother Frank, at Minneapolis, but is now a resident of Chicago. On Sept. 18, 1889, Charles Dewey Parker married Miss Rose Grandelmyer, of Brainerd, Minn. They have no children.

CHARLES A. BOOTH, editor and publisher of the Sentinel, and late postmaster at Monroe, Green county, is a veteran newspaper man, and has a high reputation for both ability and integrity among the members of the fraternity of the State. He is at present senior editor in the State in active business.

Mr. Booth was born in Covington, Tioga Co., Penn., Feb. 15, 1840, a son of George W. and Artemisia (Crandell) Booth, and lived with his parents until 1857, following their migration to Wisconsin, in 1854, when they settled in Beloit. In 1857 the young man came to Monroe, and entered the office of the Sentinel, with the purpose of learning the printing business from the ground up. He began as an apprentice, and his long career as a printer and publisher shows that he thoroughly mastered the rudiments of his calling.

In 1862 Mr. Booth entered the Union army, as a member of Company G, 22d Wis. V. I., and served throughout the war, proving a brave and capable soldier. At the battle of Thompson's Station the young soldier received a gunshot wound in his leg, and had other slight injuries. The fierceness of the engagement may be inferred from the fact that his clothing was pierced by nine bullets. He was in the hospital at Nashville six weeks on account of his wounds, had a furlough, rejoined his regiment, and was made first lieutenant. He was in every battle in which his regiment participated, from Wauhatchie Valley to the grand review at Washington; was a staff officer during the Atlanta campaign with Col. John Coburn, and during the march to the sea, and to Washington with Brevet Brig. Gen. Dustin, of 2d Brigade, 3d Division, 20th Army Corps. He was in over one hundred battles and skirmishes, among the more important ones being those at Spring Hill, Resaca, Peach Tree Creek, New Hope Church, Kennesaw Mountain, Marietta, Culp's Farm, Cassville, and nearly all the engagements in front of Atlanta. He commanded, as staff officer of Col. John Coburn, commanding the Brigade, the right wing of the skirmish line that entered the city of Atlanta. The first night after he entered that city, he slept in the house of Mayor Calhoun, who surrendered the city to Col. Coburn, and during the next few days of occupation this house became the headquarters of Lieut. Booth's provost guard.

When peace returned Mr. Booth came back to Monroe, and purchased an interest in the Sentinel, in company with A. J. High. That gentleman sold out in 1870 to S. E. Gardner, and three years later Mr. Booth leased his partner's interest, and later bought it; becoming sole proprietor of what is and has been recognized for fifty years as one of the most valuable printing plants in southern Wisconsin. The Sentinel was established in 1850 by John W. Stewart, who died in Chicago in 1899. John Walworth, one of its early editors, was a Free-Soil Democrat, and one of the original leaders in the formation of the Republican party, and was chairman of the first Republican State Convention, since which time the paper has always been Republican, and has never missed a weekly issue. Mr. Booth has been in the printing and publishing business forty-two years, and expects to follow it as long as he lives. He has been a member of the State Editors and Publishers Association since 1868.

Mr. Booth and Miss Elizabeth Gardner were united in marriage Sept. 10, 1862. Mrs. Booth is the daughter of Elijah T. and Elizabeth (Stephenson) Gardner, the former one of the pioneers of Green county, and an early settler in Monroe. Mr. and Mrs. Booth are the parents of three sons and two daughters, all of whom have grown to maturity, and are yet living. Their pleasant home is at No. 424 Jackson street. Mr. Booth is a member of O. F. Pinney Post, No. 102, G. A. R., and also of the Royal Arcanum, the A. O. U. W., Monroe Lodge, No. 72, I. O. O. F., and Ivanhoe Lodge, K. of P. His political and business standing was recognized by his appointment as postmaster at Monroe. He entered upon his official duties Feb. 1, 1900, and proved himself a capable and efficient postmaster, until finding the work too irksome and severe in connection with his newspaper business, he resigned. His assistant, Robert A. Etter, was appointed, upon Mr. Booth's recommendation, as his successor, his appointment taking effect in February, 1901. Mr. Booth has attended many State and Congressional conventions as a delegate, and at Minneapolis sat as a member of the convention which nominated President Harrison.

JOHN BECK. When in contemplation of the public-spirited and progressive citizens of Benton, Lafayette county, the name of John Beck stands in bold relief, and to the people of the community in which he lives there is no man more highly esteemed for his many good qualities. In politics, in business, and in the administration of municipal affairs he stands pre-eminent. Mr. Beck was born on the Isle of Man Jan. 15, 1845, son of John and Ann (Cannell) Beck.

John Beck, Sr., passed his entire life on the Isle of Man, and died there in June, 1865, at the age of fifty-two years. His wife, Ann Cannell, lived to the age of sixty-five. Besides the subject of this sketch, they were the parents of six children, as follows: (1) William married and settled in England, and is now a resident of the Isle of Man. (2) James still resides in the Isle of Man. (3) Jane married William Kewley, a Manxman. (4) Annie married a Mr. Roscoe, of England (now deceased) and settled in Brisbane, Australia, where she and her family still reside. (5) Martha grew to womanhood and married Robert Corlett, and in 1867 accompanied her husband to this country, locating in New Diggings township, Lafayette county, where he followed mining for some years. They then moved to Big Patch, Grant Co., Wis., where they still reside. In their family were seven children, John, Annie (deceased wife of Ralph Miller, of Lafayette county), Douglas, Thomas, Emily, Southward and Jennie. (6) Thomas, born in 1841 on the Isle of Man, was educated there, and in 1864 came to this country, via New York. His first employment was in Cramp's Ship Yard, in Philadelphia. He remained there but three weeks, when he began work on the railroad at Havre de Grace, Md. In July, 1864, in company with his brother, he came West and located in Benton, Wis., finding work in the mines. After a year or two he opened a general store in Etna, same county, continuing there until 1875, when he returned to Benton and built the "Rock Store," engaging in mercantile business until 1882. That year he located in Galena, Ill., and three years later went to Aspen, Colo., where he is now in business. In 1866 he wedded Miss Margaret Alton, who was born in England, daughter of William and Esther Alton, natives of that country, who came to America in 1861. Of their union eight children were born: Emma, wife of Fred Kissel, of Colorado; John, of Colorado; Jennie, wife of Milton Vincent, of Galena, Ill.; William and Thomas F., of Colorado; Annie, wife of Thomas Hicks, of Colorado; and Maggie and Henrietta, of Colorado. The mother of these children has passed to her rest.

John Beck received a substantial education in the government schools of England, and in that country, too, served an apprenticeship at the miller's trade with William Kennish. After his location in Wisconsin, in 1864, he enlisted in the army, becoming a member of the 22d Wis. V. I., and doing duty at Camp Randall, Madison, until the close of the war. When he left the army he began mining, and was so engaged for six years. He then returned to his trade, and for three years milled for R. H. Emerson, at New Diggings. His permanent location was not made in Benton until 1875, and after his removal there, in that year, he engaged in the lumber business, and was also interested in the grain trade. The following year he purchased real estate, and erected a comfortable home for himself, and some little time later erected a large grain and lumber building near the Benton depot, where he has since remained. He handles all kinds of rough and worked lumber, sash, doors and blinds, barbed wire, flour and feed. Success in this business came to him early, and his honorable dealing and careful attention to his work have brought their natural results.

In 1867 Mr. Beck was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Alton, daughter of William and Esther Alton, and ten children have brightened their home: (1) Esther, born at New Diggings in 1868, married Alonzo Miller, a farmer of Benton, and has two children, Mona and John Alton. (2) Margaret E., born in 1870, married Thomas Wilkinson, of Benton, and has one son, Frederick. (3) Henrietta, born in 1871, married William Temple, a farmer of Benton, and has three children, Verta, Melvin and Cosetta. (4) Mary, born in 1873, married Matthew Brunier, of Benton. (5) Louisa J., born in 1875, is at home. (6) Anthony A. was born in 1877. (7) John was born in 1881. (8) James, born in 1882, is now a student in the State Normal at Platteville. Both he and his brother John are graduates of the Benton high school. (9) Herbert Gladstone and (10) Martha both died young.

Mr. Beck is an earnest worker in the Methodist Episcopal Church, as is also his wife. For twenty years he has served as superintendent of the Sunday-school, and for a longer period has been one of the trustees, and has also been class-leader. He was one of the founders and builders of the new church and parsonage at Benton, and in every line of church work has proven himself a liberal contributor, both of his time and of his means. He has also taken an active interest in educational work, and the new high school building had no warmer advocate than Mr. Beck. Since the erection of this new building he has held the position of clerk and director continuously. Socially he belongs to the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 168, of Lead Mine.

In his political affiliations Mr. Beck has been a pronounced Republican, and has voted for every President from Lincoln up to and including McKinley. Believing that to every citizen there are duties beyond his personal affairs, he has given himself over to public service at times to the great detriment of his private business. For twelve years he has been justice of the peace, for five years he served as village clerk, and at the present time he is most capably administering public affairs as president of the village board.

NICHOLAS SCHENCK. This prominent citizen and farmer of La Prairie township, Rock county, is a native of Wisconsin, the son of a pioneer. He was born at Shopiere, Rock county, Sept. 12, 1844, son of William and Sarah Jeannette (Yost) Schenck, natives of New York State, and grandson of William Schenck, also a native of New York, of Holland-Dutch descent, who was married three times, and had seventeen children. The latter, who was a farmer, about 1845 came to Wisconsin, taking up a tract of land near Beloit, and several years later removing to Jefferson county, and engaging in farming between Jefferson and Watertown until his death, at a ripe old age. William Yost, the maternal grandfather of our subject, was also a native of New York State, of Holland-Dutch descent. He was a farmer, and lived in his native State to old age, surrounded by a large family of children.

William Schenck, the father of our subject, was a carder by occupation, and was employed in the woolen mills of New York. In 1842 he came to Wisconsin, locating at Shopiere, and there following his trade for a year. He then entered 320 acres of government land in Section 27, La Prairie township, and several years later sold eighty acres of the tract for a sum sufficient to pay for the other 240 acres, the ownership of which he retained until his death, at the age of seventy-two years. He was a man of prominence, and held various local offices, including that of chairman of the town board for a number of terms. He was twice married, first to Sarah Jeannette Yost, by whom he had eight children, five sons and three daughters, of whom four are living: Dorcas, widow of John Wayman, of Mexico, Mo.; Rachel, widow of Henry Hart, of Mexico, Mo.; William, of Arcadia, Kans.; and Nicholas, our subject. The mother of these died at the age of forty-two years, and for his second wife the father married Miss Mary Mason, daughter of Edwin and Mercy Mason;

by her he had one daughter, Lorraine, now living at Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Nicholas Schenck, our subject, was reared in La Prairie township, attended the district schools and for two terms was a student at Milton (Wis.) College. Possessing the pioneer spirit, he began life for himself in Tama county, Iowa, where he purchased 160 acres of land for $6 per acre. This he afterward traded with his brother for 190 acres in the townships of Rock and La Prairie, Rock county, of which he still owns twenty-four and one-half acres. At the death of his father he came into possession of the homestead of 240 acres, which he now owns and occupies, having purchased the interest of the other heirs. Mr. Schenck is a prosperous and progressive farmer, and is recognized as an authority in agricultural affairs. In addition to farming he devotes considerable attention to stock raising. He has resided in Rock county for fifty-seven years, except the five years spent in Iowa and one year when he was engaged in the grocery business in Mexico, Missouri.

On Jan. 23, 1895, Mr. Schenck married Miss Jennie M. Peterson, daughter of Ole and Mary (Anderson) Peterson, natives of Norway, who were married in Janesville. The father died July 22, 1898, aged sixty-seven years, and the mother is now a resident of Janesville. Both were devout members of the Lutheran Church. To Ole and Mary Peterson were born eight children, two sons and six daughters, of whom six are now living: Bessie M., wife of George Goldsmith, of Rock township; Jennie M., wife of our subject; Christina A., wife of Herman Hunt, of Janesville; Dora M.; Marvin H.; and Lena R., of Janesville. To Nicholas and Jennie M. Schenck have been born two children, William Edward and Marvin Roland.

Mr. Schenck is a Republican in politics. Fraternally is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. He is an influential citizen, one whose long residence in the community and sterling character have justly commended to his fellow citizens as truly representative of the best human achievements of Rock county.

JOHN J. PUTNAM, deceased, was one of the prominent and well-remembered early settlers of the town of Decatur, Green county, Wis. He came here in the fall of 1848, and purchased a tract of five hundred acres, to which he removed his family in the month of June, the following year. Almost immediately he became identified with the moral and material growth of the community, and throughout his entire life took a leading part in everything that related to the general progress of the community.

Mr. Putnam was born in Hampshire county, Va., in 1801. In his early life he had a very limited opportunity for education. The death of his father, when he was seventeen, put upon his shoulders to a very great extent, the burden of the support of the family, and he nobly met the serious responsibilities of the situation. He was married before leaving Virginia to Miss Mary M. Fleek, a daughter of Adam Fleek. The young married couple very soon sought a home in Hocking county, Ohio, and later removed to Licking county, in the same State, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits, there continuing to reside until he came to Wisconsin, in 1849.

Mr. Putnam was a man of great mental gifts and sterling integrity. Though he died comparatively early in the history of Green county, he left a record that is not forgotten. He was justice of the peace for a number of years, and also held the office of chairman of the town. He accumulated a valuable property, leaving an estate of fourteen hundred acres. His death occurred June 5, 1856, and his widow survived until February, 1874. Of their children, four are now living: Elizabeth A., the wife of W. Atherton, of Albany; Oliver S., who was a captain in the war of the Rebellion; Henry C., a banker in Brodhead; and Virginia, wife of Burton Gardner, of Brodhead.

Hon. I. F. Mack, a former resident of Green county, in a contribution to a historical compilation of a decade or more back, has this to say of Mr. Putnam: "I was well acquainted with very many of the early settlers of Green county, and among the more prominent men of that early day I am pleased to name the late lamented John J. Putnam, who, with a large family connection of six or eight families, left Ohio, and settled in the town of Decatur, a little earlier than 1848, forming one of the most frugal and thrifty granger settlements it has ever fallen to my lot to know, none of whom will regard it invidious if I place Mr. Putnam, in his life, in the front in point of intelligence and noble manhood. Although a farmer, Mr. Putnam was a man of extensive reading, a keen observer of men and things, an astute reasoner, thoroughly posted on all questions that then divided political parties, of ripe judgment and unassailable integrity. Though firm and decided in his convictions, he was not intolerant, but genial and kind to the last degree. He was a prominent figure in the old Whig ranks, and a keen admirer of Henry Clay. Many a Democrat felt the incision of his political thrusts in the early days; and with true patriotism in his bones he could but pass into the Republican ranks. Stricken with a fatal malady while endowed with manly vigor, he passed away, leaving a handsome competence for a surviving wife and an interesting family of several sons and daughters."

JOSEPH H. CLARY. Among the well-known citizens of Lafayette county who have been prominently identified with many of its interests, is Joseph H. Clary, the subject of this sketch. He is a native of the Empire State, born in Auburn, Cayuga county, May 24, 1828, a son of Dr. Joseph and Susan (Bostwick) Clary, the former an eminent physician of western New York.

Dr. Clary was born in Conway, Mass., of Irish ancestry who located in America in 1645. Our subject's mother descended from ancestors who were early settlers of Long Island, coming thither from Chester, England, in 1643. Dr. Joseph Clary participated in the war of 1812, and was at Sackett's Harbor during the important military operations of that war. In about 1806 the family settled in Jefferson county, N. Y. Dr. Clary removed to Cayuga county in 1812, when the now important city of Rochester consisted of two huts, and those constructed of logs. He began the study of medicine in Jefferson county, graduated at a medical school in the State of Vermont, and for many years was a prominent physician of the city of Auburn, where his deeply lamented death occurred in 1863. The mother of our subject died in 1836, when her son Joseph was but eight years old. He was one of seven children, of whom he and one brother, Charles A., are now the only survivors.

Joseph H. Clary received his primary education in the public schools, prepared for college at the Auburn and Aurora academies, and entered Hamilton College in 1848, graduating in the class of 1851. Subsequently he took a post-graduate course in the law department of his Alma Mater, under the instruction of Prof. Theodore W. Dwight, was admitted to the Bar at Oswego, in his native State, in 1852, and at once engaged in practice at Westfield, Chautauqua county. This was nearly fifty years ago, when a tide of emigration was sweeping westward, and many young professional men were seeking newer and what promised to be more profitable fields of labor. Mr. Clary joined the procession, in the fall of 1853, locating at Mineral Point, Wis., and there entering upon the practice of law. He remained for fifteen years, and established quite an extensive practice. Mineral Point was well known for its abundant deposits of mineral, and many of the men connected with it have been those whose influence has been of the greatest value in the development of the State of Wisconsin. Mr. Clary became intimately acquainted with the leading men of the State, and his recollections of men and events of forty years ago are vivid and intensely interesting. With an excellent memory and fine conversational powers, he is an interesting and instructive talker. In 1868 Mr. Clary changed his residence to Darlington, and has been an esteemed citizen of that city ever since. Being well versed in the law, he has held the position of district attorney, in both Iowa and Lafayette counties, and has always been a prominent man.

The marriage of our subject, celebrated in 1858, at Delafield, Wis., was to Miss Elizabeth F. McHugh, who was born in New York State Sept. 27, 1837, a daughter of Rev. Stephen McHugh, one of the early and well-known Episcopalian clergymen of the State of Wisconsin; her maternal grandfather was Gen. Norris, formerly of the English army. Rev. Stephen McHugh was identified with the early religious interests of this State, and established two churches of his denomination, those in Madison and Delavan. Late in life he removed to Arkansas, where he passed his last years. Eight of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Clary are surviving: James C., in Nebraska; Stephen McHugh, in Darlington; Henry H. and Paul M., of Darlington; Mrs. Susan B. Duncanson, who resides in Nebraska; Mrs. Grace Walker, living in Mineral Point; Mrs. Maud Henry, residing in Nampa, Idaho; and Miss Elizabeth, now principal of the high school at Pierre, the capital city of South Dakota. One son, Joseph William, died in Omaha Nov. 14, 1886; another son, George, was killed by lightning at Camp Douglas, Wis., where he was encamped with his regiment, on July 11, 1893.

Mr. Clary is a man of liberal culture, extensive and varied reading, and possesses a mind well stored with useful knowledge. As a citizen he is held in high esteem, and he and family are valued members of the Episcopal Church. In politics he is and always has been a Democrat. As he says, he "voted for Palmer and Buckner in 1896, and in 1900 did not vote for President because there was no Democratic candidate for that office."

WILLIS P. COLBURN, the well-known and efficient principal of the Cassville public schools, is a native of Grant county, his birth having occurred in Platteville in 1866.

T. J. Colburn, his father, was born and reared in Vermont. In 1845, at the age of nineteen years, he came to Platteville, where as a carpenter and contractor he successfully engaged in business for many years. He married Miss Margie Jeardeau, and to them were born six children, namely: 'Mrs. C. J. Hosmer, a resident of Westfield, Mass.; Margie, a seventh-grade teacher in the schools of Milwaukee; Wis.; Mrs. Dr. E. E. Coerper, of Milwaukee; Philip, of San Diego, Cal.; Willis P.; and Roy Victor, who died in 1884. The father, who was a great lover of music and possessed an excellent voice, taught that art in the Platteville Academy, and also in the State Normal School after it was established at Platteville. He continued teaching for a number of years, and was also leader of the choir in the Congregational Church, of which both he and his wife were prominent members. He died in Platteville in 1890, and his widow now resides in San Diego, California.

During his boyhood and youth Willis P. Colburn attended the public schools of Platteville, and later entered the State Normal School at that place, where he was graduated in the class of 1891. He has since devoted his time and attention to teaching. In 1885 he took charge of his first district school, and taught one winter in Smelser township, Grant county; in 1887 he had charge of the school in Benton; and in 1888 was at Hurricane Corners, near Lancaster. He became principal of the Potosi public schools in 1891, and remained there until coming to Cassville, as principal of the public schools at this place, in September, 1894. For seven years he has been principal of the high school, with Roscoe Woodward as assistant, while in the grammar grades under his charge are three teachers: Prof. Clarence Brocket, who has charge of the upper grades—the seventh, eighth and ninth; Miss Marguerite Baumgartner, the fourth, fifth and sixth grades; and Miss Mame Prior, the first, second and third grades. The entire enrollment is 220, forty-five being in the high school, which was organized in 1889, and is supplied with a physical laboratory and a good reference library of 350 volumes.

Prof. Colburn is a member of the State Teachers Association, and also of the Principals Association, and is one of the leading educators in Grant county, having met with excellent success in his chosen profession. Socially he is connected with Cassville Lodge, No. 235, F. & A. M., of which he is secretary, and also belongs to Platteville Chapter, R. A. M. In religious belief he is a Congregationalist, and has been leader of the choir in the Congregational Church at Platteville.

Our subject was married, in July, 1900, to Miss Jennie Helena Grimm, daughter of Hermann Grimm, of Cassville.

HARVEY MARSHALL MILLER, for many years proprietor of the Miller homestead, in Section 32, Bradford township, Rock county, has lived many years in this community, and the simplicity of his life, his industrious habits and genuine manliness have alike commanded the confidence and esteem of his neighbors.

Mr. Miller was born in Rome, N. Y., March 23, 1823. He was educated at the academy at Whitesboro, N. Y., and began life for himself as a clerk in a hotel in his native city, being employed there four years, when he married and moved to Baltimore. He was twenty-nine years of age at that time, and a very capable and attractive business man. He continued in the hotel business for seven years in the "Union Hotel," situated at the corner of Thames and Bond streets, one of the oldest buildings in that city. The material for it was brought from England, the building constructed in 1777. When the Civil war broke out the strong Union sentiments of Mr. Miller aroused the dangerous hostility of the Southern element, which was manifested to such an extent that he thought it wise to dispose of his property and leave for the North. He returned to New York, and took a position as clerk in a hotel in Oriskany. There he remained for two years, and then came to Wisconsin to engage in agriculture. He located at his present residence in 1900. He owns a tobacco farm of twenty acres in Clinton township.

Mr. Miller and Miss Anna Christman were married Jan. 16, 1852, when she was seventeen years of age. She is the daughter of Col. Abraham and Betsy (Carpenter) Christman, of Oriskany, N. Y., the former of whom was a farmer, and a prominent man in that community. Mr. and Mrs. Harvey M. Miller have no children. She is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Our subject has been an Odd Fellow for fifty years. He shuns politics, and will accept no elective office.

George W. Miller, the father of Harvey Marshall, was a native of Oldhadam, Mass., born in 1792, and was a farmer. He married Miss Elizabeth Powell, a daughter of Nathaniel and Elizabeth (Spencer) Powell, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and they became the parents of seven children, Harvey M., Elizabeth, Mary, Reuben P., Oliver, Nathaniel P., and one child who died an infant. At the present writing only Elizabeth and Harvey M. are living. The Millers were Quakers in England and came to this country about 1682.

WILLARD EDMONDS GRINNELL, who is now living retired from active work at his comfortable home at No. 923 South Emerson street, Monroe, Green Co., Wis., is a highly respected citizen, who has inherited from two lines of Revolutionary ancestry the inherent patriotism that marks the highest type of American manhood. Mr. Grinnell was born in Montgomery county, N. Y., Sept. 21, 1824, a son of Robert P. and Esther J. (Montgomery) Grinnell.

Robert P. Grinnell was a native of New York, a son of Amos Grinnell, a farmer of French descent, who passed nearly his entire life in the Empire State, served in the Revolutionary army, and died when nearly ninety years of age. Robert Grinnell was likewise a farmer, and came from New York to Wisconsin in 1847, locating in Adams township, Green county, where he took up 120 acres of government land. There his death occurred Aug.

28, 1868, at the age of 73 years, 1 month and 12 days, his birth having occurred July 16, 1795. He had married Esther J. Montgomery, a daughter of Capt. Silas Montgomery, who was a brother of Gen. Montgomery. To their marriage were born five children, three of whom are now living: Willard Edmonds; Silas M., of Vancouver, Wash.; and John F., of Monroe. The mother of these children died at the age of eighty-two years. In religious faith the family were Baptists.

Willard Edmonds Grinnell was reared to manhood in New York State, where his education was acquired in an old-fashioned subscription school. He was early trained to farm work, and until his retirement that has been his constant occupation, except for a short time in early life, when he engaged to some extent in carpentering. In 1847 he accompanied his father to Wisconsin, and there took up 160 acres of land in Adams township, Green county, extending the boundaries of his land later, until he was the owner of 360 acres of well-improved arable land. He erected suitable buildings and otherwise improved his farm until he had attained a high place among the progressive farmers of the county. In 1886 he laid aside the cares and responsibilities of active management of his affairs, renting his old home farm, and moved with his wife into a home he had purchased in the city of Monroe, there to pass the rest of their lives in well-earned rest and enjoyment.

On April 20, 1847, Mr. Grinnell was united in marriage with Miss Mary Hanks, and to this union were born children as follows: Frank D., deceased, married Rosella Day, and had three children, Ernest, Ethel and Earl; Lovisa married Hiram Austin, of Monroe, and has one child, Lena; Anson W. married Catherine Owrey, deceased, and has three children living, Rena, Edward and Maud; Orissa C., deceased, married a Mr. Atherton; Willis, a wealthy farmer and carpenter of southern Iowa, married Samantha Stewart, and has a large family of children; Harvey, who lives near Chamberlain, South Dakota, married Maggie Shrake, and has six children; Serepta married Don Wheeler, of Ireton, Iowa, and has six children; Alice, of Ireton, married Roy Wheeler, and has three children: Esther married Lewis Grinnell, of Washington township, Green Co., Wis., and has three children; Walter, a carpenter, married Lucinda Brooks, and has one child, Guy; and Burty, of Boone, Iowa, is in the employ of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad. Mr. Grinnell was married to his present wife, Miss Louisa Owrey, in December, 1871. No children have been born of this union, but two have been reared as their own, Rosa Adams and Guy Grinnell. Mr. Grinnell is a staunch Prohibitionist in his political views. Formerly he was a Whig and an anti-slavery man. He has filled a number of important positions in official life, among them being constable, supervisor, school clerk, etc., in all of which he discharged the various duties with the same fidelity that has characterized his entire life.

Mrs. Grinnell is a daughter of Jacob and Samantha (Grinnell) Owrey. Jacob Owrey was a carpenter and came to Wisconsin in the early days, settling in Dane county, later locating in Green county, where he lived retired for the last years of his life. He died April 29, 1879, in his ninetieth year. He served under Commodore Perry in the war of 1812. His wife died April 24, 1877, aged seventy-eight years. They were the parents of eleven children, three of whom are yet living, Ruth, wife of Elijah Millman; Charlotte, wife of Governor Bailey, of Michigan; and Mrs. Grinnell.

HON. JOSEPH B. TREAT, of Monroe, is one of the most prominent citizens of Green county, throughout which he is known and esteemed, not only as a successful business man, but also for his high character and his excellent record as a financier.

Joseph Treat, his paternal grandfather, was a native of Maine, of English lineage, and was a merchant and farmer by occupation, with residence in the city of Frankfort, that State, where he died at a very advanced age. He had a family of five children. Oliver Parker (maternal grandfather of Joseph B.), also a native of Maine, born of English ancestry, and an agriculturist by vocation, was ninety-two years old when he died; his family consisted of seven children.

Nathaniel Treat (father of Joseph B.), also of Maine nativity, was a lumberman on the Penobscot river, in that State, until his coming in 1870 to Wisconsin, when he located in Monroe, whither all his children had preceded him. Here he died in 1895, and although at his death he had attained the patriarchal age of ninety-six years, he did not require the use of glasses. He was a highly educated man, and wrote considerably for the columns of the current newspapers, one month before his death having contributed an able article on the tariff. In politics he was a Democrat, but in 1892 voted for Harrison. While living in Maine he served as selectman, and as a member of the State Legislature. In 1823 he married Mary P. Parker, also a native of Frankfort, Maine, and ten children were born to them, five of whom are yet living, namely: Ezra Parker, Joseph B., Nathaniel B., Susan Alice (widow of Samuel Chandler), and Mary P. (widow of William Bloom), all of Monroe, Wis., except Mrs. Bloom, who is a resident of Chicago. The mother of these died in 1882, aged eighty-two years. She and her husband were both identified with the Universalist Church.

Joseph B. Treat, of whom this memoir more particularly relates, was born Dec. 22, 1836, in Orono, Maine, where he was reared and educated. At the age of eighteen he commenced business for himself in his native town, as a general merchant, and continued as such until 1860, in that year coming to Wisconsin and settling in Monroe. Here he established a dry-goods business, which he conducted until 1892, when he sold out, and embarked in the lumbering industry in Green county, engaging in same exclusively for several years, and to some extent at the present time. For the past twenty-five years he has been vice-president of the First National Bank, of Monroe (the first National bank established in the county); he has also interested himself in manufacturing and other industries of Monroe, which at all times receive his substantial encouragement.

On Jan. 18, 1859, Mr. Treat was united in marriage with Miss Priscilla W. Gould, daughter of Niah and Priscilla (Whitney) Gould, and two sons have been born to them: (1) Charles G., born in 1859, in Dexter, Maine, graduated in 1882 from West Point, where he is now commandant. He married Miss Margaret Cornell, of New York City, and they have three children, Joseph B., Margaret and Catherine. (2) Harry W., born in 1865, in Monroe, is a graduate of Cornell University: at present he is in Vancouver, British Columbia, where he is engaged in mining. He married Olive M. Graef, of New York.

In religious faith Mr. and Mrs. Treat are Universalists. In politics he is a Republican, and for the past two years has been chairman of the Republican State Central Committee; from 1876 to 1880 he was a member of the State Senate; has served as mayor of the city of Monroe two terms; was supervisor several terms, and chairman of the county board; for four years he was a member of the city school board. Socially he is affiliated with Ivanhoe Lodge, F. & A. M., Monroe, also of the Chapter, and of Janesville Commandery, No. 2; and he is prominently identified with the I. O. O. F. In every relation of life Mr. Treat has borne an honorable part as an upright, patriotic, loyal citizen, and is justly classified among the representative men of Green county.

COL. THOMAS STEPHENS. The mere mention of the name of this late distinguished citizen of Wisconsin, who passed from earth nearly thirty years ago, awakens memories of affectionate esteem in the hearts of many of the older residents of the southern portion of the State, who recall with pleasant thoughts his manly bearing, his dauntless courage, and his sterling worth.

Col. Stephens was the eldest of the four sons of Charles and Elizabeth Stephens, and was born in the borough of Tavistock, Devonshire, England, May 13, 1815. His father was a miner, and Thomas and his brothers were bred to the same occupation. Naturally of a robust physique, the hard, manly toil involved in this laborious pursuit tended greatly to develop his native strength, and on reaching his majority he presented a magnificent specimen of physical manhood. He was of remarkable stature, standing six feet, two inches, and his well knit frame was in perfect proportion to his great height. Of so striking appearance was he as to attract the notice of some high officials of the royal court, through whose influence he was made a member of the Queen's Life Guards, then famed as the finest body of troops in the British army. None of the members were less than six feet tall, and perfect physical proportions and a high order of intelligence were absolutely essential requisites for admission to the corps. Young Stephens was at once sent to Windsor Castle, where he entered upon his new life with the utmost enthusiasm. He was duly instructed in those branches of knowledge, a familiarity with which was deemed indispensable to the proper discharge of his duties as a soldier, chief among these being the arts of fencing, broadsword exercise and "self-defense." He found that exercise with the sword possessed for him a positive fascination, and to perfecting himself therein he devoted a very considerable portion of the time allotted to the men for recreation. In consequence he attained such a degree of proficiency that he won the reputation of being one of the best swordsmen, if not the very best of all, in the English army.

The life of a guardsman, however, with its restrictions and monotonous inactivity, presenting, as it did, but few chances of promotion, after a time began to grow irksome to him. His eyes turned toward the United States, where he thought opportunities for advancement were far better than in the service of the Queen. Accordingly, having secured a substitute to complete his term of military service, he bade adieu to the shores of the land of his birth, and accompanied by a younger brother, Richard, set sail for the New World in 1840. Upon landing in America they proceeded at once to the mining region lying around Pottsville, Penn. There his skill as a swordsman soon became bruited abroad, and he found his time fully occupied in giving exhibitions and imparting instruction to pupils. Believing that better success would attend him in a wider field, he went to Philadelphia, where he taught sword practice for many years. During his residence in that city he repeatedly attested his well-nigh matchless skill, meeting and defeating such past masters of the art of fencing as Profs. Newton, of the University of Norwich, Morris, of the Pennsylvania Military Institutions, and Davis, swordmaster and military instructor for the State of Virginia. He was constantly in receipt of encomiums and testimonials from high authorities, among the most valued of these being those received from Gov. Porter, of Pennsylvania, and Gen. Johnson, the reputed slayer of the famous Indian chief, Tecumseh. After leaving Philadelphia he taught at various points in Pennsylvania, as well as at New York.

Early associations, however, are not easily forgotten, and he still cherished a strong desire to inspect the mining districts of the Northwest. In 1845 he visited the lead mines around Galena, and soon afterward went to Lake Superior, where he spent two years as agent of the North American Copper Mine. Not long after reaching this country he met, at Williamsport, Penn., Miss Jane Hageman, a resident of that place. At that time he was teaching fencing there, and the young couple plighted their troth. In 1847 Mr. Stephens returned to claim his promised bride, and on Aug. 5, of that year, they were united in wedlock. They at once removed to Dodgeville, Iowa Co., Wis., which place was their home until Col. Stephens' death, and his widow yet resides there. In 1851 he visited California, returning in 1852. In 1857 he was commissioned inspector general of the Wisconsin State militia, a post for which he was admirably qualified, by reason of his previous soldierly training and military experience. His business was dealing in real estate, and making and handling loans thereupon, in the conduct of which he was eminently successful.

The Colonel was a true patriot, loyal to the core of his being, to his adopted country, and the first gun of the Rebellion fired in the harbor of Charleston stirred his patriotic soul. In connection with C. C. Washburne he recruited and organized the 2d Wisconsin Cavalry, of which he was commissioned lieutenant colonel, Col. Washburne being first in command. Later—on the elevation of Col. Washburne to a brigadier generalship—he was promoted to the colonelcy. He led his men throughout the war with distinguished gallantry, and, while an admirable disciplinarian, succeeded in gaining not only their respect but their affection as well. His service, however, was not without its unpleasant experiences. Being compelled to return home on sick leave, he employed the period of his convalescence in securing recruits for his regiment at the front. On rejoining his command, he discovered that one of his subordinate officers had taken advantage of his absence to disseminate scandalous and baseless reports concerning him. By permission of his superiors he at once proceeded to Washington, where he demanded a prompt and thorough investigation. His request was granted, and the inquiry resulted in his complete and triumphant vindication. For self-seekers within the service, and for traitors without, Col. Stephens had a hearty detestation. That a man of such high sense, rugged integrity and resolute purpose should make enemies is no cause for surprise. Yet the Colonel's firmness, no less than his distinguished military skill and undaunted heroism, won him alike the hearty respect of his superior officers and the unfaltering devotion of his men, none of the many gallant officers of the Wisconsin volunteer regiments who served with courage and fidelity during that great conflict returning with more honor than Col. Thomas Stephens, or with a more enviable record. In testimony of their appreciation and love the men of the 2d Cavalry, on being mustered out, presented him with a costly sword, belt, sash, and other equipments of a cavalry commander, which his family will ever regard with love akin to reverence, as they recall the husband and father who has gone to his reward.

The Colonel, in addition to knowledge, skill and courage, did not lack literary ability, and his treatise on "Broad and Short Sword Exercise," which appeared in 1861, won a high eulogium from Gen. Winfield Scott, and commanded the unstinted admiration of all competent military critics, being officially recommended for study by officers of the United States army.

While Col. Stephens returned home with high honor, he brought back from his country's service a shattered constitution, his magnificent physique being broken beyond repair. In a vain hope of regaining his lost health he visited England in 1869. His return to his native land was most gratifying to the old member of the Queen's Guards, the former toiler in the tin mines of Cornwall being received with marked honor at Windsor Castle, Buckingham Palace and the House of Parliament. The trip, however, proved of little benefit as a restorative to his ruined health, and not long after his return to his home at Dodgeville he passed away, July 22, 1873. Few deaths in Southwestern Wisconsin within a decade were as deeply mourned. In no relation of life had he been tried and found wanting. An ardent patriot and a fearless soldier, he was also a tender husband and an indulgent father. Benevolent in heart, and with impulses generous to a fault, no worthy charity appealed to him in vain, and after the lapse of nearly thirty years his memory remains still green.

Col. Stephens' long experience with the world had taught him sound business sense, and his judgment was rarely at fault. He was fortunate in his investments, particularly in real estate; and it is probable that when called from earth in middle life (before reaching the age of fifty-nine) he remembered with pleasure that he would leave his family in moderate affluence. He left a widow and three children, two daughters and one son. Harriet, the first-born, is the wife of Solomon Osborne, of Dodgeville. Thomas Charles, the only son, resides in Chicago. Elizabeth, the youngest, is the wife of Dr. Henry Carson, of Milwaukee.

Mrs. Stephens was born in the township of Lycoming, Lycoming Co., Penn., in 1820, daughter of Isaiah and Rebecca Hageman. Her father was of Holland descent, and one of the most prominent pioneers of Lycoming county. Both her parents died full of years and good works in the county of their residence, highly esteemed by their neighbors and mourned by their friends.

This necessarily abridged tale of Col. Stephens' honored life may be best concluded by a brief reference to the other members of his father's family. As has been said, he was the eldest son. His brother Richard, the next in order of birth, accompanied him to America. The other brothers were named James and Elijah. The father and mother, with the two younger sons, crossed the ocean two years after Thomas, and the family was reunited at Danville, Penn. Not long afterward they removed to Ralston, near Williamsport, same State. Richard went from Pennsylvania to Galena, and thither his father and James followed him in 1844, leaving the mother and Elijah, who were to join them later, should the outlook prove favorable. Six weeks after reaching Galena, however, the father died. The widow joined her children, and received their tender love and gentle care until her death, in 1853, at Dodgeville, Iowa Co., Wis. Richard twice visited the California gold fields, and served for a time in the army of the Union; he removed to Kansas, and there died. James, the third and only living brother, resides at Dodgeville. Elijah, while yet a very young man, went to California, and from there to Chile, South America, where he died.

CAPT. THOMAS FLINT, a retired farmer, now living in Albany, Green county, has led an active and strenuous life, and now in his old age can look back over the years with a sense of gratitude that he has been able to do so much in the world, to have so many good friends, and to help forward so many valuable and hopeful enterprises.

Captain Flint was born in the town of Antrim, Hillsboro Co., N. H., July 31, 1822, and is a son of John and Sallie (Atwood) Flint, both natives of that State. Ten children were born to them, of whom five are now living: Thomas; Lydia, the widow of Aaron Broughton, of Rock county, Wis.; Kate, of Minnesota; Elsie, the wife of Gaylord Lockwood, of the town of Brooklyn; and Sanford H., of Woodstock, Ill. The father, who was a farmer, removed from New Hampshire to Chautauqua county, N. Y., and engaged in farming there. In 1845 he came to Wisconsin, and located in the town of Albany, Green county, on an eighty-acre farm, which he cultivated as long as he lived. He died at the age of seventy-eight. His widow survived some three or four years, and died when seventy-seven years old. They were members of the Congregational Church. Adam Flint, grandfather of Captain Flint, was a native of New Hampshire. He engaged in farming, and reared a large family. The history of the Flint family in this country begins with the arrival of three brothers of that name in 1635, all settling in New England. The father of Sallie Atwood was a native of New Hampshire, and passed his entire life as a farmer.

Thomas Flint was six years old when his parents moved to New York. In 1843 he made his first appearance in Wisconsin, only to return to New York, and in 1845 bring back to Wisconsin his mother and several of his brothers and sisters, making the journey overland by wagon. His father had come on to Wisconsin, and made a settlement the previous year. Our subject was reared a farmer, and all his life he has been faithful to his early teaching and kept close to the soil. He obtained his early education in the district schools, and has always been a student of men and events, keeping a broad vision of the world, keenly alive to the significance of the history that is being made in these days.

Captain Flint and Miss Mary Simmons were married July 2, 1846, and six children were born to them, Ella, Myron, Alta, Merlin, Floyd and Ida. Ella married Arnold A. Bennett, of Albany. Myron married Esther Flint, and they have one son, Merlin, a farmer in the town of Albany. Alta married Charles Comstock, of Albany. Merlin died when eleven months old. Floyd married (first) Dora Meinert, of Albany, now deceased, by whom he had one child, Addie Dora, at present living with her aunt, Mrs. Bennett; for his second wife he wedded Miss Kate Wessel, of Albany, and they have two sons, Harold and Alfred. Ida married William Smiley, of Albany, and is the mother of four sons and three daughters, Arnold, Edna, James, Robert, Harry, Florence and Mary. Mrs. Mary Flint died Dec. 25, 1891. She was a Congregationalist, and a lady of many charming traits. On Aug. 12, 1893, at Southwest City, Mo., Mr. Flint married (second) Mrs. Tamar A. Gillies, widow of Edward A. Gillies; she died July 7, 1894. On April 25, 1897, Mr. Flint married Mrs. Hannah M. Colton, widow of Melzar Colton, and daughter of Dorwin Hulbert. She is a member of the Baptist Church. Mr. Flint was a member of the Congregational Church at Albany, but since it disbanded has not united with any other.

Mr. Flint has led a hard and laborious life, and has made his way against every kind of obstacles. When he started out for himself his first work was cutting rails, at thirty-six cents a day, on Rock river, a mile and a half from Janesville. He then worked on a farm for a year on Rock Prairie. During this time he borrowed some money, and in 1845 bought eighty acres in Section 19, town of Albany. He has added to this from time to time until he has owned six hundred and twenty acres. He gave a farm to each of his boys, sold some, and on March 1, 1900, sold what remained, a farm of two hundred acres. He lived on his farm until 1886, when he rented it and moved into Albany, buying a good home, in which he now resides. He owns six acres of land within the limits of Albany, and is prosperous beyond his early hopes.

Mr. Flint enlisted, Aug. 24, 1864, as a private, and on Sept. 25, following, was commissioned captain of Company I, 5th Wis. V. I., and served through the closing months of the war. He was discharged May 15, 1865. While his military record is not extended, it covers some of the fiercest fighting of the war. He participated in the battles of Hatcher's Run, Fort Steadman, Petersburg, Sailor's Creek, and in a number of skirmishes, several of which in a smaller war would have been called battles. He was taken sick at Farmville, Va., and was in the hospital two months at Cedar Point and Georgetown, and then came home. Since then he has followed farming. He belongs to Erastus Hoyt Post, No. 69, G. A. R., of which he is commander, and has filled this position for many years. He belonged to the Odd Fellows for forty years, but at the present time is not affiliated. He was a Whig in early life, and has been a Republican ever since the formation of the party. He has been on the county board two terms; was county treasurer two years; has been a member of the town board several terms; and was assessor of the town of Albany thirteen terms.

WILLIAM MINOR LUDLUM, who died Oct. 21, 1900, in Belmont, Lafayette county, where he was living retired, belonged to the fast lessening number of those who came to this State when it was very largely a wilderness, and with gigantic courage attacked the prairie and the forest with the implements of civilization, living to see the State become a garden spot of industry and wealth. Few there are of that noble company remaining, and let those who do have the more honor and reverence.

Mr. Ludlum was born in Warren county, Ohio, in November, 1823, a son of Ephraim and Mary (Kelly) Ludlum, both natives of that county, who spent their lives on a farm within its limits. Two of their children are still living: Clarinda is the widow of John Trump, and is living on the old farm in Warren county, Ohio, at the advanced age of eighty-eight years; Phoebe is the widow of Benjamin Clark, and lives in Warren county, Ohio. Johanna, Rebecca and James came to Wisconsin, and married in this State, but all have been dead some years.

William M. Ludlum grew to manhood on the home farm in Ohio, and received a very good education in the local schools until he met with an unfortunate accident in early life that shut him out from school attendance in the later years of his boyhood. He began well, but becoming a cripple was not able to go to school or study with that intensity that his nature would otherwise have demanded. Nevertheless he was a close reader and an attentive student of the world around him, and his conclusions were neither hastily drawn nor contrary to facts as they appear to the thoughtful eye. It was not until 1843 that Mr. Ludlum felt able once more to wrestle with fate and fortune, and he essayed the struggle by coming into the West, and doing farm work in Lafayette county, Wis. After a few years spent in this fashion he had saved enough to warrant the purchase of eighty acres of government land, at a dollar and a quarter an acre, and he began life for himself as an independent farmer. A few years later he bought a second eighty at ten dollars an acre, and still later he bought more land, until at the time of his death he owned as handsome a farm, of 200 acres, as may be found in many a day's ride in the southern part of Wisconsin.

In 1848 Mr. Ludlum and Miss Ruth A. Osborn were married. She is a daughter of Stephen and Mary Osborn, both her parents being members of old families. Her father, who was a Revolutionary soldier, died when she was but four years old. Her mother subsequently remarried, and moved to Virginia, where she died. Mrs. Ludlum was born in Fayette county, Penn., in 1824, and remained in her native county until she had become a girl of eighteen, when she accompanied her brother Peter to Wisconsin. She located here, but he was not satisfied with the outlook, and after two years moved into Iowa, and still later to Johnson county, Kan., where he is still living. A second sister, Lavina, accompanied Ruth A. and Peter Osborn to Wisconsin; she married Moses Eastmann, moved to California in 1850, and died in 1898. Lydia Osborn married Samuel Bell, lived in Pennsylvania, and died there in 1894. Martha and Catherine Osborn accompanied their mother to Virginia, where they married and are now living. Samuel Osborn died in Henry county, Iowa. John Osborn came to Galena at a very early day; there he married, and brought his wife to Lafayette county, Wis., where he was located on a farm for some years; selling out, he went to Iowa, and is living a retired life in that State. Enoch Osborn is a retired farmer in the town of Tabor, Iowa.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Ludlum built a log house on their farm, which served them as a home until 1884. That year they put up a modern house, with up-to-date improvements, and set the old building back to serve very subordinate purposes. Mr. Ludlum built a large Pennsylvania barn on his farm some twenty-five years ago. In 1899 Mr. Ludlum bought a residence in the city of Belmont, which the family still occupy; it is a pleasant and commodious edifice, and has all the comforts of a well regulated home. Our subject and his wife had five children, two of whom are living: Laura M., Mary L., and Martha S. died in childhood. E. O. Ludlum, the only son, was born in Lafayette county in 1849, was partly educated in the local schools, and attended the Normal at Platteville. He remained with his parents until his marriage, with Miss Martha Killpatrick, of Galena, Ill. They settled on the old homestead, where she died in 1888, leaving five sons, Charles H., Fred E. (who was killed by a runaway horse when he was sixteen years old), Richard F., Clarence B. and William E. Charles H., the eldest of this family, is married, and resides in Belmont, where he is engaged in the livery and feed business. Hattie C. Ludlum, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Minor Ludlum, grew up on the home farm, was very well educated in the local schools, and married Walter E. Wright, of Belmont, where they live, and where he is engaged in business. She is the mother of three children, Laura M., Luella Pearl and Lester E.

Mr. Ludlum was a Republican, and a supporter of the party from its organization. He was brought up under the influence of the Methodist Church, and, though he never joined the church, he always gave liberally to its support. He and his good wife were numbered among the earliest pioneers of the State, and among its honored and well-to-do citizens, holding a warm place in the hearts of their neighbors for their kindly and genial qualities.

GRATIOT FAMILY in Southwestern Wisconsin. Among the families whose annals are intertwined with the history of the Wisconsin lead mine region, none occupies a more honorable and conspicuous place than that of Gratiot.

The founder of the family in America was Charles Gratiot. He was a remarkable man. His father and mother were Huguenots of La Rochelle, France, and were driven from their home and native land by the savage act of Louis XIV, in revoking the edict of Nantes. They fled to Switzerland, and took up their residence at Lausanne, where Charles was born.

He was sent to England, where he received a business education, and before his majority sought wealth and fame in the fur trade in Canada. With headquarters at Mackinaw, he traveled to all the early French settlements and among all the Indian tribes of the Northwest. The canoe and the batteau formed his merchant fleet, and with them he journeyed in his adventurous trade from Montreal to St. Louis. In the year 1774 he abandoned the lake region, and established trading posts at Cahokia and Kaskaskia. When the Revolutionary war broke out he gave time, influence and fortune to the cause of freedom and independence. At the close of the war Charles Gratiot established himself at St. Louis. He married Victoire Choteau, and thus allied himself with the founders of St. Louis. Charles Gratiot had four sons: Henry, Charles, John Bunyan and Paul Messellier. He had five daughters: Julie, Victoire, Marie Therese, Emile Anna, and Louise Isabelle Choteau.

Charles Gratiot, Jr., was born in St. Louis, Aug. 29, 1786, and died there May 18, 1855. He graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1806; was second lieutenant of engineers; captain in 1808; served under Gen. Harrison in 1812; was brevetted colonel; was at the defense of Fort Meigs in 1813; and of Fort McKenzie in 1814. He was major of engineers in 1815; built the fortifications on the Delaware river, and planned and superintended the erection of Fortress Monroe; was lieutenant colonel in 1819; chief engineer, Engineer Department, in 1828; brevet major general, May 24, 1828; inspector United States Military Academy in 1838; and resigned in 1839.

Charles Gratiot, Jr., married Ann Belin, of Philadelphia. He had two daughters: Marie Victoire married Charles F. de Montholon, was lady of honor to Empress Carlotta in Mexico, and allied to some of the most distinguished families of France; her sister, Julia Augusta, was married to her cousin, Charles P. Choteau.

Louise Isabelle, sister of Charles Gratiot, Jr., was born in St. Louis, and died there July 13, 1878. On May 31, 1812, she married Jules de Mun, of the nobility of France.

John Bunyan Gratiot was born at St. Louis, Feb. 19, 1797, was a partner with his brother Henry in mining and smelting lead ore in Wisconsin, and lived at "Gratiot's Grove," where their smelting operations were carried on. At the breaking out of the Winnebago war he raised a company of mounted men, and joined the command of Gen. Dodge. During the Black Hawk war he raised a company, and took part in the battle of Bad Axe, which ended the war. He died in St. Louis in 1876. He married, Nov. 18, 1819, Adele Marie Antoinette Pedreuveille, daughter of Kene Pedreuveille, of Havre, a noble of France, who filled high positions under Napoleon.

It is with Henry Gratiot, however, more than with any other member of the family, that the history of the lead mine region is most intimately and prominently related. He was the second son of Charles, the original pioneer, and was born at St. Louis April 12, 1789. In 1825 Henry Gratiot and his brother John were among the first to take up mineral lands in northern Illinois and engage in the mining and smelting of lead ores. In 1826 they moved their families there; in the following spring they moved to a new discovery, purchased from the Indians, and erected new cabins and furnaces. Making this place their residence, they called it Gratiot's Grove, and there they remained during the Winnebago outbreak and the Black Hawk war, Mr. Gratiot and his brother taking an active part in both. At this time the settlement contained 1,500 souls. The present city of Shullsburg, one mile north of Gratiot's Grove, was a naked prairie. In the spring of 1826 rumors of rich lead mines where the city of Shullsburg now stands were circulated; but the Indians were unfriendly, and concealed the place, lest they should offend the Great Spirit. The cupidity of the Indians eventually overcame their scruples, and they told Jesse W. Shull, who had long been an Indian trader, that if he would go with them to Berry's hill (Gratiot Grove hill) they would shoot arrows in the direction of the lead ore. Shull followed the direction, and put up a cabin, but the Indians soon drove him off. The Gratiots, by the friendly aid of a half-breed Winnebago woman, named Catherine Myott, bought for a large quantity of goods and supplies the right to dig for lead ore. On the north slope of Gratiot Grove hill was a heavy forest of hard wood timber, and here at one time were nine log furnaces running, and smelting a large share of the product of the lead region.

Mrs. J. P. B. Gratiot thus describes the first news of the outbreak of the Black Hawk war: "Up to this time (1832) our dwelling had been completed, and we were surrounded with many comforts, and in our light-heartedness never dreamed of the storm gathering over our heads. On the Fourth of July I claimed the privilege of entertaining our friends at dinner. The table was set, the guests assembled. Ours were primitive accommodations. I was carrying a large bowl of custard to the table, Mrs. Henry Gratiot was assisting, when we saw four tall Indians with guns in their hands approaching. I let the dish fall, to the great dismay of the children. We were quite relieved when we saw them stack their guns and share our dinner. An interpreter was sent for. They were four friendly Winnebago chiefs, who were friendly, but told us they could no longer restrain their young warriors, on account of the encroachments of the whites. They did not want to hurt them, but advised them to remove their women and children. All was terror and confusion, and the women and children were speedily sent to Galena. The services of Henry Gratiot during and at the close of the Indian wars were beyond compute."

Henry Gratiot was sent in 1832 by the government to negotiate the release of Rachel and Sylvia Hall, the two young girls taken prisoners by the Sac, Fox and Pottawatomie Indians. Charles de St. Vrain, their agent, had been murdered by them about this time. Henry Gratiot was taken prisoner by the Indians, but by the intercession of the principal Winnebago chiefs, he and the two girls were released upon the payment of a large ransom.

Henry Gratiot was married, Feb. 20, 1813, to Susan Hempstead, a daughter of Stephen Hempstead, of New London, Conn., who was a Revolutionary soldier. He acted as sergeant in Capt. Nathan Hale's company; accompanied that noble young officer on his fatal mission; was at Boston in 1775; participated in the battle of Bunker Hill; was in Washington's army when the Declaration of Independence was first read to the troops, in July, 1776; was wounded at Harlem Heights and taken off the field for dead, and again twice wounded at Fort Griswold, and was one of the twenty-three who spiked the guns at Fort Trumbull when attacked by Benedict Arnold, Sept. 6, 1781.

After the close of the Black Hawk war Henry Gratiot gradually closed up his business of mining and smelting, and prepared to open a large farm adjoining Gratiot's Grove. He built a large house, after the French style, which was burned in 1853. Having passed through many dangers and tribulations, he settled down to enjoy life with his family. In 1836 he went to Washington, D. C., on business, and to visit his brother, Gen. Charles Gratiot, then chief of the corps of United States engineers. On his way home he was taken sick, and died at Baltimore April 27, 1836, at the age of forty-seven years. The town of Gratiot, Wis., was named after him.

Henry Gratiot had four sons: Charles H., Edward, Henry and Stephen; and two daughters: Adele and Susanna. Of these, Charles H. Gratiot married Anne Sheldon; Edward Gratiot married Ellen J. Hagur; Adele Gratiot married Elihu B. Washburn; Susanne Gratiot married Thomas C. Child; Henry Gratiot married Eliza de Lorimier; Stephen Gratiot married Mary J. Chamberlin.

Charles H. Gratiot, son of Henry, was born in St. Louis March 15, 1814. In 1825 he came with his parents to Galena, Ill. In 1832 he entered into business at Gratiot with Hon. Frederick Stahl. One year later he opened the first store in Dubuque, Iowa, in partnership with Peter A. Lorimer. Later he went to the copper regions of Michigan, and there opened the first copper mine, for which he was rewarded by the government. In 1849 he visited the gold fields of California, and after remaining there a few years returned to Gratiot, Wis. In 1859 he led a wagon train to Pike's Peak, and while there was stricken with paralysis, from which he never recovered. Mr. Gratiot served with distinction during the Black Hawk war, and when eighteen years of age held the position of lieutenant in that memorable struggle. He married, at Willow Springs, Wis., Anne E. Sheldon, who was born at Detroit, Mich., Nov. 17, 1819, and died at Gratiot, Wis., Jan. 9, 1882. Charles H. Gratiot died at Gratiot March 15, 1883.

Charles and Anne (Sheldon) Gratiot were the parents of three sons, of whom Charles C. married Etta Marcy, and they are the parents of nine children. H. R. married Ellen Noble, and they are the parents of six children; they live in Gratiot, Wis. Charles and Anne (Sheldon) Gratiot also left three daughters, of whom Elizabeth married Edward Collins, and they became the parents of three children; Mrs. Collins is a widow, and resides with her children in Shullsburg. Mary married J. H. Chassign, and they are parents of four children; they reside in St. Louis, Mo. Antoinette married Joseph Brewster, and they became the parents of five children; Mr. Brewster is deceased, and his widow resides with her children in Madison, Wisconsin.

CHARLES C. GRATIOT is a prominent physician, a graduate of Jefferson Medical College. He has been mayor of Shullsburg, where he now resides, and has long been identified with the public schools, in which he takes a great interest. He is a Mason, Odd Fellow, Knight of Pythias, and member of the G. A. R., having served in the war of the Rebellion.

EDWARD A. HOLMES, one of the prominent and successful business men of Milton, Rock county, was born in that village April 25, 1841, son of Harvey and Abbie (Waterman) Holmes, natives of Connecticut.

Harvey Holmes was a carpenter by trade, and became one of the first settlers of Rock county, migrating hither in 1838, and settling on what is known as the Waterman place, one mile south of the village of Milton. Later he moved to the town of Harmony, and bought a farm of 176 acres, which he improved and occupied until his death, in 1854, at the age of forty-nine years. He was a farmer of unusual prominence, was chairman of the county board of supervisors a number of years, and in 1852 was elected to the State Legislature. He was a Whig in politics. Himself and wife were active members of the Congregational Church, of which he was a long time deacon. The widow still survives, a resident of Santa Clara, Cal., at the age of eighty-eight years. To Harvey and Abbie Holmes were born seven children, two sons and five daughters, of whom three now survive: Edward A., our subject; Adelaide A., widow of Alfred Post, and now a resident of Santa Clara, Cal.; and Sarah M., wife of John Swinton, of Portland, Oregon.

Alfred Holmes, the paternal grandfather of our subject, was a native of Connecticut, and lived to the age of about ninety years. He had four sons and one daughter. Joseph Waterman, the maternal grandfather, was a native of Connecticut, and an early settler of Rock county, locating about 1839 a mile south of the village of Milton, where he lived to the age of eighty-seven years.

Edward A. Holmes was reared on the farm in Milton township, attended the district schools, and completed his education at Milton College. He then started life for himself as a farmer, continuing thus until 1879, when he engaged in a general mercantile business at Milton, until his general store was destroyed by fire, in 1898. Mr. Holmes then opened a grocery store, and he has since conducted that business. For the past twenty years he has been agent at Milton for the United States Express Co.

On Oct. 20, 1869, Mr. Holmes married Miss Alice Wilkins, daughter of Joseph and Celesta (Johnson) Wilkins, and to this union have been born seven children, five sons and two daughters: (1) Harvey E. married Marcia Jones, and they have two children, John Edward and Harvey. (2) David Alfred married Nettie Spaulding. (3) Helen Frances married Frank A. Root, and lives at Appleton. (4) Walter Scott married Ina Gray, and lives in Harmony. (5) James Pitt, who is unmarried, participated in the Spanish-American war; he now has a position in the Northern Hospital for the Insane. (6) Paul Allen died Dec. 25, 1898, aged eighteen. (7) Sarah Alice is a student of Milton College. Politically Mr. Holmes is a Republican. He attends the Congregational Church.

JOHN S. WILLIAMS (deceased) was for many years an honorable and industrious farmer in Grant county, and is well remembered in the town of Hazel Green as a thoroughly upright and public-spirited man.

Mr. Williams was born in Cornwall, England, in April, 1820, where he received a fair education, and remained until after he reached his majority. While still living in England he married Miss Susan Bosanco, and she accompanied him to Wisconsin, whither he came many years ago, very early in the history of Grant county, engaging in lead mining for some years. In 1850 he crossed the Plains to the gold fields of California, and spent some three years in the mines. Coming back to Wisconsin, he settled on a farm three miles west of Hazel Green, and at that home Mrs. Williams died, leaving eleven children who lived to reach mature age: (1) Susan, born in Grant county, in 1846, is now the wife of Frank Lightcap, of Winnipeg, Canada. (2) Honor, born in April, 1848, married Joseph Thomas, of Shullsburg, Wis. (3) Hannah, born in 1850, married James D. Rogers, of Smelser. (4) John, born in 1852, married Miss Nettie Jellett, of Hazel Green, lives in Platteville, and is the father of four children, Hattie, Vivian, Raymond, and Irene. (6) William, born in February, 1859, married Miss Sallie Price, of Galena, Ill., and lives in South Dakota; he is the father of one daughter, Elsie. (7) Sarah, born in May, 1861, married Thomas Mann, and lives in Sutherland, Iowa, where she is rearing her family of children. (8) Mary, born in February, 1864, married Rev. (11) Thomas A., born in September, 1870, is married, and lives near Sibley, Iowa, where he is engaged in farming.

John S. Williams and Miss Elizabeth Coombe were married in January, 1887. Mrs. Williams was the daughter of William and Elizabeth Coombe, old and prominent pioneers of Grant county, who came from England at a very early day, settling in the town of Hazel Green. Here Mrs. Williams received her education, in the public schools, and here she grew to womanhood. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Williams live on a farm some two years, and then purchased the Edward Thompson home, in the village of Hazel Green, in which house Mr. Williams spent the remaining years of his life, dying April 23, 1900. There were no children by the second marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Williams were both members of the Methodist Church, which received a liberal support from the family, and he was one of the officers of the church for many years. In politics he was ever an ardent Republican, and had always taken an active part in local affairs.

Mr. Williams began life in this country a poor man, and by long and unflagging industry and wise management became quite prosperous. He was a good man, and left a wide circle of friends. Mrs. Williams is a lady much respected for her many virtues, and much of her time is spent in unostentatious charity and genuine Christian work.

MATTHEW STOTT, whose years of active toil are over, is now passing the evening of a well-spent life in the home his industry has provided. He is a native of Yorkshire, England, born Sept. 18, 1826, son of Matthew and Margaret Stott, who passed their entire lives in their native land. Of their children, Robert came to this country, and died unmarried a few years ago. Four others are living in England.

Matthew Stott grew to manhood in Yorkshire, and received a fair education in the schools there. In 1856 he boarded a sailing vessel for the New World, and on landing came directly West to Wisconsin. His first employment was as a miller in Big Patch, Grant county, where he and Messrs. Wilkinson and Johnson operated a mill in partnership. He later sold out his interest in the mill and returned to England, but after a year in the old home came back to Wisconsin, and located in Benton, Lafayette county, where he followed mining for a number of years. Etna, New Diggings township, was his first location after his marriage, and he was there engaged in farming and mining until he purchased his present fine farm, which he has since greatly improved, erecting good, substantial buildings, and making a comfortable home for himself and his wife in their old age. As pioneers of the county he and his wife can relate many interesting experiences of the early days, and both are much loved by all who know them.

In 1866 Mr. Stott wedded Mrs. Margaret White, daughter of John and Elmer Coates, both of whom died in England. Mrs. Stott was born in that country in 1823, and on reaching young womanhood married Thomas White. In 1848 Mr. White, his wife and three children located in New Diggings, where he followed mining a short time, and then crossed the Plains to California, where he died in the gold fields. His wife and her four children were left in Wisconsin. These children were as follows: Barbara, wife of Dixon Cottingham, of Dubuque, Iowa, is the mother of nine children. Isabel, Matthew, Mary E.,

John, Lizzie, Minnie, Ella, Eva and William; Eleanor, wife of William Bonner, of O'Brien county, Iowa, is the mother of eight children, William, John, Nora, Mary E., Robert, Annie, Thomas and Lizzie; John' (deceased) married Bell Collard, of New Diggings, where he died in 1892, leaving three children, two of whom, Maggie (Mrs. William Bird) and Grace, live in New Diggings, and the third, W. L., is in Alaska; and William C., born in 1859, emigrated to New Mexico, where he married, and then moved to Cripple Creek, Colo., where his family now reside, during his absence at Cape Nome, Alaska.

Mr. and Mrs. Stott were both brought up in the faith of the Church of England, and have lived good Christian lives. In politics Mr. Stott is a Republican.

FREDERICK LIBERT. Sound judgment, combined with fine ability in mechanical lines, has enabled the subject of this biography, a well-known blacksmith of Platteville, Grant county, to attain a substantial success in life, and his history is of especial interest. He was born in Bavaria, Germany, in 1840, and when only five years old crossed the Atlantic with his parents, Kausman and Margaret (Martins) Libert, also natives of Bavaria, who located first in Jo Daviess county, Ill., but in 1856 moved to Grant county, Wis. The father, who was a farmer by occupation, died at Hazel Green in 1861, and the mother departed this life in 1858. In their family were ten children, of whom the following are still living: Nichlos, Andrew, Frederick, Barbara and Eva.

Frederick Libert was reared and educated in Jo Daviess county, Ill., and Grant county, Wis., and during his youth learned the blacksmith's trade at Platteville. That occupation he has made his life work, and in its prosecution has met with good success. His labors were interrupted by his service in the Union army during the war of the Rebellion. On Aug. 8, 1862, at Platteville, Mr. Libert enlisted in Company E, 25th Wis. V. I., for three years or during the war. The company was organized at La Crosse, and mustered in at Madison. As a part of the Army of the West it took part in the Sauk war in Minnesota, was sent south in January, 1863, and took part in the siege of Vicksburg; the engagement at Jackson, Miss.; the battle of Kenesaw Mountain; and was with Sherman on the march to the sea. At Atlanta Mr. Libert was taken prisoner, and for two months was confined in Andersonville prison. He rejoined his regiment at Atlanta, in time to take part in the Carolina campaign, including the last battle of the war—that of Bentonville. He participated in the grand review at Washington, D. C., and when honorably discharged, at Madison, Wis., in June, 1865, returned to his home in Platteville. He has been a resident of Grant county since 1856, for two years lived in Hazel Green, and since then has made his home in Platteville.

At Hazel Green, in 1866, Mr. Libert was united in marriage with Miss Catharine Garner, a native of Pennsylvania and a daughter of Daniel Garner; her mother's maiden name was Oppenley. Mr. and Mrs. Garner were early settlers of Grant county, and are now deceased. Of the six children born to Mr. and Mrs. Libert, four are still living, namely: Maggie, now Mrs. Dolley, of Sioux county, Iowa; Nellie, now Mrs. Spink, of Platteville, Wis.; Elsie; and Sadie. Socially Mr. Libert affiliates with W. T. Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R., and politically is identified with the Republican party. His fellow citizens have for him the highest esteem, and he has been called upon to represent his ward in the city council five terms, filling the office with credit to himself and to the entire satisfaction of his constituents.

FRANKLIN STONE (deceased) was a well known pioneer of Monticello township, having arrived in Lafayette county in 1848. His birth occurred in Lennoxville, Canada, near Montreal, July 3, 1813. His parents, Phineas and Salome Stone, were natives of Massachusetts.

Franklin Stone grew to manhood in Canada, and came to the United States in early manhood, reaching Wisconsin by way of Chicago in 1835. Chicago, then but a little hamlet, was his home for a year or so, and he then engaged in mining in Iowa county, Wis. He was quite successful in his operations there, and after a few years returned to Canada, where on Oct. 12, 1848, he wedded Miss Jane Aldrich, who was born in Canada, daughter of Asa and Sally Aldrich, natives of New Hampshire. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Stone settled on the farm in Lafayette county on which the family still reside. This had been previously purchased by Mr. Stone, and after his determination to make it his home he had greatly improved it, continuing so to do until his death, which occurred June 10, 1891. Mr. Stone was a prominent and highly respected citizen, and was intimately associated with the pioneer history of the township. In the early days he was a Whig in political faith, but after the formation of the Republican party became one of its firm supporters. Mrs. Stone survives her husband, and, with two of her children, makes her home on the farm where the happy years of her married life were spent.

Eight children came to bless the union of Franklin Stone and Jane Aldrich, three sons and five daughters: Clara, wife of James H. Mann, of Shullsburg; Edmund, of Defiance, Wis.; Esther, wife of W. O. Dimmick, of Bluehill, Neb.; Frank, a resident of Bluehill, Neb.; Emeline, at home; Lucy, wife of J. J. Blackburn, of Wyoming; Oscar, at home; and Mary, who became the wife of James Terrill, and died at her home in Wyoming.

WALGRAVE ATHERTON, a retired farmer of Albany, is one of the old and successful farmers of Green county, and is now spending the closing years of his life in the enjoyment of a richly earned competence, surrounded with the respect of the community and the regard and esteem of those friends who know him most intimately.

Mr. Atherton was born in Licking county, Ohio, Aug. 4, 1826, and is a son of John and Clarissa (Ackley) Atherton, natives of Pennsylvania and New York, respectively. They had three sons, and Mr. Atherton, of Albany, is the only one now living. The father was a chairmaker, and moved into Licking county, Ohio, in the early settlement of that country, and owned about two hundred fifty acres at the time of his death. He died in 1881, at the age of eighty-one. His wife passed away in 1873, at the age of seventy-six. Thomas Atherton, the father of John, was of English descent, and was bred a farmer. He died in Ohio, at an advanced age, leaving a large family. Calvin Ackley, the father of Clarissa, was of English descent, and was born in Connecticut. He was a Revolutionary soldier, and moved from New York to Ohio, where he followed farming. He was the father of a large family, and died at the age of ninety-one.

Walgrave Atherton lived in Licking county, Ohio, on a farm until he was twenty-eight years old. The district schools afforded him opportunity for an education, and he taught for seven winters. He followed farming as his chief occupation, and came to Wisconsin in 1854, where he bought a farm of one hundred fifty-seven acres in Decatur township, Green county, where he resided, engaged in its cultivation, until 1888, when he moved into Albany, and there is living a retired life. He now owns four hundred ninety-two acres, and is one of the most prosperous farmers of the county.

On Oct. 20, 1852, Mr. Atherton and Miss Elizabeth Ann Putnam were married. She is the daughter of John J. and Mary M. (Fleek) Putnam, of whom a sketch appears elsewhere in this volume. Mr. and Mrs. Atherton are the parents of nine children, namely: Florence V., Edwin P., John P., Oliver Herman, George W., Elmer E., Harry C., Ernest and Fred V. Florence V. died when nineteen years old. Edwin P. married Irva Maynard, and lives in Albany, where he is engaged in the furniture and undertaking business; they have one daughter, Floy. John P. married Miss Susie Robertson, of Laredo, Mo., where he is a station agent. Oliver H. married Miss Kittie Clemmer, and lives in Blanchardville, Wis., where he is station agent; they have three daughters, Nina, Leila and Eva. George W. married Miss Olive Smout, and lives on the old home farm; they have one daughter, Winifred. Elmer E. married Miss Nettie Conn. of Juda, Wis.; he is publisher of the Albany Indicator, and is the father of two sons, John W. and Charles Ellsworth. Harry C. married Miss Nora Francis, and is a farmer in the town of Decatur. Ernest died when three and a half years old. Fred V. is a printer, and lives with his parents. Mr. and Mrs. Atherton are members of the Baptist Church, in which he is deacon, trustee and clerk. He was once a Republican, but in 1884 became a Prohibitionist. He was clerk and school director in the town of Decatur, where he also served a term as school treasurer.

Mrs. Atherton's parents were natives of Virginia. They had ten children, four of whom are living.—Elizabeth Ann, the wife of W. Atherton; Oliver S., a captain in the war of the Rebellion; Henry Clay, of Brodhead, Wis.; and Virginia, the wife of Burton Gardner, of Brodhead. Mrs. Atherton's father was a school teacher when a young man, and later in life became a farmer and a land agent in Licking county, Ohio. He was a trustee of the town of Newark, Ohio, and came to this State in 1849. He located in Sylvester township for a year, and then moved to the town of Decatur, where he died in 1856, at the age of fifty-five. His widow died Jan. 31, 1873, at the age of sixty-eight. They were members of the Methodist Church. Mrs. Atherton's paternal grandfather was Peter Putnam, a native of Virginia, and her maternal grandfather Adam Fleek, of Pennsylvania. He lived many years in Virginia, and died in Wisconsin when eighty-five.

LAWRENCE GANSHIRT, a prosperous farmer residing in Section 7, Gratiot township, Lafayette county, is a native of Baden, Germany, born in 1840, who offered his services to his adopted country in her hour of peril during the Civil war.

Mr. Ganshirt received his education in the schools of his native land, and in his twenty-second year left the Fatherland for America. He first located in Pennsylvania, remaining there only a short time, however, when he went to Illinois, where he was living when the war began. He enlisted in Company D, of an Illinois volunteer cavalry regiment, and joined his regiment at Fairfax Court House, Va.; they were brigaded with the 13th and 16th New York Cavalry regiments, and performed such service as fell to their lot in Virginia and Maryland. Our subject's regiment was in pursuit of the famous guerrilla leader Mosby, in Virginia and North Carolina. The brigade was ordered to Maryland, and a sergeant of the 16th New York captured and shot John Wilkes Booth, the assassin of Abraham Lincoln. After that they were left near Brandywine, where the citizens swore allegiance to the United States. During his entire term of service Mr. Ganshirt was on active duty, but was fortunate enough to escape the bullets of the enemy. The hardships and exposures incident to the life of a soldier left their scar, and Mr. Ganshirt is a sufferer from rheumatism, and disease of the throat and heart. He was mustered out of the service at the close of the war, at St. Louis, Missouri.

In 1867 Mr. Ganshirt was united in marriage with Miss Pauline Busch, who was born in Baden, daughter of Fred and Mary E. Busch, who located in Lafayette county, Wis., in 1868, and there passed the remainder of their lives. Mr. and Mrs. Ganshirt are the parents of ten children, six sons and four daughters. They have a pleasant home on their farm, and are highly respected citizens. Socially Mr. Ganshirt is a member of John Bragg Post, No. 176, G. A. R.

I. C. SMELKER, a popular and influential citizen of Platteville, Grant county, is one of the honored veterans of the Civil war whose devotion to his country was tested not only by service on the field of battle, but in the still more deadly dangers of the Southern prisons. This gallant soldier was born in Johnstown, Penn., April 3, 1842, a son of J. W. and Catherine (Horner) Smelker, also natives of the Keystone State.

The father of our subject was born in Bellefonte, Center county, Sept. 17, 1817, of Holland ancestry, and continued his residence in that State until coming to Platteville, Wis., in 1845. By occupation he was a carpenter and joiner. On Sept. 7, 1862, at Platteville, he became a member of Company E, 25th Wis. V. I., as first lieutenant. As a part of the 16th Army Corps he participated in the Yazoo expedition; was on provost duty at Helena, Ark.; took part in the siege of Vicksburg and in a number of engagements in Alabama and Tennessee; and was with Gen. Sherman on the march to the sea and in the Atlanta campaign. Being disabled, he was sent to Mound City hospital, and received an honorable discharge at Cairo, Ill., in 1864, after which he returned to his home in Platteville. He died at that place in April, 1894, and his wife passed away in January, 1898. To them were born four sons and one daughter, the two youngest dying in infancy. Three surviving sons were all numbered among the boys in blue during the Rebellion. Theodore, the eldest, enlisted, in 1861, in Company C, 7th Wis. V. I., for three years or during the war, and received a gunshot wound in the breast and right arm in the battle of Antietam. He now resides in Lincoln county, S. Dak. I. C., the second son, is mentioned below. J. P. enlisted at Platteville in the three-months service, as a member of Company A, 41st Wis.

V. I., and in January, 1865, joined Company K, 47th Wis. V. I., with which he served until the close of the war, being honorably discharged at Madison Sept. 4, 1865. He took part in a midnight attack on Gen. Forrest. He rose to the rank of orderly sergeant. Returning to Platteville, he studied law, and is now an attorney at Dodgeville, Wisconsin.

I. C. Smelker was only three years old when brought by his parents to Platteville, in the public schools of which place he acquired his education. Since reaching manhood he has followed the carpenter's and joiner's trade. It was in 1863, at Platteville, that he enlisted in Company C, 7th Wis. V. I., for three years or during the war, and he was mustered into the United States service at Camp Randall, Madison. A member of the Iron Brigade, in the Army of the Potomac, he participated in the battle of the Wilderness, May 5, 1864, and was three times wounded, twice by a gunshot in the left thigh, and lastly by a bayonet in the hands of a Rebel, while he lay on his back under the trees on the battlefield; the Rebel also cut the buttons from his coat. He was also taken prisoner, and confined at Salisbury, N. C., seven months, after which he was sent to Libby prison, it being 315 days before he was exchanged. When captured he weighed 172 pounds, and during his imprisonment his weight was reduced to eighty-one pounds. On being exchanged he was sent to Annapolis, Md., and from there went to Baltimore, where he was granted a furlough. For some time he was confined in the hospital at Prairie du Chien, Wis., and while there asked leave to return home, but not receiving the desired furlough he and a comrade crossed the river in a boat to McGregor, and from there proceeded to Potosi, whence our subject started to walk to Platteville on crutches. When within five miles of home he became exhausted, and had to discontinue his journey until the following day. After spending the 4th of July at home, he returned to the hospital, and for disobedience was put in the guard-house. While there he smuggled a letter to Gov. Randall for transportation, and was honorably discharged at Madison in September, 1865.

In 1876 Mr. Smelker was married, at Platteville, to Miss Nettie Connor, who was born in Wisconsin, a daughter of Patrick and Catharine (Blindert) Connor, natives of Ireland and Germany, respectively, and early settlers of Potosi, Grant Co., Wis. In early life her father followed mining, but later engaged in farming in Platteville township, where both parents died. Mr. and Mrs. Smelker have five children, Jessie, Edward C., Stella, Kattie and Byron.

In his political views Mr. Smelker is a pronounced Republican, and has held office in Platteville, having received the appointment of deputy revenue collector under President Harrison, and held that position for four years and three months. Mr. Smelker is also connected with the fire department of Platteville, and is one of the leading and influential men of that city. As one of the organizers of W. T. Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R., he has always taken an active interest in its work, and is very popular in Grand Army circles. He is now serving as commander of his post, and also holds the important position of inspector-general of the Department of Wisconsin, G. A. R., under Commander D. G. James, of Richland Center. He has been first vice-president of the Grant County Soldiers and Sailors Association for the last six years.

ANDREW ANDERSON, a farmer and painter living in Clinton township, Rock county, is an industrious and hard-working man, and has made his living by his own efforts.

Mr. Anderson is the third child and second son of Rev. Dr. Ole Andrewson, of whom a biographical history appears elsewhere in this volume. Our subject was born near Ottawa, La Salle Co., Ill., Nov. 24, 1848, and while still a young boy moved with his parents to Clinton, Wis. Here he worked on a farm until about 1865, in which year he entered a store as clerk, and was engaged for some three or four years in that capacity in the different stores of Clinton. After the great fire of 1871 Mr. Anderson went to Chicago, and there learned the trade of painting, which has been his main business to the present time. He is now living five miles southeast of the village of Clinton, owning a home of forty acres, to which he attends in intervals of his work at painting. He is well situated, and is comfortably fixed.

Mr. Anderson and Miss Nellie Hawkinsen, a daughter of Ole Hawkinsen, of Manchester, Ill., were married Nov. 4, 1875. They have had ten children, three of whom are now deceased; the living are Ruth Amelia, Hannah Irene, Sarah Louisa, George Henry and Grace Henrietta (twins), Otto Paul, and Emma Helena. The two eldest lived in Sharon, Wis. The young people are bright and helpful, and are bound to become useful citizens.

JOHN FRANKLIN WILLEY, editor and publisher of the "Farm and Home," at Janesville, Rock county, is a well-known authority on agricultural matters, and his journal enjoys a wide circulation on account of its reliability, as well as its literary merit.

John Franklin Willey was born in St. Johnsbury, Caledonia Co., Vt., March 17, 1859, a son of George F. and Eliza (Raines) Willey, natives of Vermont and New Hampshire, respectively. The paternal grandfather of our subject, Stephen Willey, a native of Maine, of Scottish descent, died in Vermont, well advanced in years. There were three sons and one daughter in his family. Mr. Willey was very prominent in church affairs. The grandfather on the mother's side was a native of Maine, of Scottish descent, and died at Bethel, that State. By trade he was a machinist. He reared a large family.

George F. Willey was a blacksmith by trade. In 1863 he came West to Madison, Wis., and a year later removed to Beloit, where he died in 1868, aged thirty-seven; his wife passed away two years previously, at the age of thirty-three. Both of these worthy people were Free-Will Baptists. Three children were born to them, one son and two daughters: Our subject; Louisa C., wife of Frank N. Briggs, of Brandon, Vt.; and Emma, wife of Charles Hackbarth, of Lima, Wisconsin.

John Franklin Willey came to Wisconsin with his parents, residing at home until the death of his father, in 1868, when he was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Malachi Richardson, of Janesville, both of whom are now deceased, he dying on June 19, 1896, and his wife on Feb. 28, 1897. Mr. Richardson was an old settler of Janesville, and a gardener by occupation. At one time he served as school commissioner. He was a man of considerable education, having been a school teacher in his younger days, and gladly assisted his young charge in his studies, which the latter pursued in the excellent public schools. Following the calling of his adopted father, Mr. Willey was a farmer and gardener until he was thirty years of age, when he began the publication of the "Wisconsin Tobacco Leaf," and continued the journal until 1897, about eight years. At this time he started the "Farm and Home," which, as its name implies, is devoted to the interests of the farm and home. For the past twelve years Mr. Willey has corresponded for a number of papers on the subject of tobacco growing, and the industry in general, being considered an authority upon the question. In religious matters Mr. Willey takes a very liberal view, according to every man the right to worship as his conscience dictates, and himself attends All Souls Church. Mr. Willey not only thoroughly understands agricultural subjects, but is conversant with up-to-date methods of getting out an attractive publication, and the "Farm and Home" is welcomed, not only by the farmer, intent upon securing valuable information relative to his work, but also by the other members of the family, who enjoy the entertaining stories and household articles presented to them within its pages. Socially Mr. Willey has many friends, and is an agreeable, well-informed gentleman; politically he is a staunch Republican.

JOHN A. CLEMMER, retired farmer, now residing in Monroe, has won the comparative leisure which since 1892 has been his by a previous life of activity as an influential and successful farmer of Green county. He came to the county when a youth of eighteen years, and for forty years following his marriage was a most industrious agriculturist, and became prominent in that calling, during the period when the State of Wisconsin emerged from its primitive condition of undeveloped resource to wealth and influence.

Mr. Clemmer is a native of Pennsylvania, born in Fayette county May 30, 1832, son of Jasper and Delilah (Neal) Clemmer, both native-born Pennsylvanians. The paternal grandfather, Jacob Clemmer, was also born in the Keystone State, and was a descendant of one of the early German families that settled in Pennsylvania. He followed farming. He lived to the age of almost one hundred years, was twice married, and reared a large family. The maternal grandfather, William Neal, was also a native of Pennsylvania, of Scottish ancestry, and died in middle life, leaving a large family. He was a farmer by occupation.

Jasper Clemmer, the father of John A., was born June 16, 1801, and in his native State followed farming. In 1850, when about forty-nine years of age, he migrated with his family to Wisconsin, purchasing a half section of land in Sylvester township, Green county, which he occupied and operated for many years, residing there until his death, Dec. 17, 1885, at the age of eighty-four years. His wife, who was born Sept. 13, 1805, died Dec. 21, 1887. They were members of the Regular Baptist Church, in which Mr. Clemmer was for many years a deacon. He was a man of great probity of character, and highly esteemed by all who knew him. To Jasper and Delilah Clemmer were born six children, five sons and one daughter, of whom four are now living, namely: Dr. J. N., of Clarksville, Iowa; John A., whose sketch appears below; Dr. J. J., of Cresco, Iowa; and G. G., of Nevada.

John A. Clemmer received his education in the district schools of Pennsylvania, and was eighteen years of age when, in 1850, he came with his parents to Wisconsin. He possessed musical talent, which he cultivated in his youth, and for fourteen years taught vocal music. After reaching Wisconsin he remained with his parents for about four years, on Jan. 21, 1855, marrying Miss Rhoda M. Whitcomb, daughter of James and Nancy (Goltry) Whitcomb. She was then living with her widowed mother in Mt. Pleasant township, Green county.

James Whitcomb, the father of Mrs. Clemmer, was born in New York State May 17, 1812; his wife, also a native of New York, was born Aug. 7, 1814. Isaac Whitcomb, father of James, was born in Maine May 25, 1769, and died Feb. 26, 1816. He married Susanna Gregory, who was born Sept. 1, 1784, and died July 7, 1839. Their family consisted of five children. The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Clemmer were Paul and Rachel (Moffett) Goltry, who had a family of thirteen children. Paul Goltry was born in New Jersey May 24, 1767, and died Sept. 28, 1845. He was a man of remarkable mental activity, well educated, a writer of great force and pleasing diction, a musician of note, and a splendid violinist. Active in temperament, he became a cattle drover, and frequently drove large herds over the mountains of Virginia. His sympathies were deeply enlisted in the cause of the slaves, and he often assisted them in escaping from the fields of Virginia to a northern refuge.

James Whitcomb removed from New York to Indiana, and thence in 1847 to Rock county, Wis., and two years later to Mt. Pleasant township, Green county, where he purchased 160 acres of land. There he died April 24, 1854, aged nearly forty-two years. His wife survived him many years, passing away May 22, 1883, aged sixty-nine years. They were devout members of the Baptist Church. James Whitcomb was an active Abolitionist, and while living in Indiana was the leader in the Abolition movement in his locality, presiding at meetings and assisting many fugitive slaves.

After his marriage, Jan. 21, 1855, John A. Clemmer began farm life on a tract of eighty acres in Sylvester township, given him by his father. To this he subsequently added ten acres, and there continued to farm for about twenty years, when he sold and bought a farm of 210 acres in Decatur township. In 1892 Mr. Clemmer rented that farm and removed to Monroe, where he has since resided, except for a short time when he lived in Evansville, to educate his son, John F. To Mr. and Mrs. Clemmer have been born six children, one son and five daughters, as follows: Laura A., who married Alvin I. Keen, of Monroe township, and has two children, Roy and Lois; Kittie C., who married Herman Atherton, of Blanchardville, and has three children, Nina, Lela and Eva; Nannie D., who married Henry Horan, of Algona, Iowa, and has one son, Clemmer; Cora A., who married Lawrence Horan, and is now deceased; Letha, a stenographer in the First National Bank of Monroe; and John F., who is bookkeeper in the First National Bank at Algona, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Clemmer are prominent members of the Baptist Church of Juda, in which he has been for many years a deacon. In religious, social and business circles he is one of the leading spirits of Green county, and is held in high esteem by a wide acquaintanceship throughout that and adjacent counties.

JOSEPH T. BRIDGE, deceased. Half a decade has passed away since this pioneer citizen of Green county, passed from earth into eternal rest, mourned by his friends and held in high esteem by his fellow citizens, who had learned to love him for his genial nature, and to honor him for his moral worth.

John and Deborah (Clark) Bridge, his grandparents, were among the pioneers of Preble county, Ohio, having migrated to that State from their native New Jersey. John H. Bridge, the father of the late Joseph T. Bridge, was born April 3, 1815, in Preble county, one of a family of eight, three sons and five daughters, and was early inured to the toils and hardships of a frontier life. On reaching manhood he married Nancy Sample, a native of Virginia. In 1835 he visited Green county, Wis., with a view to ascertaining its desirability as a place of abode, and in 1840 he became a permanent resident, being reckoned as one of the pioneers of Jefferson township. He was a man of notable industry, strict probity and strong character, and soon became a prominent and influential citizen. In 1873 he surrendered the management of the farm to his son and retired from active work, to reside in the city of Monroe, his son following him thither in nine years. In 1884 Mr. Bridge set out for California, but on reaching Denver, Colo., suddenly sickened and died. His son was with him, and also the latter's wife, who had accompanied her husband and father-in-law that far. Together they brought back the remains to his former home, and with loving care did they minister to his widow, taking her to their home, where she passed away Oct. 30, 1899, in her eighty-fifth year.

Joseph T. Bridge was born on his father's farm in Jefferson township, Oct. 9, 1849, and was the only one of six children to live beyond the years of childhood. He inherited the property of his father, and with it as a basis, and with unwearying industry as well as wise financial management, he accumulated a handsome competence. Five years before his death he built a charming home, and at that time apparently had before him the prospect of a long and honored life. In the spring of 1895, however, he was attacked by an incurable malady, which baffled all efforts for relief, and died on the morning of Aug. 19, of that year, deeply and widely mourned.

Joseph T. Bridge deserves more than a passing notice in the Commemorative Record of Southern Wisconsin. Born here soon after the organization of Wisconsin as a State, the son of a pioneer, his whole life, although comparatively brief, was passed in the immediate vicinity of the place of his birth. He was not prominently identified with public life, as he never sought office, although he served most acceptably in the city council. As a citizen he was beloved and respected for his kindness of heart and unassuming manner. He was a man of sterling integrity, and conscientious in all he did and said, in either public or private life, ever aiming to be governed by Christian principles. In short, he was a man who believed in right living, in being just to his fellow man, and honorable in all things.

On Dec. 22, 1874, Mr. Bridge was married to Miss Anna Hosier, of Kansas City, Mo. Her parents, Evan Abram and Rachel Hosier, came to Green county from Ohio about 1850, removed to Missouri in 1860, and returned to Green county in 1864. Mr. Hosier, who died there in 1866, was widely known, influential and highly esteemed. He was a man of superior education, and in the early days of Green county was a successful teacher. Mrs. Bridge is one of five children: Harrison, who has been for many years a resident of Denver, Colo.; Sarah E., Mrs. Bolender, of Monroe; Anna, Mrs. Bridge; and Abram and George B., who have their homes in Kansas City. It was there also that Mrs. Hosier died in 1892. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Bridge was blessed by the birth of one son and two daughters: Burton (a student at the State University of Wisconsin), Ethel and Daisy.

DUNCAN MCGREGOR, M. A., LITT. D. In this age of intellectual activity, when success in the business world depends not upon mere physical prowess, but also upon mental activity, upon an ability to master the principles and details of any enterprise, the work of the educator has become of even greater importance than ever before. Long occupying a prominent rank among the educators of Wisconsin is Dr. McGregor, the well-known president of the Wisconsin State Normal School, Platteville, Grant county, under whose leadership that school has taken rank with the best of its kind in the country.

A native of Scotland, our subject was born in the Forest of Clunie, Parish of Clunie, Perthshire, Aug. 12, 1836, son of Malcolm and Catherine (Kennedy) McGregor. The father was a farmer in prosperous circumstances while in Scotland. Until fourteen years of age our subject received instruction in a private school, and then prepared for college at Perth Academy, one of the best schools in Scotland, where he won several prizes in drawing and English. He took his academic course in the University and King's College, Aberdeen, where he spent three years, completing the junior year at that institution.

In June, 1857, Dr. McGregor came to America, and located at Wausau, Wis., where he engaged in lumbering and running on the river for one year. In the fall of 1858 he took charge of the school at Farmington, this State, and remained there the three winters following, serving one term as town superintendent of the schools. For five years he was principal of the high school at Waupaca. Dr. McGregor attended Lawrence University one year, passed the examination, and received the degree of A. B. He taught for a short time thereafter, and then, in 1864, joined the Union army, being chosen captain of his company, which was mustered in as Company A, 42d Wis. V. I. He served during the remainder of the war, being engaged in provost duty on the Mississippi river and its tributaries. His military career ended, he resumed teaching in the high school of Waupaca, where he remained until 1867, when, a year after its organization, he was appointed professor of mathematics, teacher of methods and supervisor of practice in the State Normal School at Platteville, Wis. In 1878 Dr. McGregor was elected president of that institution, which responsible position he held uninterruptedly for sixteen years, when, owing to a change in the political complexion of the Board of Regents, he was not re-elected, but was made professor of pedagogy, while another was chosen president. Having resigned his chair in 1895, Dr. McGregor was again elected president, by the unanimous vote of the Board, a grateful testimonial to the ability and fidelity with which he served the cause of education for so many years.

The Wisconsin State Normal School was established Oct. 9, 1866, with C. H. Allen, now of San Jose, Cal., as principal. He held that position four years, and was succeeded by Edwin Charlton, who died at Brodhead, Wis., in 1897. He was president of the school eight years, and was in turn succeeded by Dr. McGregor, who held the office sixteen years. Dr. James Chalmers was then president for three years, at the end of which time Dr. McGregor again took charge of affairs. The institution was first known as the Platteville Academy. In 1853 a good building, 40x70 feet, was erected, which was turned over to the State in 1866. It was then enlarged by a donation from the State of $20,000, and Gen. Grant assisted in its dedication. An addition, 40x70 feet, was made in 1881, another addition, 50x90 feet, in 1891, so that the building is now 200 feet long, while the south wing is 100 feet deep, and the north wing 90 feet deep, and all two stories in height. It is built of fine limestone, quarried at Platteville. Since the school came under the control of the State the attendance has increased from thirty to three hundred, and the Faculty has been increased from five to twenty-one, while the payroll has been increased accordingly. The school has a good physical and chemical laboratory, and is doing a large amount of work in biology and geology. The Doctor has prepared a book on drawing, published by A. H. Andrews, of Chicago. As an evidence of his scholarly accomplishments Lawrence University has conferred upon him the degree of Litt. D.

Dr. McGregor was married, Dec. 26, 1865, to Miss Anna Bowman, and to them have been born five children, Alice, Grace, Elizabeth, and Jessica, all teachers, and graduates of the State Normal; and Richard, still in school.

Dr. McGregor has always been an earnest advocate of Republican principles, but has chosen to be only a private in the ranks of the party, though in 1896 he was mentioned as a most suitable person for nomination as governor on the Republican ticket. In religious belief he is a Congregationalist. In Masonry he has passed from the Blue Lodge to the Consistory and Shrine; has been a member of Melody Lodge, F. & A. M., for several years; has repeatedly served as high priest of Washington Chapter, R. A. M.; was grand high priest of the State two years; committee on correspondence of the Grand Lodge of Wisconsin eight years; a member of Commandery No. 12, K. T., of Mineral Point; of Milwaukee Consistory; and of the Mystic Shrine.

He has ever been an advocate of progress and reform, and all that pertains to the public welfare receives his hearty endorsement.

DANIEL TRUMM is numbered among the prosperous farmers of Woodman township, Grant county, his broad acres showing the effect of careful, systematic cultivation, and his substantial buildings bespeaking consideration for his family and his stock.

Mr. Trumm was born in Bavaria, Germany, in 1837, a son of Daniel and Catharine (Dunt) Trumm, also natives of Germany, who came to America, settling in Syracuse, N. Y., where the father died, while the mother passed away in another portion of the same State. To the parents of our subject five children were born: Catharine, Maggie, Elizabeth, Barbara, and Daniel.

Our subject was fifteen years old when his parents immigrated to this country, and he resided at Syracuse until he was twenty-two. Having decided to move further West, he came to Wisconsin, settling in Marion township, Grant county, where he remained until he purchased his present farm of 160 acres, then but partially improved. This property Mr. Trumm has brought into a high state of cultivation, and built substantial buildings thereon, making of it a model farm.

During the Civil war Mr. Trumm served his country most bravely, enlisting in August, 1864, in Company C, 43d Wis. V. I., and being mustered in at Milwaukee. Mr. Trumm was in the Army of the Potomac, did garrison duty, and received an honorable discharge at Nashville, Tenn. After receiving his pay as a soldier, at Milwaukee, in 1865, he returned to his home in Woodman township, where he has since resided, turning his sword into a ploughshare.

Daniel Trumm married Miss Margaret Schippener, in Syracuse, N. Y., and this estimable lady has borne him children as follows: Mrs. Margaret Miller, of Marion township; Mrs. Elizabeth Gilleland, of Fennimore; Mrs. Catharine Martin, of Boscobel; Daniel, who is married, and is a resident of Watertown; John, married, who resides in Hopeville, Iowa; Mrs. Caroline Hagensick, of McGregor, Iowa; Julius, who is married and living at home; Louise, at home; Mrs. Annie Wellner, of Marion; Jacob, married, and living at home; and Mrs. Julia Wellner, of Marion.

Having served in the Civil war, our subject naturally takes an interest in the G. A. R., and is a member of the post at Boscobel. Mr. Trumm has seen the township grow during his many years' residence in Woodman, and has assisted materially in its development. He and his wife are very pleasant people, and are highly esteemed by a large circle of acquaintances and friends.

JOHN CLEMENS, a retired merchant, and one of the wealthy residents of the city of Cuba, is well known throughout Grant county as a thoroughly reliable man, and one well worthy the esteem of his fellow townsmen. By his own industry and thrift he has gained a comfortable competence, and is now enjoying the result of his efforts in peace and plenty.

Mr. Clemens was born on a farm in Grant county, near Cuba, in June, 1849, a son of Christopher and Annie (Tripp) Clemens, who were born, reared and married in Cornwall, England. Christopher Clemens came to Grant county, Wis., in 1842, and engaged in mining two years. He then went to the island of Cuba, where he engaged in the copper mines, owned and operated by a company of Americans, for five years. From Cuba he went to England, was married, immigrated to Grant county, and worked in the lead mines until 1849. At that time he started across the Plains to California, remained one year, and returned to Grant county. After a short time he again set out for the gold fields, and worked in the mines of California for a short time. He then formed one of a company which went to California, thence to Vancouver, this company making the first trail to the Fraser river known to white men. Here Mr. Clemens was very successful, panning out a large quantity of gold, but his heart yearned for his loved ones, and as soon as he felt he had secured a sufficient amount he finally returned to Wisconsin, where he purchased 400 acres of land, all in one piece, in 1860. This property, located near Cuba, is now one of the finest farms in Grant county. After working upon the farm for a number of years Mr. Clemens finally retired, locating in Cuba. The following year he and his wife made a trip to England, visiting among their friends, and soon after their return, in 1876, she died. Later Mr. Clemens remarried, and he resided in Cuba until the day of his death, in 1894, when he was eighty years of age. Six children were born of his first union: John. William, born in Grant county, married Miss Grace Bowden, of Grant county, and settled on the old Clemens homestead, where he and his wife both died in 1894, leaving six children. Albert, born in Grant county, married Miss Rena Wills, and settled on a part of his father's farm, where he died, leaving a wife and one son, Albert. Samuel, born in Grant county, married Miss Lizzie Wills, and now resides in Cuba City; he owns a part of the home farm in Hazel Green township (they have no family). Mary A., born in Grant county, died in 1876, while yet a young lady, at the old homestead. Naomi, born in Grant county, married Lester Jackson, now resides on a portion of the old homestead, and has two sons. All of the family have been, and are now, a credit to the worthy parents.

Our subject grew to manhood on the old home farm, received a district-school education, and later a thorough business course. In 1869 he purchased 160 acres of farm land, adjoining the city of Cuba, and he also owns a large farm in Hazel Green township, having in all over 400 acres of the best farm land to be found in Grant county, if not in the United States. Since 1881 Mr. Clemens has resided in Cuba, engaged in the general merchandise, live stock and grain business, until December, 1898, when he retired from active life. Having erected a fine residence, in 1888, in Cuba, the family reside in this modern, comfortable home. In addition to his farms and residence Mr. Clemens owns a large amount of real estate in Cuba, including four houses and a modern equipped creamery, which he rents.

In 1869 Mr. Clemens married Miss Sarah Nichols, daughter of Isaac and Jane Nichols, prominent pioneers of Grant county, who came from England at a very early date in the history of Wisconsin. Mrs. Clemens was born in 1855, and was educated in the schools of the home neighborhood. To Mr. and Mrs. Clemens five children have been born: Mabel J. died when twelve years of age. Clinton died in March, 1896, aged eight. Laura, born in Cuba City, in June, 1872, educated in the schools of Cuba, was married in 1889 to Samuel Stephens, agent and operator for the Chicago & Northwestern railroad at Cuba, where they reside; they have two children, Freddie and Dwight. John A., born in August, 1874, grew up on the farm, and in 1900 married Miss Bessie Smalley, of Cuba, daughter of Daniel Smalley, postmaster at that city. C. C., born in Cuba in May, 1881, is single, and resides at the old homestead.

Politically Mr. Clemens has always been identified with the Republican party, serving as a member of the Smelser town board for fifteen years; also as member of the city council; member and treasurer of the school board; as well as in other local offices, in all of which he performed his duties in a manner most acceptable to the public. Mr. and Mrs. Clemens are active workers in the M. E. Church, toward which he is a liberal supporter. Being identified with the best interests of the city, Mr. Clemens holds a very enviable position among his fellow townsmen, and is as popular as he is deservedly respected.

JAMES NELSON DAVIS. Among the esteemed citizens and wealthy retired farmers of Clarno township, Green county, may be mentioned James N. Davis, who makes his home in the handsome residence erected on his large farm, just two miles south of Monroe.

Mr. Davis was born Oct. 26, 1827, a son of David and Mary (Woodle) Davis, and is in the strictest sense of the word a self-made man, so far as his financial acquirements are concerned. He was brought to Wisconsin in youth by his parents, and received his education in the little log school house near his home. He gradually acquired his fine property, his home farm now consisting of nearly 500 acres of well-tilled fields. His entire life has been a temperate one, and he has never tasted whiskey nor used tobacco in any form—a fine example, worthy of emulation. Of lofty ideals, a high sense of honor, of untarnished reputation, he is a citizen of which any community might well be proud. In politics he is a stanch Republican, and he has held the offices of school director, chairman of Decatur township, supervisor of Clarno township, giving to the duties of each the same careful, close attention he gave to his private affairs, and proving himself a most acceptable official. In religious belief he is a consistent member of the Baptist Church at Juda, Wisconsin.

On March 17, 1851, Mr. Davis was married to Miss Elizabeth Roderick, daughter of Andrew and Lydia Roderick, early settlers of Green county. To this union came ten children, as follows: Lydia, Miles O., Aura, Eva J., Lucinda R., Austin C., Frank, Nora, and Edith J. and Edna M. (twins). Four died in 1871, within six weeks, and those now surviving are Lydia, Aura, Eva J., Lucinda R. and Austin C. Mr. and Mrs. Davis also reared an adopted son, Frank, now a dentist at Brodhead, Wis. Mrs. Davis, who was born in 1825, died April 29, 1895, a faithful follower of the teachings of the Baptist Church.

David Davis, father of James N. Davis, was a son of James Davis, and was a native of Pennsylvania, of Welsh descent. He came to Green county in 1838, settling in the town of Spring Grove, thus becoming one of the very early settlers of the county. He was born May 6, 1793, and died Feb. 17, 1882. He married (first) Polly Ross, who bore him three children: Joshua, deceased; Nancy, widow of Alfred Baremore, of Juda; and Keziah, widow of J. W. Kildow, of Spring Grove township. For his second wife he married, on Nov. 22, 1822, Mary Woodle, who was born in Fayette county, Penn., Feb. 9, 1804, and died Feb. 17, 1871. She was of Scotch lineage. Their family of sons were eleven in number, namely: Thomas, born Sept. 2, 1824; James N., mentioned above; David, born Nov. 22, 1829; Joel J. P., Jan. 8, 1832; Samuel, March 8, 1834; William, Nov. 25, 1836; Doctor E., Aug. 12, 1839; Zachariah P., June 2, 1841; Joseph J., Nov. 18, 1843; John Q., May 26, 1848; and Levi G., Dec. 1, 1850. Four are still living, James N.; Samuel, of near Hampton, Iowa; Doctor E., near Brodhead, in Rock county; and David, in Clarno township.

JOHN EDGAR FUNK, of the township of Monticello, is one of the oldest native-born residents of Lafayette county, where his birth occurred April 10, 1829.

Benjamin Funk, his father, was born in the State of West Virginia Nov. 19, 1798, son of a surgeon in the Revolutionary army, whose father was a native of Germany. Benjamin Funk left his native State in his youth, and went to Ohio. The news of the golden opportunities in the lead mines of Missouri lured him thither, and there he remained some time. On April 14, 1828, he arrived at Gratiot's Grove, Lafayette Co., Wis., where he engaged in farming and stock raising, this being his occupation during the remainder of his life. His first settlement was on the Southeast Quarter of Section 30, in Monticello township. For some time after coming to Wisconsin he was in partnership with his brother-in-law, Thomas Wiley, but they finally separated their interests, Mr. Wiley taking the land upon which they were located, and Mr. Funk a tract on Section 27. This was his home at the time of his death, in September, 1851. The event was most unexpected. He and his wife were on a journey to visit the latter's relatives, who lived near Springfield, Ill., when Mr. Funk suddenly became ill and passed away. During his residence in Missouri Mr. Funk met and married Miss Catherine Wiley, who died in 1838, and for his second wife he wedded Mrs. Nancy Black, who passed away in 1897. Four children were born of the first marriage: Harriet, Mrs. Kleeberger, a widow, residing near Apple River, Ill.; Mary, Mrs. Rundle, also a widow, residing in Cedar Rapids, Iowa; John Edgar; and Alonzo A., of Independence, Kans. To the second marriage was born one son, Sidney, who grew to manhood, and has since passed away. Benjamin Funk was a well-known and highly respected citizen, industrious and progressive. He was a most valuable man in the new community, and possessing no inconsiderable knowledge of medicine, to the study of which he gave close attention, he was often called to treat the sick among the early settlers. His kindness and benevolence endeared him to all who knew him. In his political views he was a Whig, of strong anti-slavery sentiments. He was one of those men to whose death a community finds it hard to become reconciled.

John Edgar Funk is now the only member of the family residing in Lafayette county, which has always been his home. In his boyhood days he assisted upon his father's farm, and attended such schools as were provided in those early days. He never attended a school taught in a regular school house, as his education was received before the establishment of schools in the neighborhood, the first he attended being a private school taught in his father's house. In 1849 Mr. Funk went to California, being one of the first company that went overland to the newly discovered land of gold. It was quite an event to go to the Pacific coast a half a century and more ago. His company left Council Bluffs March 16, and camped in the Sacramento Valley Oct. 1, following. Our subject did well in the mines there, remaining until the spring of 1852, when he returned to Wisconsin, and has since been engaged in farming. He purchased part of his present farm when he returned from California, and has made that place his home.

On Dec. 14, 1852, Mr. Funk was united in marriage with Miss Sophronia Dimmick, daughter of Lot and Mary Ann Dimmick, and six children have blessed their union: Dr. Zalmon E., of Cripple Creek, Colo.; Norman A., a merchant of Clay county, Iowa; George H., an attorney of Olympia, Wash.; Ernest, a resident of Chicago; Adelaide S., wife of Prof. A. J. Volland, principal of the high school at Grand Rapids, Mich.; and Mary A., wife of George H. Goodrich, a merchant at Anoka, Minn. Mr. Funk has always been on the side of progress, and has taken an active interest in public affairs. He cast his first vote in 1856, John C. Fremont being his choice among the Presidential candidates that year, and his last vote was cast for William McKinley, in 1900, making it evident that in his political affiliations he has been constant to the Republican party.

DWIGHT FLOWER, M. D. The progressive and pleasant town of Monticello, Green county, has among its prominent citizens a man of deep learning and successful practice in his profession of physician and surgeon—Dr. Dwight Flower, the efficient health officer of Monticello.

Dr. Flower was born in Rupert, Vt., Jan. 4, 1839, a son of Roswell and Phoebe Ann (Peck) Flower, both of whom were natives of Vermont. They reared a family of four children, two sons and two daughters, three of whom are living: Dr. Dwight, our subject; Esther, who is the wife of George Cruikshank, of Humboldt, Iowa; and Ellen, who is the wife of John B. Scott, of Forest Grove, Oregon. The paternal grandfather of our subject, Roswell Flower, was a native of Massachusetts. When but a boy he went from his home in Feeding Hills, that State, to Vermont, and located in Rupert township, Bennington county, where he engaged in farming, dying there on his old farm, which was afterward the property of his son Roswell. The great-grandfather had moved from Wethersfield, Conn., to Feeding Hills, Mass., where he died. The maternal grandfather of our subject was Thomas Peck, a native of Vermont, of Scottish descent, and a farmer by occupation. About 1856 he came to Wisconsin, where for many years he was a man of affairs, being elected selectman and justice of the peace for a number of terms. His death occurred in Dane county, this State, in 1865, when he was in his seventy-fifth year.

The father of our subject was a farmer by occupation. In 1857 he moved from Vermont to Iowa, settling at Humboldt, where he pre-empted a claim of 160 acres and purchased the adjoining 160, and this has ever since been the old family home. There Mr. Flower's last days were passed, and he died in 1898, at the age of eighty-nine. Mrs. Flower died there in 1890, aged seventy-six. Both were devout members of the Christian Church, in which he was a deacon. For a number of years he had served as town clerk in Humboldt county.

Dwight Flower, the subject proper of our sketch, lived in Bennington county, Vt., until he had reached the age of seventeen, receiving his early education there, in the common schools. In the fall of 1856 he left Vermont and entered the Western Reserve Eclectic Institute, now Hiram College, where he pursued his studies for two terms, leaving to accompany the family on the removal to Iowa. After locating at Humboldt Dr. Flower learned something of the practical side of pioneer life by opening up a farm, building a house, fencing the lands, and hauling rails, continuing this active life until 1860, when he entered Antioch College, at Yellow Springs, Ohio. In the summer of 1863 he left there in order to enter Union College, at Schenectady, N. Y., whence he graduated in 1864, immediately entering the Medical Department of the same institution, which is located at Albany, N. Y. After graduating at Albany, in 1866, Dr. Flower took a course of lectures in New York City, later teaching school a short time in Schenectady. Crossing the ocean to Heidelberg, Germany, he visited the hospitals there, studying methods and various forms of disease, with their care and cure. From this center he went to Berlin, where a year was profitably spent in the hospitals of that great and enlightened city. Four months were passed in a similar life in Vienna, at the end of which time Dr. Flower turned his face to his native land, well equipped for the intelligent practice of his chosen profession. To his credit be it said, he started college without a cent, and paid the expenses of his college and medical school courses by teaching and other work, teaching in all six terms, no two in succession, during his career at college and medical school.

Upon reaching home Dr. Flower decided to locate at Fort Dodge, Iowa, and remained there about one and one-half years, coming then to Wisconsin, and settling at Arena for the two succeeding years. On Jan. 1, 1875, he located in Monticello, where he has remained ever since, building up a fine practice, and gaining continually in the esteem of the community. For many years he has been the town's efficient health officer, his success in this line being attested by the remarkable sanitary condition in which the village is kept.

Dr. Flower was married Oct. 23, 1879, to Miss Kate L. Roser, a daughter of Henry and Theresa (Seiler) Roser, of Platteville, Wis., and a family of eight children have been born of this union. Roswell S., who died at the age of thirteen months; Zella, who died at the age of four years and ten months; Roswell C., who died at the age of two years and seven months; Dwight, who is a student at River Falls, Wis.; Gretchen; Charlene; Rupert; and Jeane.

The father of Mrs. Flower was born in Hesse-Darmstadt, and her mother in Alsace, France. Their living children are: Kate L., wife of our subject; Henry H., who resides in Denver, Colo.; and Emil B., who lives in Wellington, Kans., the father residing there with him. Mrs. Roser died in 1893, aged seventy-one years. Mr. Roser was a soldier in Germany in 1848, coming to America about 1850.

Politically Dr. Flower is an Independent, not agreeing with the tenets of any of the parties before the public. With his large and increasing practice, the Doctor still takes an active interest in all that pertains to the advancement of Monticello, and to his intelligent supervision may be attributed the escape of this pleasant place from all prevailing epidemics. A close student, he is well aware of all modern inventions, and makes use of the same in his practice. Dr. Flower is a representative citizen of Monticello, and no record of Green county would be complete without mention of his name.

MRS. MARGARET WITHROW, who has won a good name and a standing as a business woman and manager of a farm in the town of Paris, Grant county, was born in Sangamon county, Ill., in October, 1849.

Mrs. Withrow's parents, John and Lucinda (Rister) Wilson, were natives of Pennsylvania, and settlers in the part of Illinois mentioned. They came to Wisconsin at a very early day, lived for a time in the town of Harrison, Grant county, and then bought a farm west of Dickeyville, on which they passed the remaining years of their lives. Mrs. Wilson died at this home in 1877, and Mr. Wilson lived to April, 1900, attaining a very great age. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson reared a family of seven children, all of whom are living: Margaret, Mrs. Withrow, the eldest; David, a retired farmer of the town of Paris; John, who lives in Lyons, Minn.; Jacob, a farmer in Minnesota; Tabitha, Mrs. Henry Hatfield, of Madison, Wis.; William, who lives in Minnesota; and Henry, who is engaged in farming in that State.

Margaret Wilson obtained her education in the Dickeyville school. In 1870 she married John Withrow, of Grant county, who was the son of William and Martha Withrow, old settlers in their town. John Withrow was born in Potosi, Grant county, in June, 1841, enlisted in Company I, 25th Wis. V. I., and served until discharged for disability, in 1864. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Withrow lived on a farm near LeMars, Iowa, for about a year, when it was sold, and the present home of the family in the town of Paris was purchased. There Mr. Withrow died in January, 1890, leaving his wife with seven children living: (1) Julia, born in the town of Paris in 1873, was for a time a student in the Platteville Normal. She married Milton Varnnetta, and they have two children, Lester and Bertha. They live in the town of Cornelia. (2) Frank, born in 1874, is single, and lives at home. (3) Minnie, born in 1876, is the wife of Burt Rider, of the town of Harrison. (4) Hattie, born in January, 1878, was educated in the home schools, and is living at home. (5) John, born in 1880, is at home, as are (6) George, born in July, 1882, and (7) Walter, who was born in 1884.

Since the death of her husband Mrs. Withrow has continued on the farm, keeping her family together, and displaying much business ability. The farm has been greatly improved under her management. In 1897 she erected a large bank barn, and in the summer of 1900 a fine modern house, erected on the foundations of the old home, which was consumed by fire May 3, of that year. Mr. Withrow was a Democrat, and a member of the Congregational Church, as is also his widow. Mrs. Withrow is a highly respected lady in the community. Her parents were fine people, and socially the entire family are ranked among the best in the town.

WILLIAM H. CALVERT is a retired miner and farmer of Benton, Lafayette county, where his venerable age and long and useful career demand and receive the respect of the community.

Mr. Calvert was born in Yorkshire, England, March 9, 1815, a son of William and Mary (Harker) Calvert, farming people, both of whom were born and bred in Yorkshire. Five of their six sons came to this country, (1) William H., who came in 1839, being the first to emigrate. Jackson, Jonathan, Thomas and Simon came later. James Calvert, the youngest of the six, still resides in England, now aged seventy-two years. (2) Jackson Calvert spent a few years in the mines of Wisconsin, and in 1851 crossed the Plains to California, where he was married to Isabella Layton, a native of London, England. He is still living, in Nevada City, that State. (3) Jonathan Calvert settled in McGregor, Iowa, where he died in 1898, leaving a widow and six children, William, John, Edward, May (Mrs. Ben Corkett), Mary (Mrs. Cole), and Etta (Mrs. Utter). (4) Thomas Calvert died in McGregor, Iowa, unmarried. (5) Simon Calvert was married in England, came to this country, and settled in Benton, where he followed cabinet making. He died March 8, 1901.

William H. Calvert obtained his education in the school of his native community, where his early life was spent, and in 1839 crossed the ocean in the sailing-vessel "Columbia," commanded by Capt. Collins, making the journey from Liverpool to New York in twenty-one days, then rapid transit. From New York he went to Buffalo by the Hudson and Erie canal, and from there journeyed by the lakes to Chicago, from which city the way was by wagon and foot to Galena. Eighteen young men agreed to come through to the mines of Wisconsin. When Mr. Calvert arrived at Galena he had only twenty-five cents, and he pawned his jack-knife to pay his fare across the Mississippi river. Our subject is the only one of these eighteen young men now living. In Wisconsin he began his career as a miner, and was engaged in that capacity for ten years, during which period he purchased land adjoining the town of Benton, where he erected his present home. When he came to this State there was not a white woman in the locality, and the company had to "batch" it for a long time. Our subject's first cabin was of rock and sod. Mr. Calvert has dealt largely in real estate since coming to Wisconsin, with most satisfactory results, and is one of the more prosperous and well-to-do citizens of the country.

In the fall of 1848 Mr. Calvert went back to England, and on Jan. 30, following, was married to Miss Jane Alton, of Yorkshire, a daughter of William and Easter (Cottingham) Alton. Mrs. Calvert was born Dec. 28, 1826, and received a good education. Her parents came to America in 1861, and settled in the town of Benton, where her father died six years after his arrival; her mother lived until 1875. Of their family four daughters are still living. (1) Henrietta, who died March 16, 1886, was the wife of James Blades, of Benton; (2) Jane is the wife of our subject; (3) John died in England; (4) Ellen is the wife of Miles Cottingham; (5) Mary A., deceased wife of Alexander Stevens; (6) Margaret, deceased wife of Thomas Beck; (7) Elizabeth, wife of John Beck (she lives in Benton); (8) Esther, widow of William Kay, of Cuba City; (9) Joseph; (10) Reuben; (11) Anthony died in Benton. Mr. Calvert brought his wife to this country, and installed her in the home which he had prepared for her, and in which they have lived to celebrate their Pearl and Golden Weddings. They have reared a family of fourteen children: (1) Mary Ellen, deceased, became the wife of George Peart, of Aspen, Colo., and the mother of six children, Leona (Mrs. Wayne Watkins, of Colorado), Joseph William, Isabella Calvert, Phyllis, Phoebe Carrie, and Elenore Jane. (2) Easter Ann, born in Benton, is unmarried, and is living at home. (3) William Alton is single, and lives at home. (4) John Metcalfe married Miss Ella Josephine Cheney, of South Wayne, Wis., and settled on a farm near Fennimore, where his wife died in 1887, leaving him with two children, William H. and Cheney James, who are in the home of their grandparents. On account of his health John M. Calvert went to Colorado, where he died in 1895. (5) Henrietta is the wife of John Bunt, of Fremont, Neb., where he is engaged in carriage manufacturing. They have three children, Mary Ann, Jane Alton, and Gladys Percilla. (6) James Jackson Buchanan married Miss Mary Emily Emerson, of Lafayette county, and resides on a farm joining his father's. They have three children, Isabella Maud, Mary Moody and Emily Winniefred. (7) Isabella Jane died when a young lady, in 1884. (8) Margaret Elizabeth is unmarried, and lives at home. She was educated in the home schools, and possesses that culture and refinement which characterize all the members of the family. (9) Caroline Milner is the wife of Jacob Miller, and lives at West Superior, Wis.; they have a family of five children, Eva Jane, John Jacob, Caroline Calvert, Wilhelmina Victoria and William Calvert. (10) George Thomas was married to Esther Grieves Blades, and lives on a farm in the town of Benton, where he has a family of five daughters, Ida Myrtella, Henrietta Alton, Ella Josephine, Elizabeth Golden and Jane Alton. (11) Sarah Johanna is the wife of George Hunsaker, of Fennimore. (12) Reuben Harker was married to Mae A. Joslyn, daughter of Rev. Mr. Joslyn, of this State, and they have one daughter, Charlotte Joslyn. They reside on the homestead of his father. (13) Joseph Simon and (14) Melvina Arabella both died in infancy.

All the family are either members of the Methodist Church or closely associated with it. Mr. Calvert has been an active member of that body for forty-five years, and was instrumental in its founding. In his politics Mr. Calvert was a Democrat for years, but he is now a Prohibitionist, as are also his sons. He has held the office of justice of the peace, has served on the school board, and filled several other local positions.

Mr. Calvert is one of the oldest pioneers of the county, and came to these regions at a very early day. He has maintained a good character, worked hard, been thrifty and frugal, and is now able to give free play to his generous feelings. He has many friends, and is known as especially warm-hearted toward the erring and the unfortunate. He has a smile and a hearty hand-shake for all, without regard to their wealth or social standing. He is the ideal of his family, and is highly regarded in the community.

JAMES MILES AND JOHN F. MILES, highly respected retired farmers and money-lenders of Platteville, Grant county, are natives of Chester county, Penn., the latter born in 1829. Their parents, William and Hannah (Pinkerton) Miles, also natives of Chester county, reared as farming people, moved thence to Lancaster county, Penn., purchased a farm, and there passed the remainder of their lives. Of the seven children born to them, three died in the East, and four came West, viz.: Sarah, Louisa, James, and John Franklin. For a short time these four remained in Ohio, and then came to Platteville, arriving there April 25, 1846. At that time Platteville was a small mining village, the entire section being underlaid with lead ore. They reached this point by coming down the Ohio river and up the Mississippi, by steamboat, to Galena, Ill., and then across country by team, and here they all lived under one roof, the circle being unbroken until the death of Sarah, in 1895.

On first reaching Platteville James and John F. worked at coopering, in conjunction with farming, having purchased sixty acres of land, which they afterward increased to 300. Later the two brothers opened an office in the town, loaned money on real-estate security, and greatly prospered. They are now among the very wealthy men of the county, owning considerable property in the city of Platteville and elsewhere, and in the city own one of the finest homes on Pine street. The four members of the family who came to Wisconsin clung together in one family. Neither of the sisters married, and Louisa still keeps house for the two brothers.

In religion the Miles sisters and the brother

James united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which they have liberally contributed of their means on all occasions. In 1900 the "Miles M. E. Sunday-school Library of Platteville" was established by this family, they putting in $500 cash as a sinking fund. In politics both of the brothers have affiliated with the Republican party, but have never been very active in political affairs.

The Miles family came to Wisconsin when it was a Territory, but were comfortably situated from the start, and escaped many of the hardships which their pioneer neighbors endured. They were always honest, industrious and frugal, and have ever enjoyed the respect and good-will of their neighbors. While they were engaged in a business which often tends to harden man's heart toward his neighbor, they have never been known to oppress the poor, and many a man who is now prosperous and comfortable owes his success in life to their assistance and support in days of necessity and trouble.

AARON SMITH. Among the prominent residents of Albany, Green county, who assist in making up the substantial framework of social and commercial life in the pleasant village, is Aaron Smith, the subject of this sketch, who is also a veteran of the Civil war. He was born in Adams, Jefferson Co., N. Y., on Dec. 17, 1826.

The paternal grandfather was Aaron Smith, a native of Vermont, of English descent, who took an honorable part in the war of 1812, was a farmer by occupation, and reared a family of six children. The maternal grandfather was named Isaac Rodgers, who was a native of Rhode Island, who combined the trades of farmer, blacksmith, shoemaker, miller and general mechanic. His death occurred in Jefferson county, N. Y., at the age of eighty-eight, having reared a family of eleven children.

Lewis Smith, son of Adam, and father of our subject, was a native of Vermont. He married Olive Rodgers, of Rensselaer county, N. Y., and they had one son and three daughters, two of whom are still living. Caroline, the wife of Silas Curtis, of Jefferson county, and Aaron, our subject. Lewis Smith was always a farmer, but served his country during the war of 1812, dying in Jefferson county, N. Y., on March 30, 1872, at the age of seventy-five. His wife died in April, 1876, aged sixty-nine, both of them having been devoted members of the Methodist Church for many years.

Aaron Smith, our subject, was reared on the farm in Jefferson county, and lived at home, attending the common schools, maturing into a fine specimen of young manhood. On his twentieth birthday, Dec. 17, 1846, he was married to Miss Helen M. Dennie, a daughter of Michael and Catherine (Knapp). Dennie, and six children were born of this union: Josephine, who married Edward Shepardson, now deceased, resides in Bellevue, Ohio; Charles, who died, aged seven; Olive, who married the late William Caple, lives in Magnolia, Rock Co., Wis., and has three children, Elma, Helen and John; Florence, who married Henry Hickathier, resides at Evansville, Wis.; Kate, who died, aged a little over two; Lewis A. married Ida Milks, resides on the old home farm at Magnolia, and has two children, Neva and Sarah.

In 1860 Mr. Smith, with his wife and all the children except one, came West to Wisconsin, landing at Milwaukee. The same day they started for Janesville, soon after deciding to buy a farm in Rock township, Rock county, where they remained only a short time. Mr. Smith then bought a farm of eighty acres in Magnolia township, to which he added, as his means permitted, until he owned an estate of 240 acres, upon which he lived until March, 1897, when he removed to the village of Albany, selling the farm, with the exception of eighty acres, to his son Lewis.

On Dec. 18, 1861, Mr. Smith enlisted in Company E, 3d Wis. V. C., in which he served through the Civil war, until February, 1865, when he was mustered out in Madison. Mr. Smith entered the army as a private, but was promoted to sergeant. One of the greatest battles in which he was engaged was that of Prairie Grove, Ark. After the war he returned to the paths of peace, although the events of those years can no more be effaced from memory than can a grateful country forget her defenders.

The parents of Mrs. Smith were natives of New York. Eight children were born to them, the mother dying in her native State about 1848, her father surviving for seven more years. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are firm believers in the Methodist faith, and their lives are as their profession, charitable, honest, upright, with an unwavering faith in the Bible as the Book of Books. Formerly Mr. Smith was a Whig, but has been a Republican since the formation of that party. He has been prominent in all things beneficial to the community, and has been called upon to serve as justice of the peace, performing the duties of that office in the quiet, conscientious way that has characterized every act of his life.

JOHN P. WRIGHT, for many years a well-known carpenter and builder of Janesville, Rock county, has been identified with many of the best constructions of the city, either as contractor or as foreman of the building crew. The substantial character of the buildings he has erected attest the honesty of his work and the upright spirit that is in him. Two things have been his good fortune, that he was born in England, and that he was reared in the United States. He had back of him sound and healthy ancestors, and came to this country with a heredity of health. He grew to manhood under the stimulus of liberty, and felt the inspirations of the New World.

Mr. Wright was born in Cambridgeshire, England, Dec. 10, 1848, and is a son of Samuel and Lucy (Poole) Wright, both English born and bred. They were the parents of nine children, seven of whom lived to attain maturity, and five of whom still survive: John P.; George; William; Ida, wife of James Clatworthy, of Elmira, N. Y.; and Mate, wife of James Horn, of Janesville. The father was an overseer on a large English farm. He came to this country in 1851, locating in East Troy, Wis., where he remained for two years, and came to Janesville at the expiration of that time, where, with the exception of nine years, he has continued to reside to the present time. For a time he was a mason, and later a contractor, but for the last half dozen years he has been living retired. His wife, who died in 1892, at the age of sixty-six, was, with her husband, a member of the Methodist Church. He is a Republican. His father died in England at an advanced age. Isaac Poole, the father of Lucy Poole, was a farmer, and kept a toll-gate. He lived to be old, and left a small family.

John P. Wright was two and a half years old when his parents came to this country, and he has spent all but about five years of his life in Janesville. He attended public and private schools when a boy, and was a student at a commercial college. When only twelve years old he bought a kit of carpenter's tools, and he early selected that work as the occupation of his life. For about twenty-five years he has done contract work in the city and in the surrounding country, and has been employed on many of the best buildings of Janesville. He helped to build the Baptist church and the Congregational churches twice, and the mark of a master workman is on them. In December, 1900, he purchased a lot on South Main street, in the business portion of the city, and erected thereon a brick block, three stories in height—a store, with dwellings above.

Mr. Wright and Miss Mary Ella Jepson were married April 13, 1875, and they have six children, three sons and three daughters: Glen, Harry, Grace, Edna, Doane and Charles. They live at No. 102 North Main street. Mrs. Wright is a member of the Baptist Church, which her husband attends. He belongs to the Odd Fellows and the Knights of the Globe, and is very popular in fraternal circles. In politics he takes an independent attitude, seeking the best men to go with the best principles, but he generally votes the Democratic ticket. He is a man of good habits, clean character, honest and industrious, and has a host of friends.

SCOTT SMITH, one of the prosperous and influential farmers of La Prairie township, Rock county, is a native of Wisconsin, and the son of one of the earliest pioneers of Rock county. He was born in Milton township, Rock county, Dec. 13, 1847, son of Isaac T. and Nancy A. (DeJeans) Smith, natives of Chautauqua county, N. Y., and grandson of Farrington Smith, a native of Vermont, of English descent, and a farmer by occupation, who in the early days migrated to Milton township, Rock Co., Wis., where he died at the age of about seventy years. He had a family of five children.

Isaac T. Smith, father of our subject, was born in 1817, and came to Wisconsin in 1836, locating in the town of Milton, where he entered government land and lived for a number of years. Removing to Marshalltown, Iowa, he lived there for a year or two, and then engaged in the manufacture of agricultural implements at Fort Dodge, that State. He afterward lived in Colorado, and in the northern part of Wisconsin. The last five years of his life he spent with his son Scott, the subject of this sketch, in La Prairie township, Rock county, and died there in January, 1898, aged eighty-one years. He was twice married. His first wife, Nancy A. DeJeans, was the daughter of Stephen DeJeans, a native of France, who when a boy of about fifteen years of age came with his parents to America and located at Albany, N. Y., where he grew to manhood. He served in the war of 1812, and in 1837 came to Wisconsin, settling near Milwaukee, where he engaged for a time in farming. He died near Brooklyn, Dane Co., Wis., aged about seventy-five years, leaving a large family. To Isaac T. and Nancy A. Smith were born nine children, six sons and three daughters, five of whom survive, namely: Flora, wife of Charles Jones, of Iris, Colo.; Jay F., of Hotchkiss, Colo.; Scott, our subject; Ida M., wife of Frank Farrell, of Fort Dodge, Iowa; and Ira Clair, of Nelson, Northwest Territory, Canada.

Scott Smith, our subject, was reared on his father's farm in Milton township. He attended the district schools during his boyhood, and at the early age of thirteen years began working on the farm by the month. Arriving at the years of manhood, he adopted farming as his vocation, and rented land for a number of years. In 1882 he bought seventy-four acres in the town of Rock, living there until 1884, when he sold the property and bought the present home farm, in Section 25, La Prairie township, containing 161½ acres, which he has brought to a high state of cultivation, and where he has since resided. Mr. Smith also owns fifteen acres of land two miles south of the home place.

Mr. Smith married, Feb. 17, 1870, Miss Adelaide M. Spears, daughter of Edward and Mariette (Brown) Spears, and to them have been born six children, namely: Lucy E. died at the age of eight years. Eugene S. married Jean Little, and has two children, Harold and Louise; they reside in La Prairie township. George W. died at the age of four years. One died in infancy. Hattie E. married W. W. Day, of the town of La Prairie, where they reside on a farm. Walter E. lives at home. Mr. and Mrs. Scott Smith are prominent members of the M. E. Church, of which he is a steward. In politics he is a Republican. He has been through life an industrious, progressive farmer, of sterling character, and holds the respect and high esteem of all who know him. His farm life was broken during the Civil war by his enlistment in Company G, 44th Iowa V. I., in the one-hundred-days service, at the expiration of which he returned to the farm.

WARREN JOHNSON, a very successful and highly respected stock and dairy farmer of the town of Lima, Grant county, was born in the same town in which he is now living, in May, 1847.

Farnum and Amanda (Eastman) Johnson, his parents, were born in Ohio, the father in 1802 and the mother in 1806. They came to Galena, Ill., when young. In 1837 they fled to the old fort in Grant county for protection against hostile Indians, and there met and were married. At that time Mr. Johnson was engaged in hauling lead from Platteville to the smelting works at Galena, and drove the first wagon coming into Platteville. In 1834 he purchased one hundred acres of wild land from a Mr. Mayfield, and that land is still in the possession of the family, his sons Henry W. and Warren now owning it. Mr. Johnson was an industrious man, and accumulated a fine property through industry and with the help of his faithful wife. In 1878 he died at this home, which he had carved out of the wilderness. Mr. Johnson was a Republican, and for a number of years served on the town board of Lima. In religion he and his wife were members of the Baptist Church. After the death of her husband Mrs. Johnson removed to Platteville, and there she made her home until she passed away, in 1891, in the serene expectation of a better life. She was a woman greatly beloved and respected by all who knew her. To Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were born a family of five children: (1) Mary A., born at Fever River, in Lafayette county, married J. J. Wallace, and now resides on a large ranch at Boulder, Colo., where they have reared a family of four children, Ernest, Lewis, Fred, and Lena (wife of Marvin Hobson, of Colorado). (2) Elizabeth is now the wife of G. G. Clemmer, of Colorado. They have two daughters, Kitty, Mrs. Iden Stewart, of Hampton, Iowa, and May, Mrs. Norman Ingles, of the same city. (3) Nancy E. married William Humason, and is now a widow, living in Platteville. She has two children, Arthur and Dela, the latter the wife of Fred Wallace, and living in Kansas. (4) Henry W. and (5) Warren are mentioned more fully.

Henry W. Johnson, born in 1844, grew up on the old homestead, and had the benefits of a country school education. In the spring of 1862 he enlisted in Company E, 25th Wis. V. I., and served under Capt. Scott. The 25th Wisconsin was sent to Fort Snelling, Minn., and held for duty against hostile Indians until November of that year, when they were returned to Camp Randall, at Madison, Wis., where they spent the winter. The following May they were ordered to Columbus, Ky., where they were put under the command of Gen. Grant, and took part in the capture of Vicksburg. Mr. Johnson was sick for nearly half a year, but regained his health in time to join his regiment before Vicksburg, and take part in the movements that led to the fall of that city. The 25th Wisconsin was transferred to Gen. Sherman's army, and took part in the great march through Georgia. It lost heavily, and suffered many hardships, but marched clear through to the end, and went down the streets in the grand review that signalled the end of the war and the victory of the Union. It had done duty in fifteen States, and its record is one that any regiment of the Union army might consider creditable.

After the war, in 1868, Mr. Johnson married Miss Maria Quinby, of Platteville, Wis., daughter of Selden and Anna Quinby, of Lafayette county, Wis. After his marriage Mr. Johnson bought a part of the old homestead, where he now resides. They have had a family of four children: (1) William L., born October, 1869, was killed when a young man by a vicious bull. (2) Ella M., born in June, 1876, was a student of the State Normal at Platteville, and has been a successful teacher since 1896. (3) Ethel, born in 1879, is a student at the State Normal in Platteville. (4) Alta, born in November, 1882, died when eight years old.

Warren Johnson, the youngest child of his parents, was reared on the old homestead, and obtained his early education in the public schools and in the Academy and the State Normal at Platteville. His first employment was as a drug clerk in the store of his brother-in-law, in Austin, Minn. After remaining there a year he came back to Grant county, to take charge of his father's business. In 1869 he married Miss Phoebe Dickinson, a daughter of Ensign P. and Fannie Dickinson, old and honored pioneers of the county. The father, who died a few years ago, was a member of the Legislature from this district, and was a man well known for his honest character and public spirit. The mother is still living, and makes her home with her son, Charles Dickinson. Mr. Johnson, after his marriage, purchased a part of the old Johnson home, and put up a fine house and large and roomy farm buildings. He has taken much pride in his home surroundings, and every part shows the touch of a master hand. To Mr. Johnson and his wife have been born a family of seven children: (1) Farnum, born in 1871, married Miss Elsie Russell, of Lima, and resides on his farm in the town of Lima. They have three children, Earl, Eugene and Hazel. (2) Fannie, born in 1873, is now the wife of Isaiah Buttson, who resides on his farm in Lima, and has three children, Susan, Warren and Ina. (3) Maud, born in 1875, is the wife of Frank Jones, one of the leading farmers of Harrison, and is the mother of three children, Frank, Helen and Ruth. (4) Gertrude, born in Lima, in 1877, fitted herself for teaching at the State Normal at Platteville, and is a successful worker in the schools of Grant county. (5) Warren, born in 1881, is a student at the Platteville State Normal. (6) Grace was born in 1885, and (7) Clair in 1889.

In politics all the members of this family have been identified with the old Republican party, and have always been prominent in local affairs. Warren Johnson has been a member of the county board, and chairman of the town board. In religion he and his wife are associated with the Christian Church.

JULIUS BALDWIN, who is a retired farmer at Brooklyn, Green county, where he is filling the office of justice of the peace, was born at Clearville, Kent Co., Ont., April 16, 1832, and is a son of David Samuel and Catherine (Roome) Baldwin, the former a native of Connecticut and the latter of Nova Scotia. In their family were eleven children, five of whom are living: Lucinda, widow of Ralph Ford, of Evansville, Wis.; Phineas, of Brooklyn; Asa James, of Wausau, Wis.; Julius; and Anson, of Evansville, Wisconsin.

David Samuel Baldwin was a lumberman and a farmer, and for seventeen years had a mail contract in Canada. He came to Wisconsin in 1849, and settled in Oregon, Dane county, two miles from the village of Brooklyn, where he bought six hundred acres of land, which he improved. Here he died Aug. 25, 1854, at the age of seventy-five years. His widow died June 14, 1880, at the age of eighty-six years. Mr. Baldwin was a Whig in the United States. In Canada he served as justice of the peace, and as captain of militia. Phineas Baldwin, his father, and the grandfather of Julius, was a native of Litchfield, Conn., dying in Canada at the early age of forty-two years; he was the father of five children. Abraham Roome, the maternal grandfather of Julius Baldwin, was a native of New Brunswick, and he was a farmer by occupation, finally moving into Kent county, Ontario, where he settled in a place called "Fifty-Two;" he died in middle life, the father of a numerous family. The first Baldwin in America is said to have been a kidnapped child, taken from some place in England or Wales, from which the Baldwins sprang. David S. Baldwin was married a second time, and his second wife was the mother of the children mentioned above. By his first wife he was the father of two children.

Julius Baldwin spent the first seventeen years of his life in Canada, where he had his schooling. He was steadily engaged in farming until 1894. In 1849 he came with his parents to Wisconsin and remained at home until he reached maturity. His father gave him one hundred acres of land, after his custom of giving each of his children land to the value of one thousand dollars. Julius Baldwin continued to cultivate the old homestead farm until 1894, when he rented it to his son, and moved into his fine residence property in Brooklyn, where he has since lived retired. Mr. Baldwin added to his landed possessions from time to time until at one time he owned 216 acres. During his active years he did general farming and stock raising.

On Oct. 24, 1855, Mr. Baldwin married Miss Clarissa B. McLaughlin, a daughter of William W. and Sarah (Robinson) McLaughlin. To them were born: Charles S., who married Nona Colby, who is now deceased; Clinton L., who married Carrie Bennett, and lives in the town of Oregon, Dane county; Lloyd M., who married May Gray, now deceased; Minnie E., who married Palmer A. Haynes, of Brooklyn, and is the mother of one daughter, Beth; Myra J., who married Robert S. Gillies, and lives in Raymond, S. Dak.; Boyd M., who married Minnie Boning, lives on the old homestead, and is the father of three sons, Henry, Robert and Frank; and Daisy, who is teaching school near Raymond, S. Dak., and is unmarried. Mr. Baldwin is a member of the Brooklyn Lodge, No. 332, I. O. O. F. In politics he is a Republican, and was supervisor in Oregon one year, assessor for eleven years, and for two years he has occupied his present position as justice of the peace.

Mrs. Baldwin's parents were natives of Ohio, and had four children, three of whom are now living: (1) Anna Maria, the wife of Reuben Boyse, of Dane county; (2) James B., of Sheldon, Iowa; (3) Clarissa, who is Mrs. Baldwin. William McLaughlin learned the shoemaker's trade, but followed farming all his life. His first wife, a devout Methodist, died in Clark county, Ohio, in 1836, when a young woman. For his second wife he married Emeline Hazeltine. To this marriage there were born four children, two of whom are still living: Harriet, who is the wife of John White, of Minneapolis, and Almira, the wife of Frank Frisbie, of Sheldon, Iowa. Mr. McLaughlin moved into Green county, Wis., in 1842, where he owned 200 acres of land. At the first his nearest neighbors were nine miles off. He became a prominent man, and was the first chairman of the town board, and was chairman of the town board of supervisors a number of years. He was twice elected to the State Assembly, and for many years was assessor. He died April 2, 1877, at the age of seventy years. His widow died in 1896 at the age of eighty. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Baldwin was James McLaughlin, a native of Scotland, who came to this country when he was six years old. He was the father of six children, and died advanced in years. Mrs. Baldwin's maternal grandfather was Richard R. Robinson, a farmer, who was born in Pennsylvania, of Dutch descent, and who died at the age of eighty-four.

ESAJAS BLUMER. The American Republic owes much to her foreign-born citizens, but to no country does she owe more than to her sister republic of Switzerland for the high class of citizens she has contributed to the arts and trades of America. Thrifty and honest, industrious and patriotic, they hold a prominent place in the communities in which they live. Esajas Blumer, a highly respected citizen of Monroe, Green county, Wis., was born in Canton Glarus, Switzerland, Aug. 15, 1839, a son of John and Dorothea (Blumer) Blumer.

John Blumer was born in Switzerland, and, as his father died while he was quite young, he was early obliged to earn his own livelihood, which he did as a laborer, and for a time found work in the factories of his native country. In 1853 he came to America, and located in Washington township, Green county, Wis., where he purchased forty acres of land, later adding several different tracts, all of which he finally sold and bought a 200-acre farm in the same township. He was frugal and industrious, and by his careful cultivation his property rapidly increased in value. He sold his farm in Washington township in 1881, and purchased 300 acres in Mount Pleasant township, remaining about three years, in 1884 locating in Monroe, where he lived retired until his death, Dec. 11, 1900, at the age of eighty-four years. In Switzerland he married Dorothea Blumer, whose death at the early age of thirty-five years occurred in 1849. Five children were born to them, as follows: Anna, wife of Jost Tschudy, of Palmer, Neb.; Esajas, of Monroe, Wis.; John, of Monroe; Sarah, wife of Jacob Freitag, of Monticello, Wis.; and Caroline, wife of Joseph Hilton, of Ireton, Iowa. After coming to America Mr. Blumer married a second time, Miss Mary Ann Stuessy becoming his wife, and to this second union were born ten children, six of whom are now living: Ursula, wife of Henry Freitag, of near Monticello, Wis.; Mary, wife of John Legler, of Juda, Wis.; Fred, of Minneapolis, Minn.; Samuel, of near Elkhorn, Wis.; Katharina, wife of W. F. Truckenbrod, of Monroe; and Jacob, of Washington township.

Esajas Blumer was about fourteen years of age when his father brought him to America. He attended the schools of his native land, and after coming to Wisconsin attended during the winter term for a time. Before leaving Switzerland he had been employed in the calico printing factories, working from six o'clock in the morning until six o'clock in the evening for five cents per day, and after coming to this country he worked out by the month on farms for four dollars per month, giving his earnings to his parents until he was twenty-one years of age. Upon attaining his majority he started out in life for himself, working the first year for his father for one hundred dollars, and then worked for other people. When the Civil war threatened the disruption of the Union he shouldered a musket in defense of his adopted country, becoming a member of Co. K, 16th Wis. V. I., in 1863, and was mustered out in Louisville, Ky., July 15, 1865. He took part in over twenty battles, went with Sherman to the sea, and marched back to Washington, D. C., in time to participate in the grand review there. While too sick for duty a number of times, he kept well enough to avoid the hospitals. After the war was over he returned to Wisconsin, and worked that fall for $20 per month, but rested through the winter, and with the opening for farm work the next spring he entered into contract with Mr. J. J. Tschudy, of Clarno township, to work the season for $250. In a short time he purchased a farm, and by his untiring industry and practical economy he has acquired a comfortable competence. Farm work has been his life work in this country, but since 1897 he has lived retired in Monroe, at his comfortable home No. 724 Church street. Mr. Blumer takes an active interest in public affairs, and socially belongs to the O. F. Pinney Post, G. A. R.

On April 2, 1867, Mr. Blumer was united in marriage with Miss Henrietta Grosse, daughter of Gottlieb and Rosina (Winter) Grosse, and these children came to bless this union: Rosa, who married Ernest Holcomb, of Adams township, and has had eight children, seven of whom are still living. Fred, Robert La Follette, Harold, Ira, Henrietta, Clarence, and an infant; John, of Washington township, who married Fannie Blum, and has one son, Werner; Wilhelm Gottlieb, of Adams township, who married Katherina Blumer, who died May 21, 1900, leaving two children, Robert William and Adam Ezra; Ezra, of Washington township, who married Emma Blumer, and has one child, Margaret; Edward, ex-county superintendent of schools of Green county, now a student in Rush Medical College, Chicago; Anna, who married Albert Zimmerman, of Washington township, and has three children, Edna, Clara and Clarence; Fred, who married Sophia Zimmerman, and lives on his father's old homestead in Adams township; Henrietta, who married Thomas Hoesly, of York township, and has one child, Esther; Bertha, who married David Pfeiffer, of Monroe, and has one child, Elsie; Caroline, who makes her home with her brother Wilhelm Gottlieb, caring for his motherless little ones. Mrs. Henrietta Blumer, the mother of this family of children, passed away March 18, 1895, at the age of fifty-four years. She was a faithful member of the Swiss Reformed Church, of Washington township.

On July 16, 1897, Mr. Blumer was married a second time, Mrs. Magdalena Schmid, widow of Benjamin Schmid, and daughter of Christian Neuenschwander and Anna Street. Both Mr. Blumer and his wife are members of the German Evangelical Church, of Monroe. No children have been born of this second marriage, but Mrs. Blumer, by her former marriage, is the mother of eleven children, as follows: Gottfried, a soldier in the Spanish-American war, is now in the Philippines; Carl, of Dundee, Ill., married Rosa Christie, and has three children, Emma, Freddie and Warner; Ernest, of Elgin, Ill., married Rosa Kohner, and has three children, Ernst, Frieda and an infant; Adolph married Rosa Diescher, and lives in Monroe; Mary married Edward Guggisberg, of Monroe, and has two children, Lydia and Bertha; Anna married Andrew Signer, of Elgin, Ill., and has two children, Lydia and Carl; Rosa married Dietland Thom, of Monroe, and has three children, William, Clara and an infant; Lena married Adam Blumer, of Monroe, and has one son, Harold; Lizzie is at home; Bertha married Louis Young, of Elgin, Ill.; one died young.

JOHN BLUMER, brother of Esajas Blumer, was born in Schwanden, Canton Glarus, Switzerland, Dec. 24, 1840, and at the age of thirteen came to America, where he grew to manhood. He learned the necessary details of farm work on his father's farm in Washington township. In October, 1861, he enlisted in Company K, 9th Wis. V. I., and served until January, 1866, having re-enlisted in January, 1864, when he was assigned to Company B, same regiment. He participated in the battles of Newtonia, Prairie Grove, Saline Bottom in Arkansas, and numerous skirmishes.

He enlisted as a private, and was discharged as a sergeant, and for a time has served as company clerk. After the war closed he worked one year for his father, then in company with his brother, purchased 212 acres in Adams township, later adding 160 acres, from which they sold twenty acres, making their farm consist of 348 acres, which they farmed together until 1886. John then sold his interest and removed to Monroe, where he has since made his home. For a time he engaged in the cheese business, but soon retired from that also. Mr. Blumer is a member of St. John's Evangelical Church. Socially he belongs to O. F. Pinney Post, G. A. R., of which he has been quartermaster, and is now junior vice-commander. He is one of the highly respected citizens of the town in which he takes an intelligent interest.

S. W. TRABER, justice of the peace and notary public of Platteville, Grant county, is a native of New York, born in Albany county Nov. 29, 1844, and is a son of Peter C. and Harriet (Jacobson) Traber. The father was born in the same county, in December, 1804, a son of Charles P. Traber, also a native of Albany county, of German descent; the latter's wife, whose maiden name was Hollenbeck, was likewise born in Albany county, of Dutch descent. Charles P. Traber, who was an inn-keeper on the old road leading from Albany to Schenectady, N. Y., died in 1858, at the age of ninety-two years.

In 1853 the father of our subject, Peter C. Traber, came to Platteville, Wis., where his death occurred in 1860. By occupation he was a laborer. His wife died in Milan, Mo., in 1868. To them were born eleven children, as follows: Nancy, Mrs. Smith, died in California in May, 1897; Evaline, Mrs. Becker, died in Milan, Mo., in 1895; Margaret, Mrs. Spann, died in Albany county, N. Y., in 1898; Charles P. died in Colorado in 1884; Henry J. lives in Saginaw, Mich.; Eliza, Mrs. Anthony, is a resident of New York; Maria is now Mrs. McDougall, of Helena, Ark.; Simon P. died in Cohoes, N. Y., at the age of ten years; S. W. is next in the order of birth; Jane, Mrs. McClanahan, is a resident of Fresno, Cal.; and John W. also lives in that city.

S. W. Traber was a lad of nine years when he came with his parents to Platteville, where he was reared and educated. For a number of years after reaching manhood he engaged in farming, and also followed the painter's trade for some time. At the breaking out of the Civil war he enlisted, in Grant county, Wis., in 1861, but was at first rejected. Later he enlisted for three years, in Company G, 1st Wis. V. I., but was afterward transferred to the 21st Regiment. While with the 1st Wis. V. I. he participated in the battles of Tunnel Hill, Rocky Face Ridge and Resaca, and also engaged in the battles around Atlanta, Ga. After being transferred to the 21st Wis. V. I. he was in Sherman's celebrated march to the sea; took part in the capture of Savannah; and was in the Carolina campaign, participating in the battles of Averysboro and Bentonville. He was also present at the capture of Raleigh, N. C. Though never wounded, he suffered from a partial sunstroke. The war having ended, he was mustered out of service from Company F, 3d Wis. V. I., July 18, 1865, and returned to his home in Platteville.

In Platteville Mr. Traber was married, in 1866, to Miss Maria A. Hoisington, who was born in Orleans county, N. Y., in 1844. Her parents, George W. and Louise (Buck) Hoisington, were natives of the same State, and of English ancestry. To Mr. and Mrs. Traber have been born five children, of whom two are now living, Roy E. and Ben C.

Mr. Traber takes an active interest in public affairs, and has been a member of the fire department of Platteville since May 4, 1874. In 1896 he was elected justice of the peace, and so acceptably did he fill the office that he was re-elected in 1898, and again in 1900, being the present incumbent. By his ballot he supports the men and measures of the Republican party. Mr. Traber belongs to and is A. P. G. of Lily of the Mound Lodge, No. 6, I. O. O. F., of Platteville, and is also an honored member of W. T. Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R., which has 142 members in good standing, and in which he is now holding the office of adjutant. Religiously he is an earnest and consistent member of the Congregational Church.

DANIEL W. PHILLIPS, one of the old and respected residents of Elk Grove township, Lafayette county, is one of the pioneer citizens of that locality.

Mr. Phillips was born in Grant county,

Wis., Sept. 9, 1848, a son of Thomas and Anna (Craddock) Phillips, both of whom were born in Cornwall, England, where they grew to maturity and wedded. Coming to America in 1835, they settled in the coal regions of Pennsylvania, where they remained a few years before coming West. Until 1850 Mr. Phillips followed mining, in both Grant and Lafayette counties, and then made the trip across the Plains to California. Being a thorough miner, and understanding the business, he was quite successful, and made a second trip. After his second return to Wisconsin he purchased a tract of land in Elk Grove township, consisting of 170 acres, and there made excellent improvements and erected comfortable buildings. His death occurred in 1865, his wife remaining on the home farm until her death, in 1887. Five children were born to the parents of our subject, of whom Elizabeth, born in England, married Samuel Brunskill, of LeMars, Iowa, and has one daughter, Priscilla, now the wife of George Hitchens. Ellen, born in Wisconsin, married James Thomas, resides at Elk Grove, and has five children. George, born in Elk Grove, married Belie Mase, and has three children; he conducts a hotel at LeMars, Iowa.

Our subject grew to manhood on the present farm, where he has always been occupied in agricultural pursuits. His education was received in the district school, which he attended during the winters, working through the summers. In February, 1869, he married Miss Isabel Rouse, who belonged to an old pioneer family of Jo Daviess county, Ill. Her father was born in Canada, her mother in Kentucky, and after marriage they settled in Jo Daviess county, Ill., where Mr. Rouse died in 1850; his widow came to Lafayette county in 1851. Mrs. Phillips was born in April, 1848, in Illinois, but since 1851 has resided in Lafayette county, Wisconsin.

Our subject purchased his father's farm, which he has cultivated ever since, with most gratifying results, everything being in the most prosperous condition. Many buildings had to be erected or renewed, orchards to be planted, and fencing and drainage looked after, but all of these matters it has been the pleasure of Mr. Phillips to accomplish. Surrounded by a kind and esteemed family, Mr. and Mrs. Phillips have every reason to feel gratified with the prosperity and comfort that is theirs in their advancing years. Children as follows have been born to them: Elsie, born in 1870, married Lewis Weidege, of Lafayette county, and they have three children, Isabel, Percy, and Leroy; Frank, born in 1872, married Diana Coulthard, lives on a farm in Lafayette county, and has two daughters, Florence and Blanche; Mamie, born in 1876, was married March 20, 1901, to Lewis D. Seeley, of Elk Grove; Nellie, born in 1878, married Lewis Gillie, lives at Meekers' Grove, and has one son, Paul; the others are named Robert, Lester, George, Harry, and Clarence.

Politically Mr. Phillips has always been identified with the Republican party. Both he and his wife are valued members of the M. E. Church. The esteem in which the whole family is held in the community is genuine, and after a residence of so many years it is pleasant to meet only friendly faces among one's old neighbors. Mr. Phillips is one of the most substantial men of the locality, and is now, as he ever has been, ready to advance the interests of his section in every way that his judgment sanctions.

JOHN AUGUSTINE BINGHAM, born in Morristown, Vt., Feb. 27, 1819, was the son of John and Lydia (Thompson) Bingham, the former a native of Connecticut, the latter of New Hampshire. The parents, of old Puritan stock, were industrious, energetic, and sternly religious. Five of their eight children grew to maturity, four daughters and one son, all now deceased. The father, a man of much character and good standing, was a farmer, and was a man of unusual size and endurance. His father, Elias Bingham, was even a larger man, and not less noted for his virtues than for his size. He was a Revolutionary soldier in a Connecticut company. Lydia (Thompson) Bingham was a woman of fine character and of a remarkably hopeful disposition. Her father also bore arms in the cause of American independence.

John A. Bingham was reared on a farm in Vermont, and received a common school education, later attending the academy at Johnson and the academy at Montpelier. He studied law at Stowe, and was admitted to the Bar at Monroe, Green Co., Wis., in 1842, having come into this State the previous year. For some months he was engaged as teacher in Racine county, and in February, 1842, came to Monroe, which was his home from that time until his death. Taking up the practice of law, he also did surveying, which was an important accomplishment in those days.

On Nov. 25, 1843, Judge Bingham was married to Miss Caroline Elizabeth Churchill, a daughter of William B. and Almira (Humes) Churchill, and to this union were born six children, Helen M., Horace, Alice M., Ada, Homer W. and J. Herbert. (1) Helen M. Bingham was born Oct. 10, 1845, was graduated from Lombard College, at Galesburg, Ill., in the class of 1867, and for a time was a member of the Faculty of that institution. She graduated from the Boston University School of Medicine in 1881, and practiced for a number of years in Milwaukee, but is now retired from active professional work, and lives in Monroe. She is a charter member of the Denver Woman's Club. Dr. Bingham is a lady of much intellectual ability, and wrote an interesting history of Green county, which was published in 1877. For a time prior to her medical course she was a teacher in the Monroe high school, and has been an active worker all her life. (2) Horace Bingham, born Feb. 5, 1847, died in December, 1849. (3) Alice M. Bingham, born May 4, 1851, was married Sept. 7, 1872, to Herbert E. Copeland, who was born in Avon, Mich., and was a teacher of sciences in the high school in Indianapolis, Ind., where he died Dec. 12, 1876. To that union came two sons, Edwin Bingham and Herbert Bingham. Edwin B. was born Sept. 30, 1873, and married Miss Ethel Tilden Faulkner; their home is at Morgantown, W. Va., where he is professor of botany in the University of West Virginia. Herbert B., born July 24, 1875, lives in Denver, where he is in the employ of his uncle Homer, a lumber dealer of that city. Mrs. Copeland was a graduate of Lombard College, class of 1872, and has always taken a deep interest in educational matters. The first year (1887) that women were eligible for the school board in Wisconsin, she was elected a member of the school board in Monroe. For many years she has served the public in that capacity. (4) Ada Bingham, born Feb. 6, 1854, was graduated from Lombard College in 1873, and from the Boston University School of Medicine in 1879. She practiced her profession in Monroe until her health compelled her removal, in 1888, to Denver. Dr.

Bingham is a lady of many gifts and accomplishments, and is much interested in every forward movement of the times. She is a charter member of the Denver Woman's Club, and is an efficient worker along educational and philanthropic lines. (5) Homer W. Bingham, born Feb. 1, 1856, lives in Denver, where he is engaged in the lumber business. He received his college education at Cornell University, and graduated from the law school of the University of Wisconsin in 1877. He was married to Miss Addie Ludlow, Jan. 20, 1897, and has one daughter, Helen. (6) J. Herbert, the youngest, born Jan. 14, 1859, died Jan. 23, 1881.

Judge Bingham was not a member of any church, nor is his widow. Their sympathies were with the Unitarian faith. The Judge was a strong Abolitionist, and was one of the first members of the Republican organization in Wisconsin. He took a deep interest in promoting the Abolitionist movement into Kansas, and when war came only physical disability kept him from going to the front. He was a member of the National Convention that nominated Abraham Lincoln for President the second time. During the years 1846 and 1847 he served as district attorney, and afterward held for eight years the office of Probate Judge. For about twenty-five years he was on the board of education, and for months visited the schools daily, seeking to have the most improved methods of instruction employed. He was always interested in young people, and, having encountered difficulties in acquiring his own education, was eager to help ambitious young men to a chance to help themselves.

In 1854 he opened a broker's office, and later, in company with A. Ludlow and Asa Richardson, started the Bank of Monroe, which afterward became the First National Bank of Monroe. Of this institution he was president for a number of years. He also owned a large flouring mill, which he operated during the later years of his life in Monroe. Judge Bingham died July 24, 1865, in the forty-seventh year of his age, while on a visit to his native State in the hope of benefiting his health.

JOHN M. SIFFORD was one of the brave boys in blue who laid down his life on the altar of his country during the dark days of the Civil war. This honored resident of Grant county enlisted in Wyalusing township Aug. 11, 1862, becoming a private in Company D, 33d Wis. V. I., but had been promoted to second sergeant before the death summons came. He died in Memphis, Tenn., April 17, 1863. Though his health was much broken early in the service, his death was quite sudden and unexpected.

Mr. Sifford was born in the State of Virginia in 1826, and came to Grant county, Wis., with a maternal uncle, Benjamin Burton, in whose family he grew to manhood, his parents having passed away when he was a child. A faithful soldier in his country's cause, and a respected citizen of his adopted county, his death was deeply lamented by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

On April 7, 1851, Mr. Sifford was married to Miss Sarah J. Fink, also a native of the Old Dominion, whose mother had died when she was but eleven years old. At the age of sixteen she accompanied her father on his removal to Grant county, Wis. When he entered the army Mr. Sifford left a wife and two children, aged respectively eleven and three years. Soon after the death of her husband Mrs. Sifford lost her younger child, John Franklin, and the only daughter, Mary Jane, died March 31, 1895, after a prolonged illness. During her long and severe sickness she was tenderly cared for by her mother, who is now left alone to mourn the departure of those near and dear to her. She is a most estimable woman, who makes many friends, and is held in high regard by all who know her on account of her many sterling qualities.

JOSEPH THOMPSON, justice of the peace at Brodhead, Green county, is regarded as one of the most upright and reliable citizens of the place.

Mr. Thompson was born at Port Hope, Canada, Dec. 9, 1833, and is a son of Henry and Sarah B. (Straw) Thompson, both natives of the United States, and the parents of five children; two of these are now living, Joseph and Alfred, the latter a ranchman at Salt Lake City. The father was a farmer, and died in Canada in 1845, at the age of fifty-six. His widow died at Mount Morris, Ill., some years later, at the age of seventy-six. She was a Universalist, and he was a Methodist. His father was Henry Thompson, of Connecticut, of Scotch lineage, who became a soldier of the American Revolution, and died in Canada at the age of eighty-six, the father of five children. Nathan Straw, the father of Sarah B., mentioned above, was a native of New Hampshire, and died in old age. He, too, was the father of five children.

Joseph Thompson spent the first seventeen years of his life on the paternal estate in Canada. He attended Oberlin College for a year and a half, and then followed railroading for three years. In 1853 he came to Rockford, Ill., and the next year was a clerk in a grocery, and then was a farmer until 1861.

Mr. Thompson was among the first to respond to the call for troops in 1861. He enlisted in Company M, 8th Ill. Vol. Cav., under the command of John F. Farnsworth; and with his regiment, participated in many of the more important battles of the war, including Yorktown, Williamsburg, Seven Days' fight in front of Richmond, the second battle of Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam, Gettysburg, and many skirmishes. At the battle of Chancellorsville he had a horse shot from under him, and was taken prisoner, but escaped after three days in the hands of the rebels, reaching the Union lines in safety. Soon after this, as a reward for his complete mastery of the cavalry drill and his high personal character, he was appointed to the command of the body-guard (a picked body of forty men) of General Stoneman. This service under General Stoneman continued for three months, and included the famous Stoneman raid around General Lee's army. Soon after this raid General Stoneman was transferred to the western army, and his body-guard returned to their respective regiments. At Gettysburg the 8th Illinois lost heavily in charging infantry behind a stone wall. The severity of the fire and the chances of war may be seen from the fact that there one horse had nine bullet wounds, and bore his rider out of the line of fire unharmed. The 8th Illinois Cavalry, in all, participated in forty-four engagements; and in spite of his active service in the front through all of these, our subject was fortunate enough to return home without a scar.

Returning from his long service in the army Mr. Thompson resumed the duties of civil life, and has served as justice of the peace for twenty-five years, during which time he has married over fifty couples. From the close of the war in 1865, until 1867, he was a resident of Waterloo, Iowa, and then moved to Albany, Wis., where he worked in a grist mill. In 1876 he moved to his present home, Brodhead. For many years he carried on an insurance business, with his other official duties, but he gave it up in 1898, and is now concerned only in what comes to him as a justice of the peace.

On Oct. 9, 1861, Mr. Thompson married Miss Charlotte Marson, daughter of Samuel Marson. No children have been born to them. Mr. Thompson belongs to Bicknell Lodge, No. 94, A. F. & A. M., and served as Master four years. He is a charter member of Wesley W. Patton Post, No. 90, G. A. R., and was its commander two years. In politics he is a Republican. Mr. Thompson and his wife have a pleasant home on the corner of Dousman and Dixon streets. They have reared two adopted children, the orphans of her brother Thomas, Ida and Jessie. Ida married Herbert B. Oakes, and lives at Hartford, S. Dakota; they have eight children. Jessie married Alexander Walker, and lives at Sioux City, Iowa; they are the parents of three children.

JOHN MEEHAN. Few residents of Darlington, Lafayette county, have a greater number of friends than this courteous and popular landlord of one of the best appointed houses of entertainment in that city. Mr. Meehan's birth took place in Philadelphia, Penn., in 1843, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Meehan, were natives of Ireland. They passed their lives in Philadelphia, where Mr. Meehan was connected with a hotel, at their decease leaving our subject, then a small boy, and his sister Rose, who died in that city.

Our subject came to Lafayette county in 1852. For a time he engaged as cabin boy on a steamer that plied on the Mississippi river, but when the Civil war broke out he enlisted in Company K, 5th Ohio Cavalry, and served through that struggle, being mustered out in June, 1865. After the close of the war Mr. Meehan returned to Wisconsin, and in June, 1869, married Miss Mary Rockwell, who was born in 1849, and belonged to an old and prominent family of Lafayette county, being a daughter of Stephen Rockwell. For some time after his marriage Mr. Mee-han followed painting, very successfully, in Darlington. He became a figure in local politics, his activity resulting in his appointment, in 1886, as postmaster of the city, which office was never more efficiently conducted than during his term of service.

In 1890, after an official life of three years, Mr. Meehan became the purchaser of the large "Stone Hotel," in Darlington, which he has continued until the present time, conducting and managing a well appointed, modern hostelry, which he has supplied with every comfort and convenience for the traveling public, and which is a credit to the city.

To Mr. Meehan and his wife have come children as follows: Hugh, born in 1870, is cashier of the Onwentsia Golf Club, of Chicago; Marie, born in Chicago, in 1873, was educated at the Sinsinawa Mound Sisters' School, and her musical education was received at the Chicago Conservatory of Music; Frank, born in 1878, graduated from the high school in his city, and was a student in the University at Madison; and Arthur, born in 1880, was educated in the Delavan School for the Deaf, from which he graduated with honor.

As a politician Mr. Meehan has long been identified with the Democratic party, for which he has done valuable work. His religious connection is with the Catholic Church, to which he has always given of his means generously. Although he was obliged, as a poor boy, to depend in early life upon his own efforts, he has ever had in him the elements of true manliness, as well as honesty and industry, and he occupies a position now which is well suited to him personally. Genial, accommodating, courteous, the guests of Mr. Meehan are made to forget that they are not under their own roofs when they enter his hospitable doors.

GEORGE ARTHUR BLAKELEY. M. D., the present postmaster at Albany, is one of the most popular and progressive young physicians of this part of Green county. He is courteous and affable in his general intercourse with the public, and sustains a good reputation, both as a man and as a member of the medical profession.

Dr. Blakeley was born near Lawrence, Kan., May 8, 1857, and is a son of Edwin and Frances (Smith) Blakeley, natives of New York and Michigan, respectively. They were the parents of five sons and two daughters, and five of their children are now living: Frances A., the wife of H. A. Babcock, of Evansville, Wis.; Dr. George A.; Harrison A.; William E.; and Eugene. The father was a farmer, and removed into Ohio in the early days. About 1854 he came to Wisconsin, and located at Evansville, which was his home—with the exception of three years spent in Kansas—the rest of his life. He died in 1896, at the age of seventy, a consistent member of the Congregational Church, and his widow now lives in Evansville. He was a soldier in the Civil war, serving from April until September, 1865, and was a man of some prominence in local affairs, having held several offices in the town.

Edwin Blakeley was the eighth son of Asa Blakeley and his wife Esther Dibble. Asa Blakeley was born in Connecticut in 1784, whither his people had removed from Vermont. He was married to Esther Dibble April 3, 1810, and they became the parents of eight sons—Isaac, John, Henry, Ransom, Nathaniel, Asa, Evander and Edwin—and one daughter, the youngest in the family—Esther (Blakeley) Hathaway. He died in Evansville, Wis., where, in the early fifties, the last years of his life were spent. Frances (Smith) Blakeley was a daughter of Henry Smith, a native of Rutland, Vermont, born in 1802, and his wife Betsey Burnett, who died in Michigan. Henry Smith was a teacher by profession and after the death of his wife he moved from Michigan to Pennsylvania, where he passed the remainder of his life, being killed by the cars after he had reached the age of eighty years.

Dr. Blakeley was reared on the farm south of Evansville, where he attended the district school, and, when somewhat older, the high school at Evansville. Then he took up the study of medicine, and was graduated from Rush Medical School in 1885. He began the practice of his profession at Hampton, Neb., where he remained two years. From there the young Doctor went to North Loup, and in 1890 came to Albany, where he has since continued in his professional work.

Dr. Blakeley and Miss Jennie M. Barge-well, the daughter of Matthew and Miriam (Rogers) Barge-well, were married Feb. 27, 1880. They are the parents of six children. Hattie A., Fred L., Glenn A., William, Edwin and Miriam. The Doctor is a member of Anchor Lodge, A. F. & A. M., of North Loup, Neb., being very popular in his Masonic affiliations; and of Garrison ———, Knights of the Globe. He is a member of the Central Wisconsin Medical Society. In politics he is a Republican; he was appointed postmaster at Albany Dec. 15, 1898, and entered upon the duties of his position the last day of that month. He was reappointed January 15, 1899. The office was then rated as fourth-class, but it is now a third-class office. Dr. Blakeley was a member of the village board in 1892.

There is good Revolutionary blood in the family. Two brothers of our subject's paternal great-grandfather were killed in that struggle. His wife's father came from England, where he was born, and located in Michigan. He came to Evansville when somewhat advanced in years, and was a shoemaker in that city. He was master of Union Lodge, No. 32, A. F. & A. M., for twenty years, and was known far and wide as one of the most loyal Masons in Wisconsin. He had two children: Jennie M., Mrs. Blakeley; and Myrta, a teacher in the public schools of Minneapolis.

GEORGE A. PROCTOR is a successful and much respected farmer and stockman of La Prairie township, Rock county, occupying a very fertile and highly-cultivated farm, which is described as the Southwest Quarter of the Northwest Quarter of Section 4, of that township. Here he has lived for many years, and is known as an honest and reliable farmer and a public-spirited citizen.

Mr. Proctor was born in Bellows Falls, Vt., Dec. 14, 1846, a son of Eli and Mary (Woodward) Proctor, both natives of that State. They had a family of three sons and one daughter: Mary Allen, wife of James U. Gould, of Delavan, Wis.; George A.; and Joel and Hiram C., both of La Prairie township. Eli Proctor, who was a farmer, came to Wisconsin in 1854, and bought a quarter of Section 3, La Prairie township, to the cultivation of which he devoted his life. There he lived and reared his family, and there his wife died July 7, 1889, at the age of sixty-three. She was a Methodist, but he is a Universalist. Many years ago he was supervisor for two terms. Jonas Proctor, father of Eli, was a Vermont farmer, and was of English and Scottish descent. He lived to reach the age of seventy, and died from the effects of injuries received when a wagon ran over him. He had a numerous family, three daughters and seven sons. The family stock of the Proctor family has superb vitality. Eli Proctor is now eighty-five years old, and is still hale and hearty. Two of his brothers died recently, one aged eighty-four and the other ninety-six. Jonas Woodward, the maternal grandfather of George A. Proctor, was also a resident of Vermont, and a farmer. He was of Irish and Scottish descent, and lived to pass eighty years. He was the father of three sons and three daughters.

George A. Proctor was only seven years of age when he first came to Rock county. He attended the district school, and remained on his father's farm until he had grown to maturity. He began life for himself by engaging as a farm hand by the month, and soon felt able to rent a farm, which he cultivated for two years. Then he began buying horses, and selling them either in the West or in Chicago, as the times might determine.

On Feb. 22, 1876, Mr. Proctor married Miss Emma L. Hurd, daughter of Silas and Cynthia (Cowan) Hurd, both natives of the State of New York, who were among the very earliest settlers of Rock county. Coming to Wisconsin in 1838, they made their home in Fulton township, Rock county, where they always lived on the farm on which they first settled in Indian Ford (a village). Two sons and six daughters have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Proctor: Luie A., Mildred C. and Myrtle E. (twins), Edna E., Leo M., Dean Q., Isabel M. and Mabel. Luie A. married Hattie Rooney, and is now living in Beloit; they have two children, Florence E. and Don L. Mildred C. is teaching. The other children are all at home.

Politically our subject is a Democrat. From 1876 to 1888 he lived in the town of Fulton, and was chairman of the town board in 1888. He was also elected assessor of that township, and filled the office nine years in succession. It is a strong Republican town, and his repeated re-elections were a tribute to his personal worth and character, his majority running each year from forty to fifty votes. He was twice nominated for register of deeds, but he could not overcome the strong Republican majority in the county, though on each occasion he made a gallant struggle. Mr. Proctor joined the Masonic fraternity when twenty-four years old.

When the family moved into La Prairie township in 1888 Mrs. Proctor bought the present farm, of 240 acres, known as the "Ravine Hill Stock Farm," and our subject has given his attention very largely to the raising of a fine grade of horses. Since 1892 the land has been rented, and Mr. Proctor is now disposed to take life somewhat more easily. He has always taken a leading part in every movement to help the agricultural interests of Rock county forward, and has been a director in the Rock County Agricultural Society. From 1892 to 1898 he was in the leaf tobacco business in Janesville. He is much interested, as might be expected, in blooded stock, and having the personal acquaintance of the drivers in the grand trotting circuit, goes the round of the circuit every year, commencing at Detroit, going through all the New England States, and as far South as Louisville and Lexington, Kentucky.

JOSEPH H. LINCOLN. The arrival of Mr. Lincoln in Wisconsin antedates the admission of the State into the Union, he having first taken up his residence in Grant county in April, 1844. His birthplace was Chester county, Penn., and the date of his birth was Feb. 10, 1827.

The Lincoln family is of English origin, although both our subject's grandfather, Thomas, and father, Azariah, were natives of the Keystone State. In Pennsylvania Azariah Lincoln married Mary Miles, and they removed thence to Wayne county, Ohio, later (about 1840) settling in Illinois. It was in 1844 that Azariah Lincoln resolved to seek a home in what was then regarded as the far Northwest, a virtually trackless territory. At that time he and his wife had a family of seven children, four of whom were boys. Their first home in Wisconsin was at Livingston, but later a change of domicile to Montfort was made, both Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln dying in that town, he on Oct. 9, 1862, in his seventieth year, and she on Nov. 30, 1877, after attaining the ripe old age of fourscore and two. The dates of their respective births were Sept. 26, 1793, and March 10, 1795. Azariah Lincoln was a man of great muscular strength and fine physical development, and was by trade a blacksmith. He was a man of resolute will and inflexible moral conviction. Both he and his wife were ardent Methodists, and it was at their home that the itinerant preachers of that denomination in those early days found entertainment and encouragement in their self-sacrificing efforts to propagate Christian faith and disseminate Gospel truth among the early denizens of a new country, where grit ranked above goodness, and brawn was the badge of untitled royalty.

The children of Azariah and Mary Lincoln were: Thomas, who died June 15, 1890, the father of a family; Dickinson, now a resident of Cottage Grove, Oregon; Joseph H.; Samuel, who died in 1894; Elizabeth; Margaret; and Sarah.

Joseph H. Lincoln was a lad of seventeen when he accompanied his parents to their new home in Wisconsin, and there will never fade from his mind his first sight of what is now Grant county, with its prosperous villages and well cultivated farms, its heaven-pointing church spires, and its well conducted schools. Since those days he has seen Wisconsin grow to Statehood, its forests cleared, its soil reclaimed, its mineral wealth explored, its harbors improved, its bosom dotted with cities and towns of constantly growing wealth and prosperity, and its people become among the most enlightened and God-fearing in an entire continent. He was married, on Dec. 15, 1861, to Miss Margaret Laird, a daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Twining) Laird. She was born Dec. 4, 1841, and died May 16, 1871. Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln had a family of two daughters and two sons: The eldest, John, died at the age of four years. The eldest daughter, Mary, is the wife of S. H. Taylor, one of the leaders of the Grant County Bar. Eva, the youngest daughter, lives at home with her father. Azariah, the only surviving son, who is named in honor of his paternal grandfather, was born June 25, 1868. He early developed an inborn fondness for scientific study, and his father has afforded him admirable advantages. After graduating from the academic department of the Wisconsin State University he studied for and received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, having prepared a most excellent thesis on the "Electrical Conductivity of Non-Aqueous Solutions." So emphatic was his success in this field of scientific investigation, he was offered an assistant professorship in Natural Science at Cornell University, a chair which he yet fills, bringing to the discharge of his duties ardent enthusiasm, ripe scholarship, and an illimitable thirst and capacity for painstaking investigation.

Mr. Lincoln has passed life's seventy-fourth milestone, with undimmed intellect and an unshaken religious faith. He and his daughter are among Montfort's most esteemed residents. His life has been an open book, and on its pages there is no stain.

KNUD B. DUNSTAD. Coming with his parents to Rock county in 1844, when a young man of nineteen, the subject of this sketch has devoted to the development of Wisconsin the strength of more than half a century, and has long been ranked as one of the foremost citizens of Clinton. As owner of valuable business property in the city of Chicago, Ill., as director and vice-president of the Citizens Bank, of Clinton, as proprietor of the well-improved Duxstad homestead of 205 acres in Section 32, Clinton township, he has attained a prominent position in the material affairs of Rock county, and is no less influential in religious, social, educational and political circles.

Brynild Knudson, his father, was born in Norway Jan. 8, 1794, the eldest of the five children of Knud Erickson and Brita (Knudson) Duxstad, the other children being Martha, Eric, Carrie and Anguna. Brynild took up the life of a farmer. On June 10, 1824, he married Elie Knudson Seime, daughter of Knud Seime, also a Norwegian farmer, and by this marriage had seven children, two of whom died in infancy. The others were Knud, Iver, Brita, Knud B. and Carrie. With his wife and children Brynild Knudson in 1844 emigrated to America, and settled in Rock county, Wis., where he acquired property, and lived an industrious and prosperous life until death called him, Aug. 7, 1857. He was a lifelong member of the Lutheran Church, and a good, substantial citizen in the pioneer country.

Knud B. Duxstad, our subject, was born in Norway Feb. 2, 1825, and came with his parents to America in 1844, arriving at Clinton Aug. 17 of that year. The cultivation of the soil became his life work, but his foresight and business judgment gave him prominence among his fellow men, and he soon became recognized as a citizen of sterling and commanding principles. He owns 260 acres of land in Section 33, Clinton township, 200 acres in Boone county, Ill., and the building at Nos. 59-61 East Kinzie street, Chicago. He is director of the T. G. Mandt Vehicle Co., Stoughton, Wis. Mr. Duxstad married Nov. 24, 1863, Miss Ingeborg Sjursdatter Qvarme, born in Norway Aug. 30, 1838, daughter of Seaver and Carrie K. (Duxstad) Knudson, the former a Norwegian farmer who in 1844 emigrated with his family to America, coming in the same ship which brought over the Duxstads. Seaver Knudson settled in Boone county, Ill., where he died in 1882, aged eighty-two years; his wife survived him seven years. To our subject and wife have been born seven children, Oscar B., Elias S., Carrie A., Annie C., Mattie B., Emma J. and Ida L. Mattie is deceased. Elias married Nov. 26, 1898, Miss Minnie Fessenden, and they have one son, Earl Maynard, born May 27, 1900.

Mr. Duxstad is a prominent member of the Lutheran Church, and has been organist in the church for many years. In politics he is a Republican. For sixteen years he has been on the board of supervisors, of which he was chairman (two years), also served as town assessor three years, and two years officiated as justice of the peace. He is one of the hardy pioneers of Wisconsin, a typical specimen of the courageous and thrifty race that settled its distant shores, and gave to the State a high grade of citizenship. He has by his systematic course of righteous and industrious living won the highest respect of the people of Rock county, and ranks as one of its prominent and influential business men.

LAUREN L. THURBER, the genial, well-known agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad, at Muscoda, Grant county, and one of the old soldiers of that place, is a native of Door, La Porte Co., Ind., born Jan. 17, 1843.

Mr. Thurber is the son of Nathaniel and Sarah A. (Leland) Thurber, who were born in Vermont and New York State, respectively, and were old settlers of La Porte county, Ind. As the country surrounding their home became settled, the same spirit which prompted their removal to Indiana urged them further westward, and in 1857 they located at Pulaski, Iowa Co., Wis., where two years later they were joined by their son, Lauren L. Thurber. Mrs. Thurber died at Muscoda, while her son, the subject of this sketch, was absent fighting for the honor of his country; Mr. Thurber survived her until 1867. These worthy people had four children: Lauren L., the only son; Mrs. Laurretta L. Mack, who died at South Bend, Ind., in March, 1900; Mrs. Sarah Augusta Walbridge, now many years deceased; and Mrs. A. E. McCallister, whose death occurred at her home in Madison, S. Dak., several years ago.

Lauren L. Thurber is a mason, having learned the trade in his native State, but of late years has had no occasion to work at that calling. Although he had not attained years of manhood when his country had need of him he was found willing and anxious to risk his life in defense of its honor, and enlisted Aug. 18, 1862, in Company C, 20th Wis. V. I., taking part in all of the engagements in which his regiment participated until it was honorably mustered out, in August, 1865. While never wounded in the service, the hardships affected Mr. Thurber so that he has never since been in robust health, and has been obliged to guard against complications resulting from the forced marches, the exposure, and the thousand and one trials endured by our brave soldiers during that never-to-be-forgotten struggle.

On May 4, 1867, Mr. Thurber was married to Mariana H. Soper, daughter of Platt Soper, and four sons have been born to this union: Ralph L., Nathaniel P., Philip S. and William M.

Mr. Thurber has occupied his present position for thirty-two years, and cannot be spoken of too highly as a man of sterling integrity, unflinching honesty, and faithful adherence to duty. In every walk of life he has proven himself to be the kind of a man that is the best representative of American independence, and one which should be held up as a model for the coming generation.

JOSEPH KEEN, a retired farmer now living in Monroe, Green county, enjoys the results of well-spent years, both in the accumulation of an ample competence and in the acquisition of the respect and confidence of all who know him. Mr. Keen has all his life been an industrious and hard-working man. He has studied his calling, and brought to the tillage of the soil both brains and character.

Joseph Keen was born in Buckinghamshire, England, Oct. 25, 1831, and is a son of John and Mary (Luck) Keen, both natives of that country. They were the parents of seven sons and two daughters, and seven of their children are now living: Joseph; Elizabeth, the wife of a Mr. Stephens, of London, England; John C., of Beresford, S. Dak.; Thomas, of England; James, of South Dakota; Mary, who married James Dickens, and is now dead; Robert, of England; Thomas, deceased; and Fred, of New Zealand. The father is still living in Buckinghamshire, and is over ninety years of age; his wife died in 1890, when over eighty years of age. James Keen, grandfather of our subject, was a native of England, where he followed the trade of shoemaker, and lived to be ninety years old; he was twice married, and had six or seven children. Daniel Luck, the father of Mrs. Mary Luck Keen, was born in England, where he lived and died; he was a farmer, and reared a large family.

Joseph Keen was reared in England, and in 1857 emigrated to the United States. He located in Adams township, Green county, and engaged in farming eighty acres rented by him on his arrival in the county. From time to time Mr. Keen bought land, until he had title deeds to two hundred twenty acres of as choice land as the sun shines upon in southern Wisconsin. He remained on the farm for twenty-six years. In 1890 Mr. Keen bought a comfortable home in Monroe, and leaving the farm, went to try the comforts of life in the town. He did not have liberal school privileges in old England, getting his education mostly from night schools, which he could attend after the day's work was finished. He is a close reader on public topics, and a thoughtful student of present world tendencies.

Mr. Keen and Miss Rebecca Eley, the daughter of Henry and Elizabeth (Bennett) Eley, were married Dec. 2, 1858. This union has been blessed by the birth of eight children: Emily, Mary, Avis, Alvin J., Flora May, Cora, Eunice, and Alma. Emily married Thomas Lean and lives in Ireton, Iowa; they have four children, Elvin, Belle, William and Lola. Mary is the wife of Oren Post, and lives in Pasadena, Cal.; she is the mother of one child, Grace. Avis is Mrs. John Chenhall, of Betdison, Mo.; they have three children, Edith, Alta and Raymond. Alvin J. married Laura Clemmer, and lives in Monroe township; they have two children, Roy and Lois. Flora May died a child of two years. Cora is single, and lives at Pasadena, Cal. Eunice is a nurse in Garfield Park Sanitarium, Chicago, and was formerly a kindergarten teacher. Alma lives at home. Mr. and Mrs. Keen belong to the Methodist Church. He was a class-leader for many years, and is now assistant class-leader. Mr. Keen has long been a Republican, and has filled various town offices. He was treasurer of the school district for twelve years.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Eley, the parents of Mrs. Keen, were natives of Pennsylvania. He was a brickmaker in early life, and later became a farmer. They came West in the early days, and located on government land near Monroe. He left the farm a number of years before his death, and lived in Monroe, where he died in 1880, at the age of sixty-five. His widow is still living, and makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. Thomas, in the town of Monroe, and is now past eighty-four. She was the mother of four sons and six daughters, and eight of her children are still living: Rebecca, the wife of J. Keen; Catherine, widow of William Edwards, of Spooner, Wis.; Daniel, of Sutton, Neb.; John, deceased; Mary Ann, wife of Nelson Rolland, of Sutton, Neb.; David, of Nebraska; Lucinda, the wife of Frank George, of Wyoming; Louisa, wife of David Starr, of Nebraska; Henrietta, the wife of John Thomas, of Monroe township, Green county; and Henry Lincoln, deceased. Mrs. Keen's paternal grandfather, John Eley, was a native of Pennsylvania, of Dutch descent, and lived to be over seventy. Mrs. Keen's maternal grandfather was Joseph Bennett. He was of mingled Scottish and Dutch ancestry, and died well advanced in years.

CAPT. P. H. CONLEY, a distinguished member of the Bar of Wisconsin, located at Darlington, Lafayette county, was born in County Monaghan, Ireland, Jan. 28, 1852. His father's family emigrated to America in 1855, and settled in Lafayette county, Wis., where our subject was reared upon a farm. At the age of seventeen he entered the Darlington high school, where, besides a course of study in the English branches, he also took up a course in Latin, two years later entering the professional ranks as a teacher. In the fall of 1873 he became a student again, entering the Freshman class of the State University. In June, 1876, when in his Senior year, he was offered the flattering position of principal of the Newell (Iowa) graded schools, six months later resigning this to accept the principalship of the Storm Lake high school, in the same State. In this position he remained nearly three years, resigning in June, 1879, and during this period was made president of the County Teachers' Association, and conductor of the County Normal Institutes.

Returning to Darlington, Mr. Conley entered upon the study of law, toward which he had a natural inclination, entering the office of Magoon & O'Keefe, and was admitted to the Bar by Judge M. M. Cothren, June 22, 1880. In order to better prepare himself for the legal profession he soon afterward entered the law department of the State University, graduating in 1881, and immediately after began the practice of law in Darlington, succeeding beyond expectation. Mr. Conley's career has been a successful and brilliant one, and he is one of the citizens of whom Darlington may feel proud, and one who may be heard from in the future, both in a legal and in a literary way. He has shown good judgment in the handling of estates and in financial matters, and his promptness and care have won him a clientage that love and respect him. His ability was first publicly recognized in 1888, when he was elected district attorney for Lafayette county; he was re-nominated, by acclamation, in 1892; twice has the honorable office of mayor of the city been his; he was made captain of Companies K and D, 1st Regiment, Wis. N. G., and senior captain of his regiment, resigning after six years' service.

Mr. Conley has been a delegate to the League of Republican Clubs; was secretary of the local Garfield and Arthur Club in 1880; was president of the Blaine and Logan Club of 1884; and has done considerable stump speaking, being an excellent and vigorous speaker. In his literary course at the University Mr. Conley was a member of the Hesperia and Linonia Societies, and represented the former in the first joint debate with Calliopea, also representing the Linonia in another joint debate; he was made vice-president of the Oratorical Association. Mr. Conley is fond of literature, and is a writer of ability, having written numbers of articles for the University Press, for the Darlington papers, for the Storm Lake Pilot, and for various other papers. Mr. Conley has also written a number of very meritorious poems: On "College Days," read before the Hesperia Society in 1876; "Home Coming;" "Remembrance;" "The Vision;" "Education," etc. The law library of our subject is a comprehensive one, and he also owns a great number of volumes on science, biography, history and literature; his collection of volumes relating to the history of Wisconsin is an exhaustive one. In 1900 Mr. Conley crossed the Atlantic and visited the Paris Exposition, visiting also his old family home in Ireland, and viewing many of the beautiful and historical places of that country and England.

The marriage of Mr. Conley to Miss Eva M. Foster, of Monroe, Wis., was celebrated May 20, 1889.

LEONARD RAISBECK, a retired farmer of the town of Benton, Lafayette county, was born in Yorkshire, England, in February, 1842, and is a son of John and Jane (Bainbridge) Raisbeck. The father was born in the Isle of Man in 1803, and the mother was born the same year. They came to America in a sailing-vessel in 1850, bringing with them a family of nine children, and settled in the town of Benton, where John Raisbeck engaged in mining for a time, afterwards purchasing a farm two miles north of the village, to the cultivation of which he devoted the rest of his life. It is regarded as one of the finest farms in the county. John Raisbeck died in 1873, and his widow five years later. Both were members of the Primitive Methodist Church, and he was active in the building of the brick church now standing in Benton. After his arrival in this country he became interested in the Republican party. His family consisted of children as follows: (1) Robert, born in England in April, 1824, was married there in 1848 to Ruth Addison, and located in New Diggings, Wis., in 1849. He was an active farmer until 1885, in which year he moved to Platteville, where he died in 1886. The following year his widow also passed away, leaving four children—Elizabeth, wife of Hugh Cliff, of Bloomington, Wis.; Margaret, wife of James Nicholas, of Platteville; Carrie, wife of William Trenary, of Platteville; and William, a resident of Dubuque, Iowa, who is the owner of the Raisbeck Mines in Lafayette county, the output of which has made him very wealthy. (2) Francis died in England when a young child. (3) Jane, born in England in May, 1827, is now the widow of David Atkinson, and has her home in Scales Mound. She has raised a family of six children, Reuben, William, John, Joseph, Nettie (wife of Samuel Ottie), and Libbie (wife of John Adams). (4) Francis, born in England in March, 1829, was married to Nannie Addison, and for a time was a farmer in the town of Benton, moving thence to Lancaster, and from there to Beetown, Grant county, where he still resides. Their children are John, Clarence, Jane and Frank. (5) Catherine, born in England in May, 1831, married James Barringham at Council Hill, Jo Daviess Co., Ill., where they both died, he in 1882, and she in 1896. Their children were May, Sarah, Margaret, Elizabeth, Hannah and Mary, all of whom are living in Illinois. (6) Elizabeth was born in May, 1833, in England, where she died in June, 1849. (7) John, born in 1835, died in 1849. (8) Ann, born in September, 1837, married William Gates, of Benton, a native of England, and is living with her husband on a farm in Beetown, Grant county. They have ten children. (9) Jonathan, born in February, 1840, was married in Wisconsin to Miss Minnie Miller, and located on a farm in Benton, where his wife died, leaving him four children. Joseph, Mary J., Annie and Nannie. Mr. Raisbeck married for his second wife Miss Mary A. Cherry. They are living on a farm in Shullsburg, and have a family of eight children. (10) Leonard is our subject. (11) William, born Aug. 19, 1844, was married to Miss Lizzie Row, of New Diggings. (12) Joseph, born in December, 1846, died in 1863.

Leonard Raisbeck was educated in the Benton public schools, and was reared on the home farm, taking the active management of the place for his father when he grew up. In March, 1879, he was married to Miss Mary

A. Bird, daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Johnson) Bird, old and prominent pioneer settlers of Lafayette county. Joseph Bird was born in England in 1828, and his wife was born in Tamaqua, Schuylkill Co., Penn., in May, 1836, daughter of John and Ann Johnson, both born in England, and settlers in Pennsylvania in 1832. In 1848 they moved West, and they died in Warren, Ill., leaving four children: James Johnson, of Chicago; Anna; Margaret, now the widow of Joseph Edwards, living in San Diego, Cal.; and Sarah, wife of Mr. Bird, of Benton. They have one son, Isaac, of Aurora, Missouri.

After his marriage Leonard Raisbeck settled on the old homestead, where he lived until after the death of his wife, in April, 1883. She was a Christian woman, and her life was spent in doing good. Precious memories of her survive. She was the mother of two sons: John Emmet, born in 1881; and Leonard, Jr., born in 1883, who died the same year. John Emmet received a good public-school education, and was a student in the Bailey Commercial College, at Dubuque. He is now a member of the firm of Raisbeck & Temple, general merchants at Benton, a new business enterprise, organized in January, 1901.

Mr. Raisbeck is a staunch Republican, and in religion is a member of the P. M. Church, to which he is much devoted. By his upright life and kindly spirit he has won a high standing in his community. He is gentlemanly and courteous, considerate of the feelings and sensibilities of those with whom he comes in contact, and enjoys the esteem of a host of friends.

JOHN FOLEY is the well known editor and proprietor of the Cassville Index, which paper was established in Cassville, Grant county, March 8, 1888, by Charles De Witt, who conducted it for a few months, and then sold out to Mr. Foley. The latter has since engaged in its publication, and has made it one of the leading newspapers of his section of the State. The office is well equipped with both hand and roller presses, and, in fact, everything needed in a first-class establishment of the kind.

A native of Wisconsin, Mr. Foley was born in Mineral Point in 1853, a son of James and Ann (Creavy) Foley, who were born in Ireland, and located in Mineral Point at a very early day in the development of this State. The father, who followed farming and also engaged in mining, died at Dubuque, Iowa, Oct. 27, 1895, and the mother is still a resident of that city. In their family were the following children: John; James, a hotel man of East Dubuque; Ellen, a resident of Dubuque; Annie; Margaret; Elizabeth; and Maria.

John Foley was reared at his birthplace, whence he removed to Bellevue, Iowa, and there operated a flouring-mill for about eight years. He then became interested in theatricals, and was for several years a member of a dramatic stock company, of which he was manager and stage director. That this was his natural element is evidenced by reference to printed matter now on file. He was, however, dissuaded from his purpose by friends old in years, if not in experience; friends who, in their anxiety for his welfare, thought he was fast going to ruin by the stage route; and he therefore gave up his job. As a matter of course the play came to an end, and Mr. Foley, to use his own words, "went back to real, rural life again," and purchased a flouring-mill in Patch Grove, Grant Co., Wis., conducting it until his removal to Cassville, in 1885. Moving the machinery to this place, he erected a new building—a mill which he fitted and operated until he took charge of the Cassville Index. He still owns the mill at that place, but at the present time it is not running. In his journalistic work Mr. Foley has met with good success, being a fluent writer and a man of good business and executive ability. The paper is independent in politics.

On May 25, 1881, Mr. Foley was married, in Patch Grove, to Miss Millie Lewis.

JOSEPH MORRISON (deceased), a veteran of the war of the Rebellion, was born in the town of Brockville, Province of Ontario, Canada, July 28, 1833, and passed from life at his home in Fennimore, Grant county, March 7, 1896. His residence in Grant county dated from September, 1858, when he located here, a young man.

When the Civil war broke out, one of the first regiments of infantry furnished by Wisconsin was the gallant 25th, and it was in Company C of this regiment that Joseph Morrison enrolled his name, Aug. 12, 1862. Records of the war show that the regiment participated in most of the history-making events of the next few years, and hence Mr. Morrison was at Vicksburg with Gen. Grant; in the Atlanta campaign under Gen. Sherman; took part in that memorable march to the sea; finally enjoyed the great review at Washington, at the close of the war.

Mr. Morrison was married, Dec. 25, 1866, to Miss Catherine E. Smith, who was born in Hebron, Ind., in 1847. She survives Mr. Morrison, and the family are among the most esteemed residents of the neighborhood. The eldest daughter is the wife of Daniel Seeley, and is the mother of two sons, Roy and Frank; Margaret, wife of Fred Richmond, has one son, Fred William; and Ethel, the youngest of the family, resides with her mother in Fennimore. The sons are Joseph L., who served in Company C, 4th Wisconsin Regiment, in the war with Spain; George W., and Frank E.

The memory of the good husband and father is kept green, and he will long be remembered as a representative man of the community in which he lived, as well as a loyal soldier and faithful friend.

FRANK W. ABELL. The subject of this sketch is one of the well-known and popular farmers of Clinton, Rock county. His residence here of more than a quarter of a century was preceded by a residence of almost equal length, in Walworth county, Wis., which was named in honor of George Walworth, his maternal grandfather.

Our subject was born Aug. 22, 1849, in Spring Prairie, Walworth county, son of Benjamin and Maria (Walworth) Abell, natives of New York State. The paternal grandparents lived and died at Perry, N. Y., where they were engaged in farming. Their family consisted of nine children. Benjamin Abell, the father of Frank W., was a school teacher and farmer. He came West in 1843, and for a year lived in Lake county, Ill. In 1844 he removed to Spring Prairie, Walworth county, where he engaged in farming continuously until 1874, carrying the United States mail during twelve years of this period. In March, 1874, he moved to Clinton township, Rock county, where he died at the age of eighty-two years, his faithful wife surviving only three days, and passing away at the age of seventy-nine. Both were devout members of the M. E. Church. To Benjamin and Maria Abell were born five children, all of whom are living: Abbie, of Clinton; Frank W., our subject; Henry H.; George B., of Aberdeen, S. Dak.; and Jesse B.

George Walworth, the maternal grandfather of our subject, was one of the earliest and most prominent pioneers of Walworth county, and was a member of the Wisconsin Legislature in 1848. He had served in the war of 1812, and for some time prior to his migration to Walworth county had farmed in New York State. He married a Miss Kezia Perry, a relative of Commodore Perry, hero of the battle of Lake Erie. He died at the age of seventy years. His family consisted of two children, both daughters: Maria, Mrs. Abell; and Mrs. A. A. Jones.

Frank W. Abell, our subject, was reared on the farm in Spring Prairie, Walworth county, attending the district schools. In his early manhood he lived for years in Chicago, and was also engaged in butchering at East Troy for two years. In 1874 he came with his parents to Clinton, and continued to live with them on the farm until their deaths. Since then he has managed the property, and is recognized as one of the progressive and successful agriculturists of the county. Politically Mr. Abell is a Republican, and fraternally he is a member of Good Samaritan Lodge, No. 135, F. & A. M. Mr. Abell owns about seventy-five acres of land in the vicinity of Clinton, and also has some Western property. His Clinton home is admirably located on the hill, commanding a full view of the Main street of Clinton. He is an industrious and enterprising citizen, one whose early life was closely identified with the privations and toils of the primitive settlements, and whose ancestors endured the full measure of the arduous labor essential in developing a new country and converting the desolate wilderness into peaceful and happy homes.

MARTIN E. COLTMAN, the successful drug merchant, and owner of the Coltman Mine in Benton, Lafayette county, is one of the progressive business men and substantial citizens of that county. He was born in the town of Benton June 24, 1855, son of John and Jane (Brown) Coltman.

John Coltman was born in the County of Durham, England, in 1815, and his wife, Jane

Brown, also a native of that county, was born in 1820. They were married before crossing the Atlantic, which they did in 1850, in a sailing-vessel. On landing in New York they came directly West, and settled in New Diggings township, Lafayette Co., Wis., where Mr. Coltman engaged in mining for a couple of years. He then located on a farm in Benton township near where the Cottingham Mill now stands, and passed the remainder of his life in that location, making many improvements on his place. His death occurred in 1889. His wife had preceded him to the better land in 1877. They were both good Christian people, though not members of any church. Politically he was always identified with the Republican party, and held a number of local offices, giving the greatest of satisfaction by his able manner of discharging the duties appertaining to the same. Mr. and Mrs. Coltman were the parents of four children, two sons and two daughters: (1) John H., born in 1853, was educated in the home schools and in the Platteville Normal. He married Hulda Lindsey, daughter of Andrew Lindsey, of New Diggings, and settled in the town of Benton; in 1896 he moved to Stockton, Cal., and engaged in mining. He has two children—Willard B., a reporter for the Manchester News, of Iowa; and Lemoin, at his home in California. (2) Martin E. is second in the order of birth. (3) Hannah J., born in 1857, married Joseph Coulthard, of Lead Mine, Lafayette county, and has five children—Eva, wife of Joseph Thompson, of White Oak Springs, Lafayette county; and Alvin, Leroy, John E. and Joyce, at home. (4) Lillie D., born in 1859, married Joseph H. Allen, of Manchester, Iowa; she has no family.

Martin E. Coltman received his education in the schools of Benton, and passed his life in the manner common to a farmer's son until he had reached man's estate—his summers devoted to farm work, and his winters to mining, for which latter vocation he soon acquired remarkable talent. In his mining operations he has been very successful, and is now the owner of the Coltman Mine, one of the largest producers of mineral wealth in the county, located in Section 10. This was discovered by Mr. Coltman in 1879, and has produced $181,000 worth of Dry Bone, Black Jack and Lead ore. Until 1896 Mr. Coltman had associated with him Thomas H. Ewing, but since that time has operated the mine alone. In 1892 he purchased the E. Miller drug store, in Benton, and in this line has been equally successful.

In 1890 Mr. Coltman was united in marriage with Miss Hattie D. Whiting, who was born in New York in 1870, daughter of Rev. D. J. Whiting. The latter was born in Spring Water, N. Y., came West, and was pastor of the Methodist Church at the time of his death, in March, 1900. Mrs. Coltman received her early education in the New York schools, and later attended Ripon (Wis.) Seminary. She is a highly cultured and refined woman, and presides with grace and dignity over the beautiful home erected by her husband in 1890. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Coltman, as follows: Lillian S., in 1891; Wanita G., in 1893; Evangeline F., in 1895; and Holmes C., in 1898. As a stanch Republican Mr. Coltman has taken a prominent part in the affairs of his town, serving as chairman of the board for five years, and as president of the village board for three years. Whatever tends toward the upbuilding and practical development of the town and its resources finds in this worthy citizen an ardent champion, and the unfortunate find in him a warm friend. Socially he is a member of the Masonic fraternity, belonging to Benton Lodge, No. 268; is also identified with the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 21, of Benton, and with the Knights of the Globe. Mrs. Coltman is not a member of any church, and is liberal in her religious views.

HENRY HUDSON. The subject of these lines, a well-known citizen of Beetown township, Grant county, is a veteran of the Civil war. Mr. Hudson is a native of Grant county, where he was born in 1843, a son of Hiram and Dorcas Hudson. The family migrated from Pennsylvania to Grant county in 1837, being among the earliest pioneers of Beetown. The father of our subject died April 23, 1870, the mother in June, 1894.

The war record of Mr. Hudson is a very entertaining one. He enlisted in August, 1861, in Company H, 7th Wis. V. I., which regiment, it will be remembered, was a part of the famous "Iron Brigade," a brigade which, for the number of battles in which it was engaged and the efficiency of its service, stands in the front rank of the many gallant organizations of which the Union army had reason to feel proud. After his full term of three years' service had expired our subject was honorably discharged, on Sept. 2, 1864. The "Iron Brigade" was the one to first cross the river and attack the enemy in the gallant but unsuccessful effort of the army of Gen. Burnside to dislodge the enemy at Fredericksburg. In the battle which followed our subject was wounded in the right temple, which confined him to the hospital for some five months, but as soon as able he rejoined his comrades in the field, and continued with them until his discharge. Charles Hudson, a brother of our subject, was a member of Company D, 33d Wisconsin Regiment. After the close of the war our subject returned to his peaceful home, taking up again the occupations of other days among his old neighbors and friends.

The first marriage of Mr. Hudson was to Miss Alice Taylor, who died April 21, 1867. His second marriage was to Miss Sarah Fox, a native of Cattaraugus county, N. Y., and he is the father of six daughters, one by the first marriage, five by the last.

WILLIAM HENRY GRAY might well be selected as a typical farmer of southern Wisconsin. He is pushing and earnest, but broad-minded and generous in his spirit, has helped the world roll onward, and now finds a satisfaction in contemplating the vastness of the revolution it has accomplished in his lifetime. He has a comfortable and commodious home in Section 11, Harmony township, Rock county, and has at his command everything that makes life in the country to-day the most independent and inspiring of all possible phases of existence.

Mr. Gray was born in Walworth county, Wis., in the town of Linn, near Lake Geneva, Jan. 4, 1845, and enjoys the distinction of being one of the early sons of the State. The names of those native to the soil of Wisconsin who were born before him would not make a very long list. He is a son of Nathaniel and Alvira (Kent) Gray, natives of Oneida county, N. Y., who were the parents of four sons and five daughters, and five of their children are now living: William H.; Caroline, a teacher of Beloit; Lucy, wife of E. J. Norcross, of Castana, Iowa; Dexter, of Johnstown township; and Elizabeth, who lives with her mother in Milton, Wis. Nathaniel Gray, a farmer, came West early in the forties, and settled for a short time near Kenosha, Wis. He moved after some years into Walworth county, where he bought a hundred-acre farm near Lake Geneva. This he sold in 1857, and moved into Rock county, buying a quarter section in Johnstown township, and from time to time added to it subsequent purchases of land until, when he died, he owned 329 acres. His demise occurred in 1895, when he was seventy-three years old. His wife still survives, and now lives at Milton. He was not identified with any church; she is a Free-Will Baptist. Joseph Gray, the grandfather of William Henry, was a native of New York, and of Scottish descent. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, lived to be old, and reared a large family. Nathaniel Kent, the father of Mrs. Alvira (Kent) Gray, was a native of New York, where he lived and died a farmer. He reached a good old age, and reared a large family of children.

William H. Gray was twelve years old when he came to Rock county with his parents, and he has made his home here ever since. He lived in Johnstown township until 1883, and has always followed the life of a farmer. He received a good common-school education in the district schools, and attended Milton College when somewhat older, and is a gentleman of sound and matured views of life. He lived at home until he reached manhood, and began his own independent career by renting a farm in Johnstown township. In 1869 he purchased a tract of land, consisting of 115 acres, in Johnstown township, and there he made his home until 1883, when he sold it, and bought a farm of 199 acres in Section 11, Harmony township, where he has lived to the present time. It is a finely improved farm, and attests the agricultural skill of its owner, who has spared no pains to bring it up to the standard of any farm in the country.

Mr. Gray and Miss Harriet Osborne, a daughter of Chauncey and Polly (Skinner) Osborne, were married Nov. 24, 1867. Three children were born to that union, Ethel, Ina, and one who died an infant. Ethel died in April, 1900, at the age of nineteen, and is remembered as a sweet and beautiful girl. Ina married Walter S. Holmes. Mrs. Harriet Gray died Nov. 13, 1898. She was a member of the Free-Will Baptist Church, as is also Mr. Gray. On April 3, 1901, our subject married Sarah Edith Dickinson, a daughter of Reuben and Maria H. Dickinson. He is a member of Du Lac Lodge, No. 322, I. O. O. F., Milton, and is a faithful adherent of that order. He is a Republican, and has been chairman of the town board seven years; was school director for a number of terms; and was district clerk five or six years.

Mr. Gray is a stock raiser, and is increasing his business in that line every year; at the present time his principal strain is Holstein. By careful attention to his business he has become prosperous and well-to-do, and takes a leading position in every enumeration of the better class of citizens of Rock county, from whatever standpoint made.

JACOB HAFFELE, who resides on Section 28, township of Monticello, Lafayette county, can look back over nearly sixty years of almost continuous residence in that town. He first located there in 1842, when he came practically penniless in search of work, and found employment as a farm hand. Years of industry and economy have given him a substantial share of this world's goods, and to the original eighty acres he entered in the early 'forties other tracts have been added until he can now look over a thousand or more broad acres of well tilled fields, carefully improved, that he has redeemed from the desolation of half a century ago.

Mr. Haffele was born in the town of Afalbrach, Weinsberg, Kingdom of Wurtemberg, Germany, Dec. 25, 1818, son of Jacob and Magadelena (Daferle) Haffele, who passed their entire lives in the Fatherland. Jacob Haffele was the father of a numerous family. The first to come to America was Christopher, who crossed the sea in 1832, and settled in Pennsylvania, where the remainder of his life was spent. Jacob followed, having had the means for his transportation furnished by his brother Christopher in 1841. Gottfried came in 1851, and settled in Monticello township, Lafayette Co., Wis., where his death occurred some years ago.

Jacob Haffele landed on American soil Oct. 8, 1841, at the port of Baltimore, and went directly to his brother in Pennsylvania. There he found several families who had sold out and were preparing to locate in Wisconsin, and he determined to accompany them. He started on foot, walking all the way to Pittsburg, where he boarded a steamer, and by way of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers reached Savanna, Ill., thence making his way on foot to Freeport. They had no special destination in view, and Mr. Haffele determined to try at once to find work. He was unsuccessful in Freeport, and so continued on foot to Galena, Ill., where he also failed to find anything to do. Being somewhat at a loss, and knowing Freeport to be a good town for the time, he began a return trip on foot, but stopped at the tavern of Francis Clyma, on Section 28, Monticello township. Mr. Clyma was a well-known pioneer, his tavern being on the old stock route, and one of the landmarks of that early day. He met Mr. Haffele and gave him work as a farm hand on the very section that has ever since been his home, except for a period of twenty-two months which he spent in the gold fields in California, and the time occupied in making the journey there and back. For two years he worked for Mr. Clyma, and then, having saved sufficient money to enter government land, he secured eighty acres of his present farm, and at once began to improve it, adding more as he was able. In the spring of 1850 he started overland for the Golden Gate, being one of quite a number to go from this vicinity, including his former employer, Mr. Clyma. At Council Bluffs a company of one hundred men, with twenty-eight ox teams, started across the Plains on April 2, 1850. Mr. Haffele was appointed one of four men to drive one of the teams, each taking his turn. After a journey of five months and seven days this little company arrived at their destination, a trip that now requires about three days, but was then long and tedious. Although half a century has passed since then, every incident is clearly marked in Mr. Haffele's mind, and his simple story of his actual experiences seems to-day to the listener as thrilling as any story of adventure that ever delighted his boyish soul. The trip to California was fairly successful in a financial way. Coming back, he made the journey by way of the Pacific ocean, the Isthmus, and the Atlantic. Immediately on his return he resumed work on his farm, and has continued at that occupation ever since. He began life as a poor boy, but has long been known as one of the most successful farmers and stockmen in southwestern Wisconsin. In his political affiliations he has always been a Democrat, casting his first Presidential vote for James K. Polk, in 1844. He was reared in accordance with the tenets of the Lutheran faith, and has not departed from the faith of his fathers. As a business man he bears an untarnished reputation for fair dealing, and as a friend is loyal and true.

On March 6, 1853, Mr. Haffele was united in marriage with Miss Mary Barbara Henger, who was born in New York State, and came with her parents to Wisconsin in 1852. Four children have blessed this union, namely: Clara, George, Oscar and Ida, and all hold high places in the social life of the community where they have always had their home.

ASAPH J. ALLEN, an energetic and enterprising gentleman, whose manly and industrious habits have won him many friends, has engaged not only in farming but in wagon making, blacksmithing and general repair work at his home on Section 24, in the town of Brooklyn, Green county. He was born in Aurora, N. Y., May 18, 1831, a son of Henry R. and Electa L. (Carpenter) Allen. Mr. and Mrs. Allen had four children, three of whom are now living: Asaph J.; Justin W., of Oberlin, Kans.; and Elnora, wife of Gilbert Patterson, of Utica, Neb. The father was a wagon maker, and came to Wisconsin in 1855, locating in the town of Exeter, Green county. For a few years he worked at his trade, and then located on a forty-acre farm in the town of Union, where he died in 1881, at the age of seventy-one years. His widow lived to be eighty-six years old, and died in 1897 at the home of her daughter in Nebraska. She was a woman of remarkable vitality, and remained active in spite of her advanced years, not being confined to her bed until the day she died. Both were Baptists in religious belief. He was prominent in local affairs, and was a supervisor for several terms in the towns of Exeter and Brooklyn.

Asaph Allen, the paternal grandfather of Asaph J., was a native of New Hampshire, and followed farming as a life work. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and died at Sackett's Harbor, while he was yet in middle life. He was the father of eight children. The maternal grandfather of Mr. Allen, Sylvanus J. Carpenter, was born in one of the New England States, where he followed farming and lived to be an old man, dying at the age of eighty, after having reared a large family.

Asaph J. Allen was reared in New York, and learned the blacksmith trade under his father's instruction, beginning when he was thirteen years old. In 1855 he came West and located on a farm of forty acres in the town of Exeter, Green county. There he and his father together ran a blacksmith and wagon shop for a few years. After that he moved over into the town of Brooklyn, and bought a farm of ninety acres, setting up a wagon shop and blacksmith stand, which he has carried on to the present time. He now owns a farm of 130 acres, which his son is cultivating.

On Sept. 24, 1853, Mr. Allen was married to Miss Amanda M., a daughter of Moses E. and Lucretia (Baldwin) Powell. To this union were born three children: (1) Ethan, who married Miss Alice Lay, and is living with two sons on the home farm in the town of Brooklyn; their sons are Earl and Loy. (2) Lucretia, who married George Cramer, of Juda, Wis., and has one daughter, Nydia. (3) Rose, who married Edward Lamb, of Brooklyn, Wis., and is the mother of one daughter, Clara. Mr. Allen has been a Greenbacker of late years in his political views, and has voted with those who advocated similar principles.

ERASTUS JUNIOR BUCK, M. D., of Platteville, Grant county, Wis., was born Sept. 5, 1828, at Heath, Mass., son of Erastus and Roxana (Baldwin) Buck, and grandson of William Buck. He is a lineal descendant of Sergt. William Buck, of Heath, Mass., a patriot of the Revolution, and also of Elbridge Gerry, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. He received a common-school and academic education, commenced the study of medicine in 1849, at Nunda, N. Y., under Drs. John Turner and Eben Warner, and attended medical lectures at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, from which he was graduated in 1854; in 1889 he attended a post-graduate course at the New York Polyclinic.

In April, 1861, Dr. Buck enlisted, as a private in a company of Union soldiers which he had been instrumental in raising. In May following was commissioned lieutenant of the same company, and in November of the same year was commissioned first assistant surgeon of the 18th Wisconsin Volunteers; in September, 1862, he was commissioned surgeon, with the rank of major, of this regiment, and held the position until the close of the war, July, 1865. He was in active service from and including the battle of Shiloh to the surrender of Vicksburg, and during that time was appointed brigade surgeon, surgeon-in-chief of hospitals, and was one of the board of operators. A record of some of his surgical operations will be found in the "Medical and Surgical History of the War of the Rebellion," while in civil practice he has done considerable general surgery, gynecological work, etc. He entered the private practice of medicine in 1855, at Towlesville, N. Y., where he remained two years; was then at Westfield, Wis., six years; served in the army four years; and has practiced at Platteville, Wis., since 1868. Dr. Buck is a member of the Wisconsin State Medical Society; American Medical Association; American Public Health Association; National Association of Railway Surgeons; Platteville Literary Club; member of the executive committee of the Platteville Lecture Association; and member of the Grand Army of the Republic. He served in the Wisconsin Legislature (Assembly) in 1860 and 1861, and was a member of the standing committee on Medical Societies and Medical Colleges. He served as health officer of the city of Platteville from 1887 to 1894, was pension examiner for many years; and is at present medical examiner for several of the leading life insurance companies. He is a Republican in politics.

In 1866 Dr. Buck married Miss Sarah Elizabeth Trask, of Beaver Dam, Wis., a descendant in the eighth generation of Capt. William Trask, who settled in Salem, Mass., in 1720. They have seven children: Gertrude Amelia, Clara Louise, Guerdon Condie, Winifred Kendrick, Florence Terry, Ethelwyn Berenice, and Lenys Mary.

JOHN DRAGGS, of Fennimore, Grant county, a veteran soldier of the war of the Rebellion, and an early settler of that town, was born in Westmoreland county, Penn., April 10, 1841, a son of James and Elizabeth Draggs, both of whom died when their child, the subject of this sketch, was a small boy.

About 1856 John Draggs came to Grant county with the family of Clinger, with whom he had lived after the death of his parents, and continued with them for two years, when he entered the employ of a Mr. Walker. When he was about eighteen John Draggs entered the family of the well-known pioneer, Abner Dyer, and lived with them until he started out in life for himself. Much of his success in life Mr. Draggs attributes to the sage advice and kindly friendship of this good man, who practiced what he preached, and set an example of sterling honesty and uprightness.

While our subject was yet a boy the war cloud burst, and he felt stirring within his breast the voice of duty, bidding him to offer himself to his country. Accordingly, in August, 1861, he enrolled in Company H, 7th Wis. V. L., which became a part of the famous Iron Brigade, whose record for gallantry and effective service is unexcelled. Mr. Draggs remained with his regiment from the time of organization until June, 1862, when he was taken sick and sent to Washington. When he had sufficiently recovered he was given charge of a ward in the hospital as nurse. The hospitals at that time were overflowing, and good nurses difficult to obtain, and, although Mr. Draggs desired to return to the front, his efficiency as a nurse kept him in the hospital in that capacity until the fall of 1863. At this time he again joined his comrades, and continued with the regiment, sharing in all its battles and marches, until the engagement of Haymarket, Va., Oct. 19, 1863, when he and many others were captured, and for the remainder of the war languished in Southern prisons. For a few months Mr. Draggs was confined at Belle Isle, Va., and was then transferred to the notorious stockade at Andersonville, Ga., where he remained until the close of the struggle threw open the doors of the prison. John Draggs was among the first squad of prisoners sent from Belle Isle to Andersonville, and there, during the weary days of the spring and summer of 1864, and the winter of 1864-65, he, with thousands of others, suffered from heat, thirst, starvation, and the cruel treatment of those in charge. When the squad to which he belonged arrived at the prison it was not yet completed, but all were carefully guarded, and their sufferings never lessened. It is not surprising that men died by the thousands, like cattle, in this infamous place; the wonder is that any possessed endurance to bear them through such a terrible trial. The courage and loyalty that could survive such treatment is of a loftier order than that demanded in action, although both are of a value beyond price.

Still, those who did survive to march forth, conquerors of their captors, have borne with them ever since traces of those days of horror that no care or nursing will ever remove, and which are as honorable as bullet hole or sabre scar.

Amid rejoicing and thanksgiving these heroic and almost helpless prisoners were transferred to Vicksburg, Miss., but scarcely had they reached a haven of safety when the sad news of the death of the beloved President came to them. As soon as they were able to bear the journey the prisoners were transferred to Benton Barracks, at St. Louis, Mo., and there John Draggs drew one hundred and thirty-six dollars from the government, and invested fifty dollars of it in a suit of ready-made clothes. Arrayed in them, on the 10th of May, 1865, he reached the home of his former employer and kind friend, Abner Dyer, with whom he continued to reside until his marriage, in 1868.

Soon after his return from the army John Draggs purchased 160 acres of land, eighty acres of which were in Section 1, in the town of Little Grant, and eighty in Lancaster. Later he bought 120 acres more, in the town of Little Grant, and he also owned forty acres in Section 6. After purchasing the land Mr. Draggs entered at once upon its improvement, and eventually became one of the most successful farmers and stock raisers in the northern part of Grant county. In 1884 he sold the old homestead, and bought eighty acres near the village of Fennimore. This he improved until 1895, when he practically retired from active business, and his son now owns the farm.

In 1868 John Draggs married Miss Elizabeth Beetham, daughter of John Beetham, and six children blessed their union: Anna is the wife of Henry Rothe, of the town of Fennimore; Harry lives on the farm; Bert is a farmer of the town of Mount Ida; Edith and Amy are at home. The eldest, Cora, who died in 1888, at the age of nineteen, was a graduate of the high school at Fennimore, a successful teacher, and a most estimable young lady; she was sincerely mourned by all who knew her. On Sept. 12, 1893, Mrs. Draggs died, leaving a blank which can never be filled. To her encouraging advice, economical efforts, and wise management Mr. Draggs feels that he owes much of his success.

low townsmen, and has been honored by them in various ways, being chosen chairman of his town for three years in succession; also a member of the county board for several years; and school treasurer of the village of Fennimore the first year of his residence there, which office he has since held. In politics Mr. Draggs is a staunch Republican, and takes an active interest in the workings of his party. Although a member of no religious body, he takes a lively interest in all matters pertaining to church work, and gives liberally to various organizations. He is an honored member of Sam Monteith Post, No. 173, G. A. R., and was commander of same for three years. In recognition of his services as a soldier Mr. Draggs was appointed, Sept. 17, 1897, aide-de-camp on the staff of Gen. Palmer when the latter became governor of Illinois.

Beginning life a poor, orphan boy, without a dollar, Mr. Draggs has worked his way upward on the ladder of fortune, and often states that the highest remuneration he ever received for his services was thirteen dollars a month. Still, by careful investment, and the strictest economy, he managed to acquire a sufficiency for himself and his children after him. Mr. Draggs and his two youngest daughters reside at their pleasant home in Fennimore, where they dispense hospitality to their friends, and enjoy the confidence and respect of the entire community.

JEFFERSON B. SIMPSON, a prominent attorney and counselor at law, of Shullsburg, Lafayette county, is the only child of Philemon Baldwin and Mary A. (Beard) Simpson.

Sylvanus Simpson, father of Philemon B. Simpson, and grandfather of Jefferson B., removed from his New England home to the State of New York, and thence to Ohio, where he and his wife passed the remainder of their lives. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and fought under Commodore Perry in his famous battle on Lake Erie. His father, and also his father-in-law, had served in the Revolutionary war. Sylvanus Simpson was the father of the following children: Philemon B., mentioned below; Sylvanus, Jr., of Hamilton, Ill.; Volney, a resident of Ventura, Cal., where he is a prominent banker; Elmore, of Applegate, Cal.; Mrs. Mary L. Gray, of San Francisco, Cal.; and Mrs. Arminda Bertram, who died at the age of sixty-two.

Philemon B. Simpson, eldest son of Sylvanus, and so long well known as a citizen and as a prominent member of the Lafayette county Bar, was born in Sandusky, Ohio, in 1819, but grew to manhood near Watertown, N. Y., and received a good education in the schools of that city. He then entered the office of Lawyer Beach, at Sandusky, Ohio, where for two years he read law. He completed his legal education in the Cincinnati Law School, whence he was graduated in the spring of 1843. The following September he was married to Miss Mary A. Beard, who was born in Easton, Penn., in 1822, daughter of John and Hannah (Doan) Beard, the former of Scottish parentage, and the latter of English descent. After his marriage Mr. Simpson removed from Ohio to Rochester, Ind., where for three years he was engaged in the practice of his profession. On July 4, 1847, he moved to Gratiot's Grove, Lafayette Co., Wis., and as soon as a residence could be erected at Shullsburg moved to that place. He was one of the earliest lawyers in the region, was actively engaged in practice for many years, and became one of the representative men of the county. He was an upright and public-spirited citizen, with an untarnished reputation for honesty and integrity. He served in both branches of the Wisconsin Legislature, and was recognized as a wise and able statesman; for four years he was chairman of the Judiciary committee. In politics he affiliated with the Democratic party, and as long as he lived was actively interested in its welfare. His death occurred at Mobile, Ala. (where he and his wife were staying temporarily). April 28, 1895.

Jefferson B. Simpson was born in Shullsburg, Wis., received his education in the schools of his native State, and was graduated from the Wisconsin State University, at Madison. He gained his legal lore under the careful tuition of his father, with whom he later engaged in practice, and to-day is recognized as one of the leading lawyers in the county. Like his father before him, he is identified with the Democratic party, and has faithfully served his fellow citizens in a number of official positions, among which may be mentioned that of district attorney of the county. As a citizen he belongs to that higher type that places above personal ambition and political factions the welfare of his town and community, and he is a firm believer in the rigid enforcement of every law.

Mr. Simpson was united in marriage with Miss Mary Luella Allan, who was born at Scales Mound, Ill., in 1860, daughter of George and Emma (Proctor) Allan, the former a native of Scotland, who came to Canada in early life, and in 1853 located in Scales Mound, Ill., where he superintended the construction of the Great Cut at that place, in the interests of the Illinois Central Railroad. Mr. Allan became a prominent merchant at that place; he died in 1864, at Portland, Maine. Mrs. Emma (Proctor) Allan was born at Scales Mound in 1834, and came of a representative family of southwestern Wisconsin, Abel Proctor, her father, having come to the lead mines from Proctorsville, Vt., in 1827. Mrs. Allan died at Shullsburg May 10, 1900. To the union of Mr. and Mrs. Simpson have come three children, Allan, Olive and Alexander.

John Beard, father of Mrs. Philemon B. Simpson, and grandfather of Jefferson B. Simpson, was a soldier in the war of 1812, and also participated in the great Perry victory on Lake Erie—a singular coincidence, inasmuch as it connects Jefferson B. Simpson with that victory by both his paternal and maternal grandfathers. In 1824 Mr. Beard removed to Tiffin, Seneca Co., Ohio, and there he and his wife passed the rest of their lives. They were the parents of six children, four sons and two daughters, of whom there are three surviving members: Mrs. Phebe Lambertson, of Montpelier, Ohio; Mrs. Philemon B. Simpson, of Shullsburg, Wis.; and J. L. Beard, a resident of Montpelier, Ohio. The three deceased are Joseph, Lowry and Doan.

LUALLEN A. TYLER, a prominent farmer of Millville township, Grant county, and one of the honored veterans of the war for the Union, is a native of Trumbull county, Ohio, where he was born Aug. 14, 1846, and is a son of Lewis and Rhoda (Griffis) Tyler, natives of Connecticut, who in early life moved to the Buckeye State, where their marriage was celebrated. In 1854 they migrated to Grant county, Wis., first locating in Mt. Hope township, but later changed their residence, and the father died in the village of Mt. Ida a number of years ago. The mother, who was born in 1810, is still living at this writing (1901), quite hale and hearty, being still able to walk to church.

Luallen A. Tyler is one of a family of seven children, four sons and three daughters. He had two brothers who were in the Union army: John, who was a member of the 20th Wis. V. I., and died in the service, at Rolla, Mo.; and Abel, who was in the 3d Wisconsin Cavalry, and also died in the service, at Fort Scott, Kans. The other brother, Miner Tyler, is a resident of Millville township, Grant county. Two sisters are living, Elizabeth C. and Mary A., while the other, Sylva A., died at the age of eleven years.

Mr. Tyler, whose name introduces this review, remained at home with his parents until he entered the service of his country, enlisting April 8, 1865, in the 50th Wis. V. I. He was with a part of his regiment on detached duty during the whole time he was in the army—a period of nine months. After receiving an honorable discharge from the service Mr. Tyler returned to Grant county, and has since been successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits. He was united in marriage with Miss Cornelia C. Merritt, a native of Grant county, and a daughter of William H. and Elizabeth Merritt, and to this union have been born seven children, four sons and three daughters, namely: Horace L., born in Howard county, Iowa, where the parents resided for a time; Mattie E. and Clay, born in Mt. Hope township; and Guy, Gilson J., Carrie J., and Almina, all born in Millville township.

Mr. Tyler, who is one of the most successful agriculturists of Millville township, purchased his present farm in 1874, at which time there were but eight acres broken on the place, but he now has 100 acres under cultivation, and everything about the farm indicates the good taste and excellent management of the owner. The buildings, both the residence and outbuildings, are comparatively new, and modern in their improvements.

Mr. Tyler's health was much impaired by his army service, and he has never recovered from the effects of the same. He did his duty as a soldier, was honorably discharged, and is now a worthy member of G. A. R. Post No. 134, at Bloomington, Wisconsin.

J. L. CAVANAUGH, stock and grain dealer of Shullsburg, is one of the representative citizens of Lafayette county, where he has made his home for over half a century. He was born in Waterford, Ireland, in 1844, son of Peter and Joanna (Carey) Cavanaugh.

Peter Cavanaugh, the father, was born in County Wicklow, Ireland, March 20, 1818, and learned the trade of shoemaking, which he followed in his native land with more or less success. He married Joanna Carey, who now resides in White Oak Springs, at an advanced age. In 1846 Mr. Cavanaugh brought his wife and family to America, and found work at his trade in Franklin county, N. Y. In 1852 they came still farther West, and located at Shullsburg, later removing to White Oak Springs, where the father passed away in 1889. He was an industrious and highly-respected citizen. Eight children were born to them, three in Ireland and five in America, of whom five are yet living: J. L., our subject; Michael, of Montana; Emma, wife of Benjamin Lathlane, of Montana; Kate; and Josephine, at home.

J. L. Cavanaugh was but two years of age when brought to this country, and but eight years of age when he came to Lafayette county, which has ever since been his home. He passed the years of 1862 and 1863 in Colorado. His general occupation has always been farming and stock raising, and he is the owner of a fine farm near the city, on which he has resided since 1883. Since 1884 he has been the chief stock and grain merchant of Shullsburg, and is an enterprising and progressive citizen. His own efforts have won him a substantial standing in the financial world, and he was one of the organizers of the First National Bank of Shullsburg, of which he is still a large stockholder, and the present vice-president.

Mr. Cavanaugh wedded Miss Mary Jane O'Brien, who was born at White Oak Springs, Lafayette county, in 1846, daughter of John and Jane (Terrell) O'Brien. John O'Brien was a native of Ireland, and came to America in early manhood, while the Terrell family have for several generations resided in New Hampshire. The home of Mr. and Mrs. Cavanaugh has been brightened by seven daughters and one son: John, the only son, born in 1870, who died in 1890; Mary Agnes, a successful teacher; Laura, a Sister of Charity at Evanston, Ill.; Josephine; Abigail E., a student at the State University, Madison, class of 1901; Jennie, a graduate of the Shullsburg high school; Nellie; and Clara. The family are highly respected socially, and their home is one of the most popular in the community. In religious faith they are all communicants of the Roman Catholic Church, and faithful in its work. In his political affiliations Mr. Cavanaugh is a stanch Democrat, and has served efficiently as chairman of the Democratic County Committee, and as chairman of the town board.

FRANCIS ATKINSON. In almost every progressive town will be found residents who have lived active, busy lives on neighboring farms until advancing years, and a sufficient accumulation of wealth, plead for the comforts and associations which may be found within town or city limits. Among these valued citizens of Albany, Green county, is Francis Atkinson, who was born in Yorkshire, England, May 28, 1837.

Both maternal and paternal grandfathers of our subject were natives of England, and both of them were engaged in agricultural pursuits in that land, where they died, leaving few descendants. Our subject was a son of Richard and Mary (Nelson) Atkinson, natives of England, who had a family of eight children, six of whom are living: Ellen, widow of Andrew Smith, of Green county; William, who resides near Gothenburg, Neb.; John, who lives in Pawnee City, Neb.; Ann, who married Joshua Peckham, and lives in Nebraska; Francis, our subject; and Edwin, a resident of Delhi, Minn. Richard Atkinson, the father, was a stonemason by trade, but after coming to America engaged in farming, near Springfield, Ohio, where he located in May, 1843. In 1847 Mr. Atkinson decided to buy land in the great State of Wisconsin, and finally found a farm in Green county which pleased him, in that year purchasing 120 acres in Albany township, to which he added forty acres, and another forty acres adjoining, making a fine estate, upon which he passed his life. He died at the age of eighty-three years, in 1887. The mother of our subject, a good and worthy woman, known far and wide for her charities and kind neighborliness, died a short time before her husband, having made the world better for eighty-three years. Mr. Atkinson was a consistent Baptist in religious belief, while his wife was connected with the Methodist Church.

Francis Atkinson

Maggie Atkinson

Our subject, Francis Atkinson, was but six years old when brought to America by his parents, and was reared to manhood in Albany township, growing up on his father's farm, and receiving the educational advantages of the district schools. After finishing his school course he successfully engaged in farming, and also taught school five winter terms. He continued to follow agricultural pursuits until he retired to his pleasant home in Albany.

For one year Mr. Atkinson rented a farm, which he then bought, consisting of 112 acres, located in Decatur township, where he spent twenty busy years, during which time he kept on accumulating land, his additions comprising, respectively, forty acres, 105 acres, 128½ and another forty, and he finally bought the old homestead where his boyhood had been passed. Mr. Atkinson has advantageously sold all of the old homestead land except eighty acres.

The marriage of our subject took place on March 17, 1860, to Miss Sarah Jones, a daughter of John and Mary (Wilding) Jones, and twelve children were born of this union: Mary E. died at the age of six years; Frances A. at the age of three; and Finley at the age of twenty-four; two died in infancy; Owen O., who married Minnie Evans, lives in Albany township, with one son, Dale; Russell B., who married Myrtle Edwards, lives in Albany township, and has one daughter, Frances; Alta M., who married George Larmar, lives in Albany township, and has one daughter, Maud; Annie M., who married David Conway, lives in Sylvester township, with two children, Harland and Stewart; Lillian M., who married Lee Gillett, lives in Albany township, with one daughter, Doris; Nellie W. and Etta M. are at home.

The first wife of Mr. Atkinson died June 25, 1888, aged fifty years. She was a consistent member of the Methodist Church. On Aug. 29, 1891, our subject married Miss Margaret Bell, a daughter of Peter and Huldah (Miller) Bell, and one son, Francis L., has been born of this union. Both Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson are valued members of the Methodist Church, in which he takes an active interest and is class-leader. In politics our subject is a Prohibitionist, deeming the solution of the drink question can be solved only by the ballot. For many years, while residing in the country, he was called upon to serve as clerk of the school district, and has been interested in advancing educational matters. Since 1894 his residence has been in Albany, where he purchased a comfortable home after renting his farm, and is respected in the community, well representing the leisurely class of substantial, retired farmers.

CHARLES S. GRAY, now retired from the operations of active farming, is passing the last years of a busy life in a well-earned freedom from toil in Brooklyn, Green Co., Wis. He was born in the town of Warsaw, Genesee Co., N. Y., Jan. 25, 1828, son of Sylvester and Louisa B. (Judd) Gray, the former a native of New York, and the latter of Vermont. They were the parents of five children, two of whom are living: Charles S., and Demetrius A., of Belleville, Wisconsin.

Sylvester Gray was a cooper in the East, and in September, 1845, he bought a farm in the town of Brooklyn. After a time he sold this farm and bought a home in Brooklyn, where he lived until he entered into rest in 1874, at the age of seventy-two years. His widow survived his departure many years, and died in 1898, at the age of ninety-one years. Mr. Gray was school director for several years, and was also town supervisor. In early life he was a Whig, and in his later years a Republican. Asahel Gray, father of Sylvester Gray, was a native of England, and in his mature years was engaged in the salt business at Syracuse, N. Y., where he died at an advanced age. He was the father of a small family. The maternal grandfather of Charles S. Gray was a native of Vermont, where he was father to a large family, and died in middle life.

Charles S. Gray was three years old when his parents moved to Pennsylvania from New York. Four years later they moved to Lake county, Ohio. There our subject went to school and helped his father in the cooper shop. He was eighteen years old when his parents left Ohio, and he accompanied them on their removal to Wisconsin, where he bought a farm of eighty acres, to which he afterward added eighty acres. He has sold and bought at different times, until his last farm property, which he sold in September, 1900, consisted of 200 acres. This he rented in 1877 and moved into town to take the position of manager for the Evansville Mercantile Association, which position he held for eleven years. In 1894 Mr.

Gray and his son Oscar C. started a general store, which they conducted two years, and for the following two years Mr. Gray was not in business. For a time he was again in the store, and is now retired, as noted above. After leaving his father's store, Oscar C. Gray purchased P. A. Haynes' grocery, but at the end of a year sold out the entire stock, and on April 1, 1900, bought a livery business in Oregon, Wis., which he successfully conducted until his health failed.

Mr. Charles S. Gray was married Oct. 6, 1850, to Emarilla Smith, the daughter of Stephen and Philura (Love) Smith, becoming by this union the father of four children: Oscar C., Emory Herbert, Isadora Eudelle, and Luta. Oscar C. married Jennie Patterson, now deceased, and had one child, who is also deceased; for his second wife he married Ellen Zook, and they have one child, DeVer Dwight. Emory Herbert is married to Nettie Doolittle, and lives in Des Moines, Iowa, where he is a member of the City Fire Department; they have one daughter, Myrle. Isadora Eudelle died at the age of four years. Luta married the late Wayland Axtell, and lives at Rochester, Wis., where he had established the local Academy; he died in Denver, Colo., and she returned to Rochester, with her three children, Wayne, Clarice and Caryl. Mr. Gray is a Republican, and for three terms was supervisor, town treasurer for a number of terms, and school clerk for many years.

Mrs. Gray's father was a native of Massachusetts, and her mother of New York. They were early settlers in Ohio, his people going there in 1811, and her people about the same time, settling in the town of Dover, about nine miles west of Cleveland. Her people came to Wisconsin in 1843, and located in Hudson, which is known to-day as Springfield, where they were engaged in farming for four years, after which they moved to Brooklyn. Here they died, he in 1856, at the age of fifty-eight, and she in 1877, at the age of seventy-three. In early life they were Congregationalists, but later united with the Spiritualists. They had nine children, and four of them are now living: Jonathan, Emory, Euphrasia, and Emarilla. Mrs. Gray's paternal grandfather was Jonathan Smith, of Massachusetts, and a veteran of the entire Revolutionary war, never, however, receiving a pension for his services, as his property exceeded the limits. He fought on a war vessel and was in many battles. He was owner of a large tract of land, and he died at an advanced age, the father of a numerous family. Her maternal grandfather was a Mr. Love, a native of New York, who was drowned. He was the father of one child, a daughter.

On Oct. 6, 1900, Mr. and Mrs. Gray celebrated their Golden Wedding, there being a company of forty-eight outside friends.

ISAAC N. CLIFTON, a well-known retired farmer of Platteville, is a worthy representative of an honored pioneer family of Grant county. He was born in Platteville Jan. 24, 1844, a son of William and Frances (Basye) Clifton, both natives of Missouri.

Prior to his marriage the father of our subject came to Grant county with his parents, Bascom and Sarah Clifton, both now deceased, and located in what is now Clifton township, which was named in honor of the family. By occupation William Clifton was a miner and farmer, and in Lima and Clifton townships he improved a farm of 222 acres. For a time he lived in Dakota, and on his return to Grant county took up his residence in Arthur, Lima township. He died in 1891 and his wife made her home in Lancaster until her death, in February, 1900. They were married in Platteville, and became the parents of the following children: Dewitt C. enlisted with his brother Isaac N., in August, 1862, in the three-years service, and died at Rome, Ga., in 1864; E. W. is a farmer of Lancaster township, Grant county; Isaac N. is mentioned below; James T. is a Congregational minister, now serving as secretary of the Congregational Educational Society, located at Chicago; J. J. is a Baptist minister in Nebraska; Sarah Caroline, Mrs. Arnett, is a resident of Fairfield, Iowa; and Anna Bell married Albert Hoppin, and died in La Crosse, Wis., in 1879.

In the county of his nativity Isaac N. Clifton was reared and educated, in much the usual manner of farmer boys of his day, and after starting out in life for himself engaged in farming and carpentering for some years. He opened up and improved a good farm of eighty acres in Lima township, which he still owns, and successfully engaged in its operation until his removal to Platteville, in November, 1899, since which time he has lived retired, enjoying a well-earned rest.

On Aug. 9, 1862, at Platteville, Mr. Clifton enrolled his name among the defenders of the Union, enlisting for three years or during the war in Company E, 25th Wis. V. I., which became a part of the 17th Army Corps. He participated in the battle of Resaca, the siege of Atlanta, and the engagement at Decatur, Ga., where he was shot in the leg. For some time he was confined in the field hospital, and then returned home, but was able to rejoin his regiment in time to go with Sherman on the march from Atlanta to the sea, and to take part in the Carolina campaign. He participated in the grand review at Washington, D. C., and in that city was honorably discharged June 7, 1865, being mustered out at Madison, Wisconsin.

Mr. Clifton was first married, in 1867, to Miss Nancy Sinnett, a daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (Harris) Sinnett, who died in Madisonville, Ill. Mrs. Clifton died in 1874, leaving four children, namely: Marvin L., who is married and engaged in farming in Lima township, Grant county; James W., who died in Lima, Jan. 1, 1895; Floyd G., a farmer of the same township; and Nona Bell.

At Platteville, in 1893, Mr. Clifton was united in marriage with Mrs. Martha J. (Callaway) Rickard, a native of Platteville township, and a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Butson) Callaway, who were born, reared and married in Cornwall, England, and on their emigration to the New World, in 1840, came at once to Grant county, Wis., locating in Platteville township, where Mr. Callaway improved a fine farm. There he died in June, 1878, and his wife, who survived him a few years, passed away in Platteville township in 1885. Their children were Joseph, who met with an accident in California, and died there in 1872; Elizabeth, Mrs. Woodruff, of Bloomington, Grant county; Thomas, a farmer of Jewell county, Kans.; John, a farmer of Lima township, Grant county; Martha J., now Mrs. Clifton; William H., who died at the age of eighteen years; Samson H., who lives on the old homestead in Grant county; George A., a farmer of Harrison township; and Jessie, who died of paralysis May 28, 1893. Mrs. Clifton was first married, in Platteville, to Daniel Rickard, a native of England, and the son of John and Jane Rickard, who came from Cornwall to this country, and were among the early settlers of Platteville, where both died. John Rickard was a foundryman and blacksmith, and his son Daniel also followed the blacksmith's trade. The death of the latter occurred in Platteville. By her first union Mrs. Clifton had two children: Libbie E., now Mrs. Eustice, of Belmont, Wis.; and Wesley H., who is married and lives on the home farm.

In 1882 Mr. Clifton moved to Hutchinson county, S. Dak., where he was engaged in farming for eight years, and he still holds membership in a Grand Army post in that State. He is a staunch supporter of the Republican party and its principles, and takes an active interest in politics. He is widely and favorably known throughout Grant county, where almost his entire life has been passed, and has the confidence and respect of all with whom he has come in contact, in either business or social life.

JOSEPH BARTLETT, the well-known miller at Attica, Green county, was born in Wiltshire, England, Aug. 1, 1825, and in the course of his long and honorable career has demonstrated the possession of manly and commendable qualities far beyond the general run of the world. He has passed the years of his life engaged in a time-honored occupation, and has made many friends by his upright and genial character.

Thomas and Sarah (Cool) Bartlett, parents of the Attica miller, were both natives of England, and reared a family of five sons and five daughters, six of whom are now living: (1) Joseph, whose name begins this article, and who is the eldest; (2) Thomas; (3) John; (4) Mary, the widow of Fred Cool; (5) Emma, the wife of John Richards; (6) Sarah. The father was a farmer, and died in England in 1875, at the age of seventy-three years. His widow died in 1878, at the age of seventy-six. They were both members of the Episcopal Church. Joseph Bartlett, the paternal grandfather, was a farmer in England, reared a large family, and died in his native country when he had reached the age of seventy-five. The maternal grandfather of Joseph Bartlett was a dealer in meats, and lived to advanced years.

Joseph Bartlett grew to manhood in his native community, where he received his education, finishing in a college. When a small boy he began his life-work of milling, which has always been his occupation. In 1849 he came to America, locating in Oswego, N. Y., where he remained but a short time, when he went to Canada. After a brief stay in that country, he returned to Oswego and came to Janesville, Wis., there working in the mill of Mr. Jackman for a year. Mr. Bartlett then engaged in milling at Albany, Wis., where he remained about two years, and in 1853 came to Attica, where two years later he built a watermill having a capacity of forty barrels daily; this he owns. It is both a roller and a stone mill.

On Nov. 26, 1853, Mr. Bartlett married Miss Eliza Price, who was born Sept. 18, 1835, a daughter of Thomas Price. Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett are the parents of the following children: Emert, who married John Davis, is living in Albany, and is rearing a family of five children; Elizabeth married William Qualley, of Exeter township, and has five children; Chauncey, who follows carpentering in Attica, married a Miss Maynard, and is the father of five children; Charlotte married John Nye, of Plover, Iowa, and is the mother of two children; Sarah married Norman Jipson, of Everly, Iowa, and has a family of children; Joseph died May 30, 1868; Lillie married John Lawhead, of Plover, Iowa, and has one child; Myrta is the wife of Ralph Swan, of Attica, and the mother of two children; and Gertrude is living at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett are members of the Methodist Church. In politics he is a Republican, and was roadmaster a number of years. For over fifty years he has been a resident of this neighborhood.

EBEN WHITNEY SYLVESTER, one of the most esteemed of the surviving pioneers of Iowa county, is a native of the Pine Tree State, born in the town of Phillips, Franklin county, Aug. 25, 1820.

Caleb and Joanna (Whitney) Sylvester, his parents, were also natives of Maine, and sprang of families conspicuous in the early annals of New England. The former was a descendant of Richard Sylvester, who came to this country in 1630, in the colony headed by Sir John Wentworth. He settled at Scituate, Mass., where he reared a large family, and died in 1663. The family crest and coat of arms, which he brought from England, was preserved until a few years ago, when it was accidentally destroyed. The descendants of Richard Sylvester in direct line to our subject are as follows: Capt. Joseph Sylvester, who lost his life in 1690 while participating in Sir William Phipps' expedition to Canada; Amos Sylvester; William Sylvester; William Sylvester (2), who died in 1780, of disabilities contracted at the battle of Monmouth; Charles Sylvester, the father of Caleb, and grandfather of our subject, for many years was a ship blacksmith at Bath, Maine, and died at Mt. Vernon, in the same State, March 20, 1847, aged seventy-nine years; and Caleb Sylvester, mentioned below. Lucy Barker, wife of Charles Sylvester, was a sister of Capt. John Barker, of Dresden, Maine, a seafaring man, who was captured by a British press gang, and, refusing to enter the royal navy, was sent to prison in London. Upon his return to the United States, during the war of 1812, he received a commission from the government, took command of a privateer, and captured seven British vessels before the close of hostilities. He was often heard to remark that he had "paid off old scores with interest."

Caleb Sylvester was born Aug. 9, 1793, at Bath, Maine, but removed in early life to the town of Phillips, where he followed the business of surveyor and filled numerous official positions, including that of member of the Legislature. In 1844 he came to Wisconsin, and, two years later, settled in the town of Mifflin, Iowa county, where he reached the age of nearly seventy-five years. He was the father of twelve children, all of whom grew to maturity. His wife, Joanna (Whitney), who was distinguished for her industrious and frugal habits, passed away at the age of sixty-three years. She was born at Otisfield, Maine, a daughter of Michael Whitney, who spent seven years in the Continental army. Two of his sons took part in the battle of Lake Champlain during the war of 1812; another son, Joel, became a leading citizen of the town of Phillips, where he operated a store and mill, and he served in the Legislature. Ancestors of this family came to Massachusetts in the seventeenth century, and many of its members were prominent in the civil and military affairs of the colony.

Eben W. Sylvester, whose name heads this notice, enjoyed the advantages of a high school education in his native place, where he taught school for a time. While a student at the Phillips high school, though the youngest member of his class, he was distinguished for proficiency in mathematics, and still excels many modern students in that science. In 1843 he came to Wisconsin, and spent the next year or two teaching near Platteville. He then "entered" 160 acres of government land in Mifflin township, which he cultivated and improved for about thirty years, meantime adding to his land until he had acquired 520 acres in all, which he still owns. Since 1878 he has resided in Mineral Point, where he has also made some investments in real estate. He still retains his interest in the cause of education, and served for some years as superintendent of the city schools. In political principle he has always been a Democrat, but has supported the candidacy and administration of William McKinley from the start. He has witnessed the development of the nation for more than fourscore years, and has always been ready to assist in the march of progress. When he first came West there was no railroad in operation west of Albany. He is a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, and has filled the principal offices in the local chapter and commandery.

On April 23, 1856, Mr. Sylvester was married to Miss Nancy Howard, who was born at Bruceville, near Vincennes, Ind., a daughter of William and Nancy (Young) Howard, of Highland, Wis. This family came to Wisconsin from Indiana in 1851. William Howard was born in Hardin county, Ky., about the beginning of the nineteenth century, and died at Highland, Wis., in January, 1856. His wife died Dec. 25, 1879, aged seventy-eight years. Her grandfather, Richard Young, came from England to New Jersey, and later settled in South Carolina, where her father, also named Richard, entered the Continental army at the age of nineteen years. After the war he went to Kentucky, and about 1815 removed to Indiana, liberating his slaves, of which he had a considerable number. Three sons of William and Nancy Howard served in the Union cause during the Civil war; Weston went all through the conflict in the 51st Ind. V. I.; John served in a regiment of Kansas cavalry, and was killed at Coffeyville, Miss.; and William enlisted at Kerbyville, Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester are the parents of two children, one son and one daughter, both of whom have been carefully educated, and reflect credit upon the home training: Homer, a graduate of both the Wisconsin and Pennsylvania Universities, is a practicing physician in Milwaukee; Nettie, wife of Colin W. Wright, an attorney of Monroe, Wis., is an artist of noteworthy talent, and prominent in the Order of The Eastern Star.

JUDSON LE GRAND ROBINSON, one of the prosperous and representative farmers of Rock county, owns a well-cultivated farm in Section 10, Janesville township, which he has acquired as the fruit of his arduous labors.

Judson Le Grand Robinson was born in Pike, Wyoming Co., N. Y., May 17, 1844, a son of Hubbard and Betsy Ann (Daine) Robinson, natives of New York State. The father of Hubbard Robinson, Aaron Robinson, was a native of Massachusetts, of English descent, was a shoemaker, farmer and tanner, and in time amassed a large fortune. Nine children were born to him and his good wife, and he was over seventy at the time of his death. During his lifetime Aaron Robinson was in the State militia, and in every way proved himself a worthy man and good citizen. The maternal grandfather of our subject, Daniel Daine, a native of New York State, of English descent, followed the occupation of farming. He had a family of nine children, and was about seventy-five years old when he passed away. The maternal grandmother, whose maiden name was Hammer, lived to be 108 years old, and was a very worthy and highly esteemed lady.

Hubbard Robinson, the father of our subject, was a shoemaker by trade, at which he worked until a few years prior to his death. While in New York State he was a member of the school board in the village where he lived, and also served in the State militia. In 1852 Hubbard Robinson came West, locating in Rock county, Wis., in 1856, and buying a home of eleven acres in Janesville, on the west side of Rock river, in Section 10, where he resided until his death, in 1889, at the age of seventy-one. Mrs. Robinson still survives, a very estimable old lady, and a consistent member of the M. E. Church. Three sons were born to this good couple, two of whom are now living: Judson L.; and Cornelius Wayne, of Janesville township.

Judson Le Grand Robinson lived in New York State until twelve years old, when he came to Rock county with his parents, and has since resided in this locality. Until the Civil war broke out Mr. Robinson followed farming and shoemaking, attending the district schools when opportunity offered; but as soon as old enough he enlisted, in 1864, in Company A, 43d Wis. V. I., and served until the close of the war, participating in the battle of Johnsonville and a number of skirmishes. After the close of the war Mr. Robinson followed his trade about two years, then engaged in farming, and now owns the fine farm of 190 acres where he resides.

On April 21, 1880, Judson Le Grand Robinson married Miss Hattie Knoff, daughter of William and Catherine M. Knoff, and nine children have been born to them, four sons and five daughters: Roy Le Grand, Arthur Wayne, Benjamin Harrison, Judson, Eva Dett, Maude, June, Flora and Luella.

Politically Mr. Robinson is a Republican in sentiment, and he has been called upon to serve his fellow citizens in several offices, having acted as justice of the peace one term, and constable several times. Socially Mr. Robinson is an honored member of W. H. Sargent Post, G. A. R. Both he and his wife are good representatives of the agricultural population of Rock county.

W. P. HARTFORD, M. D. For almost a quarter of a century this gentleman has enjoyed a successful and lucrative practice in Grant county, and, as the result of his untiring labors, ambition, energy and well-directed efforts, he is to-day the possessor of a handsome competence and a beautiful home in Cassville, where he spends his leisure hours, enjoying the society of his family and friends in the midst of all the comforts that go to make life worth the living.

Dr. Hartford was born in Kentucky in 1853, a son of John and Sarah (Malin) Hartford, also natives of that State, who in April, 1854, came to Grant county, Wis. The father, who was a farmer by occupation, took up a tract of government land in Wyalusing township, to the improvement and cultivation of which he devoted his energies for eleven years. He then moved to the village of Wyalusing, but he and his wife now make their home in Cassville. Their children are W. P.; Jennie (Mrs. Loud) and Taylor, both residents of Wyalusing; Clara, now matron in the reform school at Milwaukee; John, a resident of Great Falls, Mont.; and Mary, Mrs. Twining, Gay's Mills, Wisconsin.

Coming to Grant county with his parents during infancy, Dr. Hartford was reared here, and educated in the public schools and academy of Patch Grove. He then entered medical college at Louisville, Ky., where he was graduated in 1876, and after practicing for a short time in that State returned to Grant county, opening an office in Wyalusing, where he remained eighteen months. He was then in active practice at Beetown for thirteen years, and in June, 1891, came to Cassville, and purchased the business of Dr. Cronin. In the practice of his profession at that place he has been eminently successful, and has acquired some valuable property in Cassville, including three good residences. He also owns the half block on which his own home stands.

In Milwaukee Dr. Hartford was united in marriage with Miss Ella Kerr, who was born in Grant county, her parents, Edward and Jane (O'Neill) Kerr, being early settlers of Patch Grove. Her father died there in 1896, but her mother is still living. The Doctor and his wife have one child, Neil Alexander.

Soon after locating at Cassville Dr. Hartford was appointed surgeon for the Chicago, Burlington & Northern railroad, and still holds that position. He is prominent in professional circles, and is an honored member of the State Medical Society, the Tri-State Medical Society, and the American Medical Association. He also holds membership in Cassville Lodge, No. 235, F. & A. M., of which he was worthy master several years; is a member of the Chapter, R. A. M., at Lancaster; the Order of the Eastern Star; the Modern Woodmen of America; the Royal Neighbors; and was one of the organizers of the Knights of Pythias lodge at Cassville. In his political views the Doctor is a Republican.

EZRA H. STUART has been engaged for a number of years in the ice business in Brodhead, Green county, and has recently taken up the coal trade. He has had a varied and eventful history, and throughout his life has played the part of an honest and industrious man.

Mr. Stuart was born in Wayne county, Ohio, Nov. 15, 1844, a son of Ezra and Caroline (Lassell) Stuart, natives of Vermont, who moved into New York, and then into Wayne county, Ohio. They had four children, but only two grew to maturity. Mary is the wife of Abner Mitchell, of Rock county, Wis., and Ezra H. is our subject. The father died in Wayne county, Ohio, in 1845, and the mother in 1849, both being about thirty years old at the time of their demise. They were Universalists in religious faith, and lived up to their best ideals. Sylvester Stuart, his father, was a native of New York, of Scotch-Irish descent, and was a soldier in the war of 1812. He reared a large family. The founder of the family came to New Hampshire in 1640. Bingham Lassell, the father of Caroline, mentioned above, was a native of northern Vermont, a farmer by occupation, and was over eighty years of age at his death. He had a large family.
